(c) ACTIONS BY THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY.—The Congress—

(1) calls upon the international community to withhold foreign assistance from the Government of Burma and to end all military cooperation with the Burmese Government, including arms sales and cooperation with Burmnese troops operating in border areas; and

(2) calls upon the President—

(A) to undertake efforts to discourage other countries from providing foreign assistance to Burma and engaging in military cooperation with the Burmese Government, and

(B) to encourage international observation of the election process.

(d) DRUG TRAFFICKING IN BURMA; UNITED STATES ANTINARCOTICS ASSISTANCE.—The Congress—

(1) denounces the practice of accommodation and cooperation with drug traffickers followed by the current Government of Burma;

(2) calls upon the Government of Burma to end its tolerance of the production and trafficking of illicit narcotics and to take vigorous actions to implement effective antinarcotics programs;

(3) declares its unwillingness to support an expansion of United States antinarcotics efforts in Burma, which—

(A) might be viewed by the Burmese Government or the Burmese people as indicating a lessening of United States opposition to the human rights practices of the current regime in Rangoon; and

(B) hold out little realistic hope of substantially reducing the production and trafficking of illicit narcotics in Burma; and

(4) urges the President to—

(A) use all measures at his disposal to pressure the Burmese Government to cease its cooperation with drug traffickers and to pursue more vigorous antinarcotics policies;

(B) use his position to focus international scrutiny on Burma's reprehensible antinarcotics record; and

(C) refrain from expanding United States antinarcotics programs in Burma until such time as the Government of Burma has demonstrated both a willingness to respect the basic human rights of its citizens and a sincere interest in combatting the sourge of narcotics.

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, in less than 3 weeks the military government in Burma, now known as Myanmar, will go through the charade of holding elections. Yet every prominent civilian leader who might mount a genuine campaign has been imprisoned or placed under house arrest. This exercise in public relations is not likely to fool anyone. The world has watched for years as dictatorships around the world routinely produced 99 percent favorable election returns.

I am submitting today a concurrent resolution on the current state of affairs in Burma. In addition to discussing the up-coming elections, it also discusses the deplorable situation concerning illicit opium trafficking in Burma. Today Burma's economy is a shambles, but opium is the one product that it produces and exports in abundance. Indeed. Today Burma is the largest producer and exporter of illicit opium in the world. Narcotics production has nearly doubled since the current military regime came into existence. I recently introduced a provision, which has been adopted by the Senate, to prohibit the importation of all products from Burma. Unfortunately, however, Burma's most prolific product—illegal opium—continues to flood the American market despite its illegal status.

Mr. President, a very important part of this resolution involves coordinating the efforts of the entire international community. Burma's military government has ruined Burma's economy, but recent trade agreements entered into with the companies outside of Burma have replenished the Government's coffers. As a first step, the resolution calls upon all nations to refrain from providing any foreign assistance to the government in Rangoon and to help monitor the upcoming elections. Perhaps with the united efforts of the international community, and the continued bravery of the people of Burma, that unfortunate nation will join the growing ranks of newly free nations.●

COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I announce, for the information of Senators, that the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, which I am privileged to chair, is scheduled to hold a hearing on Friday, May 11, 1990, in SR-418 at 9:30 a.m., to consider veterans employment (including sections 401 and 404(c) of S. 2100), education (S. 2483), and housing (S. 2484, except for sections 2, 3(a) (1) and (2), 8(b)(1), and 13) legislation.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS, NATIONAL PARKS AND FORESTS

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the public that an oversight hearing has been scheduled before the Subcommittee on Public Lands, National Parks and Forests of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

The hearing will be held on May 23, 1990, beginning at 2 p.m. The purpose of the hearing is to receive testimony on the "Report of the Interagency Scientific Committee to Address the Conservation of the Northern Spotted Owl." The Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the Fish and Wildlife Service, and the National Park Service, will be invited to testify.

The hearing will be held in room SD-366 of the Senate Dirksen Office Building in Washington, DC. Because of the limited time available for the hearing, only administration witnesses will be invited. However, anyone wishing to submit written testimony to be included in the hearing record is welcome to do so. Those wishing to submit written testimony should send two copies to the Subcommittee on Public Lands, National Parks and Forests, SD-364, Washington, DC 20510.

For further information regarding the hearing, please contact Beth Norcross of the subcommittee staff at (202) 224-7933.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

SUBCOMMITTEE ON ENERGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Energy Research and Development of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate 9:30 a.m., May 8, 1990, for a hearing to receive testimony on S. 1848, the Natural Gas Cofiring Act of 1989.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF CHICOPEE, MA

● Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I would like to share with my colleagues the fact that Chicopee, MA, recently celebrated its 100th anniversary as a city. The town sponsored numerous events including a centennial parade and a major fireworks display in Szot Park.

Chicopee is known for its rich history and an abounding sense of community, which has sustained the town's traditional values, superb educational standards, and intellectual strengths, and has contributed to a high quality of life in Chicopee over the years.

I want to offer my sincere congratulations to Mayor Joseph J. Chessey, and Richard E. Wylie, chairman of the Chicopee Centennial Committee, and all the residents of Chicopee on this happy occasion.

I ask that a short history of Chicopee excerpted from "Chicopee's Yesterdays" by Stephen Jendrysik and Walter Stachura, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The article follows:

HISTORY OF CHICOPEE

The History of Chicopee is one of continuous immigration. The Nipmuck Indians were the first settlers of the Connecticut River Valley who called the Connecticut River the "Long or Great River." The Swift, Ware and Quabog Rivers merge near the town of Three Rivers to form the Chicopee River. The river was so named by local Indians before the advent of the white man. The word "Chicopee" means Birchbark Place.

In 1636 the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony granted permission to the Puritans to settle in the valley of the Connecticut River.

In 1659, the sons of Deacon Samuel Chapin brought their wives and children to settle and farm the Chicopee Meadows. By 1749 there were 40 voters in the region, a large enough group to warrant the establishment of their own church. A site on Chicopee Street was selected and served as a meeting house as well as a place of worship. The Reverend John McKinstry served as pastor of the First Congregational Church. The present building, constructed in 1826, is the oldest church structure in the city. Chicopee was then called the fifth parish of Springfield.

In 1825, from Eastern Massachusetts, Francis Lowell brought capitalism to the Connecticut Valley. Under a plan devised by Lowell, the cotton mills were to utilize the power loom and consolidate all the various processes of production in one plant. The company, which in 1828 became the Chicopee Manufacturing Co., was more than a cotton mill. It owned a large tract of land, water power, and a machine shop to repair mill equipment. The company laid out streets, set up a school district, and constructed tenements and boardinghouses for the workers.

At the western ford in the Chicopee River, in 1829, Nathan Peabody Ames and James Tyler Ames arrived from Chelmsford. The Ames Company would eventually produce a variety of metal products, both military and industrial.

They were soon joined by Alonso Philips of Hartford, who with Daniel Monroe Chapin developed America's first friction match industry. Benning Levitt started a bobbin shop, and Steven Bemis organized a hardware business here in Factory Village. From Springfield, Edmund Dwight came to develop the Dwight Textile Mills in Cabotville.

In 1832 a number of Irish immigrants came to Chicopee to work on the canals and to help construct the railroad. In 1849, Irish labor helped to construct the Connecticut River Railway. This majestic accomplishment would make Chicopee a first rate industrial center.

In 1845, Thomas Wright and Joshua Stevens came and began producing firearms in Chicopee Falls. The plant has now surrendered to urban renewal. The Stevens Arms Co. produced the famous Maynard Rifle. The Mexican War in 1845 led to increased production. Employment at the company rose to nearly 100.

On April 29, 1848 the Massachusetts General Court approved legislation to establish the town of Chicopee. In 1858 at least 60% of the mill population was Irish and the immigrant Irish, in 1859, constructed a magnificent church on South Street in Cabotville. On the South Street land, the parish soon constructed a school, followed by the construction of a fine rectory. By 1860, Chicopee was a town of only 7,000 people; yet 751 Chicopee soldiers and sailors served the Union cause. The Irish were a substantial part of the town's military contribution.

During the war, The Ames Co. produced weaponry for the North's Armies. The cotton Mills manufactured uniforms. The mill sent labor recruiters north to seek mill workers. From the Canadian province of Quebec, girls were brought to Chicopee to work in the cotton mills. Later French-Canadian men were also recruited. The French-Canadian immigrants settled in Willimansett and it wasn't long before the stones of their own churches were set.

One of the greatest accomplishments of the Ames Company was the casting of the bronze doors of the east and west wings at the Capitol building in Washington. In 1853, Thomas Crawford, a noted American sculptor was commissioned by the U.S. Government to design doors for the east and west wings of the newly remodeled Capitol building in Washington, D.C. Crawford worked on these designs for several years, until his death. The designs were completed by William Rinehart of Maryland. Once the designs were completed, they were put into storage and never reached the Ames firm until 1865. Silas Mosman, the casting expert, was put in charge of the work. The cast was cut, chased and finished in about two years at a cost of approximately $65,000.

The expanding factory system brought the first Polish Immigrants to Chicopee. The mailboat to Europe carried news of Chicopee and many of their country men were guided to the valley, St. Stanislaus Parish provided safe harbor in a strange new land.

In 1871, Charles E. Parker designed the fine brick and stone building that still serves as the seat of elected power in the city. The design of Chicopee City Hall, patterned after the Palazzo Vecchio in Florence, Italy, is the city's most distinctive landmark. The communities power and influence in state politics produced a governor in 1883. George Dexter Robinson, teacher, lawyer, congressman and bank president became governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rufus Bellamy had been the Baptist Minister in Chicopee Falls for thirty-five years. His son, Edward, was not destined to follow in his father's footsteps. Edward and his brother Charles founded the Springfield Daily News in 1880. Edward served as Editorial Writer for the paper and published in the early 1880's; Looking Back-ward, published in 1888, sold over a million in its first few years and has been steadily in print all over the Western world ever since.

1890 provided another landmark year for Chicopee. The original Charter of the City of Chicopee was granted by the Massachusetts General Court on April 18, 1890, and adopted by the qualified voters of the Town of Chicopee at a meeting held May 6, 1890. George S. Taylor was inaugurated as Chicopee's first mayor on January 5, 1891.

In 1939, the Tobacco Plains of Chicopee Falls were transformed into the Northeast Air Force Base, Westcover Field. Today Westover Field is the home of the free world's largest aircraft, the C5 Galaxy.●

SUCCESS AT MOUNT DESERT ISLAND, ME, HIGH SCHOOL

● Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to call the attention of my colleagues to an article from Down East magazine about Mount Desert Island High School.

Mount Desert is a small island off the coast of Maine, best known as the home of Acadia National Park. As this article points out, it should be just as well known for its quality high school.

In an area where approximately 10 percent of the population is below the poverty line, MDI High School continually strives to set new goals for itself. While the national average high school dropout rate is 1 in 4, this school graduates 9 out of every 10 students. These young men and women represent their school proudly, consistently scoring in the top 20th percentile on national achievement tests and going on to some of the finest postsecondary institutions in the Nation. Despite an enrollment of less than 500, the school also shines outside the classroom by maintaining excellent drama, music and athletic departments.

The high school's principal, Larry Coughlin, and its faculty and staff, deserve credit for this success. Mr. Coughlin arrived at the school 10 years ago. His support team system has allowed the school to keep track of, and assist, troubled students. The group of administrators, teachers, the school nurse, psychologist and the home coordinator meet weekly to discuss how to reach students who need help. From here, a troubled student is directed to a specific support group for the specific problem troubling him or her. Support groups exist for students suffering from eating disorders, drug and alcohol abuse or poor academic performance. For other students, the chance to talk out their anxieties with a teacher, counselor or a fellow student, trained as a peer helper, put worries and fears in perspective. At MDI High School each student knows that others are there to help and that problems need not be faced alone.

I would like to commend the administrators, faculty and staff of Mount Desert Island High School for all they have done to support and educate the youth of MDI. I would also like to commend the students for all they have done to achieve such excellence.

The article follows:

GO FOR IT!

A raw late-winter day is dawning on Mount Desert Island, that fabled piece of scenic real estate where wealthy summercators used to gather to bask in the pine-scented breezes and where millions now flock to the splender of Acadia National Park each summer. The weather is not propitious. A chill wind whips in from the Atlantic, crystallizing the few remaining piles of old snow by the roadside. Gray skies darken the damp, leafless landscape. But all over the island, in the communities of Bar Harbor, Southwest Harbor, Mount Desert, and Tremont—as well as in Trenton just across the causeway on the mainland—early-rising teenagers prepare for another day of high school. On the outer islands of Frenchboro, Swans, Great Cranberry, Little Cranberry, others who arose even earlier climb aboard ferryboats for the watery half of their journey to school.

Waiting for the bus on Mount Desert Island, Aimee, a senior, uses this time to study once again a few college brochures, excited by the knowledge that most of the schools she is interested in would be more than happy to have her attend.

Tony, already on his way to school, ignores his books for a moment and stares out the window, daydreaming about tonight's swim meet. It's hard to blame him, considering that his team is one of the best in the state.

Meanwhile, across town, Stacy jams her English, math, and science textbooks into her large carryall, then adds a few Pampers, a bottle of formula, swings her eight-month-old son onto her hip and heads off for Mount Desert Island High School set high on a granite ledge a few miles from the head of Somes Sound, smack-dab in the middle of the island. Elsewhere, she may not have had the courage to continue her education—pressured into dropping out by community disdain, or even forced out by the lack of a school day-care facility. But this is no ordinary school. Nor, for that matter, is it an ordinary community. And Stacy, like Aimee and Tony and the majority of her classmates, is more than eager to press on with her education. There is something about this place she is not willing to give up.

Most Maine educators will tell you there are a lot of good things about Mount Desert Island High School, which is why it's been singled out as one of the top high schools, not only in the state, but in the nation. At a time when the dropout rate for high-school students in both the state and nation is one in every four, Mount Desert manages to graduate nine out of every ten of its approximately 500 students, year after year. In addition, more than half of the school's graduates continue on with their education—many at first-rate universities. Last year, for instance, 62 percent of the graduating class went on to further education, some in job training, but most to colleges and universities, including the likes of Stanford, Harvard, Dartmouth, Georgetown, and Bowdoin.

In national achievement tests, the Mount Desert students consistently score in the top twentieth percentile and produce several National Merit Scholars a year. In addition to an excellent swim team, with some individual members ranked among the best in the country, the school also boasts one of the best drama and music departments in all New England.

This is not affluent Scarsdale, New York, Shaker Heights, Ohio, or even cape Elizabeth, Maine, where such performances can be expected in a "you gets what you pays for" society. This is an island in Down East Maine made up of four essentially rural communities where a good 10 percent of the nearly 10,000 population lives below the poverty line.

By the same token, Mount Desert Island can hardly be called a typical rural Maine island. Most of the year, it's a quiet, provincial place where the majority of islanders still earn their living in fishing, boatbuilding, and other trade industries. During the off-season, tumbleweeds don't actually blow down the main streets of Bar Harbor, but the boarded-up shops and darkened restaurants can, on a bleak winter day, make the island's largest community look like a ghost-town. Come summer, however, this all changes. The scenic beauty of Acadia National Park and a flourishing array of cultural and social events draw millions of summer visitors and seasonal residents like bees to buttercups. The island has also attracted more than its share of top-notch professionals—doctors, scientists, lawyers, writers, artists, and teachers—who, weary of city life and energized by the island's natural beauty, have chosen to make this their year-round home.

This seasonal flux and the mix of people, events, and environment have created an unusually cosmopolitan atmosphere on this Maine island. Although many native residents regard the summer onslaught as an unwanted invasion, they do adapt. And with the world literally coming to their doorstep every year, island children are exposed to ideas and options that go way beyond the traditions of their families and communities. No doubt this helps drive home the benefits of a good education.

But it takes more than wishes to make winners. There are plenty of similarly cosmopolitan communities across the country, and few are as successful as the communities of Mount Desert in motivating such a diverse group of students to learn—and learn well.

So how did this little island school come to be picked a few years ago by the National Board of Educators as one of the 200 best public high schools in the country? Why is Stacy sticking it out despite the added hardships of being a single parent? Why do Aimee and many of her classmates have so many good college opportunities from which to choose?

Perhaps it has something to do with Larry Coughlin, principal of Mount Desert Island High School, and a diagram he is quick to sketch on a piece of paper. The diagram is in the shape of a starbust with a square hub and a number of radiating spokes. The hub is labeled Support Team and each of the spokes represents one of the many specialty support groups that have been created at the school to meet a variety of student needs.

"This is a concept I brought with me when I came here ten years ago," Coughlin says. "The Support Team, which is made up of administrators, classroom teachers, special-ed teachers, the school nurse, psychologist, and the home coordinator, meet every week and discuss particular students who are what we call 'troubled' or 'troubling.' During the discussion we try to figure out what might be causing the troubled behavior and which special support group might help."

There are plenty of groups to choose from—sixteen at present with new ones being formed as new needs arise. Most are concerned with problem solving. If a student has an eating disorder, suffers from depression or stress, has academic problems, drug or alcohol problems, is constantly truant or constantly disruptive, there is a support group or person ready to swing into action. Sometines it's a teacher or professional counselor, other times it's fellow students from several different volunteer peer groups who have been trained in academic tutoring or simply in lending a sympathetic ear.

When Stacy finds it hard coping with her dual role as mother and high-school student, she knows someone will be there to help her sort things out. And although only a few student parents are enrolled at Mount Desert High each year—this year, two single mothers and an expecting couple—Coughlin made sure that when a space became available, it was set up as a nursery where students can leave their babies while they attend class.

"If it weren't for this, I'd be out of school," says Stacy earnestly, as she stores her baby's bottle and lunch in the nursery refrigerator before heading off to class. Although it's taken her longer than four years, Stacy now needs only one more credit to get her diploma, and is confident she will stay the course.

There are other, more problematic students than Stacy—ones with particularly intractable behavior problems. But even these Coughlin is determined to deal with. "We don't ignore the crisis our kids are facing today, and we're not looking for ways to get rid of disruptive kids," Coughlin says. "We're doing everything we can to find a way to help them stay." In fact, in Coughlin's entire ten years here, he has expelled only one student.

Nor does the school overlook the kids who merely suffer in silence. Although Coughlin acknowledges that what he calls midlevel performers—kids who are neither top achievers nor chief trouble-makers—sometimes get overlooked, it is a problem he is actively addressing. He has organized numerous workshops for his staff with all manner of guest experts where teachers are taught key signs to look for—clues that suggest a well-behaved student may be struggling alone with some burden.

Coughlin also arranges a series of assemblies for the students on extracurricular topics such as AIDS prevention, stress management, and drug abuse, aimed at stopping trouble before it starts. "Sure this takes extra time and effort, time that might be used toward planning new academic programs," the principal acknowledges. "But if we don't try to help these kids get control of their lives, they're going to end up with the social service or law enforcement agencies. Of course we don't always win but we've got to try—because they're kids, and kids get into trouble. They deserve a chance and then another chance."

Coughlin pauses for a moment then remarks quietly, "You know, I didn't always feel that way, I was a gung-ho football-coach type. If I got a square peg on my team, I'd ram it through a round hole any way I could. But my son was born autistic and I learned from him how a child suffers when he wants so much to succeed and is overwhelmed by obstacles. My son graduated from high school and got a standing ovation from his classmates—it was the most wonderful day in my life. But if he hadn't been encouraged and supported by a lot of people along the way, it never would have happened.

"Most of these troubled kids want to succeed too, they want to graduate," Coughlin insists, "but they need help getting over the obstacles."

If Larry Coughlin's support network serves as a bridge to help students surmount those obstacles, the teaching staff he has put together provides the electricity to light their way. His teaching team consists of approximately fifty classroom teachers, the majority of whom have their master's degrees. Several of his teachers predate him at Mount Desert, but Coughlin says the programs he has started here have been enthusiastically embraced by his staff. Although the turnover rate is minimal (most staff members stay on until retirement), Coughlin says he looks for more than academic excellence when he does have to hire a new staff member.

"It's important for a teacher to know his or her stuff," he says, "but I'm looking for that extra quality that tells me this person knows kids too. Maybe they've had some experience with anorexia or drug-abuse counseling—something that tells me they are just as interested in helping a student as they are in teaching their subject." Coughlin adds that several of his new staffers are themselves graduates of Mount Desert High.

Chemistry teacher, Dr. Joan D'Agastino (the school's one Ph.D.) is a good example of the sort of professional that Coughlin seeks. Arguably the most dynamic of Mount Desert High's teaching staff, D'Agastino has, for the past decade, been inspiring her students to take an interest in the arcane disciplines of physics and chemistry. Her students have gone on to major in sciences at such prestigious universities as MIT, Cal Tech, and Stanford. A recent recipient of a Presidential Award and a special grant for her outstanding science teaching, D'Agastino is taking a year off from her high-school duties to observe the science classes in the island's four elementary schools. One wonders how such a big fish, a former tenured professor at a private college in Florida, landed in such a small pond.

"Maine," she says, anticipating the question before it's asked. "I was all set with my nice private college, big salary, tenure, and then I took a vacation one summer in Maine—that was it." D'Agastino says she has no regrets about leaving the comforts of the college campus. She has found the atmosphere at Mount Desert High one in which she can flourish—if not financially, at least creatively.

"The school board here puts a tight cap on what they will pay a teacher, but if you can come up with a good program, they'll bend over backward to get you funding for it," she says. "I have small classes, around fifteen students or so, and I'm given a great deal of leeway to develop my own curriculum, which is how I operate best."

Down the hall is Rob Marshall's Daedalus class, a special course this English teacher devised to offer advanced students the opportunity to have open discussion about topics not covered in the usual high-school texts.

"This is a situation where kids have what they say and think treated with respect," says Marshall, a fifteen-year veteran of the school. "Sometimes it's difficult for them and for me, the instructor, to make the adjustment. So often I'm at the head of a classroom telling them what other great minds have said or written and what it means. Here, what I say, even though I may have more knowledge about the subject, weighs no more than my students' opinions."

Although there is a definite structure to Marshall's course—specific readings, such as Kafka and Camus, to be covered—the students are free to choose the topics they want to discuss, as long as those topics are related to the literature. "Sometimes the whole class wants to pursue the same topic, other times each kid has a different interest he or she wants to present to the class," Marshall says. "My job is to run around trying to facilitate things for them. I may suggest reading, movies, or people who might enhance their understanding of the subject."

The high achievers are not the only students who get the benefit of special programs and learning opportunities at Mount Desert. A newly created writing lab offers all English students a pleasant atmosphere where they can work on their term papers, essays, or creative-writing projects. Even after school, several students and one teacher are usually sitting at the eight or so available Apple computer terminals banked against the walls of this large sunny room.

Even those who are not so motivated to take advantage of these opportunities are exposed to new ideas by occasional guest lecturers in the classroom. By inviting Jackson Lab scientists, educators from the College of the Atlantic (the small private college in Bar Harbor specializing in what it calls human ecology), and other professionals in the community, students get an opportunity to learn about a variety of subjects from screenwriting to genetic engineering to whale behavior.

And of course there are the trips. To broaden her language students' horizons, Susan Vafiades-Diaz takes a group of her students (at their own expense) to Europe. She is also a chief organizer of several international exchange and work-study programs. The drama students, too, were given a taste of theatrical history a few years ago when their teacher, Joyce Higgins, took them on a tour of theaters in England.

Where some schools boast of their outstanding sports team—and Mount Desert High has several of these as well, most notably swimming, tennis, and track—this school is equally proud of its theatrical and musical accomplishments. Continuing a tradition of dramatic excellence set by George Demas who retired two years ago, Higgins' students still come up with winning productions at the state drama festivals. And the year that Dick Ordway's band doesn't take top honors at the state jazz festival will probably be the year the swallows forget to return to Capistrano. "Did you know that out of 470 students, 120 participate in the band, and many of the others are involved in extracurricular drama and art programs? Isn't that something?" principal Coughlin asks, shaking his head as if it were a thing too good to be true.

Is it all too good to be true? Well, in some areas, yes it is.

There are still some weak spots in the system. Coughlin says he is not satisfied with the school's job-training program and is disappointed by the relatively few students who choose to improve their business or trade skills and instead take jobs right out of high school. Those midlevel students he mentioned before sometimes fall through the holes in the net, and he would also like to see more parents involved with their child's progress—or lack of it.

There are also cliques in the student body. Jocks and preps, punks and latter-day hippies, and even regional divisions of students who display some animosity and prejudice toward one another. But D'Agastino says there is enough diversity in the school to offer almost any type of student a group—if only a small one—to belong to. Mount Desert may not be one big melting pot, but it seems to have a big enough stove to heat a number of different pots.

Lucy, who is now a successful freshman at the Rhode Island School of Design, was definitely of a "different pot." With her layers of multilength skirts, loops of chains, swathes of scarves, and razor blades dangling from her abundantly pierced ears, she was determined, from the day she walked into the school as a ninth grader, not to fit into the mainstream. She wanted to carve her own creative channels and found, somewhat to her surprise, that Mount Desert High was flexible enough to let her do so. (The razor blades, however, had to go.)

"If Lucy had been at any other school they probably would have clamped down on her hard or ostracized her," her mother says. "Instead she was allowed to do what she wanted and given a tremendous amount of support."

One of Lucy's English teachers, Beth Lyons, had encouraged her to apply to Breadloaf, the Vermont workshop for aspiring writers, and when Lucy was accepted Lyons got the school to pay her way. By the time Lucy was a senior she was editor of the school's literary magazine and was given an unusual amount of latitude in developing her own course of study. "When she demonstrated that she could direct a positive course for herself," her mother says, "they respected her decisions even if those decisions were outside what the school had to offer."

And when Lucy got accepted into Rhode Island School of Design without financial aid from the college, her high school and the community went to bat for her. "In many schools and towns someone as outrageously different as Lucy would not have been considered fit to represent the community," her mother says. "But my daughter wouldn't be at college now if it weren't for the $6,000 in scholarship money she received either directly from the school and community or from sources that her guidance counselor, Cliff Olsen, found for her."

Lucy is just one of the many students who has received this kind of support. When Mount Desert students graduate each spring, the island community is there to congratulate them with more than $140,000 in scholarships from seventy-two different sources. Lucy received scholarship money from such diverse sources as the Kebo Valley Golf Club, Bar Harbor Banking and Trust, and her own hometown. Other funds for other students have been raised by local service organizations, senior citizen groups, and both year-round and seasonal residents. There is even a scholarship fund established by the organizers of Pignick, an annual summer beer bash and barbecue held in Southwest Harbor.

So it seems that when envious parents, school administrators, and taxpayers from other school districts in the state ask why it is that Mount Desert Island High School is so successful in an age of lagging educational achievement nationwide, they will find the answer in the unique combination of administrative excellence, inspirational teaching, and an enlightened and supportive community. In particular, they will find a school and community willing to go that extra mile, yard, or inch—whatever it takes—to help each Mount Desert Island student receive the kind of education all of Maine's—and the nation's—children deserve.●

HONORING STUDENTS OF THE CONSTITUTION

● Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, I rise today to honor some young Wisconsinites who really know the meaning of citizenship.

These distinguished students are representing Wisconsin in the National Bicentennial Competition of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Please join me in recognizing the achievement of students Guy Russ, Ryan Buch, Phoua Chang, Shelly Kloehn, Tim Rice, Scott Pepke, Josh Schuch, Ivan Richwalski, Ann Marie Schultz, Jenny Koshak, Troy Viegut, Tammi Bartel, Keith Rothenberger, and Shara Zabawa—along with their teacher, William L. Mundt.

All the staff and parents of Northland Lutheran High School in Wausau, WI, have good reason to be proud of these young people. They have taken the time to master that great inheritance that we call the American system of government—and I, for one, am very proud to welcome them to the Nation's Capital.●

FORMER MEMBER OF CONGRESS STUYVESANT WAINWRIGHT II ENDORSES CONGRESSIONAL TERM LIMITATION

● Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask that a letter I have recently received from former Member Stuyvesant Wainwright II, a Member of the House for four terms, in support of congressional term limitation appear in the RECORD. Congressman Wainwright is one of many former Members who have expressed support for this important reform.

I again encourage my colleagues to examine Senate Joint Resolution 235, which Senator DECONCINI and I have introduced. The resolution proposes a constitutional amendment to limit terms of House Members to six and Senators to two.

The letter follows:

APRIL 10, 1990.

Hon. GORDON J. HUMPHREY,
Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HUMPHREY: Please include my name as a supporter of Joint Resolution #235.

I was a member of the House for four terms and believe that is just about long enough.

Faithfully yours,

STUYVESANT WAINWRIGHT II.●

COMPUTER SOFTWARE RENTAL AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1989

● Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, as an original cosponsor of S. 198, the Computer Software Rental Amendments Act of 1989, I am pleased that this legislation passed the Senate. I strongly support it. The computer software industry is an important and dynamic one in this country, and it is incumbent on Congress to create a legal environment under which it can continue to flourish and sustain a world leadership position.

I would like to specifically address one area of concern, however, with regard to the exclusion of video games from the protection of this legislation. Video games are computer software which can be offered to the consumer in either discs or cartridges. The same effort goes into the development of the software, and the capital costs and the risks are the same. Under this bill, identical copyrighted games can be rented if they are in the cartridge format, and cannot without the copyright owner's approval if they are in the disc format. I think that both formats should be treated the same.

For example, Nintendo cartridges are available in almost every video rental store in America. Software for Nintendo is developed not only by the company itself, but also by many small independent companies who are licensees of Nintendo. As is the nature of computer game development, many of these licensees are small startups who risk their entire future on the development of video games. If they don't sell, these firms don't stay in business. Of course, Nintendo, itself, can spend millions before developing a video game that people like.

Clearly, sales of video cartridges are reduced by the practice of video rental outlets offering game cartridges. A single cartridge can be rented hundreds of times. I don't have a problem with consumers being able to rent these game cartridges, however, the copyright owner should at least receive some commercial benefit from the rental. Currently, the copyright owner receives no return whatsoever from these rentals, except from the original sale. I have heard from these developers who believe they should be afforded the same protection with regard to rental as other software developers, and I agree.

I understand that there would be no difference in treatment for video game cartridges if there were more of the cartridge copying technology in America that is now rampant abroad. Well, copying technology is already being demonstrated at U.S. trade shows, and some Senators have seen similar demonstrations of these cartridge copying machines. Cartridges are copied all over the Far East with this technology. It is not fully logical to me that we do not now address an inevitable problem.

As this bill stands as passed by the Senate, it looks like Congress is penalizing companies, like Nintendo, which have developed technology that makes it more difficult to illegally copy their product. Simply put, Nintendo successfully created a security system for its product, while software developers who utilize the disc format have been substantially unsuccessful. My preference would be to protect the intellectual property of all software producers, whether enclosing their technology in disc or cartridge.

Nintendo has suggested that a fair compromise in S. 198 would be a delay in rental of game cartridges for 1 year. This is an eminently reasonable position. In fact, this concept exists with regard to the motion picture industry; consumers cannot rent movies at video stores for a period of time after they are released, giving motion picture studios a chance to receive a return on their investment through theater showings and the sale of broadcast and cable rights.

The committee report notes that it will "carefully monitor developments in this industry to determine if modifications in the act are appropriate" with regard to video games. I am quite sure that in the near future we will look back with a sorrow that we didn't exercise the slightest bit of foresight to include computer data in cartridges under the Computer Software Rental Amendments Act. I only hope that the industry survives the loss of development costs while we take a wait and see approach.●

RECOGNITION OF DRIVER APPRECIATION WEEK

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today with great pleasure to express my enthusiasm and support for the recognition of Driver Appreciation Week. It is an insightful and appropriate action on the part of the National School Bus Service, Inc. to designate a week to recognize their team of professional drivers in the Rochester, NY, area.

As the students of America leave their homes every morning to attend school, it is imperative that their transportation by bus, van or specialized vehicle affords them the greatest safety and comfort available. We cannot take for granted the kindness and care that these professionals display when providing safe and timely service to the students in the greater Rochester area community. As we all know, education is the foundation of our future, and it is our sacred obligation to ensure that all of our young Americans arrive to school safely.

It gives me great pleasure to have this opportunity to support the National School Bus Service, Inc. and its desire to make this week, of deserved recognition an annual event.●

NATIONAL TEACHER DAY

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I rise today to take a moment to salute a group of people who work tirelessly each year in one of the most noble endeavors I know of—educating our young people.

Today is National Teacher Day, Mr. President, and I want to take a moment to pay tribute to the thousands of educators around the country who really have one of the most important jobs in our society.

We entrust our teachers with our very future. The minds that they mold belong to those who will be the leaders of tomorrow. The youngsters who sit at school desks today represent many things. They are the scientists who will take us into the 21st century. They are the researchers who will find cures for aids and for cancer. They are the architects who will design new cities. They are the political leaders of tomorrow.

None of these children, however, will achieve these things without the help of their teachers. Without good teachers, Mr. President, our future, and the future of our children, is bleak indeed.

We ask so much of our teachers that I often wonder how they cope with the burden. We not only ask them to teach basic skills, but we ask them to challenge young minds, to open our childrens' eyes to the bright possibilities of the future. We ask them to give our children a sense of hope and wonderment. And we ask all of this in a time when the basic support unit for a child—the family—is under increasing stress.

It takes a special individual to teach, Mr. President. It takes a selfless person who is willing to invest years of his or her life in helping others. It's often a thankless job, and I hope that all of us in this body with children have taken the time over the years to express our appreciation to those who have taught our youngsters.

We pass a great many commemoratives in this body, Mr. President, special days for this group or that group, and too often the day goes by without notice. I didn't want that to happen today, and I simply wanted to take a moment to express the appreciation that I think all the Members of the U.S. Senate should feel for those in the teaching profession.●

REMOVAL OF OLDER CARS FROM THE ROAD

● Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I rise today to bring to the attention of my colleagues an innovative program recently announced by the Unocal Corp. The company proposes to do on a voluntary basis what I have been advocating for quite some time now, to remove older vehicles from the road.

Mr. President, the use of motor vehicles generates more pollution than any other single human activity. In the United States we have long recognized that, and spurred on by the smog battles in southern California in the 1950's, legislative initiatives have been introduced and enacted which would attempt to reduce the emissions from motor vehicles. As a nation we have made significant strides to reduce automobile emissions, and just this year the Senate passed a comprehensive clean air bill, which would restrict automobile emissions still further.

Every year we emit 20 million tons of hydrocarbons, of which 50 percent comes from the transportation sector, of which 4 to 5 million tons come from the automobile. However, a significantly larger portion of pollutants come from the older vehicles than from the newer model vehicles. For example, pre-1971 vehicles pollute from 18 to 20 times more than 1990 models.

I have always felt that we must employ basic and voluntary methods to get rid of the older vehicles and have taken several initiatives that are efficient, cost effective and will make significant contributions to our clean air efforts. The clean air bill that the Senate recently passed includes an amendment that I added which directs the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Secretary of the Department of Transportation to develop a transportation control measure which encourages the voluntary removal from the road of pre-1980 light duty vehicles and light duty trucks. I have also introduced legislation (S. 2239) which would give cars manufacturers credits to their CAFE averages, provided a customer voluntarily traded in a pre-1980 car for a new car and the old car was then destroyed by the manufacturer or car dealer. The credit would be based on the difference between the mile-per-gallon of the old car and the mile-per-gallon of the new car.

I am therefore very pleased that Unocal is voluntarily undertaking the three-tiered initiative they announced back on April 26. It may remove up to 23 million pounds of air pollutants annually in the Los Angeles basin. First, there is project "scrap" which is a pre-1971 old-car buy-back program. Unocal will pay $700 a piece for 7,000 pre-1971 vehicles registered in the basin. Second, the corporation will offer free smog checks and low-emission tuneups for pre-1975 cars at participating service stations, and finally a program will be initiated which will aid stranded drivers.

I ask that the news release issued by Unocal, and articles which appeared in the New York Times, USA Today, the Los Angeles Times, and the Washington Times on this issue be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The material follows:

UNOCAL NEWS RELEASE

LOS ANGELES, April 26.—Unocal today announced an innovative series of programs designed to rid the air in the Los Angeles Basin of up to 23 million pounds of air pollution annually.

In one program, called SCRAP, Unocal will spend more than $5 million to eliminate—by paying for any scrapping 7,000 older care—6 million pounds of air pollution. A second program, called Smog-Fighter, which helps older cars run cleaner, could rid the basin of up to another 17 million pounds of air pollution each year.

"Unocal is inititating a series of pollution-control programs that strike at the heart of the air quality problem in the Los Angeles Basin," said Richard J. Stegemeier, Unocal chairman, president and chief executive officer. "We want to demonstrate ways of reducing smog that are efficient and cost-effective."

Termed SCRAP (South Coast Recycled Auto Program), Smog-Fighter and Protech Patrol, the three clean air programs target vehicle emissions, which cause at least 60 percent of the area's smog according to the California's Air Resources Board, (Residential, commercial, industrial and manufacturing sources make up the remaining 40 percent.)

Under SCRAP, Unocal will pay $700 apiece for 7,000 pre-1971 vehicles registered in the Los Angeles Basin. These 7,000 vehicles each year emit approximately 6 million pounds of carbon monoxide, reactive organic gases and nitrogen oxides. (Pre-1971 vehicles pollute from 18 to 20 times more than 1990 models.) The initiative will cost Unocal more than $5 million.

"With SCRAP, we want to take the heaviest polluters off the road and hand them over to a scrap yard, which will shred and recycle the metal," Stagemeier said.

The second initiative, Smog-Fighter, offers free Smog Checks and low-emission tune-ups to drivers of pre-1975 cars at participating Unocal Protech stations in the great Los Angeles area. The program will be offered to drivers in the "off" year of the biennial mandatory Smog Check operated by the state's Bureau of Automotive Repair. The free low-emission tune-up, with adjustment to timing, idle speed and air/fuel mixtures, will enable checked cars to run cleaner and get better gasoline mileage.

Such tune-ups could annually reduce emissions by about 17 million pounds of pollutants (carbon monoxide, reactive organic gases and nitrogen oxides), if all eligible Los Angeles Basin motorists use the free service. If new parts are needed and the vehicle owner agrees, the driver will be responsible for that cost. Smog-Fighter could cost Unocal more than $5 million.

Protech Patrol, the program's third facet, will circulate specially equipped vehicles on the area's freeways to aid stranded motorists.

"Clogged traffic causes more pollution than free-flowing traffic," Stagemeier said. "Getting stranded cars back on the road helps eliminate stalls in the traffic flow and cuts the level of harmful emissions."

Protech Patrol's free services include jump-starting batteries, helping motorists change flat tires and providing air, water or gasoline to get drivers to the next service station. The cooperative venture between Unocal and its Protech dealers will initially cost Unocal about $300,000. Six vans will begin patrols, with up to four to be added later.

"These Unocal initiatives show that creative efforts, focused in the right areas, can have an impact on the air quality in the Los Angeles Basin," Stagemeier said. "Unocal wants to remain a leader of such programs."

Unocal will gather pertinent emissions data from SCRAP and Smog-Fighter to share with the South Coast Air Quality Management District, the State Air Resources Board, university researchers, environmental groups and other interested organizations.

A BID FOR SCRAP, TO CUT POLLUTION—CALIFORNIA OIL COMPANY PLANS TO REMOVE 7,000 OLD CARS FROM LOS ANGELES AREA

(By Matthew L. Wald)

For years clean air experts, from government officials to academics, have suggested half in jest that the cheapest way to cut pollution was to scrap old cars that do not meet today's emission standards. Yesterday a California oil company said it would spend $5 million to do just that.

The Unocal Corporation, based in Los Angeles, offerd to buy 7,000 of the oldest and dirtiest cars in the Los Angeles area. Each owner will get $700 and a one-month bus pass. The cars, which probably have a market value far less than that, will be recycled.

Unocol is taking the step on its own and not to meet any government requirement. But it is not acting in a vacuum; it made the announcement as many oil companies, including several competitors, are moving voluntarily to change the recipe of their gasoline to reduce air pollution in Los Angeles and add to good will.

Recipe changes are premature, said Unocal's chairman and chief executive, Richard J. Stegemeier, who noted that the oil companies and automobile manufacturers recently began joint testing of a variety of combinations of fuel and hardware changes to reduce emissions.

HEARING FROM EVERYBODY

But Unocal felt it must do something, he said in a telephone interview, adding, "We're hearing from everybody—our customers, our shareholders and the communities in which we live—that corporations need to pay their dues, so to speak, for the operations that we engage in."

Scrapping old and dirty cars has long been seen as a cheaper way to cut air pollution than requiring that new cars, which are already relatively clean, be made even cleaner. Experts said yesterday that no one had yet initiated a program of buying and scrapping cars before the era of pollution controls.

Regulations have largely left drivers alone and focused on steps to be taken by big corporations, like making new cars better, and more recently, making gasoline cleaner. Unocol's demonstration bounty program, with enough financing to buy 1.7 percent of the older cars in the region, is a different approach, involving tinkering with the used-car market.

"It's a neat idea," said Alan Van Arsdale, an air pollution expert at the Northeast States for Coordinated Air Use Management, in Boston, a group that has forced gasoline changes in New England, New Jersey and New York. "It's an idea that a lot of people have been talking about."

THE INGREDIENTS OF SMOG

Cars built before the introduction of the catalytic converter, in 1975, produce substantially larger amounts of carbon monoxide, a poison, and nitrogen oxides and unburned hydrocarbons, two major ingredients of ground-level ozone. (The third is sunlight, of which Los Angeles has a surfeit.)

Cars without catalytic converters can produce 50 grams or more of carbon monoxide for every mile they are driven, but cars built in 1975 and later are designed to produce no more than 20.7 grams a mile, and those built to current California standards produce 1.8 grams a mile.

Unocal's solution is to offer a flat $700 per car for pre-1971 models, a price the company believes represents a substantial premium above market value in many cases.

The company plans to advertise its program in English and Spanish, Unocal said, and will have up to 30 people at a junkyard to handle up to 12 cars an hour, 40 hours a week. The car must have been registered in the Los Angeles Basin for at least six months, the company added.

If the buyout program achieves its goal of 7,000 vehicles, that would represent only 1.7 percent of the 410,000 pre-1975 vehicles registered in the area. Thus, Unocal said, the program is not a solution to air pollution, but a demonstration program that may inspire other companies to do the same.

"Sixty percent of smog comes from mobile sources, cars and trucks," Mr. Stegemeier said. "Thirty percent is coming from pre-1975 automobiles. If you want to make a big impact in a hurry, this is by far the quickest and most cost-effective way."

Unocal also said it would offer free tune-ups for pre-1975 cars. The tune-up program could cost more than $5 million, depending on how many drivers participate, the company said.

California cars must pass a "smog check" test every other year, and the free tune-ups would be offered in the "off" year. Labor would be free but parts would be extra, and would be installed only with the driver's permission, Unocal said.

Company officials acknowledged that the free offer could generate extra paid business at its Unocal Protech service stations.

CLEANING UP L.A.: CASH FOR CLUNKERS

(By James R. Healey and Sally Ann Stewart)

The Unocal Corp. oil company has a proposition for Los Angeles: Junk pollution-spewing older cars for cash.

Starting Wednesday, owners can make appointments with Los Angeles-based Unocal to scrap pre-1971 cars. Unocal will pay $700 each for the first 7,000 turned in.

That'll hardly put a dent in smoggy L.A.'s 410,000 pre-'71 cars, but the program should cut "the worst of the worst," says Unocal chairman Richard Stegemeier.

He says older cars cause up to 30 times the pollution of newer models. To help more:

Some L.A. Unocal stations will offer free emission inspections and anti-pollution adjustments on pre-'75 autos.

Unocal vans will patrol freeways to get traffic-clogging stranded motorists rolling again, minimizing extra pollution from traffic jams.

The plan could cost $10 million in the next two years. But Stegemeier says it's worth it: "We live here, too."

Unocal's plan is the boldest in a new movement: finding ways to cut pollution that are easier, quicker, cheaper than clean-air proposals being debated on Capitol Hill.

Opponents say those would boost car prices by hundreds of dollars, and apply only to already clean newer cars.

"If people would just maintain their cars according to the owners' manuals, it would cut emissions by 50 percent right away," says David Cole, transportation expert at the University of Michigan.

CASH IN A CLUNKER FOR CLEAN AIR

(By Larry B. Stammer)

At a time when oil companies are under pressure to become environmentally conscious, Los Angeles-based Unocal has come up with a different idea to fight air pollution.

Instead of selling cleaner-burning gasoline, as two competitors are doing, Unocal said Thursday it will buy 7,000 old, heavily polluting cars and get them off the road, beginning June 1.

Unocal says there's $700 in it for the first 7,000 owners of pre-1971 cars who want to dump their clunkers. Unocal will then dispatch the old cars—which are not equipped with smog-reducing catalytic converters—to the scrap heap and provide the seller with a free bus pass for a month.

Company officials expect owners of old cars will jump at the chance to get rid of their vehicles. They estimate that it will take just 10 to 15 weeks to round up the 7,000 cars.

Unocal President Richard J. Stegmeier said the sellers could use the $700 toward purchase of cars built after 1975 that are equipped with catalytic converters.

The buy-out program is one of three enviornmental initiatives costing a total of $10 million over a two-year period announced Thursday by the company.

"This program . . . is a good-faith effort of this company to help improve the quality of life," Stegemeier told a downtown Los Angeles press conference, held on the roof of a company building to provide a view of the smog. But Stegemeier conceded that the program "is just a beginning."

The 7,000 vehicles account for less than 2% of the 410,000 pre-1971 cars on the road in the four-county Los Angeles Basin, the nation's smoggiest.

Moreover, the pollution reduction achieved by sending 7,000 clunkers to the junkyard would amount to only 0.12% of air pollution from all cars and trucks in the basin.

The Unocal program pales in comparison to air quality gains achieved by marketing cleaner-burning, reformulated gasoline.

For example, when Arco introduced its new EC-1 reformulated fuel last September for pre-1975 cars, the company estimated that the reduction in tailpipe emissions would be comparable to taking 100,000 old cars off the road. Those figures were verified by air pollution authorities. And unlike the one-time benefit of the Unocal program, the benefits of burning cleaner gasoline are ongoing.

Still, Unocal's South Coast Recycled Auto Program—SCRAP—was generally applauded by state and regional air pollution officials, as well as environmental groups, as a modest step forward. However, they agreed that, while any effort to junk older cars is welcome, it is no substitute for developing cleaner fuels.

"I certainly don't think they should substitute one for the other," said Jan Chatten Brown, president of the Coalition for Clean Air. She said it was "absolutely outrageous" that Unocal and other oil companies had not taken Arco's offer to share its formula for EC-1. Shell Oil Co. recently introduced a reformulated premium gasoline.

Stegemeir said Thursday that, like most oil companies, Unocal is awaiting the results of cleaner-gasoline research program undertaken jointly by major oil companies and automobile makers. He said that, depending upon the recommendations, it could take as long as 1½ to two years to market a new product.

Mary Nichols of the Natural Resources Defense Council said, "What Unocal is dong is demonstrating without any quid pro quo a strategy for turning over the automotive fleet more rapidly and getting some of the worst polluters off the road, which has been advocated by many companies and some government agencies over the years."

Unocal also announced two other programs to reduce air pollution. It promised free smog checks and low-emission tune-ups for all pre-1975 cars at participating Unocal Protech stations in the Los Angeles region. The emission tests and tune-ups would be done in the "off" years, when the state's mandatory smog check certificate is not required.

It said the tune-up program could reduce another 7,589 tons of air pollutants per year.

Some environmentalists applauded the smog check and tune-up programs, saying they will provide detailed information on the tailpipe emissions of older cars. The information could lead to an expansion of the old car buy-out program by other companies or by government agencies.

In addition, Unocal said it will use six service vans as part of a rush hour "Protech Patrol," offering free services to stranded motorists, including jump starts, gasoline to get to the next service station, water and flat-tire changes.

The company said vehicle owners interested in selling their old cars can call Unocal beginning May 2.

Unocal said a number of conditions must be met before a car will be purchased. For example, there must be no outstanding liens on the car, the owner must have the original pink slip, be at least 18 years old or have a parent or guardian present, and provided that the car has been registered by them in the Los Angeles Basin for at least the last six months.

OIL FIRM OFFERS TO BUY OLD CARS

(By Stephen Chapman)

An oil company offering ideas for improving the environment customarily gets about the same reaction as a convict pushing prison reform: skepticism mixed with outright hostility. But some ideas are too good to ignore, and one of those is Unocal Corp.'s offer to buy some of the dirtiest cars in Los Angeles and grant them the merciful death they've earned.

Cars built before 1981 account for less than half of the miles driven by Americans, but they produce more than 80 percent of the auto pollution. That's because they were made before Washington imposed today's strict regulations on what comes out of your car's tailpipe.

These regulations have produced an undisputed environmental success. New cars are pure as a Rocky Mountain stream compared to the cars of 20 years ago. Federal rules have eliminated 96 percent of the carbon monoxide emissions and 76 percent of the nitrogen oxides.

So which vehicles get tough new emissions controls in the Clean Air Act now before Congress? You guessed it: new cars. Old cars are mostly ignored, which means millions of them may keep spewing gunk to their carburetors' content. This is like deciding that Americans are too fat on average and then ordering all the skinny people to go on a diet.

Unocal, by contrast, has adopted the biblical view: It's not the healthy who need a physician, but the sick. If old cars are doing the worst harm to the air, why not do something about old cars? It's offering to buy7,000 of the worst ones at the handsome price of $700 each—plus a one-month bus pass.

Junking just 7,000 of the several million vehicles clogging the highways of Southern California won't do a lot for the long-suffering lungs of Angelenos. But the plan exemplifies a simple, cheap approach to cleaner urban air, unlike the complicated, expensive method that has been embraced on Capitol Hill.

The basic approach could take several forms. One is for local governments to buy old cars at a modest premium just to get them off the road once and for all. Scrapping even a small minority of the worst polluters would produce overnight gains in air quality.

Another is to recognize that few corporations will follow Unocal's selfless example purely out of devotion to Mother Earth. Robert Hahn of the American Enterprise Institute says we should give them a more powerful incentive: Polluting companies could be allowed to meet their clean air obligations by purchasing old cars instead of, say, cleaning up factory emissions.

If an oil company finds it frightfully expensive to eliminate so many tons of emissions from its refineries, it might be allowed to eliminate an equal or greater amount of pollution from the highways instead. As long as the corporation has to clean up the air, why not let it use the cheapest method?

Another expert, Fred Smith of the Competitive Enterprise Institute, argues that what counts is not how much pollution a car is capable of producing, but how much it actually produces. A dirty car that is driven 1,000 miles a year churns out fewer fumes than a clean one that travels 30,000.

His answer: a pollution tax. In most big cities, cars are now subject to regular inspections to make sure they meet emissions standards. By checking odometers as well, inspectors could easily guage how much pollution a car puts out every year—and lighten the owner's wallet accordingly.

This policy has two advantages over Congress' approach: It's cheaper, and it eliminates more pollution. You see, making new cars cleaner makes them more expensive as well. The more expensive they are, the longer people will hold on to their old cars. The longer they hold on to their old cars, the dirtier the air will be.

Unlike stricter new-car controls, a pollution tax would discourage unnecessary driving by forcing the driver to pay for it. Unlike stricter new-car controls, it would give owners a financial reason to trade in their smoke-billowing jalopies for pristine new models. Unlike stricter new-car controls, it would allow places with no smog to have less exacting rules than places with lots of smog.

In fact, the only drawback of the pollution tax is that it violates the favorite theme of federal environmental rules: Corporations must change their behavior so ordinary people don't have to change theirs.

A lot of Americans are committed to clean air only if the commitment can be paid for out of the profits of General Motors, Exxon and Bethlehem Steel. If we're serious about protecting the environment, we'll have to do better than that.●

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA PRESIDENT SAYS UNITED STATES ISN'T READY FOR "EUROPE 1992"

● Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I commend to my Senate colleagues a recent speech by Dr. James B. Holderman, president of the University of South Carolina, to the National Academy of Sciences. Dr. Holderman is chairman of the National Science Board's "Task Force on EC-91," a group mandated to examine the implications for U.S. science, technology, and education resulting from the rapid integration of West Europe's economies and financial systems. "Everywhere the alarm bells are ringing," he told some 200 top scientists, engineers, educators, and Government leaders in the March 5 speech, "but we're not reacting with any sense of urgency."

Mr. President, Dr. Holderman's speech is a timely wakeup call to our public education system, to our Government, to our research labs, and to corporate America. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD for the benefit of our colleagues.

The remarks follow:

REMARKS BY DR. JAMES B. HOLDERMAN

WE ARE NOT READY

It is a special pleasure to be able to address this distinguished audience, and to share this panel with such expert speakers.

In preparing for this visit, I was reminded of how successful a forum the Academy Industry Program has been. Since 1983, time and time again you have enjoyed many provocative and interesting addresses.

I look forward to breaking up that monotony.

As one coming from academia to address the business community, in the home of government, I do feel a little out of place.

It makes me wonder what Frank Press was thinking when he invited me. Perhaps since cocktail hour is next, he figured it didn't really matter—as long as I didn't talk so long that the ice would melt. Not to worry.

I checked it out, and they have plenty of ice.

But I will speak briefly.

Frank encouraged us to speak directly at this conference.

At this momentous time, that is what is needed—the courage of candor.

As this forum addresses the science and technology challenges of 1992, I feel a special obligation as a representative of both the National Science Board and higher education generally.

I can think of no challenges greater than the fact that we are not educating people who can handle what 1992, and so many other events, have thrust upon us.

In confronting this fact, I want to stress three things:

First, the broader nature and implications of the extraordinary changes occurring around the world.

Second, how our universities and our entire educational system have failed to adapt.

And third, how we can change that for the better. Events of just the last year make the need to change obvious.

One year ago, the reunification of Germany seemed an impossibility. Now, it is inevitable.

One year ago, in good conscience, South Africa and freedom could not be spoken in the same sentence.

Now, freedom in South Africa is on all our lips.

And who would have imagined a year ago, even a month ago, that Violeta Chamorro could be elected president in Nicaragua.

In effect, it is a world that has undergone paradigm shifts in loyalties.

In the Soviet Union, loyalty to obsolete political ideals moves in favor of loyalty to progress.

In Eastern Europe, loyalty—albeit imposed—to personality cults is transformed by loyalty to individual freedom.

In Western Europe, loyalty to parochialism and loyalty to unity work together.

Such transformations in loyalty underlie the social and political upheavals around the world, when we already face a world offering challenges enough:

A world beset by AIDS, poverty, and family dilemmas such as divorce, abortion and abuse.

A world in which ice storms strike Tokyo, London is besieged by hurricane-force winds, and in which rain forests disappear by the equivalent of almost a football field per second.

It is a world in which some of the gloomiest predictions say global warming could one day leave all but the torch of the Statue of Liberty under water.

Who else but our universities, with their tremendous resources of people and capital, can address these matters?

In the midst of all this comes Project 1992.

Elsewhere, the integration of individual freedom and politics has set the pace.

But in Western Europe, it is an economic integration, and it is just as significant and courageous.

Yet, while the world has shifted toward integration, our universities remain trapped in ideas which no longer serve.

We have not adapted.

If Europe was suffering from Eurosclerosis, we have became prisoners of our own "United Stasis."

As a result, we are unable to provide the help that Europe, and other nations, require.

Which leads to my next concern.

Our distinguished guests from Europe have not come to this beautiful hall with its precious legacy to see Americans wash their dirty laundry.

But what better place to acknowledge our problems?

In the very building where scientists and engineers gathered to provide leadership on the Marshall Plan.

In the very building where the American scientific community met to respond to Sputnik, and where the crucial questions of nuclear deterrence have been debated.

In this special time, and especially in this place, the truth demands our attention.

The American educational system, the main source of talent to resolve today's greatest dilemmas, is crippled:

It is crippled when 50% of high school students in urban areas drop out, and when our high school students are last in math, physics, chemistry and biology compared to other industrial nations.

It is crippled when the public school compensation system protects teachers not for their contributions as educators, but for their ability to survive, and for their seniority.

And it is crippled when universities continue to reward the specialist disproportionately, while the world integrates.

Elementary schools are separate from secondary schools, secondary schools are separate from universities, and university departments separate themselves from one another.

Akio Morita and Shintaro Ishihara, in their recent book "The Japan That Can Say 'No'," were right when they said Americans have forgotten how to change.

How strange that is for a country whose greatest strength was once its dynamism.

Of course, in basic science, our universities still lead the world.

American basic science is why in some fields more foreign students get advanced degrees in the U.S. than our own students—an incredible irony.

Unfortunately, such specialized success has blinded us to other possibilities.

How many times has someone else come along and turned our know-how into their technological advances?

The academy leadership itself has warned us that preoccupation with a single discipline is dangerous.

Last spring, Erich Bloch reminded us that after World War II, England's computer engineering and computer science programs were among the best.

But universities and industries did not work together, and now Britain's universities are endangered by the country's larger economic problems.

Frank Press himself has called for "full consideration of economic, environmental, and socio-political consequences."

Demographics already suggest that in a few years such integrative talents will be even more important.

These shifts will end a 500-year epoch in which "white men" in a few countries controlled the world.

And in speaking of "white men" and integration in the same breath, surely none of us misses some critical double entendres.

At this conference, integration means primarily economic integration on one continent, mainly with white men in charge.

But in another context, the meaning of integration makes America's glib talk of helping the EC ring hollow.

How can we help provide an educated corps of young people from all races when 63% of black students drop out of college.

How can we help when we have not prepared for an America, where by 2001, only 15 percent of the new labor force will be white males.

How can we help in an America that is producing a generation whose most notable quality just might be its ignorance.

With each day of inaction, we leave the future more and more to people unable to figure out what to do with it.

But what can and must we do, ourselves, now?

What can we do when change is not only in the air, it is remaking the earth and the relationship between all its inhabitants.

Commitments to react have been made time and time again in recent years, but with little follow-through.

Yet, ours is a rare gathering—a complex mosaic of leaders from 2 great continents, candidly discussing our mutual concerns.

That one continent, nearly half-a-century ago, helped the other recover from the ravages of a terrible war tells us we can overcome grave challenges.

With that in mind, we can work to insure that domestic crises don't impede America from again becoming a true scientific and technological compatriot.

Such a sharing is not yet futile, and it is on that note that I want to close today.

The domestic chaos does not have to destroy our mutual hope.

First, we know inspired young people have overcome such chaos before.

Religion, athletics, poetry, finance, industry, even the chance to save this planet, can be such an inspiration again.

We must alert young people that such inspiration is very real, and very important.

Consider the European Community's own example—Jean Monnet, the Frenchman known as the father of the common market, who showed us all the potential of economic integration.

Or consider this Academy, which has inspired so many universities to become first-class research institutions.

Or people from Berlin to Capetown, from Nelson Mandela to Vaclav Havel, turning the world on its ear.

We must help our young people draw inspiration and courage from such examples.

That is the first path to a solution.

Second, we must make education in grades K through 12 exciting again.

We must find feeder mechanisms by which the resources of our universities can modernize and recast our educational system.

Third, and finally, and most importantly, our universities must change their role in society, and they must begin to do so immediately.

Building from their strength in basic research, universities must develop professionals, scientists, and teachers who can recreate secondary and elementary education.

Our universities must integrate across disciplines, across levels of education, across all sectors of our culture.

The new world we have entered requires that kind of integated training.

Our young people, our love for them, and our loyalty not to yesterday, but to our future and to their future, demands that we do all these things beginning now.

Everywhere, the alarms have gone off loud and clear.

They are ringing in Europe and the Soviet Union, in Latin America and South Africa.

In our skies and in our oceans, and in our schools and in our factories.

In our streets and in our homes, and they are ringing louder with each passing day.

They are the alarms which tell us to get up and to act.

The courage to act, and act decisively must come from all of us.

We must enable our educational system to meet the needs of your companies and of your industries. We are not ready.

We must enable the United States to work with the European community where it is needed. We are not ready.

We must enable our teachers, our researchers and our children to appreciate the integrated world we have entered. We are not ready.

To get ready, to make these things happen, we must change the university's role in society, and we must begin now.

Making all this possible is our challenge, and it is our hope, and I look forward to making it a reality with you.

Thank you.●

A.M. CASTLE, FRANKLIN PARK, IL

● Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate A.M. Castle, of Franklin Park, IL, on its 100th anniversary. A.M. Castle is one of the Nation's largest suppliers of specialty metals to manufacturers, and employs over 500 people in Illinois and more than 3,300 in the United States.

I am proud that A.M. Castle represents our State of Illinois with its initiative and high quality of work. A.M. Castle's 100 years of success is a testament to the great pride and care the staff takes in its work. Other businesses can look to A.M. Castle as a shining example of an efficient American company able to successfully compete with others while contributing to the economy.

I am grateful for the contributions A.M. Castle has made to the Illinois economy. The over 500 jobs this company provides are essential to the well being of many households in suburban Chicago. I applaud A.M. Castle on 100 years of business success and service to Illinois, and I look forward to many more years of good work.●

DR. HARDING NOBLITT

●Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I rise today to salute a respected college educator and Minnesotan as he retires from a distinguished career; one that has spanned over four decades.

Dr. Harding Noblitt, an outstanding teacher and shaper-of-minds, will soon be ending his tenure at Concordia College in Moorhead, MN. As a professor of political science, Dr. Noblitt has amazed students and colleagues alike with his incredible memory and grasp of the foundations and workings of our Nation's political system.

Clearly among the most loved and revered instructors at Concordia, Dr. Noblitt once considered a career in law. However, this self-described ham preferred the captive audience of the classroom to the less responsive audience of the courtroom. During his tenure at Concordia, he has been awarded the college's first Great Teacher Award 1960, the Wije Distinguished Professorship for 1979–82, and the Flatt Distinguished Service Award for 1982–85.

Mr. President, as a specialist in constitutional law, political philosophy, and American diplomacy, Dr. Noblitt has propelled many of his students to careers as educators in schools and universities, as attorneys in a number of different specialities, and as public servants in local, State, and National Government. Several of my staff members have studied under him and have cultivated a better perspective of our Government and our political process from his teachings.

Dr. Noblitt is also known as a real history buff, often recalling pertinent facts and anecdotal tales from every Presidential election since 1924. While officially retiring from Concordia, he plans to continue amassing his store of knowledge by visiting and observing nearby State legislatures. Dr. Noblitt also plans to continue to research and write about the political history of the Red River Valley.

Therefore, Mr. President, it is with great pride and pleasure that I join with my fellow Minnesotans who declare April 29, 1990 as "Harding Noblitt Day," to honor this steller educator and outstanding Minnesotan on his well-deserved retirement. Best wishes for continued happiness, Dr. Noblitt.●

THE UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA'S GRADUATE INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS PROGRAM: NO. 1 IN THE NATION

● Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, a number of recent articles—most recently, in the Washington Post this past Sunday—have highlighted the tremendous success of the University of South Carolina's graduate program in international business. Last year, the Academy of International Business ranked it the top program of its kind in the United States.

Mr. President, that ranking has been richly earned. This year, America's 2,000 business schools will award some 67,000 masters in business administration degrees. However, precious few of those newly minted MBA's will be equipped intellectually and linguistically to play a credible role in the international business arena. Among that internationally oriented elite will be the latest crop of graduates from the University of South Carolina's business school.

USC has been the pioneer in developing a graduate business curriculum with a strong international focus. In the mid-1970's, USC created the International Business Graduate Degree Program by combining traditional business courses with the study of a country's politics, culture, and language, plus an internship abroad. Other universities have tried to emulate the University of South Carolina's program, but only USC requires a 6-month foreign internship plus fluency in a foreign language in order to graduate. As a result, the USC Business School has been a magnet for top talent, both on the faculty and in the student body. USC is providing the foot soldiers—or, more accurately, the officer corps—for an intensified U.S. presence in overseas markets and ventures.

My hat is off to Jeffrey S. Arpan, director of the international business program at USC, and to the many superb teachers, students, and administrators down through the years who have demanded and produced excellence in the USC Graduate International Business Program. The entire State of South Carolina takes pride in what they have accomplished.

Mr. President, I request that two articles on the USC program from the "State" newspaper in Columbia, SC, be reprinted in the RECORD.

The articles follow:

TEAMWORK HELPS PROGRAM ATTAIN HIGHEST RANKING

(By Beverly S. Shelley)

In 1974, a group of professors at the University of South Carolina rounded up the money and resources to create an international business program unlike any other in the nation.

They contacted companies the world over, seeking the necessary ingredients for the ideal training program.

What developed was the Master of International Business Studies degree, a graduate-level program weaving business courses and the study of a country's language, culture, history, geography and politics with an internship abroad. Ten different departments at USC and more than 100 companies became involved.

The academic world soon acknowledged the program's strengths. In 1984, MIBS was ranked the second best graduate international business program in the United States by members of the Academy of International Business. Last year, the academy ranked it No. 1.

But it wasn't until last month that MIBS hit the big time.

U.S. News & World Report in its March 19 issue ranked the international business department of USC's College of Business Administration the best in the country, ahead of the Wharton School, Harvard and other high profile programs.

While the earlier accolade was prestigious, few knew of it outside the academic community. The seal of approval USC received from U.S. News & World Report, on the other hand, will reach coffee tables and magazine racks in offices, living rooms and school libraries across the country.

The timing couldn't have been better.

The emerging global economy—Europe 1992—and world events—the reunification of Germany—point to the need for strong programs in international business.

USC administrators said they hope the attention that the magazine ranking generates will help them attract even better faculty and students and increase corporate support for the program.

"The recognition gives us so much more visibility with major corporations. It will help with student placements. It will help us get internships. It will help us raise money for the program. It will help us attract stronger students," said James F. Kane, dean of USC's business school.

"It really kind of shoots us into the big time," Kane said.

Actually, USC's College of Business Administration was the only one which had a department ranked among the top five but failed to make U.S. News & World Report's list of top 25 business schools.

But that doesn't bother Jeffrey S. Arpan, director of the international business department at USC since 1985.

"The idea was to come up with a program that would be so unique that it would gain national and international recognition even if the university or the college as a whole never was considered in the top 10," he said.

MIBs represents a team effort involving seven departments in the business school, three departments in the College of Humanities and Social Sciences and more than 100 companies that provide internships each year, Arpan said.

He cited three other reasons for the high ranking by U.S. News & World Report:

The international business department has a large doctoral program.

It is home to and co-editor of the quarterly Journal of International Business Studies, the leading academic publication in the field. The 1,600-member Academy of International Business selected USC as the publication's editorial base in 1982.

The College of Business Administration last year was designated a center for international business education and research by the U.S. Department of Education. It is one of five such centers in the United States serving as a resource for governmental, academic and professional communities.

Nonetheless, MIBS remains the flagship of the department's armada, Arpan said.

Executives agree.

"Quite frankly, we believe the program that is offered by USC is unique throughout the world," said Jim Phelan, executive for international administration for Chase Manhattan Bank.

"It offers a combination of superb academic training in business the first year and then an excellent internship, here in the U.S. for foreign students and overseas for U.S. students. It gives them experience that they couldn't get in other graduate school programs," Phelan said.

Phelan serves on the advisory board for the new center for international business at USC, as does W. Robert Clay, vice president of Imaging Systems for E.I. DuPont DeNemours & Co.

Of MIBS, Clay said, "We need people coming out with an education—an understanding and openmindedness toward other countries—that business isn't done that same way worldwide. MIBS (gets) into what we've been trying to do in terms of globalization."

It does so for much less than what students pay at better-known institutions. Most MIBS students enter a two-year program that costs about $15,000, including tuition, housing, books and the internship.

By comparison, two-year programs at Harvard University, Columbia University and the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania can run up to $64,200.

MIBS studies tied to Arabic, Korean and Japanese require three years to complete because the languages are more difficult to master. These programs cost more—up to $42,000, Arpan said.

In many cases, a company will pay the intern a stipend.

The required six-month internship abroad is one aspect that distinguishes MIBS from similar specialized programs.

Internships are as varied as the companies that sponsor them. A student may work on a single project—for instance, studying the feasibility of exporting a product to a region of the world—or on a series of smaller assignments, Arpan said.

"We had a student several years ago that looked at financing a project for a Japanese company in the United States as his internship. The company subsequently adopted the plan with some modifications when it built its manufacturing facility in the U.S.," he said.

Internship sponsors over the years have included American Express, BASF, Bell South, DuPont, Fluor, Honeywell, Kraft, Michelin, Price Waterhouse, R.J. Reynolds, Rockwell International, Sony, Unisys and Westinghouse.

South Carolina-based companies participating have included Policy Management Systems and Sonoco Products.

Arpan said the idea of an internship was a relatively easy sell to U.S. companies but more difficult to firms overseas. The very word doesn't exist in the Japanese vocabulary.

"In many cases, we have had to define the kind of internships we want and then get companies to see the benefits, particularly if they're not U.S. affiliates," he said.

Another aspect that sets MIBS apart is the intensive foreign language component. Study begins in the summer before business course work. Students participate in language classes from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., five days a week.

MIBS began with three language tracts—German and Spanish for American students and English for those from abroad. Today there are eight tracts including French and Portuguese, Arabic, Korean and Japanese.

Italian will be added this summer. Mandarine Chinese and Russian will be added in summer 1991.

The French tract draws the most applicants, but the German tract typically has the largest enrollment, Arpan said. West Germany has one of the world's strongest economies. It has significant investment in the United States, and German companies have been willing to support internships.

But demand for the Japanese tract is increasing, he said.

Other courses vary depending on the student's particular interest, such as finance, marketing or management.

There is also a guest speaker series which adds "a real world dimension to the curriculum," Arpan said. It in turn introduces business executives to MIBS, opening the door for corporate support.

"We typically have about a dozen each year from the international business community or the political community, ambassadors or people of that nature," Arpan said.

Twenty-two students comprised the first MIBS graduating class. This year, 130 students will graduate.

More than 1,000 students request applications each year. Five hundred apply. About 140 are selected.

The typical student is 24 to 25, has had a year or two of work experience and some foreign language training, although that is not a requirement.

In a typical graduating class, 60 percent will be male. Fifty percent will have business undergraduate degrees, 40 percent humanities undergraduate degrees and the rest technical degrees in such areas as engineering and chemistry.

The average student's score on the Graduating Management Admissions Test is 575 and his grade point ratio is 3.3 on a 4.0 scale.

Seventy-five percent of the students are American. The remainder break out equally from European, Asian and Latin American countries. The program draws students from more than 30 states and a dozen foreign countries.

"What sets our students apart is that they are all very interested and committed to the international business community. They're very highly motivated, very bright and very serious in their intent," Arpan said.

In the early years of the program the dropout rate was high—about one of every two students.

The improved caliber of student that the program draws today has cut that rate to between 5 percent and 10 percent, Arpan said, "and almost all of that occurs in the first six months, either in the language program in the summer or in the first semester of the business curriculum."

"It is a very intensive, high pressure program. Even though students may have the intellectual capacity, it's hard to gauge their ability to handle that pressure," he said.

An estimated 1,200 MIBS graduates work in 40 countries, including the United States. Well over half are based in this country in positions with international responsibility.

The average salary among 1989 graduates was $42,000, Arpan said. Salaries vary depending on prior work experience, the language track and the industry.

Several graduates have become presidents of foreign companies, although none a major international fixture. There are graduates who hold senior positions at Chase Manhattan and Citicorp. One is the director of one of Argentina's largest banks.

ALUMNI BOOSTING PROGRAM'S CLOUT

(By Beverly S. Shelley)

The University of South Carolina's graduate program in international business doesn't have the clout enjoyed by Harvard or the Wharton School.

Terry Johnson, Eric Adams, Carol Zajac and Andrew Stouffer are working to change that.

They are among a growing number of USC alumni whose presence in the international business arena promotes the Masters of International Business Studies program and may create new opportunities for future graduates.

Johnson, a 1984 MIBS graduate who specialized in German, is a manager for product strategies development for General Motors Corp.'s European operation.

The company had offered a MIBS internship for many years. Last year, Johnson encouraged the company to sponsor two interns. Next year, GM likely will sponsor three, Johnson said.

"The MIBS program has established a strong reputation. We're able to slot interns into active roles in the department as junior product managers. We give them responsibility right off the bat," he said.

"We can in a relatively short time give the interns a high amount of responsibility without a long initiation period."

Johnson said graduate international business programs have gained recognition only in the past few years. In the international setting, he said, "the Ivy League schools are the ones everyone knows about. After that, it starts getting very hazy. As a state, (South Carolina), nobody knows we're here, and the program has no recognition."

General Motors typically recruits only from the nation's top five schools. Johnson said he hopes to use the No. 1 ranking given USC's international business department by U.S. News & World Report as leverage for recruiting more MIBS graduates.

Johnson said one of the most valuable lessons he learned while in the MIBS program was teamwork.

"There was the accelerated environment through which you go through the course work—12 months of intensive study," he said. "It was a lesson in teamwork, in prioritization. If you work as an individual, you're lost. You're dead. The only way to manage the course work is to start delegating and come together as a team."

Adams, a 1988 MIBS graduate, is project coordinator for Fresenius, one of the largest pharmaceutical and hospital supply companies in Germany with annual sales of $450 million.

Adams' job is to help identify potential acquisitions across Europe for Fresenius. He is also responsible for helping coordinate activity among the parent company and its five subsidiaries.

The 26-year-old Indiana native was instrumental in getting Fresenius to sponsor a MIBS intern program last year.

He's active in MAD—MIBS Alumni Deutschland—a group of about 30 MIBS alumni in Germany. The group meets about twice a year to share ideas ans promote the program, he said.

"MIBS brings to an education the attitude that you have to be flexible and open minded or you're not going to be able to get anywhere," Adams said.

"If you're not open minded, you're not going to make it through MIBS, and you're not going to make it in an international business environment."

Ms. Zajac, a 1980 graduate, works for Digital Computers' German subsidiary as a finance manager.

For the Philadelphia native, attending MIBS was risky and rewarding. "I had never heard of South Carolina," she said.

After attending a graduate seminar and visiting the campus, she said she was convinced USC offered what she wanted.

"The enthusiasm was contagious," she said.

Also, she was sold on the MIBS internship.

"I wouldn't have dared to come over here without having done the internship," she said, adding that the focus on such topics as international market and international finance were also important.

The program covered topics "that when you work in Europe you can really use, for example, currency fluctuations and doing business across borders."

Ms. Zajac said Digital has sponsored two interns during her tenure and she's ready to take another if there's a need.

Stouffer's MIBS studies focused on Portuguese. He is a planning and control analyst for Champion International Corp. in Brazil, which exports to more than 50 countries.●

REREFERRAL OF A BILL—S. 2513, THE CONGRESSIONAL RECYCLING ACT OF 1990

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that S. 2513, which was incorrectly referred to the Governmental Affairs Committee, be discharged and rereferred to the Rules and Administration Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIONAL PHYSICAL FITNESS AND SPORTS MONTH

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 267, designating May 1990 as National Physical Fitness and Sports Month, and that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res. 267) to authorize and request the President to designate May 1990 as "National Physcial Fitness and Sports Month."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maine?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I am pleased that we are acting today on my joint resolution (S.J. Res. 267) which designates the month of May 1990 as "National Physical Fitness and Sports Month."

We no longer view physical exercise as solely for entertainment purposes. In the past few decades, a large segment of the population of this country has become conscious of, and involved in, the evergrowing fitness movement. Physical activity should be an important part of life each day for persons of all ages and abilities. Personally, I have benefited greatly from the effects of physical exercise. Each morning, I do calisthenics for a half hour, lift weights, and I swim one-half a mile three times a week.

Interest in sports begins at an early age. Nearly 30 million boys and girls take part in age-grouped team sports and other organized out-of-school physical activity. More than 6 million teenagers and over 600,000 college students compete in interscholastic and intramural athletic programs.

One of every two adults in the United States engages regularly in some type of exercise and/or sports. A third of us swim; a fourth ride bicycles; and a fifth play one of the racquet sports. More than 20 million people in this country run. The number of physically active women and men has doubled in 10 years and continues to grow rapidly.

Not only are fitness and sports programs a source of pleasure and personal satisfaction by which we refresh and strengthen ourselves, but they also have good preventive programs of health care.

Last year during May, as part of the celebration of National Physical Fitness and Sports Month, 1,139,902 persons participated in some form of physical activity, from 5-kilometer walks to track meets and superstars contests. This number is only a small part of the American population. We must make all Americans aware of the benefits offered with such programs increasingly available to everyone. Accordingly, I introduced this joint resolution which requests President Bush to declare May 1990 as "National Physcial Fitness and Sports Month."

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to join with me and support the final passage of this resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (S.J. Res. 267) was engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The joint resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S.J. RES. 267

Whereas there is an increase in the number of adults in our country who regularly participate in exercise and sports;

Whereas the number of physically active men and women continues to grow rapidly, especially since the 1970s;

Whereas there is great support for the importance of daily exercise for youth and children regardless of physical capabilities or limitations;

Whereas there is continued growth in senior citizens' physical activity participation which increases their enjoyment and quality of life;

Whereas today we recognize that physical activity is an important part of daily life for children, adults, and senior citizens of both sexes;

Whereas physical activity is vital to good health and is a rich source of pleasure and personal satisfaction;

Whereas our physical fitness and sports programs are one of the primary means by which we strengthen our bodies and refresh our spirits; and

Whereas it is essential that we make fitness and sports programs increasingly available in the schools, at the workplace, and during leisure time so that all of our citizens will be able to experience the joys and benefits they offer: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation designating the month of May 1990 as "National Physical Fitness and Sports Month", and to call upon Federal, State, and local government agencies, and the people of the United States to observe the month with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

ORDERS FOR TOMORROW

RECESS UNTIL 10:30 A.M., JOURNAL OF THE PROCEEDINGS TO BE APPROVED; RESUME CONSIDERATION OF S. 135.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in recess until 10:30 a.m. tomorrow, Wednesday, May 9; that following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be deemed approved; that the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day; that, following the reservation of the leader time, the Senate resume consideration of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill; and that at that time Senator MCCONNELL be recognized to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 10:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, if the distinguished Republican leader has no further business, and no other Senator is seeking recognition, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess under the previous order until 10:30 a.m. on Wednesday, May 9, 1990.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:57 p.m., recessed until Wednesday, May 9, 1990, at 10:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 8, 1990:

THE JUDICIARY

A. RAYMOND RANDOLPH, OF MARYLAND, TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA CIRCUIT VICE SPOTTSWOOD W. ROBINSON III, RETIRED.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

JAMES R. MOSELEY, OF INDIANA, TO BE AN ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, VICE GEORGE S. DUNLOP, RESIGNED.

IN THE NAVY

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICER FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE OF VICE ADMIRAL WHILE ASSIGNED TO A POSITION OF IMPORTANCE AND RESPONSIBILILITY UNDER TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTION 601:

To be vice admiral

REAR ADM. (SELECTEE) WILLIAM A. OWENS, U.S. NAVY, xxx-xx-xxxx

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, May 8, 1990

The House met at 12 noon.

Rabbi Arthur Schneier, Park East Synagogue, New York, NY, offered the following prayer:

You have delivered my soul from death.—(Psalm 116).

You have saved me from the Holocaust and, 43 years ago today, on May 8, 1947, You brought me to the land of freedom and opportunity, the Nation of immigrants. This year you have given me the privilege to preside over the centennial of my congregation, Park East Synagogue, a major spiritual center in New York.

God bless America that gave so many of us a new lease on life and remains the beacon of hope and faith for those deprived of human dignity and freedom, the home of churches and synagogues, where each one of us can worship freely and gain strength through moral values.

The ideology that sought to bury us is now on its death bed. And You, oh Lord, are very much alive in the hearts of millions, who are hungry not only for food but yearn for spiritual sustenance. "In God we trust" is now proclaimed by nations of the velvet revolutions. The spirit of America has captured the hearts and minds of people throughout the world and, as they grope to find their way from totalitarianism to democracy—sometimes impassioned by nationalism and ethnic strife—may we share with them the benefits of pluralism and tolerance and the blessing of unity in diversity.

God bless America * * * Stand beside her and guide her.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Chair's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 263, nays 106, answered "present" 1, not voting 63, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The Chair will ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MCCLOSKEY] if he would kindly come forward and lead the membership in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. MCCLOSKEY led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 4637. An act to amend Public Law 101-86 to eliminate the 6-month limitation on the period for which civilian and military retirees may serve as temporary employees, in connection with the 1990 decennial census of population, without being subject to certain offsets from pay or other benefits.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 3910. An act to require the Secretary of Education to conduct a comprehensive national assessment of programs carried out with assistance under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1424. An act to amend chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, to provide that reimbursement for certain travel expenses related to relocation of Federal employees shall apply to all stations within the United States.

WELCOME TO RABBI ARTHUR SCHNEIER

(Mr. GREEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to welcome my friend, Rabbi Arthur Schneier, of the Park East Synagogue in New York City, who gave today's opening prayer.

Rabbi Schneier's visit today is part of the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of this synagogue, which was founded in 1889.

As Rabbi Schneier noted, today is also the 43rd anniversary of his arrival in the United States as a refugee from Europe.

The Park East Synagogue is renowned for its contributions to Jewish life in New York City as well as throughout the United States and abroad. The synagogue, its rabbi, and its congregation have contributed to interreligious harmony and have been in the forefront of concern for Soviet and Eastern European Jewry and the State of Israel.

The Park East Synagogue has benefited from the spiritual leadership of Rabbi Schneier for the past 28 years. Rabbi Schneier also leads the highly respected human rights organization, the Appeal of Conscience Foundation. This group of leaders from the Roman Catholic, Protestant, Greek Orthodox, Armenian Orthodox, and Jewish faiths has visited many countries including the Soviet Union, Hungary, and China in an effort to protest repression of religious activity.

On behalf of all of my colleagues, I extend a warm welcome to Rabbi Schneier and those members of the Park East Synagogue who made the trip to Washington to witness this extraordinary occasion. I should also like to thank Rabbi Schneier for giving the prayer today and for his dedication to the worldwide Jewish community and to interreligious accord.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 4641

Mr. STALLINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed from the list of cosponsors of H.R. 4641.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

FAMILY—THE REAL ISSUE IN THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

(Mr. SMITH of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, the real issue in our consideration of the Family and Medical Leave Act is in the bill's first word: Family. This is a bill about giving American families a chance.

A recent Gallop Poll shows that four out of five Americans feel employees should be with their children during the first weeks of life and should be able to care for severely ill family members, without risk of losing their jobs. Americans believe in family.

This bill will not burden business. It responds to the legitimate concerns of employers by providing for only unpaid leave. In fact, GAO estimated that the annual cost of the bill would average only $5.30 per employee. Additionally, this legislation will encourage employers to invest in an experienced, well-trained, high morale work force.

It seems that everyone these days is bemoaning the decline of the American family and the loss of an experienced, motivated American work force. Well, Mr. Speaker, this bill encourages businesses to retain our most experienced workers. And, most of all, this bill responds to the concerns of America's most important group—our families.

KEEP THE DOLLAR BILL

(Mr. CONTE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, a bill now lurking in the Subcommittee on Coinage and Consumer Affairs would replace the American dollar bill with a copper coin.

Beware of it: it does not simply add a dollar coin—it eliminates the dollar bill completely. It is a bad, bad idea.

Think of all the change we'd have to carry. We would have to strap coin dispensers to our belts and walk around like gas station attendants or popcorn vendors.

But even if we got used to that, the whole idea is shameful. Imagine taking away the dollar bill—the symbol of prosperity, the image of our country's greatness, the emblem of American economic might—and replacing it with a giant penny.

A giant penny, Mr. Speaker.

What a pathetic statement of American decline. Why not make whiffleball the national pastime, or change the Statue of Liberty for a statue of Bozo the Clown while we're at it?

Mr. Speaker, the dollar bill is just like the American flag. It is a symbol of our country. Let's keep it.

SUPPORT FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE

(Mr. MCDERMOTT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, today less than 10 percent of the population represents the kind of family we used to see on "Ozzie and Harriet." Today most of our children have mothers who work outside the home.

When these children suffer a serious illness, mothers and fathers must too often choose between keeping their jobs or caring for their children.

As a physician, I have seen parents agonize over this decision. We all know that such a conflict benefits neither the family nor the employer—and certainly not the patient. Whether you are young or old, illness is a time when you need your family the most. No one should have to live with the grief and guilt of abandoning a child or parent in a time of need. No responsible employer should ask that of an employee.

The Family and Medical Leave Act will guarantee working families a chance to care for their loved ones. This legislation will not cost the Federal Government one penny, and the average annual cost to employers is estimated at about $5 per employee.

We are not often presented with legislation that offers sensible, cost-effective, and compassionate solutions. The Family and Medical Leave Act is one of these, and I urge the President to support it.

NO COMPROMISE ON FEDERAL MANDATES

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, the Family and Medical Leave Act (H.R. 770) or a similar bill will be considered by the House later this week. I encourage my colleagues to vigorously oppose H.R. 770 or any so-called compromise.

The central problem with any legislation is simply a matter of policy. The Federal Government should not adopt a policy that mandates benefits for businesses. Instead, it should leave these decisions to businesses and their employees. I recognize the value of family and medical leave benefits; however, I do not believe the Federal Government should mandate these benefits to the exclusion of others deemed more valuable by various segments of the work force.

I believe the Federal Government should continue to allow companies the flexibility to provide their workers with the benefits they choose. My company in Hickory, NC, is a good example of business offering a benefit mix that helps the business and meets the desires of the workers. We provide a number of employee benefits, including health insurance, life insurance, a retirement plan, and maternity and family leave.

Congress should continue to encourage employers to provide flexible packages. However the decision on what is in the package should not be made by Washington politicians and bureaucrats.

Vote "no" on mandated leave!

CUT AID TO A CORRUPT MILITARY IN EL SALVADOR

(Mr. McCLOSKEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McCLOSKEY. Mr. Speaker, it has been reliably reported that several items of evidence in the slayings of six Jesuits and two women in El Salvador have mysteriously disappeared and at least four soldiers with potentially incriminating evidence have been sent abroad. Reportedly they will be unavailable to testify.

Perhaps these latest outrageous developments could comprise at least one of the final straws ultimately causing a not so mysterious disappearance of U.S. aid to a substantially corrupt military.

These revelations hopefully will generate support this week in this Chamber for the provisions in the supplemental foreign assistance bill to withhold 50 percent of the El Salvador military aid remaining in 1990 and in 1991.

TAX ASSISTANCE FOR BUSINESSES UNDER AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT

(Mr. DeLAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DeLAY. Mr. Speaker, the Americans With Disabilities Act has been reported from four committees and it is now headed for the House floor for consideration.

Both Republicans and Democrats have attempted to amend provisions they have found objectionable. However, the momentum behind this bill has been a major factor in defeating amendments which would clarify and improve the bill.

There is however, Mr. Speaker, one issue that has not yet been considered in any of the four committees, and that is the issue of providing tax assistance for businesses who will be required to make accommodations under the bill.

Mandating access for the disabled is a reasonable requirement. Mandating that a business spend money to provide that access is something different. But to leave the spending mandate open-ended—with the courts determining how much small businesses must spend to accommodate the disabled—is unheard of!

Mr. Speaker, this Congress cannot pass the ADA unless it also allows for a tax credit for businesses who will be forced to spend money on accommodations for the disabled.

PRESIDENT MUST PRESENT A TAX LIST TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, in 1988 Candidate Bush said "Read my lips: no new taxes." Now the President is singing a different tune. He is saying, "What I really meant was no new income taxes."

Tricky, tricky, tricky. I guess now the President is saying that raising old taxes is OK, or inheritance taxes is all right, or sales taxes, that is all right as well, and maybe even a few hidden taxes.

This is a joke. A tax is a tax is a tax. It is time for the President to prepare that tax list and send it to the American people so they can check it twice.

Mr. Speaker, Candidate Bush said "Read my lips." He did not tell the American taxpayers to read his mind. Democrats should stand here and make sure he presents that tax list to the American people.

SATELLITE VIEWERS' RIGHTS ACT OF 1990

(Mr. TAUZIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow I will introduce the Satellite Viewers' Rights Act of 1990. As dish sizes shrink and cable rates inflate, the future of the satellite dish industry brightens. The thought of having the diversity of cable programming delivered through a satellite to a flat dish receiver no bigger than a dinner napkin is absolutely revolutionary. Revolutionary, but also very real. Investors large and small are lining up to take their best shot at this new medium. From telecommunications giants like NBC to entrepreneurs like Dan Garner of Little Rock, AR, men and women of vision see the opportunity in the future of direct broadcast satellite services.

Through this napkin-sized antenna, citizens of Japan and Germany are already receiving satellite programming.

And it is coming to America soon.

I believe that we must encourage this technology for the United States. Technology demands that we look at the future and encourage fair, competitive, and aggressive marketplace competition through access to programming at prices that are fair and competitive for consumers, and apply these technologies in those competitive terms to Ku-Band direct broadcast satellite service, as I have done in the Satellite Viewer's Rights Act of 1990.

The sky is opening to new television opportunities. Our bill will keep those skies open and keep prices fair and competitive.

UNBRIDLED'S SUCCESS AT TARTAN FARMS, OCALA, FL

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, great stretch runs are the stuff of legends in the Kentucky Derby, but few winners have ever finished as powerfully as Unbridled did Saturday.

The colt flew the final quarter mile at Churchill Downs in the fastest time since Secretariat to win the 116th running of America's most famous race.

I take considerable pride in the success of Unbridled. He was born and bred at Tartan Farms in my hometown of Ocala, FL.

Mr. Speaker, Unbridled's success is also a success for Florida's thoroughbred breeders. The thoroughbred industry has more than $4 billion invested in Florida and provides more than 30,000 jobs.

Unbridled is the fourth Florida bred colt to win the Kentucky Derby. The honor also went to Needles in 1956, Foolish Pleasure in 1975, and Affirmed in 1978. Of course Affirmed went on to win the Triple Crown with victories at the Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

I am delighted that Unbridled is continuing Florida's tremendous thoroughbred reputation.

SOUTH CAROLINA COMMUNITY EXTENDS THANKS TO STATE OF MARYLAND

(Mr. TALLON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TALLON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend a warm thank you to the State of Maryland from a community in South Carolina that was practically destroyed by Hurricane Hugo this past September.

In the days and weeks immediately following the hurricane, help began to arrive from all over the country. This help came in many forms and from many sources, but the help that came from Gov. William Donald Schaffer and the State of Maryland was especially helpful and meaningful to the Berkeley County community of St. Stephen.

Mayor Robert Hoffman of St. Stephen has repeatedly praised the outstanding assistance that his town received from Governor Schaffer and the people of Maryland. The compassion and heart-felt support that Governor Schaffer offered was a tremendous boost in St. Stephen's first steps toward recovery from the devastation of the hurricane.

In these days of budget constraints and the attitude of looking out for one's own interests, the people of Maryland proved to the community of St. Stephen that human compassion comes first.

I join the people of St. Stephen in publicly thanking Governor Schaffer and the people of Maryland for their outpouring of help, both in material supplies and human understanding.

FAIR REDISTRICTING NEEDED

(Mr. SCHIFF asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot of talk lately about the need for campaign finance reform.

I agree that we need finance reform, but finance reform will not result in true campaign reform if legislatures can continue to gerrymander districts.

If a district is noncompetitive in voter registration, like many districts are today, there is no reform.

The Republican campaign reform plan would prohibit State legislatures from dividing cities, counties, and other governmental units to create new district boundaries unnecessarily.

This legislation would prevent State legislatures from freely gerrymandering districts for partisan political advantage.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is long overdue.

The American people deserve fair redistricting after the 1990 census, and fair redistricting is essential to campaign reform.

HAVE A HEART, MR. BUSH

(Mr. DURBIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, consider this situation: The mother of a dying child, after years of suffering, finally realizes that the end is near. She goes to her employer of several years and asks for leave without pay for several weeks to be with her dying child. The employer tells her that he cannot guarantee her job when she returns. After the child's death, she comes back to find the employer refuses to rehire her.

In George Bush's view of America, our Government should have no voice in this brutal decision to punish a grieving mother. In George Bush's view of America, this mother who is faced with a cruelty of life now faces a cruel treatment from her employer with no legal recourse.

President Bush's threat to veto the Family Medical Leave Act betrays any notion that there is a kinder and gentler bone in this administration.

Have a heart, Mr. Bush. Support the American family during those tragic moments which can face any of us.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The Chair would observe that the President should be addressed through the Chair and not directly.

ADVERSE EFFECTS OF CLEAN AIR ACT

(Mr. APPLEGATE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Speaker, following up on my friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT]: "Read my lips," Mr. Bush said, "no new taxes."

Yet the clean air bill that is before us is one of the biggest tax increase bills in the history of this country. Call it whatever you want to call it, taxes, increased bills, but there is going to be an 18- to 40-percent increase in utility bills, there is going to be an increase in the cost of products we are going to have to pay for. There is going to be an increase in the amount of foreign imports, and there are going to be hundreds of thousands of jobs in the steel industry and the coal industry that are going to be lost, and there are going to be lost Federal taxes.

Dr. Wilbur Steger, a professor at Carnegie Mellon Institute in Pittsburgh, who wrote an analysis of jobs at risk and job losses resulting from the proposed Clean Air Act amendments said that he is perplexed that anybody could support this bill when his analysis shows its passage could have a detrimental effect on 240,000 jobs in West Virginia and Ohio alone.

So what I am saying, Mr. Bush, is common sense must prevail. Take a look at the economic impact. Do not devastate a region. Help us.

DISCONTINUE AID TO EL SALVADOR ONCE AND FOR ALL

Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, unfortunately our Government seems to have become a bit ho-hum about strange doings in El Salvador. Despite thousands of opposition and labor leaders mysteriously having disappeared or been murdered, we have dumped nearly $100 million a year into military aid and hundreds of millions more into other assistance for El Salvador.

When the six Jesuits and their housekeeper were brutally murdered last fall, it seemed things might change and our level of tolerance had finally been exceeded. But now it seems it is back to business as usual, or perhaps unusual in El Salvador.

First we heard that the colonel arrested in the killing of the six Jesuits was taking vacations with his family in a resort in the south of the country on a beach. It is tough when you are put in jail, and he needs those vacations.

Then we heard that the colonel's notebooks had mysteriously gone on vacation, and then the log book for the night of the killings disappeared, and now the four key, material witnesses have abruptly gone overseas to study, perhaps with U.S. aid.

Mr. Speaker, with all of these mysterious disappearances, unscheduled vacations, and unanticipated overseas trips, it is time that military aid for El Salvador disappeared once and for all.

SEVERE PROBLEMS REMAIN WITH U.S. MERCHANT MARINE

(Mr. PICKETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Speaker, last year the National Commission on Merchant Marine and Defense issued its final report documenting the severe decline in the U.S. merchant marine industry and recommending action to reverse this trend. Neither Congress nor the President has acted on the recommendations to begin correcting this extremely serious deficiency in U.S. military and industrial policy.

Without an adequate U.S.-flag fleet of commercial vessels and the people to man them, we risk finding the United States in the position of being unable to transport needed troops, supplies, and vital equipment across the oceans in a national emergency. Additionally, effective competition in world trade will be hampered if we depend upon others to carry more than 95 percent of all U.S. oceanborne commerce.

With a dwindling number of ships, fewer licensed seamen, and a severe deterioration in the U.S. shipbuilding and ship repair industries, it is essential that we move quickly to rebuild our maritime resources. With the lessening of East/West tensions, the time is ripe for us to turn our attention to an effective sealift capability and a renewed effort to restore this Nation's merchant marine fleet.

As a first step, our distinguished colleague from Florida, Mr. BENNETT, has introduced H.R. 2463 to implement the recommendations of the Commission, and I urge others to join in this effort.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE

(Mr. LEVINE of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, Donita Mellon was a nurse in a Los Angeles hospital. After a full year of unsuccessful treatment for an enlarged cystic ovary and a fibrous uterus, she was advised to have a hysterectomy and told she would need 8 weeks for recuperation.

When Ms. Mellon asked her supervisor for the time off, he told her that because he wanted her to work during the holidays, she could either have the surgery in October or wait until after the new year. Otherwise, she would lose her job. Unfortunately, the earliest the surgeon was available to operate was in November.

As promised, when she returned to work, her job was gone.

But Ms. Mellon was lucky in one sense. During the surgery, doctors discovered that her condition had been malignant. Had she waited until the new year, she might have lost her life.

Donita Mellon should never have been forced to choose between her health and her job. Nor should anyone. I urge my colleagues to prevent this from happening again by supporting H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the President to reconsider his unfortunate threat to veto this much needed and humane legislation.

MANDATED FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE

(Mr. WALKER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I have heard a number of liberals come to the floor today suggesting people vote in favor of the Family and Medical Leave Act. These are some of the same people who have come to the floor over the last several weeks and told us about all the threats we face from increased competition. Yet this very bill, this mandated bill, will impose such costs on American business that will render them even more unable to compete in the world economy.

What this will mean is that thousands of Americans nationwide will lose their jobs because of our inability to meet foreign competition.

Mr. Speaker, it is not compassionate, in my view, to have thousands upon thousands of Americans out of a job as a result of actions we take here in the Congress.

It may well be that medical leave and family leave is one thing that an employer wants to consider in their dialog with their own employees. That may be something that should be done as part of the collective bargaining agreement arrangement. But it is not something the Government should mandate.

We ought not be in the business of mandating thousands of people to lose their jobs in this country.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE ISIAH FREDERICKS

(Mr. TAYLOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I come today to express the sorrow of the people of south Mississippi at the loss of State Representative Isiah Fredericks. Representative Fredericks, like many Mississippians, spent most of his life serving his country, first in Korea and then in Vietnam.

He was a true statesman and dedicated public servant. He served in the Mississippi House of Representatives for 11 years. He stayed in touch with the people who gave him the privilege of serving in public office and made their concerns known in Jackson.

In the words of one Biloxi city councilman who knew him well, Representative Fredericks "was a forceful and dynamic type of person. He was able to work effectively in building a consensus." People respected Fredericks' frankness and truth and they believed in what he said.

Representative Fredericks knew that leadership and public service went hand-in-hand. His lists of accomplishment go on and on. He was a compassionate and generous man who led by example and restored in others the will and conviction to carry on in his absence.

Representative Fredericks was the first black to register to vote in Pearl River County. He was a leader for civil rights and played an important role in our State's progress from confrontation to cooperation. He served his county well in the Air Force, both in Vietnam and Korea.

I was proud to call him friend.

THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT IS NOT MANDATED

(Mrs. SCHROEDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I think it is very important to answer some of the charges that have been leveled here today at family medical leave. Many people were talking about how this is mandated, mandated, mandated. This is not mandated at all. Any family that does not want this leave does not have to take it.

The only thing it does is empower America's families for the first time to be able to take that leave if they need it.

Right now there is a press conference going on outside where many people are talking about how they have been the victims of employers firing them because their child had leukemia and was dying and they wanted to take time off, or employers firing them because they adopted a baby and they wanted and needed some time.

This is a chance for us to truly be kinder, gentler. This is a real issue of the special interests versus the family interests in this country. You do not have to look at statistics to know families have been losing in this country. This is a chance to empower them a bit.

They are not mandated to do a thing, but it may really help, and I really hope that people will look at this sincerely and take this issue on.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT WILL CAUSE JOBS TO BE LOST.

(Mr. HASTERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, again we enter into the dialog about mandated parental leave.

Mr. Speaker, I have to reiterate that if you are being kinder and gentler to the American families, it is not being kinder and gentler to take away jobs, to prevent and build walls for women to come in and to be able to have access to jobs because of the problems that this bill would propose.

If we want to be kinder and gentler to the American family, we need to give them the opportunity to work, to earn for this country, to be productive, for this country to be competitive throughout the world.

When you start to put mandates and shackles on the American economy, you are not being kinder and gentler to anybody; you are fooling the American public, Mr. Speaker.

FEDERAL EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS PROGRAM AND GOVERNMENT LIFE INSURANCE AMENDMENTS

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 1805) to amend title 5, United States Code, to allow Federal annuitants to make contributions for health benefits through direct payments rather than through annuity withholding if the annuity is insufficient to cover the required withholdings, and to make a technical correction relating to the life insurance program, with Senate amendments thereto, concur in Senate amendments numbered 1 and 3, disagree to the Senate amendment numbered 2, and disagree to the Senate amendment to the title.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Senate amendments:

Page 4, line 4, strike out "indivdual" and insert "individual".

SEC. 3. UNIFORM TERMINATION OF LIFE INSURANCE COVERAGE.

Section 8706(a) of title 5, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking out "or 12 months after discontinuance of his pay, whichever is earlier".

SEC. 4. REDUCTION IN AGE REQUIREMENT FOR WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS FOR RECEIVING CERTAIN COMPENSATION UNDER THE FEDERAL EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION SYSTEM.

Chapter 81, of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 8133(b)(1) by striking out "age 60" and inserting in lieu thereof "age 55"; and

(2) in section 8135(b) by striking out "age 60" and inserting in lieu thereof "age 55".

Amend the title so as to read: "To amend title 5, United States Code, to allow Federal annuitants to make contributions for health benefits through direct payments rather than through annuity withholdings if the annuity is insufficient to cover the required withholdings, to make a technical correction relating to the life insurance program, and to provide for the termination of life insurance coverage uniformly.".

Mr. ACKERMAN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments, be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from New York?

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the minority has no objection to the request.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker will the gentleman yield?

Mrs. MORELLA. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ACKERMAN, Mr. Speaker, on November 6, 1989, the House passed H.R. 1805 by voice vote and 6 months later, on April 26 of this year, the Senate also passed the legislation by voice vote. However, the Senate added three amendments to the bill.

The first amendment corrects a spelling error in the bill.

The second amendment would eliminate the current provision for the termination of Federal Employees Group Life Insurance coverage 12 months after the discontinuance of an individual's pay. In a recent report, the General Accounting Office recommended enactment of such a change in the life insurance program. However, the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service has not had the opportunity to hold hearings on this issue. In addition, it is unclear how this amendment would affect current employees in nonpay status and how it would alter the contribution structure of life insurance program. For these reasons, the committee cannot agree to this amendment.

The third Senate amendment would reduce the age requirement for widows and widowers who remarry, who would otherwise be eligible to receive compensation under the Federal Employees Compensation Act, from 60 years of age to 55 years of age. I have been advised that the majority and minority of the Education and Labor Committee have no objection to this amendment.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on H.R. 1805, and the Senate amendments thereto.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4, of rule XV.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken after debate is concluded on all motions to suspend the rules.

MATSUNAGA HYDROGEN RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4521) to establish a Hydrogen Research and Development Program, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4521

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

That this Act may be cited as the "Matsunaga Hydrogen Research and Development Act".

TITLE I—HYDROGEN PRODUCTION AND USE

FINDINGS AND PURPOSE

SEC. 101. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) due to the limited quantities of naturally occurring petroleum-based fuels, viable alternative fuels and feedstocks must be developed;

(2) with a growing concern over the many environmental problems affecting the planet, priority should be given to the development of alternative fuels with universal availability;

(3) hydrogen is one of the most abundant elements in the Universe, with water, a primary source of hydrogen, covering three-fourths of the Earth;

(4) hydrogen appears promising as an alternative to finite fossil fuels;

(5) hydrogen can be transported more efficiently and at less cost than electricity over long distances;

(6) renewable energy resources are potential energy sources that can be used to convert hydrogen from its naturally occurring states into high quality fuel, feedstock, and energy storage media; and

(7) it is in the national interest to accelerate efforts to develop a domestic capability to economically produce hydrogen in quantities which will make a significant contribution toward reducing the Nation's dependence on conventional fuels.

(b) The purpose of this title is to—

(1) direct the Secretary of Energy to prepare and implement a comprehensive five-year plan and program to accelerate research and development activities leading to the realization of a domestic capability to produce, distribute, and use hydrogen economically within the shortest time practicable;

(2) direct the Secretary of Energy to implement a technology assessment and information transfer program among the Federal agencies and aerospace, transportation, energy, and other market-driven entities; and

(3) develop renewable energy resources as primary energy sources to be used in the production of hydrogen.

COMPREHENSIVE MANAGEMENT PLAN

SEC. 102. (a) The Secretary shall prepare a comprehensive five-year program management plan for research and development activities which shall be conducted over a period of no less than five years and shall be consistent with the provisions of sections 103 and 104. In the preparation of such plan, the Secretary shall consult with the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Secretary of Transportation, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Hydrogen Technical Advisory Panel established under section 107, and the heads of such other Federal agencies and such public and private organizations as he deems appropriate. Such plan shall be structured to permit the realization of a domestic hydrogen production capability within the shortest time practicable.

(b) The Secretary shall transmit the comprehensive program management plan to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate within six months after the date of the enactment of this Act. The plan shall include—

(1) the research and development priorities and goals to be achieved by the program;

(2) the program elements, management structure, and activities, including program responsibilities of individual agencies and individual institutional elements;

(3) the program strategies including technical milestones to be achieved toward specific goals during each fiscal year for all major activities and projects;

(4) the estimated costs of individual program items, including current as well as proposed funding levels for each of the five years of the plan for each of the participating agencies;

(5) a description of the methodology of coordination and technology transfer;

(6) the proposed participation by industry and academia in the planning and implementation of the program; and

(7) the relationship to other ongoing solar and renewable energy programs.

(c) Concurrently with the submission of the President's annual budget to the Congress for each year after the year in which the comprehensive five-year plan is initially transmitted under subsection (b), the Secretary shall transmit to the Congress a detailed description of the current comprehensive plan, setting forth appropriate modifications which may be necessary to revise the plan as well as comments on and recommendations for improvements in the comprehensive program management plan made by the Hydrogen Technical Advisory Panel established under section 107.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 103. (a) The Secretary shall establish, within the Department of Energy, a research and development program, consistent with the comprehensive five-year program management plan under section 102, to ensure the development of a domestic hydrogen fuel production capability within the shortest time practicable.

(b)(1) The Secretary shall initiate research or accelerate existing research in areas which may contribute to the development of hydrogen production and use.

(2) Areas researched shall include production, liquefaction, transmission, distribution, storage, and use. Particular attention shall be given to developing an understanding and resolution of all potential problems of introducing hydrogen production and use into the marketplace.

(c) The Secretary shall give priority to those production techniques that use renewable energy resources as their primary energy source.

(d) The Secretary shall, for the purpose of performing his responsibilities pursuant to this title, solicit proposals for and evaluate any reasonable new or improved technology, a description of which is submitted to the Secretary in writing, which could lead or contribute to the development of hydrogen production technology.

(e) The Secretary shall conduct evaluations, arrange for tests and demonstrations, and disseminate to developers information, data, and materials necessary to support efforts undertaken pursuant to this section.

(f) The Secretary shall submit, as a separate line item in the annual funding request to Congress of the Department of Energy, the funding requirements for carrying out this section.

DEMONSTRATIONS AND PLAN

SEC. 104. (a) The Secretary shall conduct demonstrations of hydrogen technology, preferably in self-contained locations, so that technical and nontechnical parameters can be evaluated to best determine commercial applicability of the technology. Such demonstrations shall include industry and government joint ventures to produce hydrogen for use as public transportation fleet fuels and utility turbine fuels.

(b) The Secretary shall, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and the Hydrogen Technical Advisory Panel established under section 107, prepare a comprehensive large-scale hydrogen demonstration plan with respect to demonstrations carried out pursuant to subsection (a)(1). Such plan shall include—

(1) a description of the necessary research and development activities that must be completed before initiation of a large-scale hydrogen production demonstration program;

(2) an assessment of the appropriateness of a large-scale demonstration immediately upon completion of the necessary research and development activities; and

(3) an implementation schedule with associated budget and program management resource requirements.

TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER PROGRAM

SEC. 105. (a) The Secretary shall implement a program designed to accelerate wider application of hydrogen production, storage, utilization and other technologies available in the near term as a result of aerospace experience as well as other research progress. The Secretary shall direct the program with the advice and assistance of a panel of industry, academia, government, and other hydrogen-related interests with the intent to disseminate information with respect to relatively near-term business and research opportunities that can lead to a long-term increase in hydrogen production and utilization. The objective in seeking this advice is to increase participation of private industry in the demonstration of near commercial applications.

(b) The Secretary, in carrying out the program authorized by subsection (a), shall—

(1) undertake an inventory and assessment of hydrogen technologies and their commercial capability to economically produce, store, or utilize hydrogen in aerospace, transportation, electric utilities, petrochemical, chemical, merchant hydrogen, and other industrial sectors; and

(2) develop a National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Department of Energy, and industry information exchange program to improve technology transfer for—

(A) application of aerospace experience by industry;

(B) application of research progress by industry and aerospace;

(C) application of commercial capability of industry by aerospace; and

(D) expression of industrial needs to research organizations.

The information exchange program may consist of workshops, publications, conferences, and a data base for use by the public and private sectors.

COORDINATION AND CONSULTATION

SEC. 106. (a) The Secretary shall have overall management responsibility for carrying out the program under this title. In carrying out such program, the Secretary, consistent with such overall management responsibility—

(1) shall use the expertise of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Department of Transportation; and

(2) may use the expertise of any other Federal agency in accordance with subsection (b) in carrying out any activities under this title, to the extent that the Secretary determines that any such agency has capabilities which would allow such agency to contribute to the purpose of this title.

(b) The Secretary may, in accordance with subsection (a), obtain the assistance of any department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch of the Federal Government upon written request, on a reimbursable basis or otherwise and with the consent of such department, agency, or instrumentality. Each such request shall identify the assistance the Secretary deems necessary to carry out any duty under this title.

(c) The Secretary shall consult with the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Secretary of Transportation, and the Hydrogen Technical Advisory Panel established under section 107 in carrying out his authorities pursuant to this title.

TECHNICAL PANEL

SEC. 107. (a) There is hereby established a technical panel of the Energy Research Advisory Board, to be known as the Hydrogen Technical Advisory Panel, to advise the Secretary on the program under this title.

(b)(1) The technical panel shall be appointed by the Secretary and shall be comprised of such representatives from domestic industry, universities, professional societies, Government laboratories, user groups, environmental, and other organizations as the Secretary, in consultation with the Chairman of the Energy Research Advisory Board, deems appropriate based on his assessment of the technical and other qualifications of such representatives. Appointments to the technical panel shall be made within ninety days after the enactment of this Act. The technical panel shall have a chairman, who shall be elected by the members from among their number.

(2) Members of the technical panel need not be members of the full Energy Research Advisory Board.

(c) The activities of the technical panel shall be in compliance with any laws and regulations guiding the activities of technical and factfinding groups reporting to the Energy Research Advisory Board.

(d) The heads of the departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the executive branch of the Federal Government shall cooperate with the technical panel in carrying out the requirements of this section and shall furnish to the technical panel such information as the technical panel deems necessary to carry out this section.

(e) The technical panel shall review and make any necessary recommendations on the following items, among others—

(1) the implementation and conduct of the program under this title; and

(2) the economic, technological, safety, and environmental consequences of the deployment of hydrogen production and use systems.

(f) The technical panel shall prepare and submit within one year after the date of enactment of this Act to the Energy Research Advisory Board a written report of its findings and recommendations with regard to the program under this title. The report shall include—

(1) a summary of the technical panel's activities for the preceding year;

(2) an assessment and evaluation of the status of the program; and

(3) comments on and recommendations for improvements in the comprehensive five-year program management plan required under section 102.

(g) After consideration of the technical panel report and within thirty days after its receipt, the Energy Research Advisory Board shall submit the report, together with any comments which the Board deems appropriate, to the Secretary.

(h) The Secretary shall provide such staff, funds, and other support as may be necessary to enable the technical panel to carry out the functions described in this section.

(i) Unless otherwise requested by the Secretary, the Hydrogen Technical Advisory Panel established under subsection (a) shall be disbanded within 3 months after completion of the report required under subsection (f). The Energy Research Advisory Board shall revise such report annually after its initial completion.

INCREASED USE OF HYDROGEN

SEC. 108. The Secretary shall work with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and such other Federal officers as are appropriate, to ensure that the laws of the United States, including regulations issued thereunder, are carried out in a manner favorable to the increased use of hydrogen.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 109. As used in this title—

(1) the term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Energy; and

(2) the term "capability" means proven technical ability.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 110. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to carry out the purpose of this title—

(1) amounts authorized by section 4(c)(1)(C), (2)(C), and (3)(C), of the Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency Technology Competitiveness Act of 1989 for fiscal years 1991, 1992, and 1993, respectively;

(2) $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1994; and

(3) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

TITLE II—HYDROGEN-FUELED AIRCRAFT RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

FINDINGS AND PURPOSE

SEC. 201. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) long-term future decreases in petroleum-base fuel availability will seriously impair the operation of the world's air transport fleets;

(2) hydrogen appears to be an attractive alternative to petroleum in the long term to fuel commercial aircraft;

(3) it is therefore in the national interest to accelerate efforts to develop a domestic hydrogen-fueled supersonic and subsonic aircraft capability, including the hypersonic National Aero-Space Plane and its derivatives; and

(4) the use of liquid hydrogen as a commercial air transport fuel has sufficient long-term promise to justify a substantial research, development, and demonstration program.

(b) The purpose of this title is to—

(1) direct the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to prepare and implement a comprehensive five-year plan and program for the conduct of research, development, and demonstration activities leading to the realization of a domestic hydrogen-fueled aircraft capability within the shortest time practicable, coordinated with the National Aero-Space Plane and its derivatives;

(2) establish as a goal broad multinational participation in the program; and

(3) provide a basis for public, industry, and certifying agency acceptance of hydrogen-fueled aircraft as a mode of commercial air transport.

COMPREHENSIVE MANAGEMENT PLAN

SEC. 202. (a) The Administrator shall prepare a comprehensive five-year program management plan for research, development, and demonstration activities consistent with the provisions of sections 203, 204, 205, and 206. In the preparation of such plan, the Administrator shall consult with the Secretary of Energy, the Secretary of Transportation, and the heads of such other Federal agencies and such public and private organizations as he deems appropriate. Such plan shall be structured to permit the realization of a domestic hydrogen-fueled aircraft capability within the shortest time practicable, and shall include activities of the National Aero-Space Plane Program.

(b) The Administrator shall transmit the comprehensive five-year program management plan to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate within six months after the date of the enactment of this Act. The plan shall include (but not necessarily be limited to)—

(1) the research and development priorities and goals to be achieved by the program;

(2) the program elements, management structure, and activities, including program responsibilities of individual agencies and individual institutional elements;

(3) the program strategies including detailed technical milestones to be achieved toward specific goals during each fiscal year for all major activities and projects;

(4) the estimated costs of individual program items, including current as well as proposed funding levels for each of the five years of the plan for each of the participating agencies;

(5) a description of the methodology of coordination and technology transfer; and

(6) the proposed participation by industry and academia in the planning and implementation of the program.

(c) Concurrently with the submission of the President's annual budget to the Congress for each year after the year in which the comprehensive five-year plan is initially transmitted under subsection (b), the Administrator shall transmit to the Congress a detailed description of the current comprehensive plan, setting forth appropriate modifications which may be necessary to revise the plan as well as comments on and recommendations for improvements in the comprehensive program management plan made by the Hydrogen-Fueled Aircraft Advisory Committee established under section 208.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 203. (a) The Administrator shall establish, within the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, a research and development program consistent with the comprehensive five-year program management plan under section 202 to ensure the development of a domestic hydrogen-fueled aircraft capability within the shortest time practicable.

(b) The Administrator shall initiate research or accelerate existing research in areas which may contribute to the development of a hydrogen-fueled aircraft capability.

(c) In conducting the program pursuant to this section, the Administrator shall encourage the establishment of domestic industrial capabilities to supply hydrogen-fueled aircraft systems or subsystems to the commercial marketplace.

(d) The Administrator shall, for the purpose of performing his responsibilities pursuant to this Act, solicit proposals for and evaluate any reasonable new or improved technology, a description of which is submitted to the Administrator in writing, which could lead or contribute to the development of hydrogen-fueled aircraft technology. Any such proposals must be coordinated with the National Aero-Space Plane Research and Development Program.

(e) The Administrator shall conduct evaluations, arrange for tests and demonstrations and disseminate to developers information, data, and materials necessary to support efforts undertaken pursuant to this section.

NATIONAL AERO-SPACE PLANE PROGRAM

SEC. 204. As part of the comprehensive five-year program management plan prepared under section 202, and as part of the research and development program established under section 203, the Administrator shall incorporate the goals, directions, and activities of the National Aero-Space Plane Program. In accordance with section 207, the Administrator shall closely coordinate activities under this title with those of the National Aero-Space Plane Program.

FLIGHT DEMONSTRATION

SEC. 205. (a) Concurrent with the activities carried out pursuant to section 203, the Administrator shall, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretary of Energy, and the Hydrogen-Fueled Aircraft Advisory Committee established under section 208, prepare a comprehensive flight demonstration plan, the implementation of which shall provide confirmation of the technical feasibility, economic viability, and safety of liquid hydrogen as a fuel for commercial transport aircraft. The comprehensive flight plan shall include—

(1) a description of the necessary research and development activities that must be completed before initiation of a flight demonstration program;

(2) the selection of a domestic site where demonstration activities can lead to early commercialization of the concept;

(3) an assessment of a preliminary flight demonstration to occur concurrently with the later stages of research and development activities; and

(4) an implementation schedule with associated budget and program management resource requirements.

(b) The Administrator shall transmit such comprehensive flight demonstration plan to the Congress within two years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

HYDROGEN PRODUCTION AND GROUND FACILITIES

SEC. 206. (a) The Administrator, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy, shall define the systems, subsystems, or components associated with the production, transportation, storage, and handling of liquid hydrogen that are specifically required for and unique to the use of such fuel for commercial aircraft application.

(b) The Administrator shall structure the research and development program pursuant to section 203 to allow the development of the systems, subsystems, or components defined pursuant to subsection (a) of this section.

(c) The research and development program for hydrogen production, transportation, and storage systems, subsystems, and components which are suitable for inclusion as part of a fully integrated hydrogen-fueled aircraft system, but which are not being specifically developed for such application shall be the responsibility of the Secretary of Energy. Such activities shall be included as part of the program established pursuant to title I of this Act, and shall be so conducted as to ensure compliance with hydrogen-fueled aircraft system constraints.

COORDINATION AND CONSULTATION

SEC. 207. (a) The Administrator shall have overall management responsibility for carrying out the program under this title. In carrying out such program, the Administrator, consistent with such overall management responsibility—

(1) shall utilize the expertise of the Departments of Transportation and Energy to the extent deemed appropriate by the Administrator, and

(2) may utilize the expertise of any other Federal agency in accordance with subsection (b) in carrying out any activities under this title, to the extent that the Administrator determines that any such agency has capabilities which would allow such agency to contribute to the purposes of this title.

(b) The Administrator may, in accordance with subsection (a), obtain the assistance of any department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch of the Federal Government upon written request, on a reimbursable basis or otherwise and with the consent of such department, agency, or instrumentality. Each such request shall identify the assistance the Administrator deems necessary to carry out any duty under this title.

(c) The Administrator shall consult with the Secretary of Energy, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Secretary of Transportation, and the Hydrogen-Fueled Aircraft Advisory Committee established under section 208 in carrying out his authorities pursuant to this title.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

SEC. 208. (a) There is hereby established a Hydrogen-Fueled Aircraft Advisory Committee, which shall advise the Administrator on the program under this title.

(b) The committee shall be appointed by the Administrator and shall be comprised of at least seven members from industrial, academic, user groups, environmental, and other organizations as the Administrator deems appropriate. At least one member shall be knowledgeable in hypersonic technology or related National Aero-Space Plane technology. Appointments to the committee shall be made within ninety days after the date of enactment of this Act. The committee shall have a chairman, who shall be elected by the members from among their number.

(c) The heads of the departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the executive branch of the Federal Government shall cooperate with the committee in carrying out the requirements of this section and shall furnish to the committee such information as the committee deems necessary to carry out this section.

(d) The committee shall meet at least four times annually.

(e) The committee shall review and make any necessary recommendations on the following items, among others—

(1) the implementation and conduct of the program under this title; and

(2) the economic, technological, and environmental consequences of developing a hydrogen-fueled aircraft capability.

(f) The committee shall prepare and submit annually to the Administrator a written report of its findings and recommendations with regard to the program under this title. The report shall include—

(1) a summary of the committee's activities for the preceding year;

(2) an assessment and evaluation of the status of the program; and

(3) comments on and recommendations for improvements in the comprehensive five-year program management plan required under section 202.

(g) The Administrator shall provide such staff, funds, and other support as may be necessary to enable the committee to carry out the functions described in this section.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 209. As used in this title—

(1) the term "Administrator" means the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration;

(2) the term "capability" means proven technical ability; and

(3) the term "certifying agency" means any government entity with direct responsibility for assuring public safety in the operation of the air transport system.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 210. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to carry out the purpose of this title—

(1) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1991;
(2) $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1992;
(3) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993;
(4) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1994; and
(5) $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

TITLE III—BUY AMERICAN REQUIREMENT

BUY AMERICAN REQUIREMENT

SEC. 301. (a) DETERMINATION BY SECRETARY OR ADMINISTRATOR.—If the Secretary, with respect to title I, or the Administrator, with respect to title II, with the concurrence of the United States Trade Representative and the Secretary of Commerce, determines that the public interest so requires, the Secretary, with respect to title I, or the Administrator, with respect to title II, is authorized to award to a domestic firm a contract that, under the use of competitive procedures, would be awarded to a foreign firm, if—

(1) the final product of the domestic firm will be completely assembled in the United States;

(2) when completely assembled, not less than 51 percent of the final product of the domestic firm will be domestically produced; and

(3) the difference between the bids submitted by the foreign and domestic firms is not more than 6 percent.

In determining under this subsection whether the public interest so requires, the Secretary, with respect to title I, or the Administrator, with respect to title II, shall take into account United States international obligations and trade relations.

(b) LIMITED APPLICATION.—This section shall not apply to the extent to which—

(1) such applicability would not be in the public interest;

(2) compelling national security considerations require otherwise; or

(3) the United States Trade Representative determines that such an award would be in violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade or an international agreement to which the United States is a party.

(c) LIMITATION.—This section shall apply only to contracts for which—

(1) amounts are authorized by this Act to be made available; and

(2) solicitations for bids are issued after the date of enactment of this Act.

(d) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary, with respect to title I, and the Administrator, with respect to title II, shall report to the Congress on contracts covered under this section and entered into with foreign entities in fiscal years 1991 and 1992 and shall report to the Congress on the number of contracts that meet the requirements of subsection (a) but which are determined by the United States Trade Representative to be in violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade or an international agreement to which the United States is a party. The Secretary, with respect to title I, and the Administrator, with respect to title II, shall also report to the Congress on the number of contracts covered under this Act and awarded based on the parameters of this section.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Energy;

(2) the term "Administrator" means the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration;

(3) the term "domestic firm" means a business entity that is incorporated in the United States and that conducts business operations in the United States; and

(4) the term "foreign firm" means a business entity not described in paragraph (3).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI].

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the chairman of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, my good friend and colleague, Mr. ROE, for his support in moving this legislation.

I would also like to recognize Congresswoman LLOYD of Tennessee, who chairs the Energy Research and Development Subcommittee. Mr. LEWIS of Florida and Mr. MORRISON of Washington, the ranking members of our respective subcommittees are also to be recognized for their efforts on behalf of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4521, the Matsunaga Hydrogen Research and Development Act was originally introduced by my good friend and colleague from California, Mr. BROWN.

The bill has as its primary purpose to provide for a comprehensive Federal research and development program with DOE and NASA to accelerate the use of hydrogen as a fuel.

Hydrogen, as the most abundant element in the universe, has long been recognized as a potential replacement for petroleum-based fuels. It burns clearly. The main product of combustion is water. It is readily available from a variety of abundant domestic sources, including sea water, natural gas or coal.

It represents the obvious fuel of choice for the future where environmental concerns and availability will eventually terminate the burning of oil and gasoline.

Mr. Speaker, blankets of smog cover our major cities and our trade imbalance continues to soar. This dual threat to the health of our people and to our economy is driven by our tremendous thirst for oil.

Our ever-increasing dependence on imported oil is becoming an addiction. Earlier this year, consumption from foreign sources reached 54 percent of total U.S. use.

Clearly its time we invested in our future, our health and our economy. This bill will start the process toward a fuel for the 21st century.

The main impediments to using hydrogen as a fuel lie, primarily, in the economics of production and the relevant infrastructure for use of hydrogen. For example, production costs for hydrogen are roughly four to six times as high as that for producing gasoline for cars. However, continuing breakthroughs in relevant technology continues to drive down these costs.

Currently only about $3 million is being spent by the Department of Energy for research directly related to the production and use of hydrogen.

NASA while having more money devoted to research on the use of hydrogen, such as in the National Aerospace Plane Program, has no research directed to the use of hydrogen as a fuel for conventional aircraft. Where the need is just as compelling as with terrestrial applications.

This compares to efforts in Japan and Germany to use hydrogen as a fuel amounting to $20 million and $50 million, respectively.

During the 1970's a substantial effort on hydrogen R&D took place with DOE. With the onset of the Reagan administration these programs were sharply curtailed.

Since then congressional action has been limited. It is only the vision and persistence over 10 years of my colleague GEORGE BROWN and the late Senator Matsunaga that has brought us to this point today.

Mr. Speaker, the Matsunaga Hydrogen R&D Act is long overdue. It directs both DOE and NASA to develop and implement 5-year, coordinated research and development programs to accelerate the production and use of hydrogen as a fuel.

The bill authorizes $10 million in fiscal year 1991 and increasing amounts over the next 5 years for a total expenditure of $150 million over that period.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation takes the first step in moving toward the use of hydrogen in place of environmentally damaging and health-threatening conventional fuels. I strongly urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this important legislation.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, hydrogen is an extremely efficient fuel, producing more than double the energy per pound of conventional fuels. Not only is it nonpolluting, there is virtually an inexhaustible supply.

However, the current Federal hydrogen research programs are not well coordinated. The Matsunaga Hydrogen Research Act, H.R. 4521, addresses this problem and also accelerates the DOE and NASA research programs directed toward the use of hydrogen as a fuel.

The science subcommittees of jurisdiction and the Science Committee passed unanimously the Matsunaga Hydrogen Research and Development Act. I want to thank Chairman ROE and Vice Chairman WALKER for their strong support of this legislation and for their leadership in bringing this bill to the floor in such a timely manner. I also want to thank Mr. BROWN, who introduced the legislation and who has taken the leadership role in the House in promoting research on hydrogen as a fuel. He and the late Senator from Hawaii, Mr. Matsunaga, are responsible for keeping this issue in the legislative forefront.

As an original cosponsor, I believe that the time has come to implement a coordinated Federal research program that will address the utilization of hydrogen for both ground and air transportation.

Hydrogen has the great potential of being an abundant and clean automotive fuel. Yet much more research must be conducted before it will replace fossil fuels. An article in today's Washington Post points out the problems with alternative motor fuels. The article concludes "* * * new fuels or combinations of fuels will come into widespread use in this decade." With the passage of this legislation, hydrogen may also be included as a viable alternative fuel.

Hydrogen can also be utilized as a highly efficient hypersonic flight vehicle fuel that could also be used as a cooling agent. The national aerospace plane will use hydrogen as a fuel and a coolant. Today's New York Times reports that the Europeans, and possibly United States companies, are planning a faster and better Concord. That aircraft will most likely use hydrogen as a fuel, if the full potential of this legislation is implemented.

I believe the American public will be well served by an aggressively coordinated research program that addresses these long-range transportation needs.

I urge my colleagues to support this important hydrogen research legislation, H.R. 4521.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] under whose initiation this legislation has come forward.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to make a few remarks about this bill, and let me express my gratitude to both the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS] for their kind remarks about my long interest in this. I do not particularly wish to emphasize my own role here because, as a matter of fact, it was Senator Matsunaga who has carried the ball for this over many, many years, and it is very appropriate that this legislation be named in his honor. And of course our colleague, the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. AKAKA] has, in the tradition of Senator Matsunaga, continued that very strong interest, and I want to express my appreciation to him and to the various other primary cosponsors of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, as has been said, hydrogen is the ideal clean fuel of the future. It has a multitude of uses, some of which my colleagues have heard described here. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS], for example, has described the vital importance of hydrogen for aircraft propulsion, and it will become even more important in the future. It can and will be used as an automobile propulsion fuel. It is ideal for the transportation and storage of energy for any purpose. It has ideal characteristics for that, and many have envisioned for years the utopian day when we would actually have what has been called a hydrogen economy in which most of our major energy needs, and energy transportation and storage needs were met by hydrogen.

The breakthrough that we need, of course, is in low-cost production. Then some additional work in creating the service infrastructure and meeting some of the safety problems that may exist.

Mr. Speaker, we are in a position to do this much sooner than many people think, and it is my hope that this legislation, which really does not spend any additional amount of money—it proposes some slight increases in authorization over a 5-year period—but basically it is aimed at taking the money that we are spending now, the programs that we have going in several different departments, and creating one hydrogen research program with the same goal for each department. That is the goal of achieving some breakthroughs in the cost of hydrogen production so that we can move into that day when we can totally eliminate carbon-based fuels.

Today the major difference between 15 and 20 years ago, or even 10 years ago, is that we recognize, and in fact it has become a global political issue, but that we recognize the need to begin thinking about phasing out carbon-based fuels, and we probably will have to do this within the next 50 years at the outside, and probably sooner. We are talking about holding international conferences today to consider ways to reduce the use of carbon fuels. We will, to be ready for that day—we not only have to have alternative fuels that produce less carbon monoxide, and most of the alternative fuels do—but we have to ultimately have a fuel that produces no carbon monoxide, and that is what we have with hydrogen fuel.

So, Mr. Speaker, I feel that this is an extremely important, very forward looking piece of legislation. As I say, it is not a big budget item, but it is one which says to the administration, "Recognize the importance of this. Create a program. Set goals. Begin to set benchmarks so that we will know that we are making progress so that we can achieve what we hope to achieve with this kind of legislation."

I urge support of all the Members of the House for this bill.

Mr. Speaker, hydrogen is the clean fuel of the future for several key reasons. It is one of the most abundant elements on Earth. It burns clean, producing only water vapor, and it burns efficiently, providing more than twice as much energy per pound than conventional fuels. Therefore, it is vital that the Federal commitment to hydrogen improve significantly in order to advance hydrogen research and development.

One of the most promising near-term applications of hydrogen is its use as an aircraft fuel. Hydrogen is already the preferred fuel for launching rockets into space. Hydrogen fuel is an important element of the National Aero-Space Plane [NASP] Program. The NASP Program, run jointly by NASA and the Department of Defense, will culminate in the construction of hydrogen fueled aircraft which will not only fly at hypersonic speed, but will also be able to rocket into low-Earth orbit. Europe and the Soviet Union are also aggressively developing hydrogen aircraft technology.

Hydrogen is ideal for use in fuel cells. Fuel cell technology combines a hydrogen-rich gas with air, and converts the chemical energy of this mixture directly into electricity—with no intermediate combustion step. Because fuel cells transform fuel directly to electricity without an intermediate conversion to heat, less waste heat is produced and very high conversion efficienies—in the range of 40 to 60 percent—are achieved.

Thus, a hybrid vehicle system combining hydrogen fuel cells with an electric motor could prove to be a desirable interim technology, which could be used before a full hydrogen system is implemented.

Another promising application of hydrogen is its use as an electric storage medium. Virtually all forms of energy, such as coal, nuclear, or natural gas, could take advantage of hydrogen for transporting energy over long distances. After 300 to 400 miles, hydrogen as a storage medium becomes increasingly cheaper than transmission through electric wires.

Arguably, environmental concerns are the most important reason for developing alternative energy sources. We cannot indefinitely mine or drill for the world's limited fossil fuel reserves. Evidence is mounting which indicates that so-called "greenhouse gases" from fossil fuel combustion are causing global climate change. The emission of chlorofluorocarbons is destroying the Earth's protective ozone layer. The recent oilspills, however, remind us that the environmental impact of oil goes beyond harmful emissions. If we are ever going to take responsibility for the environment, we will have to dramatically change the manner by which we generate energy for our society. The dream of a hydrogen economy includes using renewable energy sources to produce clean-burning hydrogen fuel.

Unfortunately, interest in alternative energy sources declined dramatically in the 1980's as the Arab oil embargo of a decade ago gave way to an oil glut and low gas prices. Thus, this energy abundance has created a false sense of security. Circumstances are quickly developing which could place the United States in a vulnerable position in the world energy market. Oil imports are increasing steadily as domestic energy production declines.

In our competitive society, the current U.S. hydrogen effort stands as yet another example of shortsighted Federal policies which could have a harmful economic impact. Current Federal hydrogen research and development programs are funded principally through the Department of Energy at a level of about 3 million—this can hardly be considered a comprehensive effort. Although the work being done is relevant, the Nation lacks a coordinated effort for hydrogen research and development.

As in so many areas of enormous economic potential, hydrogen fuel is being aggressively pursued by other nations which recognize the significant contribution hydrogen can make to their economies. Hydrogen research programs are presently underway in some 17 countries. Last year, West Germany spent $50 million on hydrogen research as compared to the United State's mere $3 million. If the United States is not careful it may be buying technology and infrastructure element from abroad.

It is inevitable that traditional energy sources will become more expensive over time and eventually will be depleted. The transition to a hydrogen economy will depend largely on today's energy suppliers. Such a transition involves risk and a considerable investment in new technologies.

Therefore, the individuals and institutions who support the necessary research and development and who search for hydrogen market niches will have a distinct advantage over those who sit back and wait for someone else to take all the risks and inevitably the lead. Let us not fall into that trap. Let us vote in favor of this important legislation.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS] yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this bill. It is a good bill, and I am a cosponsor of it, and I want to congratulate those who had the foresight to bring it to the floor: the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS], the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI], the chairman of the subcommittee, and others who worked on it in their respective subcommittees. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE] had previously been the chairman of this subcommittee, and he worked very hard on the bill, and of course, the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE]. All of those people really contributed a great deal to making certain that this bill comes to the floor, and I think it is a very good bill. It deserves the support of the membership across the board.

Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that the administration has some problems with, but they do not disagree in substance with the bill. They disagree in some detail, and primarily that relates to the authorization schedule, but I think, if they look closely at the authorizations on the bill, what they will find is that this is a bill that falls within the authorizations already in place. We made certain, as we created the bill, that in the initial years here that the authorizations were out of that money which had been previously authorized in the renewable energy bill last year.

So, I think that in fact this is a bill that should have the wholehearted support amongst those in the administration responsible for implementing it.

I just want to say some of the same kinds of things that the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] just mentioned, and he has certainly been a leader on the issue and someone that needs to be listened to about it. This is a fuel source which is environmentally clean and offers unlimited potential for our future. It is an energy source where the United States does not want to fall behind the rest of the world in terms of making certain that we are prepared to take advantage of it for transportation fuels and for other kinds of uses in our future.

Already, if my colleagues take a look at the research being done around the world, they will find that Germany, Japan, and Canada have recognized the inherent value of developing hydrogen technologies to address the future and have really done a lot more work in this area than we have. We need to get ourselves on a par with those countries and, in fact, exceed them because this particular fuel is one that holds great promise in aviation, in automobiles, in everything that we presently use fossil fuel energy for. This is a bill which does that by having a coordinate program of hydrogen research over a period of the next 5 years. I think for that reason it deserved the support of the House, and I would urge all my colleagues to vote in favor of this very worthwhile legislation.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. AKAKA] who has carried on the work of the late Senator Matsunaga and in his own way has contributed importantly to this legislation.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Spark Matsunaga Hyrogen Research and Development Act, and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that legislation to establish a research and development program for hydrogen has reached the floor of the House. Many people worked to make this legislation possible, but no one labored longer or harder on behalf of hydrogen research than Senator Matsunaga. That is why this legislation bears his name.

Spark Matsunaga was a man of vision. So it should come as no surprise that he introduced the first hydrogen research bill in 1981. I only wish he could be here today to see this bill pass the House.

He knew, as we are now learning, that America is not doing enough to provide for its future energy security. Hydrogen may not be the only answer, but it can be an important part of the energy solution.

Our action today may do more to improve America's long-term energy security than any other legislation we consider during the 101st Congress. That's because this bill will do something to provide an answer to the question: What do we do when we run out of oil?

Each day we come closer and closer to the point where we can no longer rely upon yesterday's sources of energy to fuel the America of tomorrow. And evidence is mounting that the day of reckoning is coming sooner than we think.

The U.S. Geological Survey recently cut by 40 percent its estimate of how much conventional oil and gas remain to be discovered in the United States. Not only may there be less oil and gas out there, but what remains will become harder and harder to extract. That's why research on a new generation of fuels such as hydrogen is so important.

Future generations of Americans will live in a world where all the coal, natural gas, and oil have long since been consumed. What will they use to power their cars and trucks, light their lamps and warm their houses? Hydrogen could be the answer to these energy needs.

As any high school chemistry student can tell you, hydrogen is one of the most abundant elements on Earth. It can be produced using solar and other renewable sources of energy. Once produced, hydrogen can be stored and consumed in either a solid or liquid form. And finally, what makes it most attractive is that when burned, hydrogen produces only water vapor. In this regard, hydrogen is an environmentalist's dream come true.

My colleagues, other countries have already come to recognize the potential of hydrogen fuels. And, just as with other areas of technology, it appears that our competitors are already passing us by.

For example, the Soviets have retrofitted a conventional jet to burn hydrogen fuel. The German auto manufacturer, Mercedes-Benz, is actively investigating hydrogen fueled cars. And our neighbors in Canada are studying methods of using surplus hydroelectric power to produce hydrogen as a fuel for their nation's bus fleets. Similar moves to convert bus systems to hydrogen fuels are being examined in Hamburg, West Germany, and Milan, Italy.

Mr. Speaker, the time to pass this legislation is now. I urge you to support this bill.

□ 1320

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennslyvania [Mr. RITTER].

Mr. RITTER. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in rising in strong support of H.R. 4521, the Hydrogen Research and Development Act.

If we can overcome obstacles to cleaner production, safer storage, and use in air and mass ground transportation, hydrogen offers the promise to virtually unlimited highly efficient pollution-free source of energy.

H.R. 4521 is a coordinated long-term commitment by the Federal Government with specific objectives. It would allow research on making hydrogen from more efficient sources, such as photovoltaic cells. Title I will also promote research in the development of fuel cells powered by hydrogen.

The defense and aerospace industries are working on advanced aircraft that could be powered by hydrogen, and Title II of this bill would coordinate that development. One major application is the National Aerospace Plane [NASP].

The research supported by this bill will spur private sector development of hydrogen technology. Already there have been some small-scale efforts to convert cars and trucks to hydrogen use, demonstrating that hydrogen could be a good fuel for vehicles.

The ability to use hydrogen in a mass way in autos could revolutionize the transportation sector. Appropriate production methods could provide an auto fuel of unparalleled environmental cleanliness and efficiency.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud that the company which could eventually supply the hydrogen for many of these uses is located in my congressional district. The Lehigh Valley is home to one of America's largest producers of hydrogen, Air Products and Chemicals, Inc., which has supplied hydrogen to NASA since the 1950's, which was the originator of the hydrogen fuel economy that supports the space shuttle.

Air Products is a pioneer in the uses of hydrogen technology and is dedicated to broadening its use in America.

The time is now to extend the transportation use of hydrogen beyond the space program to air and ground transportation. For a limited Federal investment, hydrogen offers the possibility of an enormous payback.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4521.

Ms. SAIKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to add my support for H.R. 4521, to establish a Hydrogen Research and Development Program, recently named the Matsunaga Hydrogen Research and Development Act.

Since the industrial revolution this Nation has been critically dependent on fossil fuels. This dependence is true nowhere more than Hawaii, where the development of alternative energy technologies has been a priority.

My home state of Hawaii is nearly completely dependent on oil, which must be shipped in from various parts of the world, for all its energy needs. It has long been our hope to become energy self-sufficient. Over the past 15 years Hawaii decisionmakers have invested in research to develop all varieties of energy alternatives.

The development of hydrogen energy was a primary goal of Spark Matsunaga. He envisioned this to be an ideal source of energy. Hydrogen is one of the most abundant elements in the world—found in water which covers three-quarters of the planet, and extremely clean—water is the primary byproduct of this form of energy.

We are rapidly approaching the 21st century. We can no longer sit back and rely solely on traditional energy supplies. Fossil fuel resources are in short supply and are the root of our air-pollution problems.

This legislation to develop hydrogen as an energy resource is definitely a positive step toward a secure energy future. I believe the funds for this program will be a very worthwhile investment in the future.

I regret that Senator Spark Matsunaga is not able to see this day, but the fact that this proposal has come this far is an indication that through his efforts to see hydrogen energy receive greater acceptance, he is with us today in this bill.

I urge my colleagues to show strong support for H.R. 4521.

Mrs. LLOYD. I rise in support of H.R. 4521, the Matsunaga Hydrogen Research and Development Act. The bill seeks to establish a coordinated national research and development program to find less expensive methods to produce hydrogen thereby increasing our ability to use this energy option more effectively.

Our committee has been in the forefront in calling for action on the increased use of hydrogen and promoting the research and development that needs to be accomplished to take advantage of one of our most abundant elements. Last year our committee successfully enacted legislation that called for a separate hydrogen research program at the Department of Energy. As we bring the bill forward today, we build upon our initial success. We are expanding the Federal program to include the Department of Energy, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Department of Transportation, and the Environmental Protection Agency. With passage of this legislation, I hope the United States will begin on a course of action that will enable us to expand our domestic hydrogen fuel production and utilization capabilities within the shortest time practicable.

In closing, I want to recognize the efforts of our committee chairman, Mr. ROE of New Jersey, and my fellow subcommittee chairman, Mr. TORRICELLI of New Jersey, in bringing this legislation to the floor. In addition, I would like to applaud the longstanding support of Mr. BROWN of California, in sponsoring this legislation. Finally, I think it is fitting that the bill has been renamed the Matsunaga Hydrogen Research and Development Act. Our late colleague, Senator Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii, was a tireless supporter of increased U.S. emphasis on the use of hydrogen. I am pleased that today we are passing this legislation that may lead to the realization of a hydrogen program as envisioned by Senator Matsunaga. I urge my colleagues to join us in their support of H.R. 4521.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4521, the Matsunaga Hydrogen Research and Development Act. I want to commend my colleagues on the committee for their outstanding work in bringing this legislation to the floor for consideration here today.

The chairman of the Transportation, Aviation, and Materials Subcommittee, my good friend and neighbor from New Jersey, Congressman TORRICELLI and the chairman of the Energy, Research, and Development Subcommittee, my esteemed colleague from Tennessee, Congresswoman LLOYD are to be congratulated for expeditiously moving this legislation.

I also want to recognize the strong support of our minority members, including Mr. WALKER of Pennsylvania, the full committee ranking minority member, and Mr. LEWIS of Florida and Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut, ranking minority members of the respective subcommittees. Finally, I want to recognize the efforts of my esteemed colleague from California, Mr. BROWN, the sponsor of this bill, for his farsightedness and persistence in pursuing this issue over the past decade.

Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege to introduce the amendment in our full committee markup that changes the name of this bill to honor our late friend and colleague from Hawaii, Senator Spark Matsunaga. As I am sure many of you know, Spark Matsunaga together with Congressman AKAKA of Hawaii, was instrumental in promoting hydrogen as an alternative energy source.

Senator Matsunaga's first bill on hydrogen was introduced almost 10 years ago when energy and environmental issues were not at the forefront of everyone's agenda. It is a privilege to honor his memory in this way.

Mr. Speaker, as already noted, this bill provides for a federally coordinated research and development program with clearly defined goals to increase our Nation's ability to use hydrogen as a fuel.

Substituting hydrogen for conventional fossil fuels eventually could save the Nation billions of dollars in health and environmental costs. However, we need to find more efficient and economical ways to produce and use this extraordinary fuel. H.R. 4521 provides a framework from which to begin the necessary research and development to accomplish these goals.

I strongly urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this measure.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4521, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on H.R. 4521, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

FIREFIGHTERS' SAFETY STUDY ACT

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4522) to improve the information available to emergency response personnel in the field, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4522

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

This Act may be cited as the "Firefighters' Safety Study Act".

SEC. 2. REVIEW.

The Administrator of the United States Fire Administration (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Administrator") shall conduct a review of existing response information used by emergency response personnel at the State and local levels to evaluate its accuracy and consistency, and to determine whether it is properly expressed. Such information should clearly communicate to emergency response personnel the probable hazards which they must contend with in an emergency situation involving hazardous materials, and the appropriate response to those hazards.

SEC. 3. WORKING GROUP.

For the purpose of carrying out section 2, the Administrator shall establish a working group which shall, at a minimum, consist of—

(1) program officials from each of—

(A) the Environmental Protection Agency;

(B) the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration;

(C) the Department of Transportation;

(D) the Occupational Safety and Health Administration; and

(E) the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, who develop and disseminate hazardous materials identification and response data, and who collect, collate, analyze, and disseminate hazardous materials incident data;

(2) State and local operational officials with emergency response or relevant regulatory responsibilities; and

(3) representatives of companies engaged in the manufacture and processing of chemicals.

SEC. 4. REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

The working group established under section 3 shall, within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, submit a report to the Administrator and to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate presenting the results of the review carried out under this Act, along with recommendations to ensure that response information disseminated to emergency response personnel is appropriate for operational personnel at the local level.

SEC. 5. ANNUAL REVISION OF RECOMMENDATIONS.

After the submission of the report cited in section 4, the working group established under section 3 shall meet as needed, but at least once every 12 months, to review and recommend changes and additions to the report cited in section 4, that are necessary and appropriate for operational personnel at the local level.

SEC. 6. DEFINITION.

As used in this Act, the term "emergency response personnel" means personnel responsible for mitigation activities in a medical emergency, fire emergency, hazardous material emergency, or natural disaster.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE].

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on June 29, 1989, Representative JAN MEYERS introduced H.R. 2813, a bill to improve the information available to emergency response personnel in the field. The bill was referred to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. On April 18, 1990, H.R. 4522, a bill that was virtually identical to H.R. 2813, was introduced by Representative JAN MEYERS and 26 cosponsors. H.R. 4522 superseded H.R. 2813.

I want to thank Mr. WALKER the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology and Mr. BOEHLERT the ranking Republican member of the Subcommittee on Science, Research and Technology, for their efforts to bring this bill to the floor.

H.R. 4522, the Firefighters' Safety Study Act, was introduced by Congresswoman MEYERS, because of a tragedy that occurred on November 29, 1988. While responding to a fire at a State highway construction site in Kansas City, MO, six firefighters died in an explosion of hazardous materials. The firefighters had been told that there might be explosives on the site; however, they were not told of the type, location, or quantity of explosives that were stored on the site.

The tragedy could have been avoided if a system had been in place to provide the firefighters with clear and reliable information about the hazardous chemicals and explosives at the site. The U.S. Fire Administration recommended that a review be undertaken of Federal training and field operation guidance materials commonly used by firefighters, to ensure that the materials are both accurate and clear. H.R. 4522 would carry out that recommendation.

The bill would direct the administrator of the U.S. Fire Administration to review existing emergency response information nationwide to evaluate its accuracy and consistency, determine whether information is properly expressed for firefighters in an emergency situation, and how to improve information for emergency response. To conduct the review and make recommendations, the administrator would be required to form a working group consisting of Federal, State and local officials, and representatives from the chemical industry that would submit a report to the administrator and appropriate congressional committees in 1 year. The working group would be required to meet as needed, but at least once a year after the issuance of the report to review implementation and recommend changes if necessary.

I support passage of this important legislation. Firefighters and other emergency response personnel risk their lives to protect us. They should have the best materials and training available to effectively carry out their dangerous responsibilities and to protect the communities in which we live.

This bill would help to ensure that the Government provides the best—for the Nation's best, our firefighters and emergenmcy response personnel.

I want to commend Congresswoman MEYERS for introducing this important legislation and I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4522, the Firefighters' Safety Study Act.

COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE,
SPACE, AND TECHNOLOGY,
Washington, DC, May 8, 1990.

Hon. JOHN D. DINGELL,
Chairman, Committee on Energy and Commerce, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter on H.R. 4522, the Firefighters' Safety Study Act.

This legislation is designed to improve the information available to emergency response personnel in the field. The Administrator of the U.S. Fire Administration is to review and evaluate existing response information used by emergency response personnel at the State and local levels. To accomplish this goal, the Administrator is to establish a working group to assist with the review and provide recommendations.

As you requested, I wish to clarify the issues you raised:

First, since the outcome of the bill will be a report of the working group, the report cannot in itself change laws, regulations, agencies, or programs under the jurisdiction of the Energy and Commerce Committee or any other Committee of the House.

Second, Section 2 specifies that the evaluation conducted by the working group of the accuracy and consistency of existing response information used by emergency response personnel should clearly communicate the probable hazards and the appropriate response to those hazards. The working group is an advisory body to review existing response information and in that capacity would not have legal authority to direct changes in the communication or presentation of that information. Likewise, the Administrator of the U.S. Fire Administration is not granted new authority to change the communication or presentation of information.

Third, H.R. 4522 relates generically to all response information used by emergency response personnel and is not intended to specifically address emergency responses to hazardous materials transportation accidents, environmental releases, or medical emergencies per se. The Committee on Science, Space, and Technology has jurisdiction over the U.S. Fire Administration and the National Fire Academy which provides emergency response training.

I would gladly include our exchange of correspondence on this matter in the Record during consideration of the bill. Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

ROBERT A. ROE,
Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. ROBERT A. ROE,
Chairman, Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On April 18, 1990, the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology ordered reported H.R. 4522, a bill to improve the information available to emergency response personnel in the field, and for other purposes. The bill appears to contemplate a review of existing response information used by emergency response personnel at the State and local levels. This review is to be conducted by the United States Fire Administrator, acting through a working group composed of representatives of several agencies, including the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Transportation. The term "emergency response personnel" is defined in the bill to mean personnel responsible for mitigation activities in a medical emergency, fire emergency, hazardous material emergency, or natural disaster.

I am writing to express my concern that the legislation as reported affects matters within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Energy and Commerce in several respects. Under section 23 of H.R. 3520, the Hazardous Materials Transportation Uniform Safety Amendments Act of 1990, reported by our Committee on April 3, 1990, the Secretary of Transportation would be required to conduct a major study of emergency response capabilities, including in part the information apparently sought by H.R. 4522. Under section 116 of the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act (HMTA), the Secretary of Transportation and the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency have in the past evaluated the very matters addressed by H.R. 4522. Moreover, extensive regulations issued under HMTA prescribe precisely what information must be provided to emergency responders at the scene of hazardous materials transportation accidents.

Similarly, section 305 of the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986 authorize funds and prescribe programs for emergency training and review of emergency systems involving certain extremely hazardous substances. In addition, pursuant to our public health jurisdiction, our Committee has acted on legislation regulating and improving trauma care systems. These trauma care systems typically include an emergency response component.

While I have no objection to the goals of H.R. 4522, I believe it is important to clarify several issues relative to the legislation.

First, it is my understanding that the bill will not effect any substantive changes in laws, regulations, agencies, or programs under the jurisdiction of the Energy and Commerce Committee.

Second, I read the second sentence of section 2 of the bill to describe the criteria against which the working group will be measuring existing emergency response information, not to grant any legal authority to the working group or the Fire Administrator to direct changes in the communication or presentation of that information.

Third, I do not understand the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology to be asserting jurisdiction over emergency response information, training, or other activities generally, at least insofar as hazardous materials transportation accidents, environmental releases, or medical emergencies are concerned. We understand that the initial referral of H.R. 4522 is based on your Committee's jurisdiction over the U.S. Fire Administration and the National Fire Academy, which provides emergency response training.

I understand that your Committee has requested floor consideration of H.R. 4522 under suspension of the rules on Tuesday, May 8, 1990. I would have no objection to your proceeding in this manner if you would be so kind as to confirm to me by letter your agreement with the three points stated above and agree to insert this exchange of correspondence in the Record during consideration of the bill. Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

JOHN D. DINGELL,
Chairman.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4522, and I want to praise my colleague from Kansas, Mrs. MEYERS, for offering this bill. It will ensure that the Government takes the simple, obvious first steps that are needed to prevent a recurrence of a tragedy like the one that killed the six firefighters in Kansas City—steps that still have not been taken, to my knowledge, a year and a half after that explosion.

The working group set up under this bill make recommendations that should improve the information firefighters receive to determine how to respond to an emergency.

We have heard some concerns that this bill will be viewed as a substitute for other, more specific measures that deal with hazardous materials. Let me assure everyone that is not the case. I am a co-sponsor, for example, of Mr. APPLEGATE's bill which deals with the tracking of hazardous materials. H.R. 4522 would not undercut that bill in any way.

H.R. 4522 also would not interfere with the execution of any existing hazardous material statutes. Neither the working group nor the U.S. Fire Administration has any authority to order other agencies to take any action.

But what H.R. 4522 would set in motion is a thorough review of the information firefighters rely on in responding to emergencies. The six deaths in Kansas City ought to be adequate testimony that such review is needed.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4522.

Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment my colleague, the chairman of our subcommittee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE], for his leadership. I particularly wish to compliment the gentlewoman from Kansas [Mrs. MEYERS]. She has come up with a very good idea. We all have said to ourselves over the last couple of weeks, "Why did I not think of it?" We did not, and she did, and she deserves the credit.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4522.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Kansas [Mrs. MEYERS].

Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4522, the Firefighter Safety Study Act. Let me first say that I extend my thanks and appreciation to Chairman ROE and Ranking Republican WALKER for reporting this bill out of committee and bringing it to the House floor. I also thank Congressmen VALENTINE and BOEHLERT for their support in subcommittee.

I introduced this bill in an attempt to rectify one of the issues raised by the United States Fire Administration in its report concerning the tragic fire and explosion in Kansas City on November 29, 1988, when 45,000 pounds of ammonium nitrate in a burning trailer exploded at a highway construction site, killing six firefighters. The bill would require formation of an interagency working group to review and coordinate the information provided to emergency responders involving hazardous materials.

There are currently 14 Federal agencies involved in the national contingency plan for hazardous materials accidents. They include the Environmental Protection Agency, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Department of Transportation, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and the U.S. Fire Administration. In addition, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration is responsible for the material safety data sheets that go to local emergency planning committees.

The principal problem with the materials currently in use in the field is that while generally accurate, they are not written from the perspective of first responders since sometimes this is not their intended audience. For example, the Department of Transportation's Emergency Response Guide—DOT-P 5800.4—is used by chemical companies, shippers, and carriers, as well as emergency responders. The material safety data sheet required by title III of Superfund were designed for the guidance of workers during normal operations, not emergencies.

But there are occasional contradictions in these materials. The MSDS for ammonium nitrate recommends immediate evacuation of the area for any fire involving it, while the emergency response guide says to fight a truck or equipment fire involving ammonium nitrate with water. But under the next subheading, it recommends that the area be evacuated in the case of a cargo fire.

The USFA staff felt that even if the six firefighters who died had known the contents of the burning trailer, they might have acted the same based on the guidance contained in the emergency response guide, a copy of which was found at the scene. The problem in this instance was not with the accuracy of the information, but rather the manner of its presentation which could be subject to misinterpretation, particularly by operational personnel who have to make an immediate decision on the scene of an incident at 3 o'clock in the morning, trying to decide whether a fire is an equipment fire or a cargo fire.

Subsequent to the release of USFA's report, last winter the Department of Transportation held routine hearings to update their emergency response guide. During the course of these hearings, both the International Association of Fire Fighters and the International Association of Fire Chiefs raised serious questions concerning the adequacy of the emergency response guide in meeting the needs of firefighters at the scene of an incident involving hazardous materials.

The information that is prepared for responders to hazardous materials incidents has to be considered from an operational perspective, as opposed to a transporter's or one who works with the hazardous materials. Attention must be paid to the people who will be using it in the field. I believe the strongest part of my legislation is the requirement that representatives of State and local emergency response personnel be members of the working group. Firefighters are the ones who can advise on how best to present the information. They can also point out what information is not needed and how to guard against an overload of information. If there is too much information available, it can be difficult to find the right information in time.

Taking all this into consideration, and wishing to do everything possible to prevent the recurrence of the tragedy in Kansas City, this bill proposes that the U.S. Fire Administrator, the spokesman for the Nation's fire service in the executive branch of the Federal Government, be charged with the responsibility of reviewing existing hazardous material response information with appropriate assistance from the other involved Federal and local agencies. This is necessary to ensure that the brave men and women who protect us against the threat of fire and hazardous materials accidents have the best possible information with which to do their dangerous job and better protect the communities in which we all live.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to our colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], a member and vice chairman of the full Committee on Science, Space, and Technology.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] for yielding, and would also like to add my commendations to the Members responsible for bringing this bill to the floor, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE], the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROE], the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT], who ably handles this subcommittee, and especially to the gentlewoman from Kansas [Mrs. MEYERS], for being the Member who conceived the idea, came up with the legislation, and then persistently went after assuring that it comes to the place where it is going to get passed on the floor here today. She not only through her work was able to highlight the growing dangers that our firefighters face, but through this legislation was instrumental in seeing to it that something got done about it.

Mr. Speaker, our emergency response personnel need the most up-to-date information on hazardous materials. We must also ensure the dissemination of that information down to the operational personnel at the local level. Moreover, I believe this bill demonstrates that the Federal Government can assist our firefighters in a beneficial way without great cost to the taxpayer.

Mr. Speaker, I urge colleagues to support the legislation.

Mr. BUECHNER. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be a strong proclivity here on Capitol Hill to learn lessons the hard way; the area of hazardous materials handling exemplifies this well. It is tragic that six Kansas City firefighters had to die in order for us to recognize the need for additional scrutiny in the area of hazardous materials.

However, the least we can do is learn from the mistakes of the past. It is now apparent that we have inadequate information as to the disposition of hazardous materials; six gravestones in Kansas City testify to this. Congresswoman MEYERS' bill provides the groundwork for solving this problem through careful analysis of the information at hand. Accordingly, I congratulate Congresswoman MEYERS for introducing a bill that accomplishes what should have been done years ago. I ask my colleagues to support this bill before the lesson becomes any more costly.

However, I believe that further action is required to protect the American people, and emergency response personnel in particular, from the possibility of further hazardous materials tragedies. Accordingly, Congresswoman CARDISS COLLINS and I have introduced H.R. 2549, the Comprehensive Hazardous Materials Transportation Safety Act in the hope that we might greatly reduce the threat of hazardous materials accidents—that we might learn the easy way for once.

The bill began as a result of our concern that State and local governments lack the funds to adequately prepare for, and deal with hazardous materials accidents. As you know, title III of the Superfund Reauthorization Act of 1986 [SARA] established State and local emergency planning committees to better prepare and plan for hazardous materials accidents. However, this act failed to provide sufficient and continuing funds to carry out these activities.

Many fire departments currently contend that SARA has placed an inordinate burden on the local community to plan for and respond to hazardous materials incidents. They cite, among other things, the lack of funding and guidance for training. It is widely estimated that some 35,000 fire departments nationwide—a vast majority—cannot fund adequate training for their personnel.

Our bill establishes a grant program for State and local governments to improve planning and training for emergency response personnel. Although the Secretary of Transportation will have the authority to award the grants, the Secretary is urged to consult with the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency as well as the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency before the grants are awarded. Experts have widely lauded the idea of intergovernment cooperation in addressing this area; this is a central feature of H.R. 2549. The grants, although authorized at the Federal level would be administered at the State and local level to ensure their effective and timely usage.

Emergency response planning and training activities must involve a partnership between Federal, State, and local officials. Therefore, the bill ensures that 75 percent of these grants must be passed on to local and regional authorities, thus ensuring that funds reach the grassroots level. As we know, grassroots activities, such as the local firefighters, are usually the first responders to hazardous materials transportation incidents.

In essence, this grant program will not only promote regional cooperation—a key theme you heard voiced yesterday—but will help ensure that State and local governments will have the resources to conduct their responsibilities under SARA—title III—as well as provide firefighters, police, and emergency medical technicians with the needed training to meet the challenge of a hazmat emergency.

More importantly, this grant program is unique because it integrates State and local administrative structures established under SARA, OSHA training requirements, and regional cooperation into the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act. If Congress seeks governmental coordination, it must design an integrated program.

The bill also improves Federal requirements relating to industry training as a means to prevent hazardous materials accidents. The Department of Transportation's general training regulations for hazmat handlers are vague, at least in the area of highway transportation. They do not specify the frequency, content, objectives, and length of the required training. Consequently, our bill requires DOT to improve its training regulations. The bill mandates new training standards on a wide range of issues including placarding, labeling, handling procedures, health and safety risks, emergency response, communication procedures, as well as other factors which will improve the overall safety record. The bill further requires documentation proving that hazardous materials handlers have been properly tested. This is consistent and compatible with the hazardous materials requirements of the commercial drivers licensing law.

In sum, the bill would implement a comprehensive policy involving: Increased cooperation between Federal, State, and local authorities; increased funding for emergency response preparation and training; nationally uniform standards for hazmat training and transportation; and increased guidance for local emergency response committees, among other things.

Mr. Speaker, I find it encouraging that this assembly is considering Congresswoman MEYERS' bill, for it represents an important first step in addressing the threat of a hazardous materials accident—an important lesson learned the hard way. I further ask that we pass the Comprehensive Hazardous Materials Transportation Safety Act, so that just once, we might learn the easy way. I am confident our bill, or something very like it will eventually be passed by Congress. The question in my mind is whether that will be the prevention of a tragedy, or the response to one.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, every day, firefighters are called upon to respond to a variety of emergencies. We assume that they are given adequate materials and proper training to help them respond appropriately in these situations, particularly where hazardous materials such as explosives are involved.

The quality of the materials and training provided by the Government to our firefighters is critical to their ability to protect our citizens, as well as themselves. The tragic explosion that took the lives of six firefighters and that led to the introduction of this bill by our colleague, JAN MEYERS of Kansas, indicate that the data available need improvement.

The bill that we are considering today would require an assessment of the adequacy of federally developed and disseminated training and guidance materials that address immediate problems faced by local firefighters in operational environments. The legislation also requires recommendations for improvement of these materials where judged necessary. I recommend that my colleagues support this initiative before us.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I support H.R. 4522, the Firefighters Safety Study Act. I want to congratulate Chairman ROE and other sponsors of H.R. 4522 for their quick work on this legislation.

The goals of enhancing emergency preparedness both for the safety of the public and of firefighters is of keen interest to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation. Improving the accuracy and quality of emergency response data is extremely important.

The Committee on Public Works and Transportation is now preparing legislation to amend the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act. Included in that legislation will be amendments related to emergency response for accidents and incidents involving the transportation of hazardous materials. We have discussed the Public Works and Transportation Committee's intentions and jurisdiction in an exchange of letters with Chairman ROE, in which we agreed that our efforts are complementary and that current efforts to address emergency response concerns in the context of the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act are in no way affected by H.R. 4522.

Again, I urge my House colleagues to support H.R. 4522.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4522.

The question was taken.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks, and include therein extraneous material, on H.R. 4522, the bill just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

COORDINATED CLEARANCE AND SETTLEMENT ACT OF 1990

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3656) to amend the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to improve the clearance and settlement of transactions in securities and related instruments, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3656

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Coordinated Clearance and Settlement Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. COORDINATED CLEARING.

Section 17A(a)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (145 U.S.C. 78q-1) is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) The Commission is directed, therefore, having due regard for the public interest, the protection of investors, the safeguarding of securities and funds, and maintenance of fair competition among brokers and dealers, clearing agencies, and transfer agencies, to use its authority under this title—

"(i) to facilitate the establishment of a national system for the prompt and accurate clearance and settlement of transactions in securities (other than exempt securities); and

"(ii) to facilitate the establishment of linked or coordinated facilities for clearance and settlement of transactions in securities, securities options, contracts of sale for future delivery and options thereon, and commodity options; in accordance with the findings and to carry out the objectives set forth in paragraph (1) of this subsection.

"(B) The Commission shall use its authority under this title to assure equal regulation under this title of registered clearing agencies and registered transfer agents. In carrying out its responsibilities set forth in subparagraph (A)(ii) of this paragraph, the Commission shall coordinate with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and consult with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

"(C) The Securities and Exchange Commission, in consultation with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and other relevant regulatory authorities, shall examine progress toward establishing linked or coordinated facilities for clearance and settlement of transactions in securities, securities options, contracts of sale for future delivery and options thereon, and commodity options, and shall submit to the Committees on Energy and Commerce and Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs and Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate, not later than 2 years from the date of enactment of this subparagraph, a report detailing and evaluating such progress.".

SEC. 3. TRANSFER AND PLEDGE OF SECURITIES.

Section 17A of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78q-1) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f)(1) Notwithstanding any provision of State law, if the Commission makes each of the findings described in paragraph (2)(A), the Commission may adopt rules concerning—

"(A) the transfer of certificated or uncertificated securities (other than government securities issued pursuant to chapter 31 of title 31, United States Code, or securities otherwise processed within a book-entry system operated by the Federal Reserve Banks pursuant to a Federal Book-entry regulation) or limited interests (including security interests) therein; and

"(B) rights and obligations of purchasers, sellers, owners, lenders, borrowers, and financial intermediaries (including brokers, dealers, banks, and clearing agencies) involved in or affected by such transfers, and the rights of third parties whose interests in such securities devolve from such transfers.

"(2)(A) The findings described in this paragraph are findings by the Commission that—"(i) such rule is necessary or appropriate for the protection of investors or in the public interest and is reasonably designed to promote the prompt, accurate, and safe clearance and settlement of securities transactions;

"(ii) in the absence of a uniform rule, the safe and efficient operation of the national system for clearance and settlement of securities transactions will be, or is, substantially impeded; and

"(iii) to the extent such rule will impair or diminish, directly or indirectly, rights of persons specified in paragraph (1)(B) under State law concerning transfers of securities (or limited interests therein), benefits of such rule outweigh such impairment or diminution of rights.

"(B) In making the findings described in subparagraph (A), the Commission shall give consideration to the recommendations of the Advisory Committee established under paragraph (3), and it shall consult with and consider the views of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. If the Secretary of the Treasury objects, in writing, to any proposed rule of the Commission on the basis of the Secretary's view on the issues described in clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) of subparagraph (A), the Commission shall consider all feasible alternatives to the proposed rule, and it shall not adopt any such rule unless the Commission makes an explicit finding that the rule is the most practicable method for achieving safe and efficient operation of the national clearance and settlement system.

"(3)(A) Within 90 days after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Commission shall (and at such times thereafter as the Commission may determine, the Commission may), after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, establish an advisory committee under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.). The Advisory Committee shall be directed to consider and report to the Commission on such matters as the Commission, after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, determines, including the areas, if any, in which State commercial laws and related Federal laws concerning the transfer of certificated or uncertificated securities, limited interests (including security interests) in such securities, or the creation or perfection of security interests in such securities do not provide the necessary certainty, uniformity, and clarity for purchases, sellers, investors, financial intermediaries, and lenders concerning their respective rights and obligations.

"(B) The Advisory Committee shall consist of 15 members, of which—

"(i) 11 shall be designated by the Commission in accordance with the Federal Advisory Committee Act; and

"(ii) 2 each shall be designated by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(C) The Advisory Committee shall conduct its activities in accordance with the Federal Advisory Committee Act. Within 6 months of its designation, or such longer time as the Commission may designate, the Advisory Committee shall issue a report to the Commission, and shall cause copies of that report to be delivered to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RINALDO] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY].

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise today in support of the passage of H.R. 3656, the Coordinated Clearance and Settlement Act of 1990. I urge my colleagues to support this important bill that stems from the October 19, 1987, market crash. This measure contains a crucial reform to safeguard the stability of our financial markets by reducing unnecessary credit demands on market participants during periods of market stress.

I would like to thank my good friend and colleague and ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RINALDO] for his help in bringing this measure to the floor. This bill enjoys widespread bipartisan support, both in the Committee on Energy and Commerce, through Chairman DINGELL and ranking minority member LENT; and in the Committee on Agriculture through the leadership of Chairman DE LA GARZA.

I would especially like to thank Mr. DE LA GARZA and his staff for their timely and expert assistance. My colleagues on the Committee on Agriculture have suggested several improvements to this bill which have been enthusiastically accepted and are reflected in the amended bill before us today. In the spirit of cooperation, Mr. DE LA GARZA has agreed to waive his committee's rights to a sequential referral of H.R. 3656 in order to allow for prompt legislative action on this bill. I thank my colleagues for their consideration and for their support in this matter.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] and all members of the committee appreciate the cooperation which we are receiving in our efforts to coordinate with the Committee on Agriculture so we can get at the root of some of these problems that exist in the financial marketplace.

The need for coordinated clearance and settlement systems sounds somewhat esoteric, but in actuality the concept is quite simple. This bill enables our regulators to lessen the need for large cash payments to flow back and forth among market participants and diverse clearing houses during times of market stress, thereby lessening the likelihood of a credit crisis tipping the financial markets into disarray.

The October 19, 1987, market crash of 508 points was the largest 1-day drop in the stock market's history. In that one day alone, $1 trillion in value evaporated from the face of corporate America. The major studies which examined the crash reiterated a well-known, but until then, little-appreciated fact of financial life—the stock, options, and stock index futures markets operate as a unified market. Market participants hold positions across these linked markets, yet they are treated as if their cross market positions are of no financial consequence. This lack of sophistication in the clearing and settlement system posed a sizable threat to the stability of the Nation's financial system during the October 1987 crash. The Brady Commission's report the blue ribbon panel put together by President Reagan summed up our brush with disaster:

The complexity and fragmentation of the separate clearing mechanisms in stocks, futures and options—in conjunction with massive volume, violent price volatility, and staggering demands on bank credit—brought the financial system to the brink on Tuesday, October 20 * * * This crisis of confidence raised the spectre of a full-scale financial system breakdown and required the Federal Reserve to provide liquidity and confidence. The complexity of the clearing and credit mechanisms, rather than a substantive problem of solvency, was at fault.

The magnitude of the credit demands on October 19, 1987, were indeed staggering. The Options Clearing Corp. demanded $1.8 billion in payments by its members. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange demanded $2.5 billion of its members. Unfortunately, market participants were denied the ability to offer the gains they realized on one financial product to offset their losses with another.

The demands for instant cash payments and unnecessary cash payments robbed the market of badly needed liquidity when it was needed most.

Since October 1987, limited reforms have been implemented which graphically demonstrate the benefits of coordinated clearance and settlement. A pilot project between the Options Clearing Corp. and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange calling for cross-margining was in effect during the October 13, 1989 minicrash. Cross-margining allows for the reduction of margin payments by those who hold hedge cross-market positions. Two participants in the program found their margin payments reduced by $164 million during the minicrash by virtue of their participation in the program. These savings would be greatly enhanced by the legislation which is before us today.

Following the crash, the Securities and Exchange Commission, then under the leadership of Chairman Ruder, proposed the reforms we have before us today. Now, under the leadership of Chairman Breeden of the SEC and Chairman Gramm of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, we anticipate passage of the first in a series of market reform measures. H.R. 3656 strengthens our clearance and settlement system in several ways. First, the bill directs the Securities and Exchange Commission to facilitate the establishment of linked or coordinated facilities for clearance and settlement of transactions in securities, securities options, and futures. Second, the SEC is directed to coordinate with the CFTC in developing such a system, and also to consult with the Federal Reserve Board. Third, the SEC, in consultation with the Federal Reserve Board and the CFTC, is required to report its progress on developing a coordinated clearance and settlement system to Congress within 2 years of enactment. Fourth, the SEC is authorized to promulgate rules to preempt State laws concerning the transfer and the perfection of a security interest only after the SEC makes a determination that such a preemption is necessary to fulfill the goal of a coordinated clearance and settlement system. fifth, recognizing the complexity of State law in this area, the SEC is directed to establish an advisory committee to guide the SEC in its deliberations.

Once again, I want to thank my colleagues on the Energy and Commerce Committee. I would like to express the gratitude we all share for the work of the Agriculture Committee and their staff on this bill. Without their cooperation, this would not have been possible.

This is a major step forward in ensuring that we do have linked markets, that we do have better coordination, and I hope that this House deems fit to receive this piece of legislation unanimously today, so that we can move it on to deliberations with the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 3656, the Coordinated Clearance and Settlement Act.

The chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. MARKEY, and I, along with Mr. RICHARDSON and Mr. BRYANT introduced this legislation, because of the importance of the clearance and settlement process of our Nation's securities markets. We heard what the bill does from the chairman of the subcommittee.

When an investor cannot get an order executed on the floor of an exchange, he may be upset at this lost opportunity. His concern is a fraction of what he would feel, however, if he could not receive payment or stock certificates from a transaction that did occur. That is what clearance and settlement is all about.

The huge volume of trading that occurred during the October 1987 market correction created equally large customer margin and settlement obligations. Customer orders often simultaneously involved the stock, option, and futures markets. When an investor does business in the stock and futures market at the same time, he is required to post separate margins with both brokers, and these brokers with their clearing agents.

During the 1987 market crisis this involved extraordinarily large cash payments, larger than would have been required if clearance and settlement in these markets were coordinated. The additional moneys that were tied up pursuant to regulation margining the component parts of a combined transaction, deprived the trading markets of additional liquidity at a time when they needed it most.

H.R. 3656 would direct the SEC to facilitate the establishment of linked and coordinated facilities for clearance and settlement of transactions in securities and related financial instruments. Furthermore, the legislation would give the SEC the authority to adopt rules concerning the transfer and pledge of securities overriding existing State laws that impede efficient operation of the clearance and settlement system.

Mr. Speaker, though technical in nature, the impact of coordinated clearing and settlement on our markets can be dramatic. This legislation is the beginning of the process of reorganizing the structure and regulation of our securities, options, and commodities markets along the lines in which business has been evolving for the last two decades. It is the first step, but it is not a small one.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to compliment the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY], chairman of the subcommittee, for his leadership on this important bill. Once again his balanced approach to the legislative process, ensuring that the input of the minority is considered as well as of our colleagues on the full committee, led by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT], was evident.

This is legislation at its best. It is a needed bill. It is a bill that the SEC and the administration strongly support, and it is a truly valuable bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY].

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 3656, the Coordinated Clearance and Settlement Act, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Before I get into my formal remarks I would like to personally recognize the leadership of the chairman of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance for what I consider an excellent job of putting together a very difficult piece of legislation, complicated, yes, and also difficult in many ways in trying to seek the goals that all of us wanted in the area of settlements that are so important to our markets. If it were not for his ability to stick with the issue and to work out compromises, we would not be here today.

I would also want to pay tribute to my friend, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RINALDO], the ranking member, for also working very closely with all of us in putting this bill together. As the gentleman from New Jersey stated, this is indeed legislation at its best.

This legislation directs the Securities and Exchange Commission to address the need for coordinated clearance and settlement of securities and commodities transactions. It requires the SEC to consult with appropriate regulatory authorities and report its progress to Congress not later than 2 years after enactment of the law.

The bill also directs the SEC to establish a Federal Advisory Committee. This committee will consider the important issue of the conflict between State commercial laws and related Federal laws. These laws regard the transfer of certificated and uncertificated securities, and the perfection of security interests. The Balkanized system in place today does not provide the necessary certainty or uniformity to make clear to investors, financial intermediaries, and lenders their respective rights and obligations.

We live in a time when we must reexamine the relationships between regulators of our financial markets, and this bill directs study of two important facets of the issue. One is the relationship of the SEC, the CFTC and the Federal Reserve Board concerning clearing transactions that include securities, commodities, and bank payments. Over the course of the last decade a number of commodities products have been introduced that are based on securities or other financial, as opposed to agricultural, products. These commodity futures are used to hedge stock positions taken by block traders on behalf of institutions. The financial service provided by the commodities market has made possible deeper and more liquid stock markets. Unfortunately, the current structure of margin regulation treats a securities purchase which is hedged by a commodity future as two transactions, requiring two separate margin deposits. In fact there is only one transaction. It may be possible, after careful study of the issue as mandated by H.R. 3656, to devise rules that will allow a single margin deposit reflecting the hedged nature of the transaction and reduced risk. This would free up millions of dollars of trading capital and our financial markets would become even deeper and more liquid.

The second focus of the bill is the relationship of SEC regulation and Federal securities law to State regulation of securities. In markets that are already national and are increasingly international in nature, situations arise in which the comprehensive Federal system of regulation is interfered with by the imposition of 50 State laws upon it. State commercial laws that interfere with clearance and settlement of securities transactions may be such an area. In this situation, it may be desirable for the Federal Government to preempt State regulation. This would be done to the minimum extent possible to make our national system work, and to keep us competitive in the global markets that are developing. Congressional direction to the appropriate regulatory agencies to study the issue is wise.

I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of H.R. 3656.

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to conclude for one final moment.

I would like to consume that moment by thanking the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY] for all of his help in helping us to make it possible to put together a bipartisan piece of legislation and one which I think solves the problem in a pragmatic, nonideologic way. Also, the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON], the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT], the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. TAUZIN], and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER], for all of their help as well in making it possible for us to put together this piece of legislation.

I would like to thank the legislative counsel, Steve Cope.

I would like to thank the SEC staff who has worked very closely with us in making it possible to draft a piece of legislation which was acceptable to that agency and would meet the needs of the agency when it is being implemented.

I would also like to thank the minority staff, Steve Blumenthal, of the committee. He has made it personally very easy for us to develop a strong working relationship.

I think it is fair to mention the Committee on Agriculture as well because their staff has been absolutely marvelous in helping us to draft this bill.

I would like particularly to single out Bill Cherry and Fred Clark for their work in making this piece of legislation possible and all the members of their committee as well.

I would like to thank Consuela Washington, the full committee staff counsel, for all of her work on this legislation. I would like to thank Howard Homonoff and Herb Brown, subcommittee staff director, and especially Nancy Smith of our staff who over the last couple of years has dedicated hundreds of hours to this piece of legislation and others in trying to draft legislation which would be acceptable to all parties.

Finally, once again to my friend, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RINALDO] for his ongoing friendship and cooperation in drafting this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3656, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous matter on H.R. 3656, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS ANTI-TERRORISM ACT OF 1989

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 237) to implement the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and Their Destruction, by prohibiting certain conduct relating to biological weapons, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 237

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

This Act may be cited as the "Biological Weapons Anti-Terrorism Act of 1989".

SEC. 2. PURPOSE AND INTENT.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to—

(2) implement the Biological Weapons Convention, an international agreement unanimously ratified by the United States Senate in 1974 and signed by more than 100 other nations, including the Soviet Union; and

(2) protect the United States against the threat of biological terrorism.

(b) INTENT OF ACTION.—Nothing in this Act is intended to restrain or restrict peaceful scientific research or development.

SEC. 3. TITLE 18 AMENDMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 9 the following:

"CHAPTER 10—BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS

"Sec.
"175. Prohibitions with respect to biological weapons.
"176. Seizure, forfeiture, and destruction.
"177. Injunctions.
"178. Definitions.

"§ 175. Prohibitions with respect to biological weapons

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Whoever knowingly develops, produces, stockpiles, transfers, acquires, retains, or possesses any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system for use as a weapon, or knowingly assists a foreign state or any organization to do so, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for life or any term of years, or both. There is extraterritorial Federal jurisdiction over an offense under this section committed by or against a national of the United States.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'for use as a weapon' does not include the development, production, transfer, acquisition, retention, or possession of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system for prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes.

"§ 176. Seizure, forfeiture, and destruction

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Attorney General may request the issuance, in the same manner as provided for a search warrant, of a warrant authorizing the seizure of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system that—

"(A) exists by reason of conduct prohibited under section 175 of this title; or

"(B) is of a type or in a quantity that under the circumstances has no apparent justification for prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes.

"(2) In exigent circumstances, seizure and destruction of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) may be made upon probable cause without the necessity for a warrant.

"(b) PROCEDURE.—Property seized pursuant to subsection (a) shall be forfeited to the United States after notice to potential claimants and an opportunity for a hearing. At such hearing, the government shall bear the burden of persuasion by a preponderance of the evidence. Except as inconsistent herewith, the same procedures and provisions of law relating to a forfeiture under this section. The Attorney General may provide for the destruction or other appropriate disposition of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system seized and forfeited pursuant to this section.

"(c) AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—It is an affirmative defense against a forfeiture under subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section that—

"(1) such biological agent, toxin, or delivery system is for a prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purpose; and

"(2) such biological agent, toxin, or delivery system, is of a type and quantity reasonable for that purpose.

"§ 177. Injunctions

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The United States may obtain in a civil action an injunction against—

"(1) the conduct prohibited under section 175 of this title;

"(2) the preparation, solicitation, attempt, or conspiracy to engage in conduct prohibited under section 175 of this title; or

"(3) the development, production, stockpiling, transferring, acquisition, retention, or possession, or the attempted development, production, stockpiling, transferring, acquisition, retention, or possession of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system of a type or in a quantity that under the circumstances has no apparent justification for prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes.

"(b) AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—It is an affirmative defense against an injunction under subsection (a)(3) of this section that—

"(1) the conduct sought to be enjoined is for a prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purpose; and

"(2) such biological agent, toxin, or delivery system is of a type and quantity reasonable for that purpose.

"§ 178. Definitions

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'biological agent' means any microorganism, virus, or infectious substance, capable of causing—

"(A) death, disease, or other biological malfunction in a human, an animal, a plant, or another living organism;

"(B) deterioration of food, water, equipment, supplies, or material of any kind; or

"(C) deleterious alteration of the environment;

"(2) the term 'toxin' means, whatever its origin or method of production—

"(A) any poisonous substance produced by a living organism; or

"(B) any poisonous isomer, homolog, or derivative of such a substance;

"(3) the term 'delivery system' means—

"(A) any apparatus, equipment, device, or means of delivery specifically designed to deliver or disseminate a biological agent, toxin, or vector; or

"(B) any vector; and

"(4) the term 'vector' means a living organism capable of carrying a biological agent or toxin to a host.".

(b) WIRE INTERCEPTION.—Section 2516(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding "section 175 (relating to biological weapons)," after "section 33 (relating to destruction of motor vehicles or motor vehicle facilities),".

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 9 the following new item:

"10. Biological Weapons..... 175.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER].

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 6½ minutes.

Mr. Speaker, as the House sponsor of legislation, H.R. 237, to implement the Biological Weapons Convention, I am pleased to rise in support of this legislation.

I want to commend the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MORRISON], chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law and a cosponsor of H.R. 237, for his effective leadership in expediting House consideration of this legislation. Also, I am proud that my Senator, the junior Senator from Wisconsin, HERB KOHL, seized the initiative in the Senate on this issue by introducing a companion measure, S. 993, and winning Senate approval of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, three decades have passed since I proposed a congressional resolution on no first-use of biological weapons. Progress on the biological warfare issue has always been slow.

In 1969, President Nixon unilaterally renounced the use of biological weapons and pledged to destroy the existing U.S. stockpile. In 1972, the Nixon administration endorsed the Biological Weapons Convention, and by the time the Senate ratified the Convention in 1974, all the biological weapons in our possession had been destroyed.

The Biological Weapons Convention requires each signatory to take all measures necessary to prevent and prohibit within its territory, under its jurisdiction or under its control anywhere, the activities prohibited by the Convention. Although 14 years have passed since the ratification of the Convention, the United States, however, has not yet passed legislation to accomplish this purpose. There presently are no Federal statutes that prohibit and provide penalties for the development, production stockpiling acquisition or retention of, first biological agents or toxins of types and in quantities that have no justification for peaceful purposes and, second, weapons, equipment, and means of delivery designed to use such agents or toxins for hostile purposes or in armed conflict.

On two occasions, the executive branch tried to have legislation enacted to implement the Convention. In 1973, a bill was introduced in the Congress but it failed to receive consideration because of the delay in ratifying the Convention. Another effort was made in 1980, but the congressional session came to an end before any action could be taken.

The Reagan administration held that extensive existing legislation controlled certain private actions concerning the items and actions prohibited by the Convention. Such legislation included the Arms Export Control Act, the Export Administration Act, the Hazardous Material Transportation Act, the Toxic Substances Control Act, the Public Health Service Act, and the Federal Insecticide, Pesticide and Rodenticide Act. These existing laws, however, are deficient in several main aspects since they do not cover biological agents and toxins described by the Convention in its various articles. Also they fail to implement the Convention goal of eradicating all agents or toxins that have no peaceful purpose. Simply stated, no statute exists for prohibiting citizens from making biological weapons.

This administration, reflecting the President's stated support for banning biololgical weapons from the face of the Earth, supports this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, we are in the age of the biotechnology revolution where genetic engineering has made it possible for the scientific community to design fundamental aspects of living organisms to make them produce beneficial products for society. The legislation to implement the Biological Warfare Convention will not interfere with legitimate research and development and the commercial applications of new organisms. But, there is a dark side to the biotechnology revolution, and that is the ability to create an infinite variety of deadly mircobes, toxins, and other agents of biological mass destruction has been made easier. The technology that makes it possible to produce miracle drugs also makes it possible to create microorganisms that can cause deadly diseases for which no cures exist.

Biological weapons are abhorrent. The fear of the creation of doomsday bacterial or viral weapons use is equal to that associated with a nuclear holocaust. We must do everything in our power to prevent the use of biological weapons. We have an international obligation to do so, and by passing this legislation we are letting the rest of the world know that we are serious in our desire to stop biological terrorism.

This legislation prohibits the possession or development of germ warfare devices and authorizes the punishment of those who engage in such activities as well as those who attempt to help foreign nations acquire such weapons.

Mr. Speaker, I urge House passage of H.R. 237, the Biological Warfare Convention implementation legislation.

□ 1410

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 237 the Biological Weapons Act of 1990 would implement the Biological Weapons Convention signed by the United States on April 10, 1972.

The bill gives the Attorney General the discretion and authority to seize and destroy any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system deemed to be developed for nonpeaceful purposes.

The Senate unanimously passed a similar bill on November 21, 1989. That bill, S. 993, was supported by the administration.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 237, which mirrors S. 993, and has the administration's support.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MORRISON], chairman of the subcommittee that handled the bill, who also testified in the Senate on this measure. We are indebted to the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, let me start by commending my colleague, Mr. BOB KASTEN-

MEIER, for introducing this important bill. I also salute our esteemed chairman, JACK BROOKS, chairman of the full Judiciary Committee, for his leadership in shepherding this bill through the committee process.

The purpose of H.R. 237, the Biological Weapons Anti-Terrorism Act, is to implement the 1972 Biological Weapons Convention, signed by 111 nations including the United States and the U.S.S.R.

The Senate gave its advice and consent to ratification of the Biological Weapons Convention in December 1974, and the treaty entered into force in March 1975. Under the convention each nation undertakes, "never in any circumstances," to develop, produce, stockpile, acquire or retain microbial or other biological agents or toxins, whatever their origin or method of production, unless there is a peaceful justification.

The convention has been interpreted to bind only governments, not their respective populations. H.R. 237 is necessary to fulfill the obligation each nation has under article IV of the convention to take necessary measures to prevent and prohibit the development or retention of biological weapons within its territory.

Although implementing legislation was introduced by former Chairman Peter Rodino in the 96th, 99th, and 100th Congresses, and although several statutes already exist regulating bioweapons like the Toxic Substances Control Act and the Arms Export Control Act to date there is no comprehensive legislation prohibiting the manufacture or possession of biological weapons. Nor is there legislation prohibiting Americans from assisting other nations in acquiring such weapons.

On May 1, 1990, the subcommittee held a hearing on the bill. Witnesses included Senator KOHL, author of the Senate bill, S. 993; Tom Graham, general counsel to the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, and Prof. Matthew Meselson, professor of biochemistry and molecular biology at Harvard University. All of the witnesses endorsed the bill. Supporting written testimony was also received from Dr. Will Carpenter, vice president for technology, Monsanto Agriculture Co. and the Honorable James F. Leonard, the former ambassador who headed the U.S. delegation during treaty negotiations. On May 2, 1990 the full committee marked up an amendment in the nature of a substitute to H.R. 237 that is identical to S. 993.

H.R. 237 is needed to prevent the proliferation of biological weapons and to prevent the possibility of their falling into the hands of terrorists. In the words of former Assistant Secretary of State, H. Allen Holmes, "* * * if the proliferation of bio-weapons continues, it may only be a matter of time before terrorists do acquire and use these weapons."

As a graduate of M.I.T. in chemistry, and a former graduate student in chemistry at the University of Illinois, I probably have some special understanding of the potential horrors of biological and chemical warfare. In reality, however, I suspect that whether trained in science or not, we cannot, any of us, begin to comprehend the possible disasters that could result from the unchecked development of biological and toxin weapons.

The Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention bans the development, production, possession, and transfer of all biological and toxin weapons. The treaty stands as a unique arms control agreement because of its sweeping provisions. It outlaws not only the use and stockpiling of biological weapons, but their development as well.

There is, of course, always the possibility that some individual, engaged in clandestine biological weapons research, will develop some deadly agent that could pose a threat of a massive epidemic or accident that endangers the public. Concerns about such activities have increased recently because of heightened interest in both chemical and biological warfare in the world community. There has been significant evidence of chemical weapons use in the Iran-Iraq War, and evidence too that western companies may have aided the efforts of a number of Third World countries to develop chemical weapons. The spread of biological and chemical weapons to many countries could have disastrous long-term implications for the world. Combining these weapons of mass destruction with advanced long-range missile technology provide fearful opportunities to cause death and destruction. The unleashing of biological weapons could mean Armageddon in our lifetimes.

Passage of this implementing legislation will not completely resolve the threat of biological weapons proliferation. Nonetheless, it will signal renewed American commitment to diminish the chance that other countries will develop these weapons. it is my hope too that in the future the U.S. will explore international efforts to strengthen the Convention.

Since the early seventies, when the Convention was hailed as a model agreement, new techniques in genetic engineering have been developed, making possible a whole new generation of biological destructive capability. The nature of biological weaponry is such that it doesn't take large volumes to render wholesale destruction. The ease with which these deadly materials can be made is cause for serious international concern and requires speedy action.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this important bill. The langauge of H.R. 237 reflects accommodation and agreement between the Congress, the administration, academia, and private sector researchers, and manufacturers. Great care was taken to ensure against interference with legitimate research for peaceful purposes. The language of H.R. 237 is identical to S. 993 as it passed the Senate on November 21, 1989. It is our hope that the Members will pass S. 993 right after thay have voted in favor of H.R. 237, so that this legislation can be sent directly to the President for signature. I thank the chairman and my colleagues for their support.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, with the advent of sophisticated delivery systems and genetically engineered or other highly infectious agents, the prospects of a biological war are more terrifying than ever. Our best deterrent against proliferation of these weapons is the 1972 biological weapons convention, to which the United States and 100 other countries are signatories.

The Biological Weapons Act of 1989 demonstrates after 18 years that the United States is fully behind this convention. Secrecy surrounding our own biological defense research program coupled with more than a 400-percent increase in funding over the past 9 years has contributed to the problem of biological weapons proliferation. By establishing criminal penalties for those who develop, produce, or stockpile biological weapons, we allay fears in the international community which serve to propel this horrific arms race.

This is an important bill which comes at a time when the Third World is developing the means to produce and deliver these instruments of uncontrollable destruction. I strongly urge your support.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 237, as amended by the committee.

This is not complicated legislation. Rather, it does nothing more than establish criminal penalties against anyone who manufactures, possesses, transfers, or uses biological weapons. Guilty parties can be imprisoned for up to life or fined in accordance with title 18 of the United States Code, or both.

Biological weapons are the equal of nuclear weapons in terms of the death, destruction, and permanent alteration of the environment that they can cause. Despite their potency, however, the fact is that from a military standpoint they are relatively useless. They are difficult to store, their effects are often unpredictable, and they cannot be used with the pinpoint accuracy that modern military demands call for. For these reasons, as well as others, the United States unilaterally destroyed all its biological weapons in 1969 and agreed never to produce them again. Since they serve no useful military purposes, the only possible purpose they can serve is a mischievous, dangerous one.

Such weapons can be made inexpensively and secretly. They can be used for purposes of extortion, coercion, and terrorism. These are the dangers that H.R. 237 is designed to prevent and that is why the measure has received the support of the administration, the Judiciary Committee, which I am honored to chair, and has been passed in identical form by the Senate.

Finally, I should mention that in 1975 the United States became a party to the Biological Weapons Convention—an agreement signed by 111 nations. This convention obligates signatory nations not to produce, stockpile, or ever use biological weapons. The convention also requires each signatory state to take whatever measures may be necessary to prevent the production or use of biological weapons within its own territory. This bill, therefore, also serves the very important purposes of furthering the objectives of the convention and in demonstrating our resolve to honor its terms in full.

I urge my colleagues to support this extremely meritorious legislation.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my strong support for H.R. 237, the Biological Weapons Act of 1989. This important measure imposes criminal penalties against those who knowingly develop, produce, stockpile, acquire, retain, or possess any biological agent, toxin or delivery system for use as a weapon or assist any foreign state or any organization to do so.

The proliferation of biological weapons in the Third World has added a new and even more ominous tool to the world's arsenals of mass destruction. Biological weapons are even more insidious and even more horrific than chemical weapons. That is because biological weapons are capable of reproducing on their own.

International limitations on biological weapons are necessarily more comprehensive than the control of chemical weapons. In 1969, President Nixon unilaterally ended the U.S. biological weapons program, terminating all research and destroying all stockpiles of weapons. The Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention was signed in 1972 and ratified by the United States in 1975. Today most countries are signatories to the convention.

In the fall of 1986, progress was made in openness and verification of the Biological Weapons Convention when the 5 year review conference reached an agreement on exchanges of informatoin about all high containment biological research facilities and all unusual outbreaks of disease or toxin-related illness. Both the United States and the Soviet Union released their biological facility declarations in October 1987.

Mr. Speaker, with the growing number of nations that have active biological weapons programs, this is an appropriate measure. I commend the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] for his work on this measure. It is supported by the administration. Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I urge its adoption.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 237, the implementing legislation for the Biological Weapons Convention. For practical, legal, and moral reasons, it is imperative that we pass this bill into law.

First, it is a practical step which will help block proliferation of biological weapons. When we signed the Biological Weapons Convention in 1972, we committed ourselves to halt development and production, and renounce the use of biological weapons. But without this implementing legislation, we cannot impose legal penalties against American citizens who try to develop these weapons for themselves, or who help a foreign country in its attempts to develop them.

The recent reports that Iraq—a country whose rulers have used poison gas against Iranian soldiers and Iraqi civilians, despite Iraq's previous signature of the Geneva Convention against chemical warfare—may be experimenting with biological weapons shows that this is not simply a theoretical problem. It is a reality we confront today. If we cannot punish American citizens who attempt to develop biological weapons on their own or in concert with foreign governments, the force of our signature to the convention will be diminished.

Second, as a signatory of the convention, the United States is legally bound to support it and to do whatever we can to achieve its goal—to ensure that the worldwide ban on biological warfare is never broken. Making development or production of biological weapons a Federal crime moves us toward this aim, and encourages other governments to take the same step.

Finally, regardless of practical virtue or legal necessity, we have a moral obligation to prevent biological warfare. Modern warfare is terrible and deadly enough without extending its horrors into the realm of disease. There is no military or moral justification for the use of biological weapons. And the best way to make sure they never are used is never to make them.

With this bill, the United States puts the world on notice that its citizens and elected leaders will not tolerate the development, production, or use of the plague bacterium, the AIDS virus, or any other biological agent as a weapon of war. The legislation has been a long time coming, but it is welcome nonetheless.

I commend Representative KASTENMEIER for the effort he has made in crafting the bill and bringing it to the floor, and I ask all my colleagues to support it.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to commending the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MORRISON] for his eloquent statement, I would also like to commend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH] for the very constructive, supportive role he played with respect to this legislation, and to commend the members of the subcommittee.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 237, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

REGARDING THE PRESENTATION OF A PORTRAIT OF HON. WILLIAM D. FORD

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 272) authorizing printing of the transcript of proceedings of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service of the House of Representatives incident to presentation of a portrait of Hon. WILLIAM D. FORD, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 272

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the transcript of proceedings of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service of the House of Representatives on March 21, 1990, incident to presentation of a portrait of the Honorable William D. Ford, shall be printed as a House document, with illustrations and suitable binding.

SEC. 2. In addition to the usual number, 125 casebound copies of such document shall be printed for the use of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman from California [Mr. BATES] will control the time.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. BATES] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. BATES].

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 272 to authorize the publication which summarizes the proceedings of the presentation-of-the-portrait ceremony in honor of BILL FORD. The portraiture ceremony recognized WILLIAM D. FORD's first 25 years of distinguished service in the House of Representatives and his tenure as chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

BILL FORD has represented Michigan's 15th Congressional District for over 25 years. As chairman of the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service since 1981, Congressman

FORD has been an advocate for the U.S. Postal Service and civilian agencies, and has championed improvements in employee pay and benefits. Under his leadership, the committee has been in the forefront fostering and promoting the public service.

A major accomplishment during Mr. FORD's decade as chairman was the fashioning of a complete new Federal pension system. He has also fought strongly to make the wages of Federal workers comparable to those in the private sector despite frequent and prolonged attacks from the executive branch. He is currently confronting the task of rebuilding the health insurance system for Federal employees and their families.

Congressman FORD is also the ranking majority member of the Committee on Education and Labor. He has helped to write every piece of Federal education legislation since the 89th Congress. In the 97th Congress, Mr. FORD played a major role in developing the Job Training Partnership Act; and in the 100th Congress, he won a 14-year battle when his plant-closing bill overcame Presidential opposition and became law.

BILL FORD is admired by his colleagues, and appreciated by all those he has worked with and helped. It is an honor for me to rise today in support of House Concurrent Resolution 272, the publication of BILL FORD's portraiture ceremony.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 272, authorizing the printing of the transcript of the proceedings of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service of the House of Representatives incident to the presentation of a portrait of Hon. WILLIAM D. FORD.

Since November 3, 1964, Mr. FORD has been a diligent Representative of his home State of Michigan. Among other accomplishments, his service on the Post Office and Civil Service Committee is worthy of merit and proclamation of praise before his peers. Mr. FORD has served as chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service since 1980, and during that time he has vigorously promoted the U.S. Postal Service and civilian agencies and has adamantly demanded improved pay and benefits for those employed by our Postal Service and other Government agencies. He has led his committee to the forefront of public service and, in so doing, has earned the respect and admiration of those with whom he has worked. The official unveiling of Mr. FORD's portrait on March 21, 1990 was a timely occasion to honor a man who has done so much for his Government and his fellow man.

In recognition of these auspicious accomplishments, I urge my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 272.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 272, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the concurrent resolution just agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Debate having been concluded on all motions to suspend the rules, pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, the Chair will now put the question on each motion to suspend the rules on which further proceedings were postponed earlier today in the order in which that motion was entertained.

Votes will be taken in the following order:

H.R. 4522, by the yeas and nays; and

H.R. 237 by the yeas and nays.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for any electronic vote after the first such vote in this series.

□ 1458

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S.

993) to implement the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and Their Destruction, by prohibiting certain conduct relating to biological weapons, and for other purposes and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

□ 1500

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin to explain what the procedure is.

We have just passed a bill and the gentleman has made a request, and I am not exactly sure what that request means.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCOLLUM. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, the request is to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill, S. 993, which is precisely identical to the bill which just passed the House by a vote of 408 to 0, and to proceed to the immediate consideration of the Senate bill for the purpose of sending that bill directly to the President rather than back to the Senate.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, with that explanation, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

The clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 993

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Biological Weapons Anti-Terrorism Act of 1989".

SEC. 2. PURPOSE AND INTENT.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to—

(1) implement the Biological Weapons Convention, an international agreement unanimously ratified by the United States Senate in 1974 and signed by more than 100 other nations, including the Soviet Union; and

(2) protect the United States against the threat of biological terrorism.

(b) INTENT OF ACT.—Nothing in this Act is intended to restrain or restrict peaceful scientific research or development.

SEC. 3. TITLE 18 AMENDMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 9 the following:

"CHAPTER 10—BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS

"Sec.

"175. Prohibitions with respect to biological weapons.

"176. Seizure, forfeiture, and destruction.

"177. Injunctions.

"178. Definitions.

"§ 175. Prohibitions with respect to biological weapons

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Whoever knowingly develops, produces, stockpiles, transfers, acquires, retains, or possesses any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system for use as a weapon, or knowingly assists a foreign state or any organization to do so, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for life or any term of years, or both. There is extraterritorial Federal jurisdiction over an offense under this section committed by or against a national of the United States.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'for use as a weapon' does not include the development, production, transfer, acquisition, retention, or possession of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system for prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes.

§ 176. Seizure, forfeiture, and destruction

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Attorney General may request the issuance, in the same manner as provided for a search warrant, of a warrant authorizing the seizure of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system that—

"(A) exists by reason of conduct prohibited under section 175 of this title; or

"(B) is of a type or in a quantity that under the circumstances has no apparent justification for prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes.

"(2) In exigent circumstances, seizure and destruction of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) may be made upon probable cause without the necessity for a warrant.

"(b) PROCEDURE.—Property seized pursuant to subsection (a) shall be forfeited to the United States after notice to potential claimants and an opportunity for a hearing. At such hearing, the government shall bear the burden of persuasion by a preponderance of the evidence. Except as inconsistent herewith, the same procedures and provisions of law relating to a forfeiture under the customs laws shall extend to a seizure or forfeiture under this section. The Attorney General may provide for the destruction or other appropriate disposition of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system seized and forfeited pursuant to this section.

"(c) AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—It is an affirmative defense against a forefeiture under subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section that—

"(1) such biological agent, toxin, or delivery system is for a prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purpose; and

"(2) such biological agent, toxin, or delivery system, is of a type and quantity reasonable for that purpose.

§ 177. Injunctions

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The United States may obtain in a civil action an injunction against—

"(1) the conduct prohibited under section 175 of this title;

"(2) the preparation, solicitation, attempt, or conspiracy to engage in conduct prohibited under section 175 of this title; or

(3) the development, production, stockpiling, transferring, acquisition, retention, or possession, or the attempted development, production, stockpiling, transferring, acquisition, retention, or possession of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system of a type or in a quantity that under the circumstances has no apparent justification for prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes.

"(b) AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—It is an affirmative defense against an injunction under subsection (a)(3) of this section that—

"(1) the conduct sought to be enjoined is for a prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purpose; and

"(2) such biological agent, toxin, or delivery system is of a type and quantity reasonable for that purpose.

"§ 178. Definitions

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'biological agent' means any micro-organism, virus, or infectious substance, capable of causing—

"(A) death, disease, or other biological malfunction in a human, an animal, a plant, or another living organism;

"(B) deterioration of food, water, equipment, supplies, or material of any kind; or

"(C) deleterious alteration of the environment;

"(2) the term 'toxin' means, whatever its origin or method of production—

"(A) any poisonous substance produced by a living organism; or

"(B) any poisonous isomer, homolog, or derivative of such a substance;

"3) the term 'delivery system' means—

"(A) any apparatus, equipment, device, or means of delivery specifically designed to deliver or disseminate a biological agent, toxin, or vector; or

"(B) any vector; and

"(4) the term 'vector' means a living organism capable of carrying a biological agent or toxin to a host.".

(b) WIRE INTERCEPTION.—Section 2516(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding "section 175 (relating to biological weapons)," after "section 33 (relating to destruction of motor vehicles or motor vehicle facilities),'.

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 9 the following new item:

"10. Biological Weapons..... 175.".

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 237) was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on S. 993, the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on rollcalls 97, 98, and 99.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. CAMPBELL of California. Mr. Speaker, I was privileged to be invited to give testimony before the Semiconductor Industry Advisory Committee in my district. The relative decline of that industry is of great importance to our country, and especially to the citizens of my district, Silicon Valley in California. It was imperative that I participate in those hearings and in the better interest of my constituents that I did so, even though it required my missing votes on that day.

Had I been present, I would have voted against approving the House Journal of May 7—Rollcall No. 97; in favor of H.R. 4522, to improve the information available to emergency response personnel in the field—Rollcall No. 98; and in favor of H.R. 237, to prohibit the development or possession of biological weapons—Rollcall No. 99. As the latter two votes were unanimous, and the first vote procedural only, I believe I made the right choice in staying in my district on May 8.

Thank you for the opportunity to clarify my voting record.

NATIONAL DIGESTIVE DISEASE AWARENESS MONTH

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 453) designating May 1990 as "National Digestive Disease Awareness Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I certainly do support this effort, but I have retained this reservation of objection to yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in strong support of House Joint Resolution 453 designating May 1990, as "National Digestive Disease Awareness Month" and commend the gentleman from California [Mr. ROYBAL] who is the chief sponsor of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, chronic digestive diseases constitutes one of our Nation's most serious health problem, effecting over 20 million Americans. More than 14 million cases of active digestive diseases are treated each year, and more Americans are hospitalized with digestive ailments than any other type of disease. Expenditures on digestive diseases in the United States, alone, are over $17 billion annually and rank third in total economic cost in our Nation.

This resolution will serve to raise public awareness to recognize prevention and treatment of diseases to the digestive system as a major health priority. We may be reminded on this occasion of our late, most distinguished colleagues, Claude Pepper, originator of this commemorative dedicated to educating Americans of the devastating effects of digestive diseases, who ironcially succumbed to colon cancer. In his legacy, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to commend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER], the chairman of our subcommittee, as well as the ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE], for their guidance in bringing this measure to the floor.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from New York for recognizing the work of the gentleman from California [Mr. ROYBAL], who is the chief sponsor, as well as his predecessor as chairman of the Select Committee on Aging, Senator Pepper. This was an important measure to him and continues to be to the gentleman from California [Mr. ROYBAL] and all of the Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES 453

Whereas digestive diseases rank third among illnesses in total economic cost in the United States;

Whereas digestive diseases represent one of the Nation's most serious health problems in terms of discomfort and pain, personal expenditures for treatment, working hours lost, and mortality;

Whereas twenty million Americans suffer from chronic digestive diseases;

Whereas more than fourteen million cases of acute digestive diseases are treated in this country each year, including one-third of all malignancies and some of the most common acute infections;

Whereas more Americans are hospitalized with digestive diseases than any other type of disease;

Whereas digestive diseases necessitate 25 per centum of all surgical operations;

Whereas digestive diseases are one of the most prevalent causes of disability in the work force;

Whereas in the United States, digestive diseases cause yearly expenditures of over $17,000,000,000 in direct health care costs and a total annual economic burden of nearly $50,000,000,000;

Whereas more than one hundred different digestive diseases, and other disorders of the gastrointestinal tract, each cause more than two hundred thousand deaths each year;

Whereas there has been interest on the part of the research community in the causes, cures, prevention, and clinical treatment of digestive diseases and related nutritional problems;

Whereas the people of the United States should recognize prevention and treatment of digestive diseases as a major health priority;

Whereas national organizations, such as the Digestive Disease National Coalition, are committed to increasing awareness and understanding of digestive diseases in the health care community and among members of the general public;

Whereas the National Institutes of Health, through the National Digestive Disease Information Clearinghouse and the National Digestive Diseases Advisory Board, is committed to encouraging and coordinating such educational efforts;

Whereas the National Digestive Disease Education Program is a coordinated effort to educate the public and the health care community on the seriousness of digestive diseases and to provide information relative to the treatment, prevention, and control of digestive diseases; and

Whereas May 1990 marks the eighth anniversary of the National Digestive Disease Education Program: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That May 1990 is designated as "National Digestive Disease Awareness Month", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon all government agencies and the people of the United States to observe such month with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on House Joint Resolution 453, the joint resolution just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

FAIR CONGRESSIONAL REDISTRICTING MUST BE ASSURED

(Mr. CLINGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous material.)

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, 2 years ago today the Washington Post printed a column by David Broder entitled "An Unchanging House" in which he argued that gerrymandering is a critical first step in insulating House Members from competition. As we prepare to debate proposals to restore fairness to the elections process, namely campaign finance reform, this column deserves our attention.

If we are genuinely committed to reforming the system, to reestablishing the preeminence of the voter in the American electoral process, then we cannot continue to allow Congressional district lines to be drawn with artistic flair. Modern art should be seen in museums, not on maps of Congressional districts.

Any reform package approved by this body must include guidelines which guarantee congressional districts are of equal population, compact and contiguous, and limit the needless subdivision of local government units.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we must keep an eye on the clock. With the 1990 census already underway, the redistricting issue cannot be separated from other reform issues with the vague hope that it will be taken up at some other time, for that would mean the year 2000.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the column by Mr. Broder.

[From the Washington Post, May 8, 1990]

AN UNCHANGING HOUSE

(By David S. Broder)

In the past dozen years, party control of the White House has changed twice, going from the muted conservatism of Jerry Ford to the muted liberalism of Jimmy Carter and back to the right with Ronald Reagan. Control of the Senate and its key committees has also turned over two times, with such dramatic effects as the Judiciary Committee chairmanship switching from Ted Kennedy to Strom Thurmond and back to Joe Biden.

In all of this period of upheaval in American government, a time when even the "changeless" Supreme Court welcomed a new chief justice and four new associate justices, the one constant has been the House of Representatives. It has remained steadily, reliably, irresistibly or (some would say) irredeemably Democratic for 34 years.

Whether George Bush or Michael Dukakis wins the White House in November, the expectation—indeed, the near certainty—is that the House will be little altered. The part of the federal government which the Founders intended to be most sensitive to shifts in political climate has instead become the most immune to change.

The numbers portrayed in the American Enterprise Institute-Congressional Quarterly volume, "Vital Statistics on Congress," are startling. In 1986, 393 House members sought reelection. Two were defeated in primaries; six in the November voting. That translates to a 98 percent success ratio—a virtual guarantee of tenure. The average swing between the parties has declined from 45 House seats per election in the first four elections of the postwar period to fewer than 20 seats in the last four.

At a briefing on 1988 House contests the other day, SEI's Norman Ornstein observed, "You really have to stretch to find 50 districts which are in contest in any year." One of his coauthors on "Vital Statistics," Thomas E. Mann of the Brookings Institution, pointed out: "In 1982, with unemployment the worst since the Great Depression, Democrats were able to gain only 24 seats, when you might have expected a shift double or triple that size. In 1984, when Ronald Reagan won a 49-state landslide, Republicans picked up only 14 seats. In 1986 the five-seat change in the House was smaller than the swing in the Senate," though only 34 Senate seats were at stake and (theoretically) all 435 House seats were up for grabs.

The effects of the "frozen" makeup of the House are manifold and mostly negative, as I'll show in a future column. What needs to be understood first is why the House elections have lost the competitive character that the Constitution assumed and a healthy governmental system requires.

The answer, simply, is the entrenchment of incumbents, most of whom happen to be Democrats. It starts with the drawing of district lines, where state legislators (again, mostly Democrats) insulate friends from competition while maximizing their partisan advantage. Once elected from these user-friendly districts, House members find the whole system operates to keep them in office as long as they wish. As David Mayhew, the Yale political scientist, has written, if Congress were designed "with the goal of serving members' re-election needs year in and year out, they would be hard-pressed to improve on what exists."

The modern congressional office is a highly efficient constituent-service agency. Its enormous resources are devoted to maintaining the proprietor in office—no matter what happens to his party in any given election.

"Vital Statistics" documents much of the change. In the postwar period, the number of House staff members has gone up almost six-fold. A steadily increasing number of them—almost half, now—work not in Washington but in the districts. There are members of the House with as many as five different permanent district-office locations. People in places like Sylva, N.C. (pop. 1,699), Kerman, Calif. (pop. 4,249) and Shalimar, Fla. (pop. 404) don't have to leave town to talk to someone on their representative's staff.

Each of these offices is, in effect, a local campaign headquarters. But today's House member has many other ways of reminding constituents of his presence. In 1954, 43.5 million mailings left the Capitol; in 1986, almost 759 million pieces—a 17-fold increase.

But the real inflation has come in what the House members spend on their campaigns. As recently as 1974, as rough parity existed between resources for challengers and incumbents. The average incumbent spent $56,000, the average challenger $40,000 that year. But by 1986, the gap was almost 3 to 1 in the incumbents' favor: $334,000 for the average House member, $124,000 for the typical challenger.

The gap will almost certainly grow again this year. In the first 15 months of the election cycle, through March 31, the Federal Election Commission reported last week, House incumbents raised more than $75 million, while their challengers collected only $10 million.

That's not competition; that's like a lifetime-guaranteed contract. It's no service to the country to take the House of Representatives out of competitive politics.

JEFFERSON MEMORIAL SPEECH BY MR. E.D. HIRSCH, JR.

(Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, not long ago I was at Monticello near Charlottesville, VA, for a small ceremony. At the ceremony Mr. E.D. Hirsch, Jr., delivered a brief speech that I thought was excellent. I believe it would be appropriate and useful to share with my colleagues and readers of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the remarks Mr. Hirsch delivered:

JEFFERSON MEMORIAL SPEECH—JEFFERSON'S GRAVESIDE, MONTICELLO

(By E.D. Hirsch, Jr.)

Ladies and Gentlemen: I cannot think of any person in history that I would more desire to honor than Jefferson. And I cannot imagine an honor that I shall treasure more than the invitation to discuss Jefferson's ideas about education here at Monticello, at his grave, and on the anniversary of his birth. I am grateful to the Trustees of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation for inviting me to address this uniquely Jeffersonian subject which once again seems so momentous for the well-being of our country.

I am doubly grateful, because the prospect of this occasion has led me to range more widely in Jefferson's writings than I had before. To read his amazing letters has been a bracing, even a thrilling experience. During the past few weeks, Jefferson has instructed me in such matters as the moral doctrines of Epicurus, which, he argues with great persuasiveness, were highly misrepresented by the Stoics, and even by Cicero, and he helpfully provides an analysis of Epicurus's moral principles that he had made some years before. That analysis was, he says "the work of two or three nights only, at Washington, after getting through the evening task or reading the letters and papers of the day."

Can you picture the scene? President Jefferson, having disposed of affairs of state, having sent cabinet members and ambassadors off to bed, and composed letters and signed documents, turns his restless mind to the foundational principles of morality and the scholarly disputes surrounding them. I will not ask you to imagine any recent president engaged in such after-hours diversions. It is unfair even to allude to such a fantasy, since no other president in our history combined so much learning and acumen with so much intellectual energy and moral passion.

But I find a poignancy in this occasion. Free public schooling for all was one of Jefferson's dearest political aims, yet it was not an achievement that he was able to memorialize upon his tomb. In case you do not see the writing from where you are, and in case you do not remember the epitaph he composed, it reads: "Author of the Declaration of Independence; of the Statute for Religious Liberty in Virginia, and Founder of the University of Virginia." He allows us no doubt that if he had succeeded in putting through his education bill "for the More General Diffusion of Knowledge," he would have listed four, rather than three, achievements on his tombstone. But here we find no proud mention of his authorship of that bill. As finally enacted, the bill was in his eyes so watered-down as to be useless. It left up to each district court (dominated of course by the wealthy) the decision whether the rich would pay for the schooling of the poor—an option in the law which Jefferson correctly saw as equivalent to having no law at all.

No mention, then, on this stone of his authorship of the Virginia bill for the more general diffusion of knowledge. The failure of its key component—universal free schooling—was one of the bitterest disappointments of his political life. And it is fair to say that the educational arrangements that Jefferson envisioned have never been truly realized in our nation.

Lest you feel that I exaggerate the importance Jefferson attached to his statute, or that I wrongly place it on the same footing with the three accomplishments he memorializes in his epitaph, let me read from a letter he wrote to George Wythe from Paris in 1786, three years before the fall of the Bastille.

"I think by far the most important bill in our whole code is that for the diffusion of knowledge among the people. No other sure foundation can be devised for the preservation of freedom and happiness. If anybody thinks that kings, nobles or priests are good conservators of the public happiness, send him here [that is, to Paris]. It is the best school in the universe to cure him of that folly. . . . Preach my dear Sir a crusade against ignorance; establish and improve the law for educating the common people. Let our countrymen know that the people alone can protect us against these evils, and that the tax which will be paid for this purpose is not more than the thousandth part of what will be paid to kings, priests, and nobles who will rise up among us if we leave the people in ignorance."

In 1813, almost 30 years after writing those words, he praised in a letter to John Adams several Virginia abolishing primogeniture and other pseudo-aristocratic principles, and went on to say:

"These laws, drawn by myself, laid the axe to the root of pseudo-aristocracy. And had another which I had prepared been adopted by the legislature, our work would have been complete. It was a bill for the general diffusion of learning, . . . to establish in each ward a free school for reading, writing, and common arithmetic. . . . The law for religious freedom . . . having put down the aristocracy of the clergy . . . this on Education would have raised the mass of people to the high ground of moral respectability necessary to their own safety, and to orderly government. . . . Altho this law has not yet been acted on but in a small and inefficient degree, it is still considered as before the legislature. . . . I have great hope that some patriotic spirit will at a favorable moment call it up and make it the key-stone of the arch of our government."

The great scandal of American education today is not that our 14-year-olds score last among the developed nations in science, geography, and mathematics; that is an embarrassment and a hindrance to our well-being. The scandal of our public education is its perpetuation of the social injustice that Jefferson deplored: namely that our educational system unjustly favors the rich over the poor, and thus perpetuates the pseudo-aristocracy of money and birth over the true aristocracy of character and talent that he saw as the foundation of a durable and just republic.

Jefferson would have been delighted to know that 97 per cent of our children now finish seventh grade. But he would be amazed to learn that 20 per cent of our adults are nonetheless considered to be functionally illiterate. If he were to ask from the grave, "How can anyone be functionally illiterate who has finished seventh grade?" how could we explain the anomaly to him? How can we explain it to ourselves? Today, we do have universal free education; Jefferson's bill finally has been enacted. Yet still it is mainly the children of the educated who are fully enabled to read and learn in school, while it is still the children of the illiterate who remain untransformed by education, and who go on to become adult illiterates.

To explain this puzzle we must turn from Jefferson's concern with educational laws to the realities of the schools themselves. No longer conceived as agencies for "the more general diffusion of learning," our schools consider themselves instruments for the imparting of skills. Since the 1940s it has been believed (and still is in many American colleges of education) that school should be a place where children learn how to learn. The term of approval has been the term "process." The proposed strategy has been to inculcate skills by whatever materials are engaging and interesting to children.

If this "process" theory had worked, we should wish to follow it as being both pleasant and motivational. But, in fact, from the moment our schools ceased being agencies for the diffusion of learning and became agencies for the training of skills, the children who have been injured most have been the least advantaged. Children of the educated classes still receive much of the information they need from their homes, but those who must imbibe such knowledge only from the schools have been starved and humiliated by a mistaken, anti-Jeffersonian theory.

If we do not openly reproach our schools with full responsibility for widespread adult illiteracy, it may be because we have misunderstood the concept of literacy in the modern world. Literacy is often conceived as an ability to sound out words and compose writing with reasonable correctness—goals that our schools do achieve. But that narrow view of literacy is as unJeffersonian as it is mistaken. The purely mechanical tools of reading and writing are worthless unless they serve complex learning and communication, both of which require the diffusion of knowledge. Knowledge builds upon knowledge. The more you know, the more you can learn. The more lierate a person is, the more apt a learner he or she will be.

Our diluted curriculum is especially unfair to rural and minority students, and to all students who must learn about the wider world mainly in school. Even advantaged children are hindered by a lack of basic contextual knowledge, but the handicap is especially severe for children who have little access to literate information outside of school. The goal of "learning to learn" can only be attained through the general diffusion of knowledge that Jefferson desired—the very goal that most public schools have rejected in favor of the "process" approach. The skills of learning to learn can only be gained through the kind of knowledge-based curriculum that Jefferson envisioned.

A few weeks ago there took place in Charlottesville a conference of educational reformers from some twenty states who hammered out an agreement about a core of knowledge that all children across the land should acquire, year-by-year during the first six grades of schooling. Pilot programs for this knowledge-based curriculum are being planned in some of the nation's largest school districts. Participants in the conference thought it fitting that this particular reform should emanate from Jefferson's home town. If this plan for the diffusion of knowledge in the early grades does begin a sea change in our public education, it will mark true progress towards the ideals that Jefferson envisioned. We may still achieve those Jeffersonian goals if we persist, as persist we shall, if only we are able to catch the contagion of that great man's inextinguishable hopefulness.

DIRTY WORDS, AMERICA'S FOUL-MOUTH POP CULTURE

(Mr. DORNAN of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, many times I have come to this well to talk about the corruption of the public marketplace and the decline of our society from within.

On the cover of last week's Time magazine, dated May 7, 1990, it says "Dirty Words, America's Foul-Mouth Pop Culture."

I read this article on an airplane.

The article epitomizes the liberal philosophy. The application of liberal philosophy, supported by the ACLU, has brought music, television, motion pictures, comedy, to the lowest gutter level imaginable. It has reached the point where the disgusting debauchery of the English language is promoted and the corruption of our public marketplace in front of our children is commonplace.

Time did a nice job documenting this decline, but I disagree with the summation, which says that we in Government should not be the high school hall monitors.

I am going to send this article to every single Member of the House in a dear colleague letter. And if you do not find anything wrong with this, you do not belong in the Congress of the United States of America.

The article referred to follows:

X-RATED

(By Richard Corliss)

He struts onstage, and 17,000 New Yorkers start to cheer. Andrew Dice Clay tells jokes for a living—dirty jokes, stag-party jokes, jokes designed to singe a churchgoer's soul and turn a feminist's stomach—but he attracts crowds whose size and ardor would thrill a rock star. In sold-out Madison Square Garden, he looks like a samurai biker, with Brando's pout, Elvis' sideburns and a sequined jacket, it's back stitched with the phrase DICE RULES. And he does too. He is America's rajah of comic raunch, ready to beguile fans who dress like him and talk like him and who have memorized his earlier routines from hit records and HBO specials. "I know you know the old s——," he slurs between drags of a cigarette. "But it's a new decade, and I got new filth for ya." And he does too. Again the crowd roars.

So are the '90s destined to be the Filth Decade? What has happened to comedy, not to mention the English language, if a scoundrel like Clay can twist these fine old instruments to touch minds and make a mint? Clay may be at the rough edge of popular entertainment, but he stands there proud as well as profane, and he does not stand alone.

There's an acrid tang in nearly every area of modern American pop culture. Heavy-metal masters Motley Crue invoke images of satanism and the Beastie Boys mime masturbation onstage. Rap poets like N.W.A. and the 2 Live Crew call for the fire of war against police or the brimstone of explicit, sulfurous sex. Comedians like Sam Kinison and Howard Stern bring locker-room laughs to cable TV and morning radio. On network television, sitcom moms get snickers with innuendos about oral sex. In movies, the F word has become so common, like dirty wallpaper, the industry's conservative ratings board doesn't even bother to punish the occasional use of it with a restrictive R rating.

Words and ideas formerly on the extremes have engulfed the cultural mainstream. But have they polluted it? Many people think so. The moral right wing surely does, and it has friends in powerful places. Senator Jesse Helms fights to force artists to forswear any unwholesome intentions before receiving Government support. Alfred Sikes, the new chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, leans on radio disk jockeys to clean up their acts. No less than the FBI sends a warning letter to a rap group. Susan Baker (wife of the Secretary of State) and Tipper Gore (wife of the Tennessee Senator), founders of the Parents' Music Resource Center, lobby for proscriptive labeling of certain albums. John Cardinal O'Connor, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York, inveighs against an Ozzy Osbourne song whose theme is suicide.

Stranded in the middle are the majority of Americans. They wonder at the effluence of raw language and worry about its impact on old-fashioned notions of civilized discourse. Is there room for subtlety and gentility in a culture overrun by expressions of gross intolerance? And what impact will this culture have on the first generation to grow up within it? Does this stuff have artistic merit? Is it tonic or toxic? Can we dance to it or comfortably laugh at it? Should we march against it or just sit back and enjoy it?

The understandable response would be to ignore the whole thing. But ignorance is not an option. The clash, however angry and ominous, is not just the usual dustup between raucous young stars and the professional squares who oppose them. It's not just about dirty words and bad attitude. The battle over pop raunch reflects a crucial fissure in American social and political culture that was born a long generation ago and came of age in the Reagan-Bush era.

On its face—and as cued by the smiling faces of its Presidents—the U.S. has breezed through a feel-good decade of peace and prosperity. The official culture is breezy too. A look at our most popular movies and TV shows suggests we are a nation of superheroes and pretty women, of Cosby kids and caring, thirtysomething L.A. lawyers. We make funny home videos and vacation in Disney World. And, at our peril, we let the rest of the real, dirty world go by.

Too often official America seems willing to let the rest of its own society go by too. It pretends the tabloid atrocities on TV news shows are aberrations. It either closes its eyes to the human street litter—the homeless, the junkies, the insane—or blames them for not getting with the program of self-help economics. It largely ignores the ghetto, where the black underclass has built its own furious culture on the slag heap of Great Society failures. It discounts much of the young white working class, in tattered towns and trailer parks, who feel left out of bland sitcom America.

The makers of the new pop do not ignore this rage. They embrace, exploit and transform it. As the California rap group N.W.A. announces at the start of its album Straight Outta Compton: "You are now about to witness the strength of street knowledge." What they know from the street may not be what the heartland wants to hear. The message may be cleansing or hateful; the lyrics and limericks may expand or debase the language. And if X-rated pop adheres to writer Theodore Sturgeon's useful rule that "90% of everything is crud," most of it may be awful—just dirty, not funny or erotic. But even at its grossest, the form is a vital expression of the resentments felt by a lot of people. Get used to it, America: we live in a four-letter world.

The evidence is especially strong in two areas:

POP MUSIC

"There's no message to heavy metal," says Penelope Spheeris, director of a documentary on the music. "It's about being rich and famous and getting laid." Nonetheless, metal has taken heat for a decade, with its electrified invitations to head banging and hell raising. Now other groups are taking the flak. Example: Guns N' Roses, the talented but loutish rockers whose album Appetite for Destruction has sold almost 9 million copies. Their song One in a Million says, "Police and niggers, that's right, get outta my way./Don't need to buy none of your gold claims today . . ./Immigrants and faggots, they make no sense to me./They come to our country and think they'll do as they please./Like start some mini-Iran, or spread some f—— disease./They talk so many goddam ways, it's all Greek to me."

Gore of P.M.R.C., which is in favor of labeling but not censorship, talks of 14 million children "at risk" and in need of counseling thanks to the "graphic brutality marketed to these kids through music and television." Lawmakers in 19 states went further; they considered proposing warning labels for any song dealing with such topics as drugs, incest, murder and suicide, which would conceivably outlaw depraved works like I Get a Kick Out of You, Die Walküre, Frankie and Johnny and Tosca. The music industry quickly forestalled such legislation by decreeing that record companies will decide which material is controversial and alert consumers with a label that reads PARENTAL ADVISORY: EXPLICIT LYRICS.

Whatever heavy metal can do to provoke censure, rap can outdo. Whereas metal is mostly suggestive, this urban-black music is often politically or sexually explicit. N.W.A. (Niggers With Attitude) won an admonishing letter from the FBI for their song F—— Tha Police, in which the singer warns the ghetto's occupying force: "Ice Cube will swarm/On any m—— f—— in a blue uniform . . ./A young nigger on the warpath,/And when I finish it's gonna be a bloodbath." Another group, Public Enemy, has been charged with anti-Semitism in their lyrics and statements to the press. But their songs are also critical of blacks who reject their roots, of the brothers and sisters too busy partying to see the problem. P.E.'s new album, Fear of a Black Planet, qualifies as dance music that is dense music: soul with a vengeance and the most challenging street art that rap has to offer.

COMEDY

Stand-up comedy, once relegated to nightclubs and TV variety shows, is now big business. Its practitioners work comedy clubs, the concert circuit and cable TV, where their material is available to children. One way to get attention, to appear hip, to make a provocative point or just to give a joke some taboo oomph, is to talk dirty. Plenty of comics don't; the most popular TV comedian of the '80s is clean (and funny) Jay Leno. But plenty do. Just watch them on HBO or Showtime. Sam Kinison, a kind of defrocked evangelist of red-neck rage (and also, in spurts funny), provoked the condemnation of gay spokesmen with his jokes about AIDS. On his new album, Leader of the Banned, Kinison declares that his motto is "family entertainment," then proceeds to put the knock on gays, Dr. Ruth, Jerry Lewis' "kids" and the worldwide female dictatorship. Family entertainment? Right: the Manson family.

Even on radio, where the most common four-letter vulgarisms are verboten, a host of popular "shock jocks" consider giving offense is Job One. Their humor is guy talk, kid division. The victims of their gags are familiar from the schoolyard: racial and sexual minorities, scheming females, body parts and bodily functions. A few years back, a D.C. radio host was censured for observing, on Martin Luther King Day, that "killing four more" would get Americans the rest of the week off.

Jokes like these gave the FCC an excuse to muscle and perhaps muzzle the shock jocks, notably New York City's morning maven Howard Stern. Was Stern hurt by this notoriety? Not at all: his show is now aired also in Philadelphia and Washington. Turn him on, and odds are you can't gulp down your morning coffee before you hear him say "penis." Last year, in the guise of his comic superhero Fartman, he placed a call to Iran and mercilessly berated the poor Shi'ite who picked up the phone. Fans of shock-jock jokery highly prize this rude dude. Trouble is, anyone scanning the radio dial can accidentally alight on his malice. You can't put a lockbox on a radio.

Or on Andrew Dice Clay's mouth. A few years ago, Clay was playing small clubs and working as a supporting actor. Now he is poised between stand-up and stardom. He is top-lining in two summer movies, one a comedy concert film, the other a detective spoof called The Adventures of Ford Fairlane. With his suave prole looks and his studded, studied cock-of-the-Brooklyn-walk demeanor, Clay wears the aura of danger that Hollywood wants in a movie star. So maybe he'll be one. That still leaves doubts about his popular appeal.

In Clay's comedy, woman is only a sexual convenience, a sentimental slag, a "dishrag hoo-er." For him, all romantic encounters hover between mechanical sex and date rape. "So I say to the bitch, 'Lose the bra—or I'll cut ya.' Is that a wrong attitude?" The obvious answer is yes. Nearly everything he says is wildly heinous. Clay knows this, and so do his fans; their laughter is a release at hearing forbidden thought twisted into jokes. Says Leonard R.N. Ashley, an English professor at Brooklyn College: "Because the seven dirty words are in now common usage, there are different standards. The new pornography is violence, often sexual violence. And the new obscenity is race. For most people, it's O.K. to call someone a bastard but not a nigger or a kike. But Clay is saying the taboo words we don't dare use. That's why he's popular. He's telling the secrets we keep inside us."

Clay spills his latest secrets on a double comedy album, The Day the Laughter Died, which, the warning label advises us, "contains filthy language and not jokes!!!" Talk about truth in advertising: in 100 minutes of banter there are not a half a dozen good dirty jokes. Yet some of the loudest laughter comes from women. Good sports at their own immolation, they giggle and groan along with their beaux. Perhaps proving they are tough is as important to them as it is to men. Others have found the spectable less edifying. One woman at Madison Square Garden listened to Clay's sluice of abuse and said she felt like a Jew at the 1934 Nuremberg rally. Remember, she said, when pop culture was not naughty but nice?

Once there was a single official pop culture: white, middle-class, mid-cult, status quo. Pretty much everybody hummed the same tunes, saw the same movies, laughed at the same genteel jokes. That changed in the '50s with rock 'n' roll. The new music took rhythm, danger and sexuality from the underground black culture, cranked the volume up, electrified it and handed it to a brand new consumer group: white teenagers. The young connoisseurs of metal and raunch are similarly adrift from the entertainment that amuses or moves today's adults.

So the mainstream is now two streams: one traditional and tranquil, the other torrential and caustic. To kids, the old culture looks hopelessly square, sounds like Muzak, tastes like cardboard. To parents, even those who grew up with Little Richard and Louie Louie, the new culture offers cause for alarm. Besides, how can they monitor what their kids are listening to without having to hear it themselves? "The price we pay for freedom of expression is that some things will be considered vile by some people," says Danny Goldberg, a manager of rock acts and chairman of the A.C.L.U. Foundation of Southern California. "But what's vile to a Mormon family in Utah is not vile to a black family in South Central Los Angeles."

The debate keeps coming back to language and race. Just as rhythm and blues helped create '50s rock 'n' roll, so does black slang contribute to the linguistic pungency of today's pop culture. As Brooklyn College's Ashley notes, "In the early years of the century, the tastemakers of our language were the English and Irish. Now taste is being defined by different groups. When times get tough for many people, they seek some outlet to give them a sense of freedom. This time, the rebellion is coming out in language." White soldiers in Vietnam picked up blacks' raw vocabulary, in which "m——f——" is routinely used as abuse or endearment, for emphasis or just filler. Richard Pryor proved that black anger and slang could find a large audience. Eddie Murphy, the top movie star of the '80s, turned the anguish into preening. In his concert film Raw and his period comedy Harlem Nights, Murphy had nothing new to say, so he said it dirty. It was raunch with no reason.

"They're trying to shock my generation," filmmaker John Waters says of the new crew, "by doing what we did to try to shock our parents' generation." Waters, who made his early rep with the scandalous comedy Pink Flamingos, makes a distinction between "good bad taste and bad bad taste. Good bad taste is always fueled by rage and anger with humor thrown in. Bad bad taste is fueled by stupidity and ignorance, and it comes out as anger." This is precisely what turns some liberal parents off about the new culture: not the language but the sneering attitude. Liberals are tolerant of everything but intolerance.

Whatever they do, they are unlikely to stop the spiral of taste from class to crass. For the history of 20th century art is the history of a flight from middle-class gentility. Two flights, really, in opposite directions, but from the same despised point of departure. High art moved toward abstraction and fragmentation and settled in the museums and concert halls. Popular art went the other way; it frolicked in the profane and did so on records and movie screens. High culture confused the middle class; pop culture shocked it. One culture was created by the intelligentsia, the other by the underclass, but both groups had the same goal: épater la bourgeoisie, which loosely translates as "gross out your parents." Your mamma can't dig modern dance, and your daddy can't rock 'n' roll. The movements were not so much revolutionary as rebellious. They proved their value and hipness by excluding the largest group of consumers; the middle-aged middle class.

And they created a huge new multi-billion-dollar market—of kids and the underclass—to buy their product. Parents and other guardians of tradition are as concerned about the audience for X-rated pop as they are about the perpetrators. If pop weren't popular, fewer people would worry about its impact. No one has mounted a campaign against Randy Newman's songs about racial and sexual bigotry, for example, because Newman's audience is relatively small and well educated. The artful photographs of Robert Mapplethorpe, some to which depict homosexual acts and sadomachochism, took a while to raise legal hackles because, after all, they were displayed in museums, where nice people have always looked at pictures of naked people.

"There's a tired old distinction that bright people will not be corrupted, but that the working classes will," says Clive Barker, the English horror writer whose books have never been banned but whose films must be trimmed to get a R rating. "Therefore, television must be scrutinized more vigorously than pop music, pop music more than pop movies, pop movies more than art-house movies. Books needn't be watched at all. If people are reading, after all, they must be bright and won't be affected by all this stuff."

Maybe so, but even booksellers have come under fire. For months, the Rev. Donald Wildmon's American Family Association, based in Tupelo, Miss., has campaignd to get stores to remove Playboy, Penthouse and similar magazines from their shelves. Last week the 1,300-store Waldenbooks chain, the nation's largest, launched a counterattack in the form of full-page ads in 32 U.S. newspapers, denouncing "censorship efforts" and "an increasing pattern of intolerance."

Books were hot stuff 30 years ago, when Lady Chatterley's Lover and Tropic of Cancer broke censorship barriers and hit the best-seller lists. At the same time, Lenny Bruce set the four-letter standard for comics, and the '70s Pryor and George Carlin brought it to the masses, where it belonged, Midnight Cowboy, which won an Oscar for best picture of 1969, was rated X, and so were other lauded films, such as Medium Cool, Performance and The Devils. Explicit lyrics have been in the pop mainstream since the late '60's; the Jefferson Airplane sang "Up against the wall, m————f————s," and they sang it on The Dick Cavett Show.

There are differences worth noting. Raw culture of the '60's was a political response to a system seen by many artists as repressive and, in Vietnam, genocidal. They championed the underdog by kicking the top dog. And for the first time, thanks to Supreme Court decisions liberalizing the definition of obscenity, performers were able to use whatever words they chose. Bruce, the gifted, tortured pioneer of this mode, aptly titled his autobiography How to Talk Dirty and Influence People. In the book's foreword, critic Kenneth Tynan praised Bruce as "an impromptu prose, poet who trusted his audience so completely that he could talk in public no less outspokenly than he would talk in private," But Bruce suffered for that trust. His scabrous truth telling got him arrested in the U.S. and evicted from Britain. He died in 1966, perhaps the last American performer for whom notoriety was not a career move.

Lenny Bruce's triumph was posthumous, and maybe Pyrrhic: because of him, Andrew Dice Clay can make millions reciting dirty nursey rhymes in public. Clay and the other new raunch artists, most of them, are only incidentally subversive. They don't believe for a moment, most of them, what they're saying. Metal musicians are no serious Satanists; their concerts are just theater pieces—Cats with a nasty yowl. Clay is not the pathetic strutting stud he seems onstage; that's just a character (Was Jack Benny really stingy? Is Pee-wee Herman really a goony child?) Bruce said what he thought; Clay says what his character thinks. So Clay and other entertainers on the edge are playing out fantasies—their own and their audience's—of the baddest boy in school, of the kid your parent prayed to God you would never become.

In the wonderfully gross, fiercely moralistic movie Heathers, a nasty teen queen is asked, "Why are you such a megabitch?" Her answer: "Because I can be." Because of freedom of expression, comics and musicians can now be as nasty as they wanna be. And nasty is the word. In the erotic masterpieces of literature, sex was an expression of pleasure, and often of love, between equals. Today's sex talk, from Kinison and Clay and the 2 Live Crew, is almost exclusively from the male-pig viewpoint. A woman's role, their line goes, is only to serve and service a man.

The new comics' barbs at minorities are just as rank and rankling. But there is nothing novel about immigrant baiting in America. It flourished a century ago—when humor directed at Irish, Italian, Polish and Jewish newcomers was a music-hall staple—and continued unabated in Hollywood's racially derisive treatment of blacks. The reason then was the same as it is today: people felt threatened by the outsiders and so made fun of them. In the new version, a rauch artist taps into the grudge a white working-class male may hold against the beneficiaries of affirmative action and liberal sympathy: minorities, the handicapped, gays. They get all the breaks, he figures; now what about me? His counterattack is to bad-mouth them with paranoid intensity. And that's where the sick threat and thrill come in.

But is this thrill a threat to the public weal? Since the traumas of the Kennedy assassination and Vietnam, many Americans have gradually closed off their minds to the nature of atrocity. They cope with the world's horror by numbing themselves to pain. They can shed tears over cute-tender stories of stranded whales or a baby in a well, but all too often everything else—from a politician's promise to the Chernobyl disaster—is so much show biz, ironized with shrugs and sick jokes. Today's children were bred in this atmosphere. With many of their parents past caring, how can the kids not be past shock?

Lisette, 13, a seventh-grade in Mamaroneck, N.Y. loves heavy metal and doesn't understand what all the fuss is about. Read her the lyrics to One in a million, and she shurgs, "It's just a song." She loves Motley Crüe's You're All I Need, but "sometimes it's hard to understand the word because of the beat. And that's what I like about heavy metal bands. Besides, they're gorgeous! A lot of adults don't like them because when they're married and settled down, they don't think about having action or talking dirty. But teenagers do because of this sexual peak. If songs have curses in them, they're not going to bother kids. Everyone knows swear words by the third grade. My advice to parents is to let your kid grow up and do what they want to do." What burns Lisette is the idea that her music should be censored."I wouldn't ban classical music," she says magnanimously.

Talk to a lot of kids Lisette's age; few will say they are harmed by rock. And few are, according to a study commissioned by the Carnegie Council on Adolescent Development. Children do spend hours each day with music. But most prefer mainstream music, and whatever style they listen to, few are tempted by the siren call to excess. "Kids take it in stride," says Stanford University's Donald F. Roberts, who helped conduct the research. The survey should reassure parents that somehow their child will survive pop culture about as successfully as they did.

Perhaps today's youth is unshockable. And perhaps that fact should be shocking. "One of the things we all seek," says Clive Barker, "is the visionary experiences we had as children. We seem to have forgotten that those experiences are not soft and gentle, but often harsh and intense." For several American generations, a child's first entertainment experience was a Disney cartoon, with its wrenching traumas of betrayal, abandonment, a mother's death. An animated film could thrill a child to pieces or scare him near to death. And it introduced him to the beautiful and frightening banquet of popular culture.

That has always been the role of art: to shock, not just to ratify the prejudices of the generation in power. And no jolt is greater than the shock of the new. Original styles almost always look crude and excessive: Picasso's in painting ("My three-year-old could draw better!"), Brando's in acting ("He's got marbles in his mouth!"), Elvis' in music ("Photograph him from the waist up!"), Bruce's in comedy ("Book him!"). In their first outrageousness, these artists seemed to signal the end of the world; instead, they were heralding a new one. "A creator is not in advance of his generation," said Gertrude Stein, "but he is the first of his contemporaries to be conscious of what is happening to his generation." Like them or not, today's blue comics and shock rockers know what is happening to this generation and are speaking to it. That is why they are popular.

And that is why, by any close reading of the law, X-rated pop deserves its First Amendment cloak. No one can predict whether, in a cool retrospective glance a decade or so from now, today's raunch will give evidence of artistic value. Odds are that, as in any group portrait, the members of the blue brigade will soon emerge as individuals, some gifted, some not. But because it speaks from the gut of disenfranchised America, and because it has raised the crucial issue of freedom of expression vs. public propriety, the form already has political value. And clearly, because of its popularity, it does not offend "contemporary community standards": a lot of the community is laughing and singing along.

Other Americans are outside picketing, agitating and getting agitated. That is, last time anyone checked, still the American way. You may despise the work of Clay or Mapplethorpe, Crüe or the Crew, and still embrace the concept of an America that allows them to find or lose an audience. They have the right to offend; you have the right to be offended.

You can be excited by their work and still care about the future of children. You can mourn the fact that the end of innocence now arrives at about the age of reason—that toxic pop culture, not just from entertainment but from school and home, from the news and the street, reaches young children. If you are a parent, you can take responsibility for steering them toward maturity. It's your job and nobody else's.

After that, you're on your own. Entertainers shouldn't have to act as baby-sitters or Sunday school teachers. And the government should quit playing hall monitor to blue comics, mental defectives, rap randies—and the real artists among them who, through subtlety or obscenity, will help us navigate our trip into the 21st century.

X-METAL

Rock 'n' roll was born an outlaw. With heavy metal, it grew up to be outlandish. Concerts given by Motley Crüe, a longtime metal favorite from Los Angeles, play like big-budget Halloween parties: spooky stories in rhyme, about sex and death, illustrated with Grand Guignol tableaux.

Some of the Crüe's songs possess a certain lumpen poetry. From Wild Side: "I carry my crucifix/ Under my deathlist./ Forward my mail to me in hell." This is the sort of thing that might be written by that cool-creepy high school kid who reads a lot of Poe and William Burroughs. It's forthright exaggeration, often with a wicked grin, as in the Crüe's top-of-the-charts ballad You're All I Need, about a man in a padded cell reminiscing about his late girlfriend: "Laid out cold./ Now we're both alone./ But killing you helped me keep you home." Is there anyone out there besides Tipper Gore who doesn't see that it's a joke?

Metal musicians promote themselves as the beyond-bad boys of rock, and they make good on the promise. These guys are performers, and their audiences get revved up on the lurid theatricality. That same zest for overstatement may explain the puppy lust that metal's young fans lavish on their heroes. Some years back, a San Antonio radio station offered free concert tickets for the best reply to the question "What would you do to meet the Crüe?" A 16-year-old girl provided an elaborate sadomasochistic scenario. A boy, 14, said he would give the band his mother. A 13-year-old girl wrote, "I'd leave my tits to Motley Crüe." Hey—bring back Menudo.

X-MOVIES

It used to be the director's job to yell "Cut!" Now it is the movie censor's. The ratings board of the Motion Picture Association of America, which routinely awards R ratings to rancid slasher movies and airheaded teen sex comedies, has recently slapped X ratings on three serious, accomplished films: John McNaughton's Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer, Peter Greenaway's The Cook the Thief His Wife & Her Lover and, last week, Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down! from the lauded Spanish auteur Pedro Almodóvar. Since an X rating means that fewer theaters will play the film and fewer newspapers advertise it, distributors for Henry and The Cook the Thief have chosen to release the works unrated. Almodóvar, whose new film features an urgent but tender three-minute scene of lovemaking, has decided to do the same.

Some critics have proposed a new rating. "A," to designate adult films that deal with violent or erotic themes but do not contain the explicit sex of pornographic films. The A would put films off-limits to those 17 and under; the current R rating allows that age group to attend only in an adult's company. M.P.A.A. president Jack Valenti is opposed to the new rating: "I do not think that mortal man or woman can make the distinction between what is a serious film featuring incest, cannibalism, bestiality, sadomasochism, necrophilia or undisguised sex, and what is not."

Hollywood used to be accused of making movies for twelve-year-olds. If Valenti prevails, it will keep making films that its censors deem acceptable for 17-year-olds.

X-RAPPERS

Rap music is ghetto machismo you can dance to. If the singer isn't picking a fight with imaginary police, he's coming on like a bulldozer to any girl in the neighborhood. The reductio ad obscenitatem of this attitude can be found in the lyrics of the Miami quartet the 2 Live Crew. They are numbingly, impossibly blunt—or not so blunt, depending on which Crew you listen to. The group released a sanitized version of their double album As Nasty As They Wanna Be called As Nice As They Wanna Be; predictably, the hard copy has outsold the soft, 1.3 million to 400,000. The titles of some Nasty cuts (Dick Almighty, Bad Ass Bitch, Me So Horny) give only a hint of the songs' grossness. The posture is one of menacing studhood that expects every woman to lie down and submit in silence.

Florida Governor Bob Martinez has denounced the group's lyrics and asked a prosecutor to investigate. After a Sarasota record dealer sold Nasty to an eleven-year-old girl, a state circuit court declared the album obscene and banned all sales—the first such ruling against a musical group in the U.S. Two weeks ago, the Crew was threatened with arrest if they performed their Nasty lyrics in Gainesville, but they appeared anyway, and no action was taken. Luther (Luke Skywalker) Campbell, the group's leader, at first enjoyed the notoriety, but now he's angry. He was one of the first to have a cover warning. "And I'm the only one who makes a clean version."

Take the 2 Live Crew's songs as street talk, piled thick and spat out. Just be grateful if it's not the street where you live.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI] is recognized for 5 minutes.

[Mr. LIPINSKI addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

THE HISPANIC COMMUNITY AFFAIRS COUNCIL AWARDS 30 SCHOLARSHIPS THIS YEAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. STARK] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend the Hispanic Community Affairs

Council of Alameda County [HCAC] on their contribution to Hispanic students of Alameda County in California's Ninth Congressional District. HCAC is an organization dedicated to assisting Hispanic students obtain a college education in order to prepare them for future positions as leaders and skilled professionals. They award scholarships to qualified Hispanic students in Alameda County who are planning to enter a college or university in the fall of 1990.

HCAC's motto continues to be "Education Creates Opportunity" and their goal is to assist as many students as possible achieve their potential. This year alone, HCAC has received 104 scholarship applications and they plan to award at least 30 of these students with a $1,000 scholarship. Last year, HCAC was able to award 26 scholarships of $1,000 each. Most of last year's recipients said that the primary value of the award was not the money but the mentor program that the Community Affairs Council provides to help steer them through the next 4 years.

HCAC's scholarship program has expanded rapidly since it was founded in 1985—only three scholarships were awarded the first year and six in 1986. A total of 10 scholarships were presented in 1987, 15 in 1988, and 26 last year.

Winners are selected on the basis of a three part formula combining scholastic achievement with financial need and leadership ability as demonstrated in an oral interview. Past winners have had grade point averages of at least 3.5 on a 4.0 scale.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to read the names of this year's schoalrship finalists:

Kimberly Alaniz, Rosy Alvarez, Roger Analya, Oscar Bermudez, Luis Bustamante, Jr., Christopher Cabrales, Julie Calderon, Luis Camacho, Victoria Choate, Jennifer Denoncourt, Elizabeth Elizondo, Emma Garcia, Angelica Gonzales, Martha Guzman, Jennifer Herrera, Norma Jimenez, Geraldo Lara, Mildred Leon, Andrea Lopez, and Vanessa Maitland.

Gabriel Martinez, Jr., Guadalupe Martinez, Joel Martinez, Lorena Montenegro, Veronica Morelos, Guadalupe Munoz, Jorge Munoz, Karen Natal, Raymond Parra, Enrique Perez, Jr., Leah Perez, Desiree Reed, Veronica Roderick, Lilia Rosas, Eduardo Suarez, Dionisia Torrez, Michael Vigil, Jr., and Maya Ynostroza.

I would like to congratulate this year's finalists and to commend the Hispanic Community Affairs Council of Alameda County for their dedication to the preservation of Hispanic culture and the education of Hispanic youth.

THE 150TH ANNIVERSARY OF PENNOYER SCHOOL, NORRIDGE, IL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, May 18, 1990, the Pennoyer School, District No. 79, 5200 North Cumberland Road, Norridge, IL, will celebrate the 150th anniversary of its founding.

In 1839, the community saw a need for a school. Pulling together, they agreed that every adult would contribute $5 for materials and would pitch in to help build the school on land donated by John Pennoyer. A one-room schoolhouse which was heated by a wood stove was completed and used until 1893 when the one room was enlarged. An updated facility was built on the site in 1922, and with the population boom of the forties and fifties, additional rooms were put on the building. In 1955, even more expansion was needed and construction began on a state-of-the-art facility at the present site.

Today, the Pennoyer School consists of two preschool classrooms, two-full-day kindergarten rooms, elementary first through eighth-grade classrooms, plus special education programs for the learning disabled coupled with programs for the average and the gifted students. Microcomputers for the students in kindergarten through eighth grade enrich the school programs as well as do the performing arts classrooms.

As a teacher by profession, I know that it is just the structure of brick and mortar that makes a school, it is the community, students, teachers, administrators, and staff. The Pennoyer School has been blessed through the years with individuals who recognized the changing needs of their community and who were not afraid to act—with students eager to learn when given an environment in which they were free to excel—with teachers who, while teaching basics, were not scared to allow the minds of their students to stretch beyond the so-called highest limits—with administrators who allowed teachers and students to go past the artificial barriers of conventional educational institution—end with staff who provided invaluable support for the work of teachers and administrators while being sympathetic to students needs.

Mr. Speaker, today many talk about commitment to educational excellence, but 150 years ago of the Pennoyer School community did more than just talk. They took responsibility and positive action for the education of their young citizens, and that heritage of assuming responsibility for providing quality education continues to this day.

As the Member of Congress representing the 11th Congressional District of Illinois where Pennoyer School is located, I congratulate Dr. Deno F. Fenili, superintendent of District 79, and the students, teachers, parents, administrators, and staff of the Pennoyer School on the 150th anniversary of its founding. I take pride in their achievements and extend my best wishes for continuing success in their endeavors in the years ahead.

WHOSE MONEY GAME, THEIRS OR OURS?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, the recent flood of stories about the United States and what we need to do to "clean up our act" to be competitive has in effect been a relentless assault on the self-esteem of the American people.

We hear that we must improve our productivity, that American businessmen only think short term so therefore, we are falling behind our friendly ally, Japan. The conclusion we are to draw is Americans are only interested in what used to be called the almighty dollar.

Recently, I heard more of this reasoning from Mr. Akio Morita, who is chairman of the Sony Corp. on "Nightline" television program. TV clips used on "Nightline" pointed out that Mr. Morita is much admired for his achievements in business. I won't dispute that. In fact, I gave a speech a year ago which was called "We Agree With One Another." In that speech I quoted extensively from Mr. Morita on what we need to do to have a strong industrial economy.

I do part ways with him about the affects of foreign investment in the country—and the brashness of his book "The Japan That Can Say No," which was heavy handed in its criticism of the United States. I also do not agree with his comments on "Nightline."

On the program Mr. Morita again explained his view of the difference between Japanese and American businesses. He said the American banks were just in a money game. The implication of course, is the Japanese are not.

He explained that the Japanese care about their workers and American businessmen buy and sell companies in disregard of the workers. I believe he called the relationship of businessmen to their workers a human rights problem.

Ted Koppel, the host of "Nightline" asked Mr. Morita why the Sony Corp. bought CBS Records. Originally an American company, it is the oldest recording company in the world, and it has now been renamed Sony Classical and has been moved to Hamburg, Germany, with a German as president.

Mr. Morita explained that Sony bought CBS Records because they wanted to make it a "happy company." When questioned further he revealed the real reason for the purchase. Morita said, "software music is one of the strongest industries of America to gather the money from all over the world."

Now, that sounds like someone playing a money game if your emphasis is on the way "to gather the money from all over the world." At that remark, my dad would have quoted the Bible to me that "out of the fullness of a man's heart he speaketh." In this instance it was money that was speaking.

I thought about this as I was rereading Karl Van Wolfgren's article "Japan's Money Machine" which was published in November in the Washington Post.

That article explained the real money machine is Japan's and, more importantly why we are in an economic war with the Japanese.

Wolfgren wrote:

The Japanese have devised a mechanism that allows them in principle to buy whatever the rest of the world is willing to sell. More important, than the raw fact of this enhanced buying power is the leverage that the Japanese have gained over the global financial system. The money machine is not merely economic but political in character, and its existence provides important insights into the aims and attitudes that drive Japan's industrial dealings.

He explained:

Japan has been the only advanced industrial power to allow this type of funding which originated in wartime measures to ensure an unimpeded flow of funds to manufacturers of war materiel. The financial institutions selected for this emergency purpose became the postwar keiretsu banks, the money pumps for Japan's economic miracle.

What is a keiretsu? T. Boone Pickens simple explanation of a keiretsu says it all. He said:

Keiretsus are the interlocking relationships formed among Japanese corporations and the suppliers, distributors, bankers, insurance companies and even competitors. The keiretsus have successfully locked American competitors out of Japan and now they are getting ready to do the same thing on American soil without regard for U.S. antitrust laws.

How the keiretsu works has also been detailed in a recent report of Japan's fair trade system. That should be worthwhile reading.

Using this system, the Japanese apparently are still carrying on their wartime emergency purpose—only now they have substituted commerce for weapons of war and are able to buy our businesses, charities, home mortgages, government bonds, high tech companies, schools, and the list goes on.

According to Karl Von Wolfgren, the money machine operates this way:

Paper wealth, horrendously inflated stocks and land prices—provides the fuel. In 1987—the last year for which data are available—the increase in the nominal value of financial stock and land holdings in Japan is 40 percent larger than that year's entire gross national product. Stocks on the Tokyo exchange routinely sell at multiples of more than 70 times earnings compared with an average multiple of about 13 percent on the New York Stock Exchange.

Land Prices are even more inflated: By the spring of last year (1988) the total value of all Japanese land was more than 4 times larger than the value of all U.S. land, even though Japan has only one-fifty-seventh (1/57th) of the habitable land.

The money machine operates by using paper wealth as collateral for loans. Novel financing techniques are further applied to reduce the real cost of the created capital to almost nothing. These techniques developed from the "overloans" of the mid-50's that let commercial banks expand lending to firms without having proportionate deposits with the central bank.

With Japan having 10 of the top banks in the world and the United States having only 1 in 28th place—I ask you—who is running a money game? It certainly isn't the Americans. So what is the game?

Obviously, according to Von Wolfgren's description, it is the Japanese who are still using the wartime economic system to conduct trade in what is supposedly friendly competition.

I heard something very revealing about this friendly competition in a story on the "MacNeil/Lehrer Report" on February 15. The story was about the February 8 sale of U.S. Treasury notes. In that sale the Japanese withheld investing until they had driven up the Government bonds from 8.4 percent to 8.5 percent. Doesn't sound like much, but with each one-tenth of a point rise, it cost each one of us $30. With the rise being five times, it cost each one of us $150 apiece before the Japanese finally bought our Treasury notes.

In that same report, MacNeil/Lehrer showed a recent Japan Society meeting in New York city a reporter questioned Kazuo Nukazawa, Managing Director Keidanren, Japan's largest business organization about the February 8 Treasury note sale.

He asked Mr. Nukazawa about the sale and why did the Japanese continue to invest in the United States if they thought it was sick. Nuakazawa replied, "We will continue to invest in you until you are incurably ill." The reporter asked, "how do you define incurably ill?" Nukazawa replied, "you see, it is a tautology, you will know you are incurably ill when I stop investing."

My immediate reaction was shock at the answer and then to wonder why is Japan investing until we are incurably ill? From his remark it sounds like a goal to me.

Then I remember an earlier speech of mine of which explained the viewpoint of a Japanese official in competing with the United States. That speech was on the "Shadow Warriors" of Japan. It explained the Japanese tradition of hiring someone closely resembling them to fight for their values.

In that speech I quoted Mr. Yoshio Terasawa from an article written by Edward Klein in Manhattan, Inc. magazine. Mr. Terasawa who is rumored to be the first Japanese to head the World Bank, now a vice president of the bank and heads the Multilateral Emergency Guarantee Agency [MEGA] at the World Bank. He said:

I have heard the argument that the Japanese won't succeed here in America because of the peculiarity of our culture and its homogeneity.

He went on:

But, I don't agree with this argument at all. We are not a religious people, so we have no transcendent precepts or principles that bar us from taking whatever action is necessary. We can be terribly immoral if necessary.

He further stated:

Now, in order to make more money and be more competitive, Japanese businessmen will do anything they have to. There are no limits. They may talk about Americanizing their companies to please their American employees, but that is not what they will really do. Big Japanese corporations are going to acquire big American corporations and let them run things so that the Japanese owners will not be visible.

Before going on with my remarks—I want to question why someone expressing those values would serve in such an important position. I can just imagine what would happen to a Presidential appointee at confirmation hearings in the Senate confessing he could be as immoral as he wanted to be. I believe we must set standards for service in this position beyond technical experience.

Back to my speech. The remarks of Misters Terawasa and Morita, along with Mr. Morita's book, "The Japan That Can Say No" certainly make me wonder about their goals in this economic war. It seems to me their goals are apparent.

The current Ambassador to the United States, outlined their views in his 1985 book, "Between Friends." He said that the United States is too concerned with principles and morals, "One must deal with reality, and when doing so, one should not be overly concerned with moralistic concepts like fairness."

Lee Iacocca, chairman of Chrysler has best described the competition with the Japanese. He was quoted in a recent Newsweek article that—

If you read any history of Japan, their idea of competition is always highly adversarial, and its objective is * * * to destroy the competition—not to compete, but to wipe it out.

From the remarks of the Japanese gentlemen and the assessment of their actions by Mr. Iacocca, it appears their money game is to wipe out the competition regardless of the area and the friendship. Competition is one thing, but economic warfare is another.

How can they criticize Americans for spending and ask the U.S. officials as part of the trade talks for the Government to limit Americans to just two credit cards? Do they mean a long distance telephone card and a gas credit card?

I particularly wonder why they are asking to limit Americans credit cards just at the time the largest Japanese credit card company, JBC—which stands for Japan Credit Bureau—is expanding into the United States now.

Are they targeting our credit card business? Does this mean that one of the two cards would be Japanese or perhaps the demand would be relaxed if the JBC card became popular with American merchants.

I also question the Japanese request that Government do away with the homeowners tax credit. This tax deduction has enabled us to have a home ownership that is the marvel of other nations. It has also been an engine for generating capital for small entrepreneurs and moving up economically in our society. Home ownership has been a dream for Americans since the first Pilgrim stepped foot on Plymouth Rock.

Do the Japanese want us to change and be like them and pass on home ownership debt to second, third, and fourth generations—for 100 years, as they do in Japan?

Since the Japanese have been buying so many of our Ginny Maes, this is a curious request. At least 10 percent and sometimes more than 60 percent of our Ginny Maes home mortgages are purchased by Japan.

According to the Wall Street Journal:

> The Industrial Bank of Japan claims to be the biggest buyers of U.S. mortgage securities, and says it will more than double its purchases this year, to an amount one official puts at several billion dollars.

I do know the Japanese have not been pleased to have the mortgages paid off early. Makes you wonder who owns your home—your bank or the Japanese?

So who's money game is this—theirs or ours? What are their intentions?

A recent article by Donald Conover in the Journal of Commerce gave another view of the Japanese money game. Mr. Conover explained in "Low Dollars Sells Out America," that the overall trade deficit worsened in devaluation of the dollar, "Because foreign investors particularly the Japanese, out maneuvered the policy."

He stated:

> To avoid the problem that their products were more expensive in dollars terms, the Japanese simply started exporting companies instead of products.

Mr. Conover explained:

> Devaluing the dollar has undermined the very fabric of our national economy, causing great costs to companies, consumers and American labor alike.
> One need only to look to Japan to see a country making a strong currency work for its citizens. Let's stop exporting our standard of living, and insist on a strong currency.

So with all the shortcomings Americans have, I don't believe our businessmen engage only in money games. I believe they have been fighting for their lives and ours. I have been in public life, in business too long, and also as a media reporter and producer covering maritime and business affairs to accept this criticism.

The money game has been Japan's so far—but this too can change. It must. The American people are friendly and fair minded but they weren't born yesterday. When challenged they will overcome all obstacles. I place my faith in the American people. We will win this competition and beat the Japanese money game. All we need to do is sign up on the team to win.

THE CLEAN AIR DEBATE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I come to take this special order for many reasons, but I think it is time that we started the debate on this floor on the Clean Air Act before we get into the bill itself that will be coming to us in just a few short weeks. it seems, under the hype and hysteria that has been going on in the last few weeks, if not months, it is very frightening to me, and I feel that some questions need to be asked about this hysteria. Some people have been writing some excellent things, and they ought to be recognized by Members on this floor, so I want to put some things in the RECORD that seem to reflect a different point of view than what most people are seeing on their televisions recently, and have been seeing on their televisions for the last few weeks, especially on Earth Day.

I will never forget, when I turned on the television on Earth Day Sunday evening, I turned to a program that was a special being run and sponsored by Time-Warner, and it was the most depressing, most frightening program that I have ever witnessed in my 43 years on this Earth. I have never seen such propaganda, with absolutely no refutation of the points being made.

Mr. Speaker, the program was a play where they took actors, and situation comedies and all the types of programs and linked them together with the central theme, being "Mother Earth is in the hospital and dying," and they portrayed everyone that had any authority, anyone that would dare question some of the hysteria and the doom and gloom that had been put out, anyone that had an alternate view, or a reasonable view, in the way they approach cleaning up our environment, as devils, as idiots, as the most ridiculous people that you can imagine, and it frightened me.

And then, Mr. Speaker, the next morning I got up and watched a program, "The Today Show," in the morning as I was getting ready to go to work, and they started off their program with Bryant Gumbel presenting the picture that the entire world was already gone to hell and that people were dropping like flies from the raping and pillaging of industry in America, and of course, as most liberals do, they blamed Ronald Reagan for destroying our environment over the last 8 to 9 years, and it was all his fault, when in fact the facts show that the environment, our water, our air, many things in our environment have been steadily improving over the last 10 to 15 years and that the Clean Air Act of 1970 was indeed working, and things were better. Yet in the "Today" program that I witnessed there was no credit whatsoever given to this Congress or anyone else that had been working very hard and private initiatives by private companies and private individuals that had been working over the years to continue the effort of cleaning up our environment.

So, Mr. Speaker, I take this special order to try to point out certain issues that have been brought to light that are not getting paid a whole lot of attention by Members of this House, and I think it is very important because there is a lot of doom and gloom out there.

I can remember and recall some of the quotes in the Earth Day of 1970 where people, esteemed people like Dr. Paul Ehrlich who claimed that the United States would be dying of thirst by the year 1984, and we all know that that is not the fact, and that people, millions and millions of people, would be dying of starvation all over the world by the year 1989, and we know that not to be the fact.

The height of doom and gloom was perpetrated out here on The Mall, right outside our doors, during Earth Day. Mr. Speaker, you would think that we might as well just give up because it is all over anyway, and there are a lot of problems going on with the objectivity of those that are claiming to be experts in this field.

I take a quote from an article by Austin Chase on November 17, 1989, that I think points out the problem that we face here on the floor in trying to sift through the emotionalism and get to those policy decisions that we have to make based upon scientific fact, and Mr. Chase quotes climatologist Stephen Schneider, who is a leading proponent of the greenhouse theory; Mr. Schneider was quoted in Discover magazine as saying that scientists, such as himself, quote, "need to get some broad-based support to capture the public's imagination. That, of course, entails getting loads of media coverage, so we have to offer up scary scenarios, make simplified, dramatic statements and make little mention of any doubts we might have. Each of us has to decide what the right balance is between being effective and being honest."

Mr. Speaker, that is very frightening when we have scientists in our country that are more interested in the emotionalism and firing people up than being effective, than being honest, and I think that is what is happening a lot in this debate over the Clean Air Act in that we have a lot of rhetoric, a lot of hysteria, a lot of emotionalism, and a lot of it is based on little or no scientific fact.

On April 3, 1990, the Senate voted 89 to 11 to approve S. 1630, a 689-page clean air bill. Two days later, on April 5, 1990, the House Committee on Energy and Commerce passed its clean air bill, H.R. 3030, by a vote of 42 to 1.

Now the clean air issue has always embodied numerous controversial assumptions and opinions, and conservatives agree that our environment is the most precious resource that deserves wise management and protection. However, there is a continuing debate regarding the size of any problem, the source of any harm to our environment and the best approach for making improvements. There has been a lot of rhetoric available decrying damage to our water, our air and our forests, but only recently have we seen articles which offer scientific data to support what calmer minds may have long suspected, that in this case rhetoric and reality are worlds apart.

First, I would like to consider that the 1970 clean air bill is working. The current Clean Air Act, and this is a quote from the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER] in an article that he wrote, "Smoggy ideas are cleaning up the air."

"The current Clean Air Act passed in 1970, and amended in 1973 and 1977, has been very successful, and it continues to improve air quality. According to the EPA, from 1978 to 1987 air pollution was noticeably reduced. Lead levels in our ambient air fell 88 percent. Sulfur dioxide levels came down 37 percent. Nitrogen oxide levels, down 12 percent. Carbon monoxide levels, down 32 percent. Particulates, down 21 percent. And ozone levels, down 16 percent. This cleaner air came along with record levels—record levels—of economic growth and an expanding number of automobiles. The average sulfur content of coal purchased and burned has decreased almost 33 percent by the electric power industry since 1973. Its sulfur dioxide emissions have decreased almost 29 percent during this period. This has been achieved while coal use has increased more than 80 percent. Congress's own 10-year, half-billion-dollar study has been purposely ignored. Clean coal technology is given short shrift, and critics point to poor air quality standards that are not met," and yet in the district of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER], Allentown, Bethlehem, and Easton, he exceeded the national air quality standards an average of only 10 times in the last 1,825 days. Most came during the record-breaking heat of the summer of 1988.

Mr. Speaker, studies have indicated that the real problem is not so much the new car as it is the older, dirtier emission vehicle, the newer automobile, whose emission control systems are out of tune and the concentration of cars in urban areas, and yet there remains a near obsession with more expensive brandnew car emission standards, even though the bulk of pollution does not come from them, and in the bill reported out by the Committee on Energy and Commerce they spend all their time on new controls on new cars that do not do anywhere near the polluting that old cars do and do very little to control the pollution emitted by older cars.

It is sort of like one reporter had the analogy that that is sort of like recognizing that Americans are all overweight, yet we pass rules to mandate that skinny people go on diets.

The rational solution is not tightening new car regulations, but on-road detection systems to locate growth polluters and get them back into tune, whether new or old, as purported by the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON].

Senator DIXON, an Illinois Democrat, has pointed out from economists' estimates that 3.7 million jobs in 20 States are at risk from the proposed Clean Air Act.

Are taxpayers going to be called to ante up benefits if those jobs are lost to foreign competition?

The legislative process is moving like a speeding bullet. There is virtually no sunshine on the process. Hundred-page documents are presented for votes moments after they are written by small cliques. The deals has been cut and the American worker, consumer, motorist, ratepayer and taxpayer are not part of this process.

In speaking out for commonsense environmentalism, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER] is working to inject into the proposed Clean Air Act amendments that brings some accountability to the American people. They pay the bills and they have the right to demand their money's worth.

Let us just take a couple of these myths, that because of the limit on time that I have this afternoon I must keep brief. Take the global warming myth. The following is copied from an article in the Washington Times of March 30, 1990, and from Representative BILL DANNEMEYER's Dear Colleague letter of April 2, 1990. I have a chart to submit for the RECORD that shows no proof of global warming, which was published in the Washington Times article, and I would like to present it for the RECORD. The source of the information for the chart is from Science magazine, and the chart itself is by Henry Christopher of the Washington Times.

Researchers reviewed mountains of data from NASA's TIROS-N satellite and concluded that over the last 10 years there has been no long-term warming or cooling trend.

The chart that I submit for the RECORD shows how widely ground and atmospheric temperatures fluctuate over a 10-year period, and the NASA study offers strong evidence that there is no greenhouse effect. This is not just a little old pest control operator from Houston, TX, that has a degree in biology and chemistry. This is a study done by NASA. Even as we put the finishing touches on massive expansion of the Clean Air Act, which economists now estimate will cost as much as $50 billion a year and place hundreds of thousands of American jobs at risk, environmental extremists are making an issue out of several unusually warm years in the 1980's to solve a problem that, as the NASA study shows, just does not exist.

From an article published in the Washington Post on March 30, 1990, comes this quotation:

> Ten years of temperature measurements by weather satellites have failed to find any evidence of global warming from the greenhouse effect, scientists said in a published report. At least another decade of measurements will be needed to draw a firm conclusion.

Dr. Roy W. Spencer of the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, AL, said:

> We found that the earth's atmosphere goes through fairly large year-to-year changes in temperature and over that 10-year period we saw no long-term warming or cooling trend.

John R. Christy, Spencer's coinvestigator of the University of Alabama, Huntsville, said "The northern hemisphere goes up slightly during those 10 years and the southern hemisphere goes down slightly. The net effect for the globe is basically zero."

Conventional temperature measurements have found the 1980's to have been the warmest decade on record, but also do not show a strong warming trend within the decade.

Climatologist Patrick Michaels said the global warming study, "Merely confirms something that people who've examined the records have known for a long time—that it did not warm up in the 1980's." He added, "When are we going to come down on the side of reason and logic? The policy cart is way ahead of the science horse on this."

The following is taken from an article entitled "No Global Warming Signs Spotted," published in the New York Times on March 30, 1990.

> The data from weather satellites show no evidence of global warming in the 1980s, scientists say, but it will take at least another decade of measurements to draw a firm conclusion.

The following is taken from an article published in the Washington Times on March 30, 1990. The article is entitled "Nuclear Issue Splits Environmentalists" and is written by Joyce Price.

Dr. Patrick J. Michaels, a global warming skeptic and professor at the University of Virginia, raised the issue during his remarks on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley" on March 15, 1990. He said "The same people who busted the nuclear industry (after the calamities at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island nuclear power plant and the Soviet Chernobyl plant) are the ones bringing us global warming." He predicted this issue could cause a schism in the environment movement.

Senator Timothy Wirth, Colorado Democrat, was "treated like a Chernobyl potato" according to Dr. Michaels when Senator Wirth suggested in 1988 that the United States might have to reconsider its anti-nuclear position as a means of averting the "catastrophe of global warming."

At a World Energy Conference in Montreal in September, 1989, speaker after speaker said the cure for the greenhouse effect would be a major shift away from fossil fuels to nuclear-generated power.

In October, 1989, at a meeting of nuclear industry executives, government officials, energy experts, and environmentalists in Sundance, Utah, overall testimony indicated the future will need both conservation and more nuclear power.

The following is taken from an article published in the New Republic on March 30, 1990.

Conservatives say that those who want Congress to do something on global warming, even before the verdict on global warming is in, would shut down the industrial state on sheer speculation.

Of the Western powers only France is not a major carbondioxide producer. France is the world's most energy-efficient state—its economic output per BTU input is double that of the United States.

But "enviros" do not talk up France because its low fossil fuel consumption is achieved mainly by greater reliance on nuclear power than any other nation.

The following is taken from Warren Brooks' column entitled "Global Warming Benefits?" published in the Washington Times on March 12, 1990.

An Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPPC) workshop, during Sept. 11 to 14, 1989, of world-class agronomists, geologists, and environmental scientists meeting in Berkeley Springs, West Virginia, concluded the benefits of global warming, should it even occur, far outweigh its costs. (An IPCC panel in Finland said the same thing.)

The U.S. Panel assumed that the carbondioxide level in the atmosphere would double by 2050 and raise the temperatures by 2 degrees Celsius. Even so, using sophisticated models from the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration and the Agricultural Department, the panel found this climate change would:

Increase total U.S. food output 15 percent more than the natural trend, a present value of $12 billion.

Increase total U.S. water resources by about 9 percent, worth $30 billion to $50 billion per year at current water prices.

Increase total U.S. forest volume 10 percent or 80 billion cubic feet, with theoretical stumpage value of more than $500 billion.

The net benefits of global warming, if it occurred, would be equally big for the Soviet Union, China, Europe, Australia, and South America.

Agriculture Department research physicist Sherwood Idso writes "The whole face of the planet will likely be radically transformed—rejuvenated as it were—as the atmospheric carbon-dioxide content reverses its long history of decline and returns . . . to conditions much closer to those characteristics of the Earth at the time when the basic properties of plant processes were originally established."

The Soviet Union's internationally renowned climatologist Mikhail Budyko argues that carbon-monoxide doubling will bring "an Eden" and shouldn't be stopped.

Climatologist emeritus Robert Pease of University of California at Riverside wrote in the Wall Street Journal "The higher temperatures combined with more carbon dioxide will favor crop and plant growth and could well provide more food for our burgeoning global population."

□ 1550

I am not advocating the further emissions of more carbon dioxide. I just point out the fact that there are many different theories as to what is happening to our environment, and we should not be making policy based upon emotionalism.

Taken from an Executive Memorandum dated February 7, 1990 entitled "Global Warming; How Much, How Soon, How Dangerous" by Kent Jeffries. Published by the Heritage Foundation.

There is even evidence indicating that the atmosphere is cooling. (italic added). A study by University of Virginia Professor of Environmental Science, Dr. Patrick Michaels, found that from 1918 to 1958, there were only five winters during which outbreaks of arctic air swept as far as the Southeastern United States. Since 1958, however, this has happened in 21 of the 31 winters. Because of a general global cooling trend from the 1940s through the 1960s, many scientists even were predicting the advent of another ice age.

Records of temperature trends in the U.S. give no indication of a warming trend. Meteorologist Thomas Karl of the National Climatic Data Center headed a 1988 study that finds "no statistically significant evidence of an overall increase in annual temperature or change in annual precipitation for the contiguous U.S. (between) 1895-1987.

In light of the uncertainty concerning the degree of global warming and the inaccuracy of predictions made only two years ago, it is very premature to propose policies that would restrict severely the burning of fossil fuels. Such policies, afterall would impose huge costs on all Americans and on American living standards and competitiveness. They would shut down many American factories, throw great numbers out of work, and raise the cost of production and of fuel for every factory and household.

As Members can see, what is happening in America today is that we are trying to make policy based on emotionalism rather than on scientific fact, policy on a presumed risk out there. Presumed by whom? We do not know. We have as many scientists on one side of the issue as there are scientists on the other, and we as policymakers look at the data presented to us and make up our minds. I think the jury is still out on the global warming issue.

Mr. Speaker, in the time remaining I want also to approach the issue of acid rain, and what I call the great acid rain flim-flam, and quote from people who have done extensive studies.

In fact, the United States has spent over $600 million on a 10-year study on acid rain, and yet we want to pass a clean air act before we even see the final conclusions on this study. Yet we are starting to hear rather than in the normal conclusions some of the things that have been found in the NAPAP study that suggest that issues are otherwise than some are purporting them to be, and some of the doom and gloom about acid rain.

Taken from an article by Dr. Edward C. Krug and Dr. Charles R. Frink entitled "Acid Rain on Acid Soil: A New Perspective." Published in Science, Vol 221, August 5, 1983.

Factors commonly considered to make landscapes susceptible to acidification by acid rain are the same factors long known to strongly acidify soils through the natural processes of soil formation.

From its inception, soil formation in humid temperature climates is an acidifying process, mediated by the classic factors of geology, climate, biology, topography, and time.

The factors thought to make landscapes sensitive to acid rain are those that develop some of the most acid soils in the world. The results of natural soil formation are those attributed to acid rain: leaching of nutrients, release of aluminum, and acidification of soil and water.

From Policy Review, Spring 1990, Heritage Foundation, "Fish Story, The Great Acid Rain Flimflam," Dr. Edward C. Krug, Illinois State Water Survey, Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

It is largely to reduce the acid in rain that President Bush's Clean Air legislation calls for a 50% reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions (10 million tons) by the year 2000, at an estimated cost of $4 billion to $7 billion per year.

The Environmental Protection Agency's National Acid Precipitation Assessment Project (NAPAP) study estimates that all Adirondack lakes and ponds more acidic than pH 5.7 can be limed for $170,000 per year. Extrapolating this study to the entire Northeast, all acid lakes in New England and New York could be limed for under $500,000 per year.

Liming would kill the sphagnum mosses that grow deep in the bottoms of these lakes so environmentalists don't want to lime. The question is whether we want spahgnum mosses or fish; we usually can't have both. The response among most American and Canadian votes is almost certainly to be fish.

The notion that acid rain is responsible for acidity in lakes and streams is also contradicted by the existence of highly acidic surface waters in regions without acid precipitation. Fraser Island, Cooloola National Park, and Tasmania in Australia, and the Westland area of New Zealand have no acid rain, yet are filled with highly acidic lakes and streams.

The magnitude of acidic surface waters in areas without acid rain dwarfs that of areas supposedly 'devastated' by acid rain. In the Amazon basin, a river system the size of the Mississippi, the Rio Negro, is naturally acidic and fishless. The naturalist and explorer Alexander von Humboldt wrote about these 'rivers of hunger' nearly 200 years ago, definitely predating industrial activity in this part of the world.

The NAPAP study concluded that acid rain had caused acidification in some small lakes, but the median acidity of all Adirondacks lakes has gone down since preindustrial times.

Studies of the fossil records in lake sediments reveal that many lakes that are acidic today have been highly acidic for centuries, except for several decades in the late 19th century and early 20th century when they were unnaturally alkaline.

Massive cutting of trees and burning of stumps by lumberers reduced the acidity of the forest floor, and soil runoff made it possible for species such as trout and salmon to survive. After lumbering and burning came to an end, forest grew back, and the soil runoff, and hence the waters, returned to their natural acidity.

There is similarly no evidence of widespread forest decline in North America related to acid rain. Indeed, U.S. Forest Service statistics indicate that northeastern forests appear to be the most robust in the country.

Widespread acid rain probably began by the 1940's in the Northeast. It peaked around 1973, when national sulfur dioxide emisssions were measured at 31 million tons. Since then, sulfur dioxide emissions have fallen to 23 million tons in 1985, partly as a result of pollution controls and conservation, and replacement of older, more heavily polluting factories and power plants by state-of-the-art facilities as mandated under the Clean Air Act of 1970.

Most lakes in the Northeast are not highly acidic, even though acid precipitation falls on the entire area. In 1980, before it studied the situation, the EPA asserted that the acidity of northeastern lakes had increased 100-fold (a decrease of two pH units) as a result of acid rain. But a 1984 NAPAP lake survey found that only 240 of New England's and New York's more than 7,000 lakes are "acid-dead"—that is, have a pH of 5.0 or lower.

The NAPAP survey found that in the whole eastern United States there are only 630 acid lakes, representing 35,000 of the approximately 200,000,000 acres of water in the East, or less than 1/50 of 1% of the water. Over half the acid lake capacity—20,000 acres—is in Florida, which does not receive high rates of acid rain.

The acidity of lakes in the Adirondacks and Nova Scotia results not from acid rain but from acid soil and an absence of natural buffering.

□ 1600

From the Wall Street Journal, March 6, 1990. "The Answers on Acid Rain Fall on Deaf Ears," by Dr. S. Fred Singer.

The proposal to control emissions that could spur acid rain could cost $5 billion to $10 billion a year; the benefits, in terms of reduced damage, are uncertain and, at best, quite small.

America's best-kept secrets: From 1973 to 1988, sulfur dioxide emissions decreased 23% to 24 million tons, despite a 45% increase in coal use, nitrogen oxides have declined 14% since a 1978 peak. Both decreases are the result of current clean-air laws.

Accordingly to James Mahoney, director of NAPAP, in October testimony before Congress. "No apparent trend in the acidity of rainfall has been detected. Because of complex atmospheric reactions, percentage reductions in emissions may not result in similar percentage reductions in depositions. Thus the relationship is not all proportional—as was claimed in the 1983 National Academy of Sciences report, widely uses as the basis for proposals to cut sulfur dioxide emissions, including the Senate bill.

Acid rain has become a symbol of national sin—the sin of prosperity—calling, it seems for national expiation. We offer in sacrifice jobs and economic growth. Scientific evidence no longer seems to matter; nor does an analysis of the cost of controls vs. the benefits that might be achieved.

The current improvements due to existing clean-air laws should be speeded up by easing certain restrictions rather than imposing new ones. For example:

Encourage policies that lead to a more rapid replacement of old power plants and of older, heavily polluting cars.

Allow a free choice of technology or of any other measure to reduce emissions, coupled with an expanded system of flexible emissions trading.

Increase the utilization of existing nuclear plants.

Conserve more energy wherever it makes economics sense.

From Regulation magazine, February 1990, Dr. Lawrence Kulp, former director of the National Acid Precipitation Assessment Project [NAPAP].

The crash effort to reduce emissions . . . is estimated to cost on the order of $100 billion over the next 20 years, and will not permanently solve the problem because it would preclude the use of advanced technologies now being developed.

From the Washington Times, March 29, 1990, "Acid Rain's Cost Cloudburst," by Warren Brookes.

The acid-rain section of the Senate Clean Air bill (Title IV) will force utilities and industry to spend up to $7 billion a year in a crash program to remove 10 million tons of sulphur dioxide annually from their emissions by the year 2000.

We could lime all the acidic lakes in the U.S. Northeast for $1 million a year or 0.02 percent of the cost of the Bush/Senate bill.

James Mahoney, current director of the 10-year $600 million NAPAP study admitted to the Senate Environment Committee last October:

Concerning forests: "Acidic deposition has not been shown to be a significant factor contrubuting to current forest health problems in North America. There is no evidence of widespread forest damage from current levels of acidic rains in the United States.

Concerning crops and vegetation: "Acidic precipition at ambient levels in the United States is not responsible for regional crop yield reduction. Sulfur dioxide is rarely associated with crop damages near point sources and is not a regional scale problem."

Concerning lakes and streams: "Acidic lakes were a relatively small percentage of the National Surface Water Survey. The percentage of total lake surface area that was acidic (was) 2.1 percent. . ."

Now this is the NAPAP study that we have spent $600 million on and 10 years trying to complete, and is yet to be completed. But we want to pass a bill before its final conclusion.

The NAPAP study concluded that while acid rain had caused some small-lake acidification, it also showed the median acidity of all Adirondacks lakes has gone down since pre-industrial times.

The crash program to be forced by the Senate bill degrades the ecosystem by forcing limestone scrubbing in old plants instead of allowing utilities to phase in new clean coal-burning technologies.

The crash program will generate three tons of sludge for every ton of sulfur dioxide removed—generating a 30-million ton disposal problem costing $2.5 billion per year—$80 to $90 a ton.

The crash program will put an added ton of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere for every ton of sulfur dioxide removed. Worse, it makes it economically impossible to substitute the reduction of the much more environmentally dangerous nitrous oxide for sulfur dioxide cuts.

From the Washington Times, April 2, 1990, "Co-opting the Left's Agenda," by Patrick Buchanan.

For a few million bucks, every one of those 750 lakes which are acidified could be limed, with better results. Why, then are we killing West Virginia's soft coal industry?

□ 1610

From the New Republic, April 30, 1990, by Gregg Easterbrook, in an article entitled "Everything You Know About the Environment is Wrong":

Little known note: in the past fifteen years national sulfur dioxide emissions have already fallen by about one-quarter even as coal use increased nearly fifty percent, owing to controls under the old Clean Air Act and to the construction of new power plants with superior technology.

Second note: recent studies, including a ten-year $500 million federal project show acid rain effects to be considerably less than theory predicts. Only high-altitude red spruce trees, not forests generally, so far display acid rain damage.

Although some environs projected that a majority of Eastern U.S. lakes would by now be too acidic for most life, the Federal study found that only four percent have crossed this threshold.

Mr. Speaker, I will not take any more of the time of the House. I just wanted to lay out a predicate for the American people and the Members of this House to start looking at both sides of the issue before they make political decisions based on little or no scientific fact and be sure to understand that what we are doing here is not a political exercise. What we are doing here has the potential of shutting down America's economy and for putting up to 3.7 million jobs at risk and our economy and our standard of living as we know it at risk.

Mr. Speaker, we can do both. We can continue to clean up our air and our water while we continue building and rebuilding our economy and increasing our standard of living. We can do both, but not under a bill like the one that was passed by the Senate or the one that was passed out by the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

THE ISSUES OF THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1989

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have this time to talk a bit about this very historic legislation that we are going to take up this week, and that is the Family Medical Leave Act. I would like to start by asking a question of people, and that is this: What do the Sudan, Burkina, Guinea-Bissau, and South Africa have in common with the United States? The one thing that those 5 countries have in common is that not a one of them has a family medical leave act. Every other country on the planet enacted some sort of a family medical leave act years and years and years ago.

Furthermore, if this bill that we are considering passes this week and becomes law, then the positively amazing thing is that we are still going to be at the very bottom of benefits that are offered. But it is a very, very important first step, and I hope that people support it. If we looked at the television today and if we read the newspaper this morning, we got the administration's view of why family medical leave is not important. Both Mr. Sununu and Mr. Fitzwater have been quoted as saying that if women get fired for having a baby, they can go and get another job. Well, there is a lovely solution. There is a pro-family administration for you if I have ever heard one.

Let us think about that. If women get fired for having or adopting a baby, they can go and get another job. How terrific. In the interim, if they got fired and they had health benefits, those health benefits would be gone. What are they supposed to do if the child was a premature baby and they are running all sorts of bills? I guess they can look for another job that has health benefits that they can take up right away. If anyone knows where those jobs are, they can please ring up the White House, because my guess is that women are going to be very incensed reading about that kind of insensitivity coming out of the executive branch.

What the family and medical leave bill does is, it does not mandate anything. It says for the first time that workers have a right when they have a baby or adopt a baby, or if they or their spouse becomes chronically ill—and it takes a doctor's certificate; we are not talking about the flu, we are not talking about a head cold, we are talking about a very serious medical illness—or if a dependent child or a dependent parent has a stroke or a very critical illness, that employee could be entitled to up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave. I emphasize the word, "unpaid."

Now, the thing we hear about this is, number one, that it is mandated. We hear this—mandated, mandated. No, it is not mandated vis-a-vis the employee. No employee is mandated to take the leave. The only thing that happens is that the employers must offer the leave. What a wonderful switch that is. For once employees have some rights rather than employers having all the rights.

It is no wonder that yesterday, in front of all the business lobbyists, Sununu said they would veto any bill even if it gave them 1 day at the birth of a baby. Well, that says something about the kinder, gentler, White House does it not? I find that absolutely outrageous.

I think this is really set up to benefit special interests, that is, all the business lobbyists that control all the PAC's and all the money in this town versus over 80 percent of the American people. Gallup tells us that over 80 percent of the American people believe that employees should be with their children during the first few weeks of their life, that they should be allowed job-protected leave with family members during very serious illness, and that they should not have the risk of losing their jobs hanging over their heads and they should not have someone telling them they can just go and get another job if they get fired, that if that happens, tough. So it is 80 percent of the American people versus all the people who hand out campaign money. It is going to be a real interesting shootout come next Tuesday, and I can hardly wait. This is a very important issue for women, I think, because all these statistics show us that constantly women are the care-givers in this society, and that more and more women are also being pushed into the work force to try and maintain the family's standard of living.

So we have dual pressure. We have women getting a message that they cannot be a good employee and a good family member, and yet they are also being told that for their family to be able to maintain a certain standard of living, they have to be a good employee and get out there and get a good job. It absolutely tears people apart as they watch, say, their elderly father have a stroke and they cannot leave, or they watch one of their children have leukemia, as we had a man testify today. His baby had leukemia, and he knew she was dying, so he applied for leave. They told him he could not get it because he had not given them a month's notice. He told them it was just then that the doctor had told her that she had just days to live. So he was faced with the terrible choice of whether he would stay with his baby the last few very painful days or whether he would keep his job.

What a ridiculous position to be put in. What an outrageous position for a government that calls itself pro-family. And just think about it, only five other countries on the planet, none of them being ones that I think I would stand up and salute, take that position.

If we look at the number of working mothers in the work force, I think everyone knows that it has increased significantly. The number of mothers working full time has increased 52 percent since 1979, and the reason it has increased is because the mortgage payments are higher in America than they used to be. My goodness, what most people pay for a car now is more than what my husband and I paid for our first home. So if you have those kinds of mortgage payments, it takes two salaries to make that payment.

People still want automobiles, and obviously the price of automobiles has gone up. And children have this habit of wanting to go to college, and, of course, we want our children to go to college, but if we look at college tuitions, we know it is very hard to do it on a single income.

So we have many, many more women moving into the work force to keep that middle class standard of living.

Mr. Speaker, the interesting thing is many States have already passed family medical leave, and, as we have seen, these States that passed it, they have not gone back and asked the businesses, "Gee, did this force you out of business," because my colleagues are going to hear some horror stories here on Thursday. This will be the end of American business, everything will shut down, it is going to be all over, and it is going to be great drama, great theater.

However, Mr. Speaker, in these States that passed it, guess what? Businesses are still functioning, they are not fleeing from the State, they are all doing very well, and most of them have not reported any increased costs as well.

The General Accounting Office estimated that the national cost of the bill that we are going to be talking about this Thursday would be only $5.30 per employee annually. Well, how could GAO come up with a cost like that? Well, they look at the number of people in America affected that will qualify for such a leave, and then they figure the benefit package, and then they work it all out. To me that is a very, very, very low cost.

When my colleagues look at our competitors who are knocking our socks off in trade, western Europe, Japan, all those places, they all have paid family medical leave for a much longer period than we are talking about. Now I do not think Americans are inferior to those countries. I think one would find that we could pass this and still compete in the international market.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, employers who have put this in have found that they are much more productive because an employee who is very upset because they had to leave their baby before they were prepared to or that their parent has had a stroke and they cannot be with them, they have to be at work instead; let me tell my colleagues that that is not a productive employee. That employee's mind is elsewhere. That is an angry employee, and I would think that the goal of all American business should be focused on productive employees.

One of the biggest problems we have had in this country, in all honesty, is we have constantly communicated to people, "You cannot be a good employee and a good family member." Well, what every other industralized country has found out is that we must find ways to be good employees and good family members because that is what the world is going to look like.

Now, if my colleagues look at America's family statistics, we, unfortunately, are No. 1 on the planet in everything we do not want to be No. 1 in. We are No. 1 in drug and alcohol abuse. We are No. 1 in divorce. We are No. 1 in adolescent everything. I think it is because we do less for families than any other country that has much better statistics in the line of those family issues.

Let us talk about this a little further. I hate to portray family medical leave as an anticrime and antidrug bill, however, my colleagues, it truly is. My colleagues may look at all the pediatric studies that have been done, and what do they show? They show within the first couple days of birth; we do not know why, but a baby recognizes its mother's voice, and it recognizes its father's voice. Those are its first two very important connects to this outside world. Now, if that baby does not make that connect, how do they then connect to the bigger unit, and the bigger unit and, finally, to society?

As we have seen from all the studies done on these new children without conscience, what we have found is those connections never happened. We never got the bonding started, and, if we do not get the bonding started, it is very difficult to ever make it up later on in life.

Mr. Speaker, I would think, with the kind of statistics we are running into, and with the number of single-parent families, and all the dual working families and all the problems we have, this country would be very concerned about getting families off to a better start. How do we get them off to a better start? Family medical leave is a great way.

Mr. Speaker, for the first time employers would not be able to say to young parents, "It's your baby or your job. Either show up here for work, or you're out."

Of course, as the White House said today, they can go find another job. Well, that is a little stressful; is it not? I say, "You've got a new baby, all sorts of new obligations, and you lose your job, and now you're out looking for one."

Come on. Give me a break. That is not what we are talking about.

My colleagues are also going to hear horror stories about how this is going to affect small business. Well, we have exempted small business. Anyone with 50 employees or less is not covered by this.

In addition my colleagues will hear horror stories that once again we are doing this to the private sector and not the public sector. Wrong. In this bill we are covering Federal employees, State and local employees are congressional employees because we feel this is such an important first step for America's families, America's care givers and everyone else.

Mr. Speaker, I think that these facts are things that we want dealt with and not the other things that are going to be thrown out here on the floor during the next couple days as we talk about this.

I cochair the Congressional Caucus on Women's Issues with the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. SNOWE]. We have been trying to ge in to see President Bush with our bipartisan Congressional Caucus on Women's Issues of 150 members since he got elected. And they do not want to let us in at all. They have let in everyone else, but apparently they do not want to talk to us about family medical leave and why we think it is so important, and they did not want to talk to us about child care, and apparently they do not want to talk to us about choice and family planning issues or anything else that comes along. I do not think we can keep having kinder and gentler rhetoric pouring out of the White House as we see meaner and meaner acts vis-a-vis working families coming out of the White House.

So, I think we have a chance this week to really make a phenomenal step. It is also an interesting week in that we are getting ready to prepare for Mother's Day. It is the big day that everybody tries to buy out their guilt by running down and getting flowers, or a card, or chocolates or something else. Well, we have a real chance to say to America's parents, "We're going to do something more than that. We're going to give you some job protected leave. Now, if you've got your life together, and you can get back to work the next day, fine. This doesn't mandate that you can't. If you have a premature baby, and your wife is in the hospital having all sorts of problems, then we're saying that the father has the option, if he wants to, to ask for job protected leave, or the mother, whatever."

Mr. Speaker, this is a very important precedent, and the Government cannot foresee what is going to happen in each and every situation, but we think it is very critical for people to get off to a good start, and we really should permit this for the first time.

So, yes, the business lobbies will be here. The big bucks will be here. They will be making all sorts of threats against Members, and I am sorry to see that.

But many of the other groups that originally have opposed this have now changed their tune. The latest is the National School Board Association. They started out thinking they were not for this, but I think the more they looked at America's children, the more they realized, boy, if there is anything we need to do in this country, it is get families back together. As my colleagues know, we have to look at what is driving the drugs and the crime.

Mr. Speaker, I define a family as, "Wherever you go at night and they have to let you in." Well, take all those little places where everyone goes at night, and that is the foundation of this society, and, if those little building blocks are crumbling, this whole country is crumbling, and guess what? The building blocks are crumbling faster than any other on the planet, and I think we all feel the crumbling effects, of it, and there really is not a whole lot the Federal Government can do to rebuild families, but we can make rules so that families can be having some kind of protection as they attempt to build themselves up, and to feel good about themselves and to be care givers for each other rather than to be constantly conflicted between their employment and their family duties.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is a very, very, very important beginning for that, and so I really hope people have their voice heard rather than we just see this place continuing to be the coin operated legislative machine we have seen of the past. The only people who get the legislation out are the people who have the coins to put in. I realize that there are not any big family action PAC's, and toddlers do not have PAC's, newborns do not have PAC's, but let us hope that people without PAC's still have a voice.

There is another very important precedent in here that I think absolutely must be set, and that is the precedent of treating adopted families the same as we treat natural families. Many of us who have had people who have saved and saved and worked and gone down to an adoption agency, spent lots of money, gotten all ready to adopt a child and then found out their employer would give them no leave because they do not consider an adopted parent the same as a natural parent.

Well, they also found out that agencies will not allow you to have a child unless there is some time to bond. Adoption agencies know that the baby and the mother do not bond and the baby and the father do not bond in the reception room of the adoption agency, that it takes a little time to make that connectiveness, to put that together, so they do not want to go right back to work.

Well, if they find out that their employer does not treat them the same, they are then in conflict. Do they lose their jobs and go with the adoption or do they lose the adoption that they worked so hard to try to get?

This bill says you should not look at how a family is started and discriminate against them because they were natural versus they were adopted, that everybody has the right to get that foundation, to get that basic family foundation started and going.

So this thing, I think goes right to the values, the family values that so many have come to this well and espoused. This is really whether you are going to enact them or whether you are just going to keep talking about them. So I say let us not do any more kinder, gentler rhethoric until we see some kinder, gentler legislation, and until we see some empowerment of America's families. This bill will empower America's families to be able to become stronger, and that is what we have to do. The Federal Government cannot mandate they become stronger, but we can give them the tools and the empowerment in the work place so they can be both a good employeee and a good family member.

I hope all Members will consider this as they looked at this very serious vote that we are going to be dealing with on Thursday.

SIKH-KASHMIR HUMAN RIGHTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, at the outset I would like to state that some of my colleagues would like to participate in this special order and they may not be able to get here because of other commitments, so I will make this request for general leave.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on the subject of my special order this afternoon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana.

There was no objection.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, many in this country are cheering the exciting and positive events in Eastern Europe.

Unfortunately, brutality and oppression in other parts of the world continue to go unnoticed.

In India, thousands of government critics are being held without charge or trial under the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities Act.

According to Amnesty International, there are reports of widespread torture, and allegations that prisoners have died in custody as a result of torture.

Yet, Amnesty can't even enter India to confirm these reports.

Why? Because India, the world's largest so-called democracy, will not let them.

It's easy to understand why India continues to ban Amnesty.

In March, when the Honorable Max Madden, a British Member of Parliament, went to the Punjab and Kashmir, he reported that barbaric atrocities were being committed against the Sikh and Kashmiri communities by the India regime.

Madden reported, "I shall not forget the Young Sikh who was shot as a terrorist after he stood with his arms above his head in a field for 5 minutes."

The police later admitted that they had made a mistake.

"I shall not forget the relatives of the young man who was shot while marching in a Sikh religious festival," Madden said.

The police again admitted that they had made a mistake.

In Indian-occupied Kashmir, the human rights situation continues to deteriorate.

India's colonial Governor in Kashmir has ordered Kashmiri newspaper editors to stop publishing.

India shut down its own state television and radio stations when Kashmiri employees demanded the freedom to report the tragedies in Kashmir.

Not even the Red Cross has been allowed access to Kashmir.

Once again, India's decision to exclude the press from Kashmir is perfectly understandable.

The Indian Peoples Union for Civil Liberties [PUCL] recently reported that scores of barbaric acts are being committed by the Indian security forces in Kashmir.

The PUCL observed, "* * * that civil liberties, legal norms and civilized values have been grossly violated by the Indian security forces * * *"

On March 14, these forces killed scores of Kashmiri women when they fired live bullets in an attempt to break up a protest march.

I hope Prime Minister V.P. Singh can bring peace to India.

But there will be no peace until all groups inside India regain the basic freedoms that people all over the world are striving for.

It's time to knock down the wall, which hides India from the scrutiny of the human rights community.

It's time to hold India to the same human rights standards to which we hold every other democracy in the world.

To achieve these goals, I have introduced H.R. 4641.

This legislation terminates United States developmental assistance for India, unless India allows human rights organizations into their country in order to monitor the human rights situation in the Punjab and elsewhere.

Mr. Speaker, I call on all my colleagues to support this legislation and become cosponsors.

Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned about this. I have seen pictures of the atrocities that have taken place in the Punjab. I am now getting information and pictures and reports about what is happening in the Kashmir, and these people want freedom and democracy and human rights like the rest of us want around the world, and particularly in the United States of America. We should be insisting that they get these human rights.

India is a great democracy. It is a great nation, but they must observe universal human rights in Kashmir and in the Punjab and elsewhere in that country. If they do not, then I think the United States as a humanitarian Nation has an obligation to put whatever pressure we can upon that government until they bring about positive change and allow human rights, universally accepted human rights, in both Kashmir and in the Punjab and throughout the entire nation.

The bill referred to follows:

H.R. 4641

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE FOR INDIA.

(a) REPORT ON ACCESS OF HUMAN RIGHTS MONITORING ORGANIZATIONS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall report to the Congress whether the Government of India is implementing a policy which prevents representatives of Amnesty International and other human rights organizations from visiting India in order to monitor human rights conditions in that country.

(b) TERMINATION OF DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS.—If the President reports to the Congress, either pursuant to subsection (a) or at any other time, that the Government of India is implementing a policy which prevents representatives of Amnesty International and other human rights organizations from visiting India in order to monitor human rights conditions in that country, all assistance for India under chapter 1 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151 and following; relating to development assistance) shall be terminated, except for assistance to continue the vaccine and immunodiagnostic development project, the child survival health support project, and the private and voluntary organizations for health II project.

(c) RESUMPTION OF ASSISTANCE.—Assistance terminated pursuant to subsection (b) may be resumed only if the President reports to the Congress that the Government of India is no longer implementing a policy which prevents representatives of Amnesty International and other human rights organizations from visiting India in order to monitor human rights conditions in that country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] is recognized for 60 minutes.

[Mr. GONZALEZ addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 60 minutes.

[Mr. DORNAN of California addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NAGLE] is recognized for 60 minutes.

[Mr. NAGLE addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

THE BALTIC STATES: "THE LAND OF HEROES HOARY"

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. LEACH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, there are times in the affairs of states when moral stands must be taken despite their inconveniences or short-term negative consequences. The poignant struggle for independence in the Baltic States, most particularly in Lithuania today, presents such a circumstance.

Lest there be doubt where America stands, this Congress, this administration, the American people, are four-squarely behind the principle of self-determination.

This great Republic, this shining beacon of liberty, must resist the moral obliquity implied by a seductive real politik, and make it abundantly clear that we hold as self-evident truth that the Baltic States were never legally incorporated into the Soviet Union.

A dirty deal made 50 years ago by two dirty men—Hitler and Stalin—should not be honored by civilized people, within or without the Soviet Union.

I address myself today, with darkening misgivings, to the weltering deadlock in the Baltics, and in particular to the unequal struggle over Lithuanian independence. One might well ask, by what extraordinary shifts and violent upheavals in the fortunes of states has this incredible circumstance come to pass; where three small countries—with a total combined population of only 8 million—stoutly proclaim their right to exist coequally with their historically domineering neighbor, today's most formidable power on the Eurasian landmass?

From a geopolitical perspective, one can point with evident relief to a most remarkable diminution in the capacity, and even the willingness, of the Kremlin to project imperialist power. Over the last 12 months the United States and its NATO allies have witnessed, in an astounding, inexorable cataract of events, the triumphant culmination of 40 years of steadfast alliance diplomacy. Communism is in retreat, pellmell. This is particularly true in Eastern Europe where the decrepit monuments to and of a fraudulent Stalinist polity have collapsed, perhaps irreversibly.

On the other hand, the philosophical taproot of the changes taking place in the world—from Eastern Europe to the Baltic States; from Afghanistan to Tiananmen Square; from Nicaragua to South Africa—is a happy recognition that it is Jeffersonian democracy—the premise that governments derive their powers from the consent of the governed, from individuals endowed by a Creator with inalienable rights—that provides the most revolutionary, adventuresome, and humane model for political and economic organization in recorded history.

But there are other seething, subterranean subplots to this compelling and still unfolding human drama. Certainly there is the clamant, indomitable, but uniformly nonviolent societal demand for self-determination. Who would deny that the Baltic peoples have behaved very calmly, very coolly, and very courageously in peacefully asserting their right to be free from a sinister political system which, lest we forget, used human beings as guinea pigs for three-quarters of a century of blasphemous social experimentation with state-sponsored coercion?

An appreciation for the plight of the Baltic peoples requires reference to some rudimentary historical guideposts, to an understanding of a geographical circumstance that places three sparsely populated republics next to powerful neighbors: the Germans, the Poles, and to the east, the brooding presence of Russia. This background is not only helpful to understanding American foreign policy, but—because Baltic political history, particularly in this century, is deeply interwoven with war and revolution, fascism and communism, tyranny, and liberation—it also sheds light on the ever widening fissures threatening to shatter the multinational framework of the Soviet empire.

HISTORICAL OVERVIEW THROUGH THE FIRST WORLD WAR

In the first instance, it should be understood that the Baltic region—which today stretches from Tallinn on the Gulf of Finland in the north to the historic Niemen River in the south, bounded in the west by the Baltic Sea and in the east by the Russian and Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republics—is not culturally, politically, or socially a product of the oriental despotism practiced by Ghengis Khan and his heirs, which held much of Russia in its icy grip as late as the time of Charles V in the mid-16th century. Generally speaking, the Baltic people looked neither to Constantinople nor Moscow as the lodestar of historical destiny; rather, they looked west: to Stockholm, to Konigsberg, to Warsaw, to the European heart of the old Holy Roman Empire.

The Baltic nations have never naturally gravitated toward Russia. Despite extended periods of Russian domination since the late 18th century, the various peoples of the Baltic region have historically adopted a Western orientation and outlook. A powerfully flowing current of Western influence found historic outlets principally through the expansionism of both the Baltic Germans and Swedes, and in the case of Lithuania, through association and partial accommodation with Poland.

By the mid-14th century, both Estonia and Latvia became stamping grounds for the order of the Teutonic

Knights, the crusading Germanic forerunners of the Hohenzollern Junkers and Prussian military might. By the Reformation, German Lutheranism was the common faith of the region. Culturally and economically, the northern Baltic peoples fell under the civilizing shadow of the Hanseatic League, and their principal German cities of Bremen, Lubeck, and Hamburg.

After the Thirty Years' War and the decline of Teutonic power, the peoples of Estonia and Latvia—the latter known at the time as Livonia—fell under the control of King Gustavus Adolphus and the transient authority of Swedish metropolitan power. Sweden's rule proved to be as enlightened as it was brief. According to scholarly authority, a reasonably well-developed educational system was established by the Swedes, and the peasantry of Estonia and Latvia were even granted the extraordinary right of action to sue their landed masters in courts of law.

Lithuania, on the other hand, has historically been intimately associated in culture, politics, and religion with Poland. Lithuanian-Polish ties date back at least as far as the end of 14th century, when the Lithuanian Grand Prince accepted the Polish crown and catholicism. A powerful Polish-Lithuanian army inflicted a decisive defeat on the Knights of the Teutonic Order at the Battle of Tannenberg in 1410, halting Germanic expansion. Lithuania achieved a remarkable measure of power and prestige in east-central Europe, both independently and in association with Poland. Even as late as 1772, the territory of Lithuania stretched from Courland on the Baltic to just east of Smolensk in White Russia, with its southern extremities skirting Kiev and the mighty Dnieper River in the heart of the Ukraine.

But by the beginning of the 18th century, the ponderous exertion of Russian expansionism had begun to make a weighty impression. Under Peter the Great, Russia acquired Estonia and Latvia from Sweden and thereby secured a strategic outlet to the Baltic. By the end of the century, the final of three successive partitions of Poland resulted in the Russian Empress Catherine II's annexation of Lithuania, as well as the extinction of Polish independence for well over 120 years.

Russian rule can be summed up in a phrase which—with the one exception, perhaps, of the era of great reforms in the mid-19th century—encapsulated the Kremlin's imperious attitude toward non-Russian peoples: autocracy, orthodoxy, and subjugation of national identities. These policies embodied a rigid, reactionary and autocratic outlook in Moscow which sought forcibly to imprint a peculiarly great Russian conception of politics, culture, and society throughout the vast expanse of the empire.

Thus the seeds of the movement for political and cultural independence, for all that we know broadly as the self-determination of nations and peoples, were sown in the Baltic States as much by the stultifying imperial ukases proclaimed by the Tsars, as by the specious dialectic of an arrogant Soviet commissar claiming to ride and interpret a crest of historical forces.

It is the harsh Russification policies of the ancient regime which serves both as the historic well-spring of Baltic enmity toward Russian rule and the current distrust of any modified approach to sovereignty, as proposed by Gorbachev or envisioned by allegedly practical geostrategists in the West.

INDEPENDENCE IN AFTERMATH OF WORLD WAR I

The near simultaneous overthrow of the Romanov Monarchy in Russia and the defeat of Imperial Germany in 1917-18 created a trenchant opportunity for the Baltic States to press their independence aspirations.

When Lenin and his Bolshevik collaborators came to power in November 1917, not only did they affect to support—through stunningly elliptical theoretical pronouncements—the principle of national self-determination; but the right of self-determination was actually conceded in the first official act of the new Soviet Government. On the very day of the revolution, the fledgling Soviet regime issued a decree of peace in which it proposed to all belligerent peoples the immediate opening of negotiations for what the Bolsheviks described as a just and democratic peace * * * an immediate peace without annexations that is, the seizure of foreign lands or the forcible incorporation of foreign nations—and indemnities."

However much Lenin the theorist was prepared to recognize the right of self-determnination, in practice Lenin the dictator was often ruthlessly opposed. Finland and the Ukraine learned first hand of the great repudiator's repudiation of high-minded ideals: Both were the bloodied recipients of Bolshevik invasions in early 1918; both were freed from the grip of a Red Terror only by Teutonic intervention, White Terror, and German military occupation.

Russia concluded a separate peace with Imperial Germany in March 1918. This armistice agreement, the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk, sheared the Russian Empire of all the western provinces conquered by the Tsars. The Kaiser's negotiators, aiming at the creation of a vast chain of buffer states under Berlin's sway, stripped Russia of Poland, Finland, Lithuania, and Courland, of Estonia and Livonia—Latvia; of the Ukraine; and of the Transcaucasus.

With characteristic clarity Lenin reportedly noted that the Bolsheviks "must have the courage to face the unadorned bitter truth, we must size up in full to the very bottom the abyss of defeat, partition enslavement and humiliation into which we have been thrown." As Winston Churchill scathingly observed about Lenin's thoughts at the time: "It is not possible to better these descriptions of the first boon which Lenin conferred upon the Russian nation."

American intervention on the continent, which precipitated the defeat of the Central Powers in November, 1918, soon rendered impossible the Wilhelmstrasse's conception of a German-dominated security system in east central Europe. Instead, the collapse of German martial influence created a power vacuum.

The path to national independence, otherwise obstructed by the polished jackboots of a stern Prussian Junker or the surly growl of the Russian bear, was now open and accessible to nations from the Baltic to the Black Sea. Estonia declared independence on November 28, 1917; Finland on December 6; the Ukraine on December 18; Latvia on January 12, 1918; and Lithuania on February 16. On April 9, 1918, Bessarabia formed a union with Romania. On April 22 the Transcaucasian Council declared its complete independence, and by the end of May the Transcaucasian Federal Government had dissolved into its constituent republics: Georgia, Armenia, and Azerbaijan.

THE INTERWAR YEARS

The withdrawal of allied military forces from Russia, the end of civil war, and peace with Poland allowed Lenin to consolidate Soviet power over the interior of the Russian empire. Azerbaijan was reoccupied in April 1920; Armenia in December; and in February 1921 Georgia was compelled to accept Moscow's political authority.

In the meanwhile, the Soviet Union attempted to break its diplomatic isolation by establishing normal relations with the Baltic States. Estonia became the first non-Communist country to enjoy the patina of diplomatic normalcy with Bolshevik Russia, when it signed a treaty to this effect with the Soviet Union in February 1920. Later in the same year similar agreements were concluded with Latvia, Lithuania, and Finland. As George F. Kennan has written:

> It is ironic to reflect that these little countries, the first to establish normal relations with Moscow, should also have been, together with Poland, the first to be swallowed up again by Moscow in 1939, when Russia and Germany moved together to smash the European order established by Versailles.

THE HITLER-STALIN PACT

The terms of the infamous agreement negotiated by Molotov and Ribbentrop on behalf of the Soviet and Nazi dictators in August 1939 are well known to all. The Nonaggression Pact, made public to a reeling and flabbergasted Western world, provided for a mutual renunciation of aggression and for observation of neutrality by the unengaged party in case either side was attacked by a third country.

More sinister was the attached secret protocol, which effectually embodied an agreement cold bloodedly to divide Eastern Europe into spheres of influence. In the event of "territorial and political rearrangement," as the protocol euphemistically referred to the imminent destruction of Poland, the sphere of exclusive Soviet influence was to include Finland, Estonia, and Latvia, approximately half of Poland, as well as the Romanian province of Bessarabia. One month later, at Soviet request, this line was modified to include Lithuania within the Soviet zone of control. In return, Germany received a larger slice of Poland.

When it became apparent to a stunned Kremlin that Hitler's blitzkrieg would crush Poland in a matter of weeks, Stalin moved with brutal alacrity. First, he undertook a military occupation of the "Soviet zone" of Poland. Next, he demanded that the Baltic States accept Soviet bases and garrisons on their respective territories. This brazen conduct was ostensibly legalized by mutual assistance treaties, which Estonia and Latvia had—under duress—concluded with Moscow by the fall of 1939.

Lithuania was accorded slightly different treatment. In late September 1939 the Soviet Union unconditionally offered the Lithuanians their capital of Vilnius, which the Poles had captured in their 1920 war against the Soviet Union and which was now, following Poland's defeat and last partition, under Red army control. Sorely tempted, Lithuania accepted. Soon thereafter, however, Moscow began to press Lithuania to accept an Estonian-style Mutual Assistance Treaty. After some resistance, and a realization that the West would not intervene, Lithuania too, gave in, and in October 1939 yielded to a Soviet military presence.

Stalin's next move against the Baltic States arose in the context of Kremlin consternation over the speed and ease of new German military triumphs, this time in the low countries and France. in May and June 1940, the Soviets shamelessly accused their small Baltic neighbors of conniving with the West and each other to undermine the letter and spirit of their alliances with the Soviet Union. On the same day Nazi armies entered Paris—June 14, 1940—Lithuania was presented with an ultimatum demanding the creation of a pro-Soviet regime. Two days later Estonia and Latvia received similar ultimatums, and a Soviet orchestrated transfer of power to so-called people's governments was achieved shortly thereafter.

Following swift mass purges of the non-Communist political elements in all three countries, egregiously unrepresentative "People's Diets" were elected. Each met on July 21, 1940. Each proclaimed, unanimously and by acclamation, the conversion of their respective countries into Soviet Socialist Republics. By August 1940, the Soviet bear had devoured the Baltic countries, each having been proclaimed union republics of the Soviet Union.

Here I quote again from one of our most distinguished diplomatic historians, Mr. Kennan:

> We cannot appreciate the full significance of the division of eastern Europe unless we visualize the extent of the catastrophe it spelled for the affected peoples. Delivery into the hands of either of these great powers, Nazi Germany or Stalinist Russia, was a calamity of the first order for almost everyone concerned. Acting from quite different ideological motives, both Germans and Russians perpetrated appalling cruelties in their respective spheres of influence. The Germans practiced their usual measures of sadism and extermination against the Jews and deliberately reduced the entire Polish population to a state of material misery and terror. The Russians took their customary reprisals against "class enemies" and deported innocent people to the interior of Russia in such numbers and with such callous brutality that hundreds of thousands of them appear not to have survived the ordeal. For the three Baltic countries, this division eventually meant the end of national independence. In the case of the Estonians, in particular, it meant the deportation and permanent dispersal of a large portion of the population—the literal removal of much of a nation from its homeland. For the Finns, it meant a bloody and terrible war.

In fact, some 60,000 Estonians, 35,000 Latvians, and 34,000 Lithuanians are reliably believed to have been deported to the Soviet Union in 1940 alone—most of them, including many women and children, never to return. Such was the execrable conduct of the Soviet occupation forces that when the Nazis invaded the U.S.S.R. in June 1941, many Baltic citizens revolted against their Communist tormentors and joined the Germans. In turn, the Baltic States were rewarded for their troubles with brutal political oppression at the hands of the Nazi gangsters.

Thus Baltic independence had lasted 22 years, with a half century of grievous vigil to follow.

The defeat of Nazi Germany and the return of the Red Army in 1944-1945 brought in its train fresh Soviet brutality. Between 1945 and 1949 some 600,000 Baltic citizens were forcibly deported to the Soviet Union, a figure which, given a total population at the time of about 6 million, and given the implications of the "gulag" to which they were largely sentenced, approaches genocidal proportions.

Neither passively not pacifically did the Baltic peoples submit to crude Soviet denationalization policies. An active partisan resistance was carried on in all three Republics against the Soviet occupiers from the fall of 1944 until 1952. In Lithuania, such was the scale and intensity of the guerrilla war against Moscow that some 30,000 partisan fighters controlled the countryside for several years. Following the military pacification of the region, the Soviets collectivized agriculture, nationalized all commerce and industry, integrated the Baltic economies into the Stalinist-style centralized command system, and commenced the brazen Russification policies which have had the consequence of dramatically altering the postwar demographics of each of the Baltic States, particularly Latvia and Estonia.

THE PRESENT CRISIS

It is against this illegal, malevolent, and unconscionable Soviet hegemony that the Baltic people have valiantly striven since the close of World War II. Even at the height of Soviet oppression, Baltic nationalism was never fully submerged. But it was only with the rise of the Solidarity movement in Poland, combined with the reformist policies begun within the Soviet Union by Mikhail Gorbachev—symbolized by glasnost and perestroika—that a reflowering of grassroots popular fronts, Sajudis, and other mass demonstrations of heightened national consciousness burst forth with such intensity.

Moscow's attitude today toward the Baltic States is schizoid at best, Stalinist at worst. Earlier this year Gorbachev seemed resigned to accept, albeit reluctantly, not only the dismantlement of the Soviet empire in Eastern Europe, but the partial dismemberment of the Soviet state. For example, this past January Baltic pressure for enhanced economic autonomy resulted in the Soviet Union granting the Baltic States limited economic independence.

As former Secretary of State George Shultz has pointed out, it appeared as though earlier this year Gorbachev had astutely laid the predicate for accepting Lithuanian independence—but in so doing differentiating the Baltic circumstance from the demands of other Soviet Republics for independence—when Moscow denounced both the Hitler-Stalin Pact and its secret protocols. The Supreme Soviet even went so far as to declare that the annexation of Lithuania and the other Baltic States in 1940 was illegal.

In a February 27 meeting with Dr. Kazimiera Prunskiene, the current Prime Minister of Lithuania, Gorbachev implicitly seemed to have concluded there was no path back, even jokingly telling her as she departed that perhaps one day they would meet again at an international forum.

But in recent months Mr. Gorbachev has dramatically backtracked from this sapient course, and made it clear that there are limits beyond which Moscow is not prepared to go. The Soviet Union, he has pointed out in words and described more poignantly in action, still retains authority over oil and gas lines, the armed forces in the region, and other facilities allegedly of "all-Union importance."

In March of this year Gorbachev asserted that the economic price of Lithuanian independence would be $34 billion in hard currency, as back payment for Soviet capital investment and goods. To this egregious assumption that freedom could be ransomed, the Lithuanians have understandably countercharged that Moscow should compensate them for the cruel deportation and criminal execution of thousands of their citizens, for nationalizing their economy, and for the environmental damage wreaked by Stalinist industrial plans.

Gorbachev's increasingly strident warnings have not deterred the three freely elected non-Communist Baltic Parliaments, which have approved plans for economic autonomy and declared independence as their current status and/or ultimate goals. In fact, even as the Lithuanian crisis continued to escalate, Estonia declared independence on the basis of its pre-Soviet constitution. And last Friday, May 4, Latvia declared its independence from the Soviet Union and in so doing reinstated symbolically compelling provisions of its 1922 constitution.

Unlike Lithuania—which some commentators have criticized for allegedly having presented Moscow with a closely held fait accompli before asking for negotiations on independence—the Government in Riga has proposed a transition period to full independence, during which the bulk of its 1922 constitution will be deemed to be in suspension. Gorbachev, however, has not responded favorably to the somewhat less confrontational Latvian independence movement, and Tass has reported that no negotiations can begin until the status quo ante May 4 is restored. Retaliatory measures by Moscow are expected to be in the offing.

But Lithuania remains the focus of the current crisis. The first free elections in 50 years were held in Lithuania in February 1990. The elections resulted in a convincing victory for Sajudis, which captured roughly 60 percent of the seats in the Lithuanian Parliament. The new Parliament elected Vytautas Landsbergis, the Sajudis leader, as the new President of Lithuania. Shortly thereafter, on March 11, 1990, Lithuania's Parliament formally declared Lithuania's independence from the Soviet Union.

As we all have come to understand, this declaration precipitated a crisis with Moscow. Gorbachev responded by insisting that Lithuania rescind its independence declaration. Soviet military forces began ominous maneuvers on Lithuanian soil, with armored vehicles clanking their menacing way through the peaceful streets of Vilnius, and aircraft buzzing low over the city. Soviet military forces then occupied the Lithuanian Communist Party buildings and the Justice Ministry. The Lithuanian prosecutor was ousted and replaced by a new prosecutor appointed by Moscow. Some Lithuanians who had deserted from the Soviet Army were physically assaulted and arrested by Soviet troops.

When these churlish, bullying tactics failed to intimidate Lithuania, Gorbachev imposed an economic embargo on April 16. The embargo included oil and other energy supplies, as well as some foodstuffs. President Gorbachev stated that the embargo would not be lifted until Lithuania rescinded its independence declaration, revoked legislation to introduce citizen identity cards, reconsidered its decision to boycott the Soviet's spring military draft, and accepted as well Soviet constitutional law as the supreme law of the land.

Superficially, Moscow appears to be pursuing a precise strategy of coercive diplomacy, or compellance, employing the use of threats and limited force to persuade Lithuania to rescind its declaration of independence and accept the legality of Soviet constitutional rule. But as the diplomatic scholars Gordon A. Craig and Alexander George have noted, "In contrast to pure coercion, coercive diplomacy typically requires negotiation, bargaining, and compromise."

No serious observer of Soviet affairs would question that Gorbachev's brand of hardball is considerably milder than that practiced by his predecessors. But even if the West should take certain solace in Gorbachev's relative moderation in the use of force, it must not acquiesce in any coercion nor condone obvious Russian intransigence on Baltic independence. Despite slightly varying formula proposed in Moscow for a resolution of the circumstance, the fact remains that it is Lithuania which has to date proposed all the major concessions—going so far as to be open to the use of Paris and Bonn, two countries which have seemingly identified more with Moscow than with Vilnius, to broker a negotiated compromise that would suspend Lithuanian independence—while Gorbachev has so far refused to negotiate with Lithuanian emissaries sent to Moscow for that very purpose.

It is appropriate at this juncture to express the historic posture of the United States toward Lithuanian independence, and what President Franklin Roosevelt accurately described as Moscow's "annihilation of the political independence and territorial integrity" of the Baltic States.

For five decades, the diplomacy of the United States has been animated by one guiding, unimpeachable principle: That America does not recognize the forcible incorporation of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania into the U.S.S.R. The United States maintains full diplomatic relations with representatives of the last free governments of those states. Those states are represented by three Charges d'Affaires resident in the United States. Their flags fly at the Department of State. And now the Lithuanian Prime Minister has had a private meeting, in the White House, with the President of the United States. While the formalities as well as the discussion may not have provided as forthcoming assurances as the Government in Vilnius might have preferred, the fact of the meeting was of legitimizing significance.

Thomas Paine, in his polemic "The Rights of Man" in words later paraphrased in the acceptance speech of a Republican Presidential candidate, once noted that: "Moderation in temper is always a virtue; moderation in principle is always a vice."

Just as we are a people that have prided ourselves in forming a government of laws and not men—that is, where constraints of constitutional procedure take precedence over the potentially capricious judgments of individual leaders—we are a society that must give precedence to following our principles in policy, rather than shirking our most deep-seated values to give cover to a particular foreign leader. If the political position of Gorbachev or any Soviet head of state is threatened by our allegiance to our values, such an eventuality would be unfortunate, but that fact can't dictate an American waffling on the values inherent in the Declaration of Independence. In that document, our architect of freedom, Thomas Jefferson wrote, "when a long train of abuses and usurpations pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism it is their right, it is their duty to throw off such a government and provide new guards for their future security."

It is the democracy of Thomas Jefferson and Thomas Paine, not Mikhail Gorbachev, that Americans should reflect upon and identify with today.

By holding to such a revolutionary perspective, I don't intend to suggest that President Bush isn't correct to be properly concerned for restraint and dialog. The President's decision not to rush to confront is designed to ensure that we not precipitate a counterproductive bloodletting. By underscoring that Lithuania—indeed all of the Baltic States—are issues of indigenous self-determination, the Bush administration is wise to refuse to allow courageous peoples to be used as pawns in an East-West conflict. Conscious of the Hungarian experience three decades ago, the President simply cannot in good conscience give Lithuania false hope of American intervention.

Nonetheless, just as we cannot by an overt act place ourselves in the position of precipitating bloodletting, we cannot by failing to articulate our principles identify with the bloodletters. While the administration may be prudent in not hastily recognizing the Landsbergis government, it must take care not to renounce our heritage, our commitment to the right of self-determination. The real question should not be "whether" to recognize an independent Lithuania but "when;" not whether to embarrass gratuitously Gorbachev, but how to acknowledge carefully the coincidence of our own values and Baltic aspirations.

The Dutch architect Mies vander Rohe developed a theory of architecture around simplicity of design and the observation that "less is more," that is, that the cluttering of design with fixtures and flourishes too often represents imperfection. Likewise, less can sometimes be more in foreign policy. Given the fact that the United States is not in a strategic position to lend either military or even much economic assistance to breach a Soviet blockade of the Baltic States, honesty as much as prudence dictates that the only credence-laden policy is one of thoughtful articulation of values, rather than belligerency of deed.

Here, it is important how little is being asked of us. In her visit last week, Lithuanian Prime Minister Prunskiene asked not for a handout, but simply that the United States hold its hand up for freedom and take the modest step of recognizing her government. With one polite observation—the notion that in one sense Lithuania was freer today than even the United States—she delivered a devastatingly powerful critique of American foreign policy.

Asked by one of our foremost intelligence advisers at a Carnegie-sponsored colloquium I participated in what compromises with Moscow on future independence she envisioned, Prunskiene said: "We believe in some ways we are more free today than any Western state because we are free to take positions that apparently the Western states are constrained by Moscow not to." The unstated implication was clear: Lithuanians were prepared to risk their lives for a freedom for which some in the West weren't willing to risk their pocketbooks.

With the impending summit and negotiations on the future of Germany as well as force levels in Europe, now is neither the time for sabre rattling nor heightened East-West confrontation. Nevertheless, it must be understood that the background of the progress that has been made in arms control and in the effectuation of revolutionary change in Eastern Europe is steadfast allegiance to principle and collective understanding of the common fate of common peoples. We have stood unequivocally for the individual rights of minority groups within the Soviet Union; we can do no less for the national rights of the Baltic republics. Calmly and carefully the United States Congress must make it clear that the progressive change we all desire in our relationship with the Soviet Union is jeopardized by Soviet coercion in the Baltics.

The United States is not in a position to intervene; we do not visualize the Baltic States to be part of a cold war equation, nor East-West confrontation; we simply hold that individual peoples have inalienable rights that deserve being respected. If they are not, the U.S. Congress cannot be expected to sanction civilized discourse with an uncivilized nation.

Specifically, the Soviet Union must come to understand that increased coercion in the Baltics will at a minimum, make less likely progressive financial and trade ties with the United States. Export-Import Bank guarantees, Overseas Private Investment Corporation insurance, Soviet loans from or membership in the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, United States commercial bank loans to the Soviet Union, relaxation of Cocom export controls, the granting of most-favored-nation trade status, the extension of tariff benefits under the generalized system of preferences—all become jeopardized.

Historically, the strength of our foreign policy has been most evidenced when we have stood solidly for advancing abroad the principles and ideals upon which our society at home are based. Principles shouldn't be shortchanged for short-sighted objectives or short-sighted leaders, even Gorbachev.

With this observation I don't intend to be cavalier about the prospect of perestroika's failure or Mr. Gorbachev's possible political demise. Every responsible American leader is conscious that the political policies initiated by Mr. Gorbachev represent a radical break with the Soviet past and, more importantly, have generally redounded to the benefit of our own as well as the Soviet people. Indeed, the very independence of the Baltic States which Gorbachev appears now to be intent on blocking has been made possible in part because he has unlocked the door and thrown away the key. Thus, President Bush has been careful not to posture excessively or to undermine unintentionally Gorbachev. Instead, the President has gone out of his way to reassure the Soviet Union that the United States will not exploit the prodigious changes in Eastern Europe to Soviet disadvantage.

But respecting the legitimate security interests of the Soviet Union should not—as one foreign policy analyst has suggested—extend to placing the imprimatur of the United States behind a legitimization of the mutual security treaties, and Soviet military base rights, foisted on the Baltic States in 1939. Why should the United States: First, appear to endorse treaties negotiated under duress; and second, endorse the retention of formidable Soviet military forces in the Baltic Military District? A more principled and self-interested approach to the security dimension of the Baltic question would involve treating the three republics as nonaligned, neutral countries—like Austria—and, if Moscow needs additional reassurance, limiting their arms by international treaty and providing guaranteed rights of access to Kaliningrad [Konigsberg].

As to Gorbachev's secession crisis, in contrast with the United States, Lithuania is showing the world that the Soviet Union is a collection of nation states, a boiling, rather than a melting pot.

At first blush it might be argued that the Lithuanian struggle finds precedent in two juxtaposed themes in American history: the imperative for self-determination implicit in the Revolutionary War and the imperative of union—an undivided house—implicit in the Civil War. Yet few analogies are more flaccid, more fatally flawed. Only one of the seceding States, Texas, had formerly been a sovereign country; all had entered the Union voluntarily. Even more important, the analogy to our war between the States is flawed because the purpose of the Civil War was to end slavery, to advance the cause of human freedom, rather than restrict individual rights and aspirations.

As Members of Congress understand, article 72 of the Soviet Constitution gives all 16 Soviet republics the explicit right of secession. Until early this April, no enabling legislation had ever been adopted. Now that the Supreme Soviet has enacted a law on secession, however, it very much looks as though it is designed as a catch-22, an approach which recognizes a right but then stifles its implementation. Indeed, as Mr. Sergei Stankevich—a progressive member of the Congress of People's Deputies of the Soviet Union, as well as a member of the Supreme Soviet—noted before a House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee last week, the procedures under the law are totally unrealistic. They make the right to secession unrealizable.

Put more succinctly by Mrs. Prunskiene: "It is not a law of secession, but a law to prevent secession." For the Baltic States, she points out, "Soviet law can't be used as a basis to leave or it would imply we came in legally."

From the Soviet perspective, the issue is the principle of secession as constrained by Soviet law and the Soviet Constitution. From the Baltic perspective, it is national self-determination based on indigenous history. Freedom is not considered a right granted and thus removable by Soviet law; it springs from the people.

More important therefore for the Baltic States than the domestic law of the Soviet Union, which in this instance seems regressively out of step with a constitution not known for its progressivity, is international law and the legal norm of nations. Here, Mrs. Prunskiene notes another paradox. Lithuania would rather not consider the option of presenting its case to the International Court of Justice at The Hague until the government in Vilnius receives formal recognition by Western governments. Western justice apparently seems dicey to Vilnius without the value laden imprimatur of Western recognition. Such a case, legal scholars note, would be fraught with problematic issues, including border definition disputes, but it is precisely for problems of this nature that the International Court was established. The West shouldn't shy away from advocating its utilization.

Nor should the West shy away from labeling the recently passed law on secession incontrovertibly Stalinist. It and the new law on national demonstrations give authorities the right to utilize whatever mechanisms they might choose to restrain the expression of nationality sentiment.

To conclude, to the extent that face is at issue, the West ought to have no qualms in helping take Gorbachev off the hook, in helping advance a dialogue that does not appear to compel Moscow with too much embarrassment to back down. But we ought to be very clear about the importance we place on our values. The quid pro quo for Western negotiating assistance must be the early coming to fruition of independence of each of the Baltic States. Otherwise, it will be impossible for the United States and our allies to respect the Soviet constitutional process, and thus impossible for the West to take any stand except one increasingly confrontational with Moscow on Baltic independence as well as a host of other issues. New Muscovite coercion in the Baltics should be understood as a tripwire for formal recognition in the West of the fledgling governments, not the reverse.

We have, after all, with our tawdry silence demonstrated for all Soviet citizens to see that we have not precipitated this crisis, that it is a matter carved from Baltic history and wrought from the courage of indigenous populations. It is a crisis made in the Baltics, not conjured or conspired from Washington, London or Bonn. It is therefore Gorbachev's personal, irreducible choice whether to embrace the Stalinist mantle. Unprovoked by the West, he cannot expect any sympathy by pretending either that his hand was forced by uncontrollable forces within Russia or that his cards are played with more finesse than they might have been by his predecessors or potential successors.

One of the few constants of Soviet foreign policy has been the theme of virtually every Soviet head of state that more oppressive alternatives loom on the horizon and that the West has an obligation to bolster the credibility of Soviet status quo leadership rather than risk the abyss of the unknown. Sometimes, perhaps even now, this theme must be factored into Western strategic calculations, but on an issue of such historical import, individual accountability must be assigned in the East and repercussions weighed in the West.

Gorbachev holds in his own hands the choice of whether to bring a halt not only to glasnost but perestroika, and while the United States cannot guarantee that Lithuania and the other Baltic States will regain their sovereignty, it can guarantee that it will not lend its voice to illegitimate Soviet claims nor lend a hand to Soviet designs for significant Western economic assistance if it refuses to respond to the voices of freedom.

With regard to Eastern Europe, the West appears on the verge of winning World War III without firing a shot. Importantly, the loss of the empire has reflected well on the loser. Like the much revered last Shogun of Japan, Tokugawa Keiki, who surrendered to the Emperor's forces before, rather than after a cataclysmic battle could erupt, Gorbachev recognized that history demanded retreat.

In the sixties, it was cute, if not profound for critics of our most embarrassing war to have suggested that the United States should simply declare victory and get out of Vietnam. What Gorbachev has done in Eastern Europe and Afghanistan is declare not victory, but vision, and helped accelerate the inevitable. Whether he is capable or willing to continue to preside autocratically over the Baltic States is yet to be seen. He may think of himself as a unique combination of Jefferson and Lincoln. His fellow countrymen may suspect there is too much Lenin or Tsar.

The Lithuanian poet Solomene Neris, once wrote that "Lithuania is like a drop of amber in my hand." Lithuanian amber has been burned into the consciousness of free people everywhere. It is the amber of freedom, the symbol of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness * * * for the courageous people of the Baltic States as well as a somber, watchful West.

While Neris, like so many artists subjected to totalitarian controls, compromised her own principles with a poetic abomination in praise of Stalin, the Lithuanian people have increasingly harkened back to their cultural as well as historical roots and looked to a European class of intellectuals for leadership.

A poem by one of the profoundest voices of Lithuanian nationalism, now a member of the Lithuanian Parliament, Justinas Marcinkevicius, ties the present with the past:

When of our homeland we would speak
First let the fallen have their say.
It is their breath that like a breeze unfurls our banners.
It is they whose hands bless all our deeds and dreams,
Whose eyes are watching us like stars,
Whose words bear fruit upon the earth.
They're seen in bird song, cherry blossom, a woman's smile, a baby's mirth;
It is their right hand that upholds our homeland's present and her future.
In words of truth, lets speak of her
And let the fallen understand us.

The Lithuanian National Anthem, written in 1889, has been banned for many years but is being sung since the declaration of freedom. Freely translated, it reads:

Hail Lithuania, a true friend.
Land of heroes hoary.
From the past days sons may ever draw their strength and glory.
May the children ever follow their undaunted fathers in devotion to their country and goodwill to others.
May the sun of our loved shore shine upon us evermore.
May our faith and truth keep our pathway lighted.
May the love of fatherland make us strong of heart and hand.
May our land ever stand peaceful and united.

The people of the United States have no choice but to join lustily in the choir.

May Lithuania, with its children following undaunted fathers, ever stand sovereign. A true friend, this land of heroes hoary, deserves to be peaceful and united.

For the United States the dilemma posed by Baltic aspirations should not be wrenching. We simply have to harken to our heritage and hold to the exhortative beacon of thought encapsulated in the Lithuanian anthem.

May our faith and truth keep ours as well as their pathway lighted.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 770, FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1989

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 101-479) on the resolution (H. Res. 388) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 770) to entitle employees to family leave in certain cases involving a birth, an adoption, or a serious health condition and to temporary medical leave in certain cases involving a serious health condition, with adequate protection of the employees; employment and benefit rights, and to establish a commission to study ways of providing salary replacement for employees who take any such leave, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to allow the gentleman from Florida [Mr. IRELAND] to precede my special order and I will follow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. DYMALLY]. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

SMALL BUSINESS WEEK

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. IRELAND] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the men and women who comprise our Nation's small business community. Congress has designated May 6 to 12 as "National Small Business Week" to recognize the contributions of America's 20 million small businesses.

I would like to take the next few minutes to put before my colleagues some fundamental ideas about the role of small business—and the role of government toward small business—in our society.

Our Nation's entrepreneurs, perhaps more than any group in the country, represent—the true spirit of individual economic and political freedom;

The true spirit of social and personal responsibility; and

The true spirit of our great country.

Their individual and collective contributions to their communities have improved the quality of life for all of our citizens. What's more, they set an example for the rest of the country—and even the rest of the world—to follow.

We all fulfill different roles in our daily lives—as family members, as employers or employees, as members of our communities and as citizens of the United States.

Part of what has made our country the most powerful in the world is that we understand the value of working together, of assuming various individual roles in order to achieve a common goal. And we do those things well.

We recognize that some people, and some organizations, are better equipped than others to perform certain functions—and we take advantage of those unique abilities and that knowledge.

I think that the Federal Government has a unique and important role in shaping our country, as well. But I think we have lost sight of just what that role should be.

You know, for years now, a powerful contingent in this body has tried to convince the American public that they must choose between ineffective, government-based, bureaucratic solutions to the problems we face as a society, and ignoring those problems altogether. They have done a masterful job of shaping public perception of domestic policy issues in those terms.

Here's how this concept works:

If you don't think that the Federal Government should be in the business of regulating and managing child-care centers, then you don't care about working parents and their children—or so this group wants us to believe.

If you don't believe that mandated benefits will magically provide affordable health insurance for every American, then you don't care about workers and their families—or so they want us to believe.

Now, the small-business community knows better than that. They've understood for years what some people in this country are just coming to realize: that big-government proposals just won't solve the very real and serious problems confronting our Nation today.

The record is clear on this point: big government just doesn't work. More and more people, all over the world, are driving that point home every day. They're proving it in Eastern Europe, in Central America, in the U.S.S.R.—and, yes—even in the United States.

Here at home, virtually all of our major cities are living proof of the failure of bureaucratic solutions to problems ranging from education to homelessness to drug abuse.

But our Nation's entrepreneurs also know that it is not enough to simply point out the failure to these bureaucratic policies.

We need to do more than just say "no, no, no!" to every bureaucratic-based solution proposed by those who believe that social engineering is more effective than free enterprise.

We must do more than simply scoff at proposals which rely on elite bureaucracies—rather than everyday people—to solve the very real social problems facing our communities.

Our Nation's small businesses know that it's not enough just to show that bureaucratic solutions don't work—that's easy!

They understand that they have an obligation to put forward ideas and solutions that will address these problems and to do so within the framework of the free-market policies that have made this country great. Policies that allow people the freedom to choose what works best for them, and for their families, their businesses and their communities.

Small business owners are a very special breed. Their belief in themselves, in their products and services, and in their employees is strong enough that they are willing to put everything on the line in order to see their businesses succeed.

We in the Federal Government need to begin to apply that kind of commitment, that kind of energy, and that kind of caring into addressing social problems we can no longer ignore.

We need to find ways to apply the same free enterprise, free market concepts that have made this country an economic superpower to the serious social problems we face.

And, we need to safeguard those free enterprise concepts that in the past have been threatened by unnecessary regulations, a counterproductive tax structure, and an attitude that small business should bear the economic burden of expensive, ineffective and bureaucratic solutions to social problems.

We have achieved major reforms in the regulatory process through the Regulatory Flexibility Act. But we need to do more along those lines. We need to give the act some teeth by subjecting agencies that fail to comply to full judicial review. I have introduced legislation that would achieve this goal.

The Regulatory Flexibility Act needs to apply to the Internal Revenue Service, as well. We all remember the nightmare of compliance problems caused by IRS initiatives concerning section 89. We all remember the simplified W-4 Forms brought to us courtesy of the IRS, and we all remember the auto log rules, and well.

Each of these fiascos could have been avoided if the IRS had simply been subject to the terms of the Regulatory Flexibility Act—terms that other Federal agencies have been working under for some time.

I understand that the Ways and Means Committee is seriously considering legislation to subject the IRS to the Regulatory Flexibility Act, and I applaud their efforts. It would mean substantial relief for our Nation's small businesses, and it would bring more accountability to the Government, as well.

Congress also needs to enact legislation to permanently authorize the White House Conference on Small Business. In the past, these forums have provided invaluable information on the needs and concerns of the entrepreneur. It is a dialog that we cannot afford to end.

The small business community is sending a message to our Nation's policymakers: there is a better way to solve the serious problems we face as a nation. But, small businesses, individuals, and local communities need to be part of the solution.

Instead of pouring our energies and resources into bloated, topheavy and out-of-touch bureaucracies in the name of social reform, we need to find innovative, effective solutions to the problems that we face and we must take advantage of the knowledge and experience of our Nation's entrepreneurs.

Small business people know from experience that people who are out of work do not need an unemployment system that discourages them from even trying to find a job.

They need training and skills to prepare them for the job market of the 1990's. Your practical knowledge could be put to work to help solve the problem nationwide.

Small business people know from working with their own employees that working parents don't need a "national nanny" to care for their children. They need safe, reliable, daycare alternatives within their communities—at a price they can afford.

Small business people know from experience in the workplace that we cannot conquer drug and alcohol abuse with yet another Federal program. Education, awareness and good old-fashioned values are the weapons with which we will win our war against drugs.

Small business people know that the answers to these and many other social problems will be found close to home, in our small businesses and in our local communities—not in an office full of bureaucrats who have never confronted the realities of the day-to-day world.

And small business people know that we need to develop—and implement—an activist strategy if we are to solve our national problems. A strategy that identifies creative, effective, and efficient solutions.

So, during this National Small Business Week, let us all remember that our Nation's entrepreneurs are the source of our prosperity and a living monument to the success of free market policies and individual freedom.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. IRELAND. I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER].

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise simply to congratulate the gentleman from Florida [Mr. IRELAND] on his fine effort in taking out this special order during this very important week as we honor those men and women who epitomize the backbone of the free market process, those small business people.

The gentleman talked about a number of very important issues, from child care to the drug and alcohol problem, and, of course, regulatory flexibility. But I think that one of the most important things that the gentleman referred to at the outset was the issue of encouraging the proliferation of the small business sector in these emerging democracies, in Eastern Europe, for example.

I think that it is very important for us to recognize that the small business community clearly is the backbone of this country. Not many people are aware of the fact that 95 percent of the new jobs created and innovations which come into society emanate from the small business sector of our economy. That is why it is extraordinarily fitting that this week be designed to salute those businessmen and women who do epitomize that small individual who is struggling to make this process work.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and congratulate him for his special order.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his words and the analogy that what is happening in Eastern Europe is certainly a great tribute to the free enterprise entrepreneurial activity that has been generated in America, and that has come to the attention of those that have labored under socialism and its failed ideology for so long.

So if we remember then that our Nation's entrepreneurs are the source of this prosperity and are literally a living monument to the success of free market policies and individual freedom, ideals and policies that literally the world is rushing to emulate, as they learn, as the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] said, from experience, that socialism does not work, under these times, let us admit that three decades of big government, bureaucratic solutions, administering to our social problems, has not worked. Let us turn to individuals and small businesses for solutions to these problems, to people who know local conditions, to people who know how to treat people as customers, not as dependent clients, and people who know how to make things work.

National Small Business Week is the time to start making that change.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. IRELAND. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and join in commending him for bringing up this special order honoring our small business men and women.

It is interesting what is happening in Eastern Europe. Not only did the European people rise up and throw out communism, but in the votes in every country that has held a vote since that time they have also rejected socialism. They have opted for the kinds of policies that the gentleman and the small business community have been supporting and fighting for for years and years. So I think that is something that speaks very clear and very loudly.

There are those in this country who apparently have not gotten the message, but the people over there sure have, so I thank the gentleman.

Mr. IRELAND. Absolutely. The gentleman is quite right.

Mr. BLAZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. IRELAND. I yield to the gentleman from Guam.

Mr. BLAZ. Mr. Speaker, I just want to commend the gentleman from Florida [Mr. IRELAND] for that very fine presentation. I should like to add that for the first time in history, my congressional district was permitted a representative in the Small Business Administration activities such as we have had this week, and it is also very significant for us and indeed for our representative, Mr. Bill Thomasson. I just wanted to go on record as saying they did a magnificent job of setting the record straight on this very important community of small business people and I thank the gentleman for giving me the opportunity to congratulate him and to insert this little footnote, because it is a first for my territory of Guam.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. IRELAND. I thank the gentleman from Guam for his fine words.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. IRELAND. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend and colleague Congressman IRELAND for bringing this special order to the floor today. Small business has been one of the most important sectors of the American economy since the inception of our republic. For many people around the Nation, the ability to own a small business is the embodiment of the American dream. It is capitalism at its best, allowing men and women with new ideas and innovative services to offer them to the public and working hard to make an honest dollar. Small businesses provide thousands of jobs and pay millions of tax dollars each year. There is little doubt that small business is a major contributor to the American economy and a big part of the American way of life.

I am sure that most of my colleagues here in the House would strongly agree with what I just said. Yet, by our actions in Congress, it seems that we want to cripple this vital part of America. Congress continues to burden small businesses with costly paperwork, mandated benefits, and nearly unintelligible regulations. In addition, our current economic policies make the economic climate much more difficult for small businesses to operate well. Our taxation policies and our deficit spending raise the cost of capital as well as interest rates, choking off needed capital flows to small business. That in turn makes our businesses less competitive, making them more vulnerable to foreign competition and raising the spectre of even greater imports of foreign goods. My friends, no one needs to tell us that we already have a trade deficit that is huge and getting bigger. For the health of the American economy, we simply cannot afford to continue this course of action.

The solutions to these problems are diverse, and they will not be easy to implement. However, they are easy to identify. We must cut the tax on capital gains so that savings and investment will be encouraged. We must realize that we cannot continue to pass along mandated policies and benefits to small businesses without a loss of jobs, greater inflation, and a weaker competitive position for America. We must cut our budget deficit, so that interest rates will decline, the cost of capital will decrease, and our trade position will improve. We must cut unnecessary paperwork and regulations that burden the small businessperson beyond what is necessary. In short, we must exercise smart business policies.

Small business faces a crossroads today. If we want to avoid a nation of conglomerates, if we want to keep the American dream alive, if we want to provide jobs and build a strong economy, then we must work for small business. The time for action is now, so let's do what is right.

Mr. IRELAND. I thank the gentleman from Florida for his words.

I end as I began and thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] for allowing this special order to come before his. He is a distinguished member of the Small Business Committee, and one who labors hard and long in that field for the entrepreneur.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DWYER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my colleague, Congressman IRELAND, for arranging time today so that we might pause to commemorate Small Business Week.

As part of the celebration of Small Business Week, I wish to congratulate a small businessman from my district, Mr. Arthur Brady of Arthur Brady Associates, Inc. in Perty Amboy, NJ. Mr. Brady has been named the "Regional Small Business Subcontractor of the Year for Region II," having been nominated for this award by a client, Hughes Aircraft.

A decade ago, Arthur Brady established a commercial materials testing laboratory with one employee. His company, Arthur Brady Associates, has grown since 1980 into a firm with 10 employees who operate not only the testing lab but also a manufacturing division to make solder for electrical equipment, specifically for printed circuit boards.

"A dynamic team of creative problem solvers" is how Mr. Brady describes his employees, but is clear that such creativity and dynamism flows from the company's founder. Mr. Brady, who previously worked for AT&T and General Motors as a chemist, is originally from Jamaica, and has become an American citizen. He has worked hard to publicize his company's products and has built a client base which includes such customers as ITT, Allied Signal, DuPont, and IBM. His success stems from quality service, fair pricing, and consistency in the delivery of a good product. These attributes have enabled the Department of Defense to qualify his company for the Qualified Products List, a designation within DOD of high-quality products.

He has contributed to his community not only by the product he provides but through the jobs he has provided in both Middlesex and Union County, NJ. I am proud to congratulate Mr. Brady and his employees on their efforts and wish them continued success in the future.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in order to pay tribute to America's small business community. As a small businessman myself, let me say I am especially honored to have this opportunity to recognize the industrious spirit of my small business peers.

As American's, we have all benefited from the innovation and industry of our entrepreneurs. It is only appropriate that we set aside this week to celebrate their accomplishments and recognize the attributes of their enterprise. The success of American small business is at the heart of our Nation's unprecedented history of peace and prosperity. Our acclaimed traditions of ingenuity and productivity are embodied by the daily efforts of our small business people, and are envied by people the world over.

As the walls of isolation and oppression crumble throughout the globe, it is appropriate that this year's theme suggests the continuation of American business leadership into the 21st century. Today, opportunity for innovation and industry is tantamount. New challenges associated with the emerging democracies and the need for environmental technology beckon for American ingenuity. As legislators, we must encourage small business participation, and enlist their expertise as we assist in the transition of Eastern Europe to democratic, free enterprise states.

I thank my colleague, Congressman IRELAND, for taking the initiative to recognize the small business community. I for one, am pleased to add my support for Small Business Week, and I hope that my colleagues in the House will add their support as well.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous matter on the subject of my special order today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DYMALLY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS IN INDIA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the fact many of my colleagues have joined me here for this important special order. I would like to begin by associating myself with the remarks of my friend, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] who was speaking just a few minutes ago about the various serious situations that exist in Eastern Europe.

Mr. Speaker, it is apparent that we spend a great deal of time in this House talking about some very serious situations and human rights violations which have taken place in many different parts of the world. We have focused, of course, a great deal in recent weeks, and will later this week, on the situation in Central America. We have been speaking during the special order of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. IRELAND] about the situation in Eastern Europe. We are often talking about a wide range of places, but very tragically there is a part of the world that too often has been forgotten, and I know that my friend from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] has earlier this afternoon been talking about the situation as it exists in India, and the horrible, reprehensible violations of human rights which have taken place there.

I have a great many points which I hope to make over the next few minutes, Mr. Speaker. I am going to talk in detail about some of the tragic human rights violations which have taken place in Kashmir and other parts of India, but I do have many colleagues who have chosen to join me during this special order.

Mr. Speaker, I begin by yielding to my very good friend, the distinguished delegate from Guam, and I am speaking of course of General BLAZ. I am happy to yield to my friend from Guam.

Mr. BLAZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me and appreciate it very much.

When I told some of my friends I was going to the floor today to speak on behalf of the Sikhs and Kashmiris, somebody asked me what I was doing in that part of the world, and my response was, having experienced violations of human rights myself and my own people not too long ago, I felt an obligation to champion the cause of political self-determination, freedom, and those basic things that we all take so much for granted in our country. That is the reason I am here.

I am not here to offer an apology to anybody. On the question of human rights, nobody should offer an apology to anybody, any time.

If we cannot ensure that protection of human rights to citizens everywhere, we have our priorities pretty well mixed up, and we probably should not even be here.

Mr. Speaker, many of my colleagues have spoken out on the continuing repression in India against the Sikhs in Punjab and the Kasmiri Muslims.

Mr. Speaker, that situation appears to have worsened in recent days when the Prime Minister of India, V.P. Singh, issued a statement urging the Indian people to "prepare psychologically" for war. Rather than preparing for war, India should prepare to end any repression and grant freedom to the Sikhs and Kashmiris.

Dr. Gurmit Singh Aulakh, President of the Council of Khalistan, the organization which leads the Sikh struggle for freedom worldwide, recently issued an open letter to Prime Minister Singh in which he states that if Mr. Singh's saber-rattling succeeds in provoking a war, the Sikhs and Kashmiris will fight alongside Pakistan to insure their freedom from India and its continuing repression. This would be a disaster for India and for the subcontinent.

The Sikhs have every reason to seek their freedom. Sources indicate that over 80,000 Sikhs have been killed in India since the Indian Government's action against the Golden Temple, Sikhism's holiest shrine, in June 1984. I have been led to believe that another several thousand are still in Indian jails for political offenses—allegedly being held without charge, trial, or access to legal counsel. If this is indeed true, then they are being denied basic civil rights by the continuing application of the repressive 1984 Terrorist and Disruptive Activities Act, which permits the security forces to arrest and detain indefinitely anyone they arbitrarily decide is a terrorist. Yet, to my knowledge, no supposed Sikh terrorist has ever been brought to trial. Instead, they reportedly die in police custody or in extrajudicial killings known as fake encounters.

The Punjab Human Rights Organization, chaired by the respected former Justice of India's High Court, Ajit Singh Bains, is apparently claiming that extrajudicial killings by the security forces have increased since Mr. Singh took office. This organization maintains that some 7,000 Sikh youths have been killed by the security forces in the past 2 years alone. Again, if true, this is so despite Mr. Singh's supposed promises of reconciliation. Furthermore, reports indicate that two Sikh Members of Parliament were allegedly beaten and injured in February while participating in a supposedly peaceful demonstration. Again, on December 28, 1989, the Hon. Jagdev Singh Khudian, a Sikh Member of Parliament, is said to have been kidnaped by the security forces—while I have been told that the authorities announced 5 hours later that he had committed suicide. Interestingly, when his body was found 5 days later an autopsy is said to have revealed that he had been dead for only 20 hours. The cause of death was allegedly a blow to the abdomen which could not have been self-inflicted.

If these atrocities have in fact taken place, the Sikh nation has reason to fight India for their freedom. Indeed, on October 7, 1987, they reportedly declared themselves the independent nation of Khalistan. I am on record as saying that Khalistan is the only solution to the Punjab problem. But apparently, Prime Minister Singh would rather blame Pakistan and fan the flames of war. I believe that Khalistan would like to settle the issue peacefully, by sitting down with the Singh government and negotiate the boundary between Khalistan and India.

The situation in Kashmir is said to be just as bad. Reports indicate that the regime has recently imposed a permanent curfew and an economic boycott more stringent than that which the Soviets recently imposed on Lithuania. Two recent massacres in the Kashmiri capital city of Srinagar have supposedly killed hundreds of people. I am told that the media has been completely banned from Kashmir. Nevertheless, it is my understanding that India publicly agreed in 1949 to let the Kashmiri people decide their future by plebiscite. Yet they apparently continue to impose a reign of terror on those innocent people who—according to the reports—only seek their right to self-determination.

I am even told that the Indian regime is so eager to cover its brutal repression that it will not allow Amnesty International or other human rights organizations to investigate the situation. Even Castro's Cuba is said to permit Amnesty International to operate in the country, but India, which allegedly claims to be the world's largest democracy, apparently does not.

The open letter by Dr. Aulakh will further enlighten my colleagues on the terrible situation there, and I am including it in the RECORD with these remarks. I hope that the United States will take the principled stand and try to help achieve freedom for Khalistan and self-determination for Kashmir by peaceful means. Further war is not in anyone's interest.

The letter referred to is as follows:

COUNCIL OF KHALISTAN,
Washington, DC, April 17, 1990.

WAR WITH PAKISTAN WOULD BE DISASTER FOR INDIA; KHALISTANIS, KASHMIRIS WILL FIGHT ALONG WITH PAKISTAN

DEAR PRIME MINISTER SINGH: Your recent statement urging the Indian people to "prepare psychologically" for war with Pakistan was irresponsible and inflammatory. It is not Pakistan which is responsible for your troubles in Punjab and Kashmir. No, instead of preparing for a futile war with Pakistan, you should be preparing the Indian people to give freedom to the Sikh nation and self-determination to the Kashmiris.

The peoples of Kashmir and Khalistan don't want Indian suppression and genocide. Your regime must stop these imperialist, terrorist policies. The massacres at Srinagar and the recent killing and brutal beating of Sikh Members of Parliament have only made our people more determined to throw off the yoke of oppression.

In 1949, India committed to a plebiscite in Kashmir. But if the Kashmiris dare to ask for that promise to be fulfilled, they are brutalized and murdered by your security forces. The Sikh nation of Khalistan declared its independence for India on October 7, 1987, and severed all ties to the Indian constitution. Your response has been to murder our leaders like Jagdev Singh Khudian, continue the policy of genocide against our people which has resulted in over 90,000 deaths since your terrorist attack on the Golden Temple—our most sacred shrine—in June, 1984, and the arrest and detention of another 14,000 Sikhs without charge, trial, or access to legal counsel—basic human rights which any democracy grants to all its citizens.

Your regime has committed untold atrocities against our people. As Max Madden, A British MP who has recently returned from India, reports, "I shall never forget the Sikh father whose daughter was raped and drowned by a police officer. The father was brutally beaten by police three times over two days. He was seeking the return of his daughter's body for cremation. He was warned that if he did not stop complaining, what had happened to his 14-year-old daughter would happen to his 7-year-old daughter. The father is refusing to wear shoes until he gets justice. I shall not forget the young Sikh who was shot as a terrorist after he stood with his arms above his head in a field for five minutes. The police later admitted that they had made a mistake. Senior police officers saluted at the young man's cremation. His family is still waiting for the compensation that it was promised. I shall not forget the relatives of the young man who was shot while marching in a Sikh religious festival. Again, the police admitted a mistake. His brother has been warned off pressing for police officers to be punished."

"There were men and women who showed us bruises, scars, broken arms and broken legs which were the result of police interrogation. I shall never forget the men and women who complained of systematic police harassment, with regular house searches, property smashed, goods and money stolen, and threats of extortion of money to avoid imprisonment", Madden reported. These acts are typical of the policies of your regime.

According to the Punjab Human Rights Organization (PHRO), chaired by the respected Justice Ajit Singh Bains, 7,000 Sikh young men have been killed by police in extrajudicial killings in the last two years alone. These killings have increased under your regime.

As President of the Council of Khalistan, I warn you that this time if you go to war with Pakistan, the Sikh nation will fight alongside the Pakistanis to liberrate our homeland, Khalistan, and alongside the brave Kashmiris to insure their right to self-determination. This will mean an embarrassing loss for India.

Punjab belongs to the Sikhs. We ruled it from 1770 until the British annexation in 1849. When the British quit India, they recognized three nations which were to receive power: the Hindus (India), the Muslim League (Pakistan), and the Sikh nation. The Sikhs opted to take our share within India on the solemn assurance of Nehru and Gandhi that we would be treated as equals and no law would be enacted which was not acceptable to the Sikhs. Nehru promised that "in the north of India, the brave Sikh people will know the glow of freedom." But from the achievement of independence, the Indian government has betrayed us. Instead of the glow of freedom, we have known only the dark cloud of oppression and genocide. Just as India sought to be free from British control, now Khalistan seeks to be free from Indian control. You have betrayed all your promises to the Sikh nation.

Freedom is the birthright of all people and all nations. Khalistan and India are neighbors. Isn't it better for your security to live in peace with your neighbors, rather than trying to suppress their desire from freedom through brutality and genocide? Recent experience should show you the futility of your efforts to bend your neighbors to your will by force. If 50,000 Indian troops cannot suppress the Tamils in Sri Lanka, do you think you can continue to suppress the freedom of the Sikh nation in Khalistan. Do you think you can forever deny the Kashmiris their right of self-determination?

If three million brave Lithuanians can claim their freedom from the Soviet Union, how can you imagine that your troops can keep 17 million Sikhs suppressed any longer?

Your calls for war are opening the way for a disaster, Mr. Prime Minister. Continuing your repressive, terrorist, and genocidal policies will only further the erosion of India's tattered image around the world. In spite of your best efforts, the truth about your regime is coming out. Isn't it time to sit down and peacefully demarcate the bounaries between India and Khalistan? Isn't it time to let the Kashmiris decide their own fate, as India promised to do in 1949? Or is a futile war and massive bloodshed what you and your Hindus fundamentalist oligarchy prefer? Please do not do this to the region, Sir. Please end this peacefully by peacefully demarcating the boundaries between India and Khalistan, and withdrawing our occupying army from Khalistan. Your people and ours demand it. Humanity demands it.

Sincerely,

Dr. GURMIT SINGH AULAKH,
President, Council of Khalistan.

Mr. BLAZ. Mr. Speaker, as one who has participated in more than my share or more than I would have cared to in this business of war, it was with a great deal of thought and consciousness that I decided to retire and turn in my sword for the pen that I now hold here in this House.

War is a lousy solution.

But let me commend so many people who have led this movement before me so that I do not want anyone thinking that somehow I deserve any kind of credit. I am talking about the distinguished gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON], the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], and the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO], who come to this floor to make this case in behalf of human rights.

You know, it would be a lot easier not to get involved but I always thought back on my own experience and wonder what would happen to me if someone like the Burtons, the Lagomarsinos and the Dreiers of life had not been involved.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Guam, General BLAZ, for his very able contribution. He does not give himself credit appropriately. He is certainly one of the most decorated heroes, having struggled over decades in behalf of the freedom which we all enjoy, and he understands very clearly what it is that the people of India are desperately seeking.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO] for joining us, and yield to him at this time, the former mayor of Ojai.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman in the well, the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] for taking out this special order and thank the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] for having an earlier special order on the same subject. Of course, I join the gentleman in the well in commending our distinguished colleague, General BLAZ, for his efforts and for his comments here this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, for years, many of us in the Congress have lamented the tendency among some of our liberal colleagues to hold a double standard on human rights, by denouncing human rights violations by authoritarian regimes or rightist military regimes but ignoring those violations by leftist or totalitarian regimes.

There are also those in this body who hold a double standard on human rights depending on whether the offending country is an ally or not or a democracy or not.

If you truly support the protection of human rights, then you must speak out about abuses and repression wherever they occur. Being an ally or being a democracy should not grant a nation immunity from criticism for human rights abuses.

Such is the case with India. In terms of population, it is considered to be the largest democracy in the world.

Yet, human rights abuses do occur in India, particularly in the State of Kashmir and in the Punjab among the Sikh and Muslim populations.

Anyone who has followed closely the events in India in recent years knows the tensions and the tragedies that have prevented the peaceful coexistence of the peoples inhabiting that northern Indian State and the Punjab.

Without attempting to reconstruct all the charges and countercharges on each side, I believe it is important at this point for all sides to realize that further provocative acts by the Government and by the opposition will only produce greater bloodshed without achieving a peaceful resolution of the problems confronting the people of Kashmir and the Punjab and the Government of India.

One way to help reduce the tension and the atmosphere of distrust and confrontation would be to permit a respected organization devoted to the protection of human rights to review the situation in the State of Kashmir and the Punjab and in India. By allowing such an organization, like Amnesty International, to assess the human rights situation in India, it might be possible to develop an impartial basis on which to advance a dialog between the groups in conflict.

Only through peaceful dialog will it ultimately be possible to resolve the differences confronting those who are being persecuted and those who are abusing the rights of a significant minority.

All of us who seek protection of human rights must join together in calling on the Government of India to allow human rights observers to review the situation in India and to offer our support for a peaceful resolution of the crisis affecting the competing sides in India.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from California, for his contribution and the efforts he has put forth over the years in behalf of this very important issue.

We have with us two Members who have been extraordinarily active in behalf of this cause over the past several years, Mr. Speaker, and I will mention the legislation which has recently been offered in the form of the Human Rights in India Act, H.R. 4641. That legislation has been introduced by my colleague, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] and my colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. HERGER], who has been working with our good friend, Dr. Aulakh, over the years in behalf of such cause.

Mr. Speaker, I first yield to my friend, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON], who has spoken earlier today on this issue but who I know has other important contributions to make.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from California, who really is a fighter for human rights around the world, for taking this special order. I am rather glad that the gentleman took this special order because if he had not, we would not have had the opportunity to hear from some of our other colleagues because my special order ended so quickly. I really appreciate the gentleman doing that, and I know my colleagues from the Punjab and Kashmir appreciate his efforts as well.

I think, speaking in generalities, particularly when our colleagues are listening or other people who are interested are listening, sometimes it does not hit the mark, so what I would like to do is for just a couple of minutes talk about specific atrocities that are taking place in Kashmir and the Punjab so that my colleagues who are paying attention will know precisely what we are talking about. Let me just give the Members a few examples.

Mr. DREIER of Califorina. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman knows, we have a litany of examples. I have an entire file folder filled with examples here. When the gentleman said, "I have a few examples," let me point out that we know the situation is so tragic that there are many examples.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. There are thousands, literally thousands of examples. But I think my colleague and I agree that it is important to specify these few examples.

Mr. DREIER of California. Absolutely.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. It is important to specify them so people will know how bad it is.

Indian troops attacked a peaceful protest rally staged by girl students in February in Srinagar—I hope I pronounced that right—and they beat those students severely.

Indian occupation forces shot and killed a 7-year-old boy in Srinagar in Indian-occupied Kashmir on January 10, 1990, for displaying a Pakistani flag. We are told a 7-year-old boy was killed just because he was showing a flag.

This is really an atrocity. Indian occupation forces who have heightened their terror campaign in occupied Kashmir cut into pieces—listen to this—cut into pieces the bodies of 37 Kashmiris and have strewn these pieces of their bodies over a wide area. Not only is that an atrocity, that is unthinkable. It is unthinkable that they would do that sort of thing.

Kashmiri lawyers boycotted the courts recently because they had been ransacking the offices of permanent lawyers and trying to control what they do in the courts. Indian troops brutalized Kashmiri women in Rishra.

Indian occupation forces shot dead over a dozen Kashmiri demonstrators on January 8, as the freedom struggle attained new intensity. Indian occupation administration has rearrested Bashmir Ammad Bat, Secretary General of the Masash Abadi recently. They are holding him without trial for up to 2 years. Not only are they committing these atrocities, they are holding people without trial.

Then we talk about our good friends, the Sikhs. This gentleman, Max Madden, from the House of Commons reports that there was a Sikh father whose 14-year-old daughter was raped and drowned by a police officer, and then the father was brutally beaten by police three times over the next 2 days. He was seeking the return of his daughter's body for cremation, and he was warned that if he did not stop complaining, what happened to his 14-year-old would happen to his 7-year-old daughter, that she would be raped and drowned.

This Mr. Madden went on to say, "I shall not forget the young Sikh was shot as a terrorist after he stood with his arms over his head in a field for 5 minutes." The guy had surrendered. I mentioned this earlier in my remarks. And he said he should not forget the relatives of the young man who was shot while marching in a Sikh religious festival.

They admitted that it was a mistake. What kind of a mistake is that when they had taken a life?

He said he should not forget the 500 prisoners in Amritsar security prison who were lined up in the Sun to meet him and his team. Each one was holding his record papers. There were more than 300 held on very petty offenses without bail, and the youngest was a boy of 14. And they are holding these people for up to 2 years.

Then he talks about the scores of people he met when he was over there, men and women and children who showed him bruises and scars and broken arms and legs that were the result of police interrogation and torture.

Then he talked about the widows and the orphans who were suffering because of their loved ones, their husbands and fathers that had been killed and tortured and not accounted for.

So I just say to my colleague that I think these specific examples may emblazon upon the hearts and minds of our colleagues and the people who are paying attention to this special order the magnitude of this torture and tragedy that is taking place over there.

We in America live in a democracy supposedly not unlike the democracy that exists in India, and we believe in human rights and we believe that atrocities like this should not take place anywhere in the world, but especially not in a country that proposes to have a democracy.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, if I may reclaim my time for just a moment, I think the gentleman makes a very good point.

As has been pointed out by a number of our colleagues, this is supposedly the largest democracy in the world. We constantly hear that, and we know that last November, with the election of Prime Minister Singh, there were many people who believed that although human rights violations had been ignored under the goverment of Rajiv Gandhi, many held out a great deal of hope that under the Singh government there would be a greater recognition of these human rights violations. But tragically, we have gotten to the point where there has been very little, if any improvement, and in some areas, as we all know, for those seeking freedom in Kashmir it has gotten worse with the kinds of curfews that have been imposed, along with these extraordinary examples.

One of the points that needs to be made, of course, is that when we heard from Mr. Madden, who is the member of Parliament, a member of the House of Commons who entered the statement to which my colleague referred in the March 22 issue of the record kept in Parliament, it was very clear that that was his finding, because we know that we do not have the independent finding of Amnesty International.

In fact, India is the only democracy on the face of the earth which has not allowed Amnesty International to go in and observe the kinds of atrocities that are taking place, and I think the fact that they have violated it leads us to recognize the fact that human rights violations are going on.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DREIER of California. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I do not know why they will not let Amnesty International or any human rights group in there, but what really mystifies me is, as I understand it, the fact that they will not even let the Red Cross in there. That is a very humanitarian organization that has no political ties to anybody. They are just there for humanitarian reasons. I think that is an indictment of the Indian Government, that they are keeping human rights groups out, and even more so, it is a greater indictment because they will not let the Red Cross in to help those people who are suffering over there.

□ 1810

Mr. Speaker, that is a very good point that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] makes.

As we continue to look at some of the other atrocities; I was just looking at one of the examples here where 88 policemen were involved in rapes in one single village raid.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Now wait a minute. Let me get that straight. Eighty-eight?

Mr. DREIER of California. Absolutely.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Eighty-eight policemen were involved in this?

Mr. DREIER of California. Eighty-eight policemen were involved in the rapes during one single raid in a village.

Now, if we were to see this kind of atrocity taking place in almost any other part of the world, we would see outrage expressed all over the floor of this Congress, and that is why I implore my colleagues to recognize that these kinds of things are taking place, and we should not stand by while this government does this.

Mr. Speaker, we have also seen on top of these atrocities assistance going to the government which we have been fighting throughout the past decade, and 1.5 million people have lost their lives for. That is the government of Dr. Najibullah of Afghanistan.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Right.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, the Indian Government has continued to provide backing for that Soviet-backed regime there which has overthrown the people of Afghanistan, forced a third of their population into refuge, into Iran and Pakistan, and they now have the support of this government which is standing by and tolerating these kinds of human rights violations in their own country of India.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. The gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] is right, and, if the gentleman will yield——

Mr. DREIER of California. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to send a message to the new Prime Minister of India. I mean he has been in a short time. His predecessor, Mr. Gandhi, was looked upon by many Members of this body with a great deal of disfavor because of the atrocities and human rights violations that were taking place in the Punjab, and Kashmir and elsewhere, and I would just say that Mr. Singh has a tremendous opportunity to bring about positive change in creating a new human rights image for the country of India, if he will but do it. Many of the Indian people who are not Sikhs, who are not Kashmiris, share our concerns about the human rights violations, and I think that Mr. Singh could be one of the most popular leaders India has ever had if he would forthrightly say to the people of that country, "We're going to do away with terror. We're going to do away with these human rights atrocities and human rights violations and make sure that everybody is treated humanely."

Mr. DREIER of California. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] is absolutely right. There is no doubt about that, but the tragic thing is the record, as has been developed over the past several months since the election in November, it is atrocious.

The day before yesterday on the front page of the Los Angeles Times, a paper which I read naturally, there was an article which says, "For Kashmiris, Uprising Brings Fear, Pain, Deaths," and in this article it says:

India's security forces launched a bloody crackdown on the Kashmiri uprising for independence, hundreds have been killed, thousands have been beaten, tens of thousands have been searched and hundreds have been jailed.

Mr. Speaker, it goes on to say that doctors and nurses say that their ambulance drivers have been beaten, and hospital staff members have been arrested and tortured. And this is all in this article in the Los Angeles Times, and, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to incorporate this article from our hometown newspaper in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DYMALLY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The article referred to is as follows:

[From the Los Angeles Times, May 6, 1990]

FOR KASHMIRIS, UPRISING BRINGS FEAR, PAIN, DEATHS

(By Mark Fineman)

SRINAGAR, INDIA.—In the shadow of the snow-capped Himalayas, beside the tourist houseboats that ring Kashmir's legendary Nagin Lake, Prof. Mohammed Yusuf watched in disbelief last week as Indian soldiers beat his only son.

"At least 200 of them fell on him and started beating on him with their fists and sticks," the 70-year-old retired school principal said, his voice cracking.

"I thought he was dead. But I threw myself on him to save his head. I took two strokes on my back before they pulled me off. And then they just kept beating him and beating him and beating him until he passed out."

And all because of four letters hand-painted on an old chinar tree just outside Yusuf's family house—that, and his son's defiance when the soldiers ordered him to lick each letter off with his tongue.

The letters were J.K.L.F.—the ever-present signature of the armed Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front secessionist force. And the drama that unfolded on the banks of the lake that was once a mecca for international tourists was typical of a litany of horrors that has transformed India's majestic northern most state into a nightmare in paradise.

In the two months since the state government expelled foreign journalists from Jammu and Kashmir and India's security forces launched a bloody crackdown on the Kashmiri uprising for independence, hundreds have been killed, thousands have been beaten, tens of thousands have been searched and hundreds have been jailed.

Reliable numbers are impossible to obtain. Few journalists have ventured into the embattled state since it was declared off-limits to the press.

But, for three days last week, a Times reporter quietly toured Kashmir's war-torn capital of Srihagar by bicycle, interviewing dozens of Kashmiris, ranging from truck drivers to doctors, and witnessing the daily "cross-firings" between Kashmiri urban guerrillas and Indian troops. These clashes have left scores of civilian bystanders dead and spread panic throughout this once-idyllic Himalayana city.

The visit found a once-rich region that is suffering physically and all but dying economically. Tourism, which once provided 80% of all revenue, is non-existent. And everyone said they are living in fear—either of mukhbirs, military informants, or of moujahedeen, Islamic holy warriors from any one of half of dozen armed Kashmiri insurgent groups.

"We only have two choices now," one prominent Kashmiri businessman said, asking not to be named. "Either you become mukhbir or moujahedeen. And, in either case, maybe you die. But, even then, almost everyone is moujahedeen now. Everyone wants independence."

The uprising, in which Kashmir's overwhelming Muslin population is demanding secession from Hindu-dominated India, has assumed grave international importance in recent weeks. India has accused its Islamic neighbor, Pakistan, of training and arming Kashmiri insurgents across the state's international border, and Indian Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh has warned his nation to prepare for its fourth war with Pakistan in 30 years.

Fighting over the territory in 1947-48 resulted in a division of the Kashmir region, with India controlling the southern part and absorbing it as an Indian state, and Pakistan administering the northern part. Indian and Pakistani troops face each other along a cease-fire line across the region.

Even if the current conflict stops short of war, something most analysts hopefully predict, Kashmir has become a critical test case for India's claim as the world's largest secular democracy.

Already, Indian human rights groups have harshly condemned the army's brutal crackdown, which is being carried out largely by Hindu troops and presided over by the state's appointed Hindu governor, Jagmohan.

Most independent analysts in New Delhi agree that much of the Kashmiris' anger and frustration is well-founded—the result of decades of political manipulation and broken promises by national politicians in New Delhi, who are bound by a 1947 accord that granted the Kashmiris full autonomy in all fields except defense, communcations and foreign affairs. That guarantee was the basis of Kashmir's original decision to join India rather than Pakistan during the partition of the subcontinent.

Even several senior army officers involved in the crackdown told the Times privately that they blame the New Delhi government for failing to defuse the unrest politically before resorting to what one army general called "territory bitter medicine."

"The Kashmiri problem was created by the failure of the political process," said Indian political analyst Rajni Kothari, who serves on the governing planning commission and signed a recent published appeal for peace between India and Pakistan.

"The movement in Kashmir is toward democracy and independence, and there is simply no wishing it away."

Despite the Indian military campaign to force Kashmiris to remove the pro-independence and anti-Indian graffiti from the walls, trees and lampposts of Srinagar, the city remains covered with the written code of anger and secession.

"I.D.G.B." is the most common scrawl on walls throughout the city. It stands for, "Indian Dogs Go Back."

Thousands of house-to-house searches have failed to unearth major arms caches or break the militants' inner-city underground network.

In daylight and just yards away from Indian sentries, a reporter was taken to the home of a top leader of the Jammu and Kashmir Hezbollah Moujahedeen, the less popular pro-Pakistan faction of the two major armed groups in the militant alliance. There, with an AK-47 assault rifle that was once part of a U.S.-financed arms shipment to Afghan moujahedeen rebels at his side, the leader pledged to intensify the Kashmiri rebellion later this year by using more sophisticated weapons. These, he said, would include U.S. Stinger anti-aircraft missiles that he said the Kashmiris are buying in Pakistan.

"Until then," he said, "we'll continue using just grenades and small arms" to carry out daily attacks on Indian army bunkers and convoys, which he called "a catch 'em while they're sleeping" tactic.

Despite the presence of thousands of Indian soldiers and paramilitary forces in a city that has suffered longer under curfew than any other Indian city in recent memory, scores of Kashmiris openly greeted a passing reporter with such phrases as "those bloody Indian dogs" and "all we want is freedom."

Everyone interviewed at length told a personal tale of torture or deprivation.

Maulvi Mohammed Hussain Turibi, the imam (preacher) at the Batamaloo Sahib Mosque in Srinagar's old city described how he and his son were beaten, kicked and punched by soldiers intermittently for an entire day while being forced to walk through the neighborhood, using their bare hands to cover wall slogans with cow manure.

"I had been preaching what the prophet used to say," Turibi said when asked why he and his family were singled out. "I used to preach that we are slaves, that we should get liberated.

"But we are being terrorized now, and I feel that if I speak out again, I will again be taken and beaten."

At a hospital, several surgeons and physicians, all of whom asked not to be named, gathered in the chief surgeon's office and described the human toll of 15 consecutive days of round-the-clock curfew, followed by an intermittent curfew last week.

Diabetics and heart patients have died for lack of medicine, they said. Pregnant women delivered stillborn babies because they couldn't reach the hospital. Children have died of acute gastroenteritis. And a continuing meningitis epidemic has claimed the lives of many others.

Conceding their support for the armed liberation movement, the doctors said they are being followed by "Indian agents." They said that their ambulance drivers have been beaten and hospital staff members have been arrested and tortured.

"Look what this government has done," one of the doctors said. "A bureaucrat is a suspect. An engineer is a suspect. A doctor is a suspect. A lawyer is a suspect. My god, a policeman is a suspect.

"If we are all suspects, then who is with them [the Indians]?"

Gov. Jagmohan, who was appointed by New Delhi and given almost unlimited power to resolve the Kashmiri crisis in February, insisted that his harsh strategy is working and that most of the Kashmiris are now against the militants. He denied that the movement is an uprising.

"This is not my perception," he told two American journalists after they emerged from Srinagar's political "underground" Friday. "My feedback is entirely different. . . . When the people meet us now, they say; Thank God you saved us from these terrorists.' "

Rejecting the reporters' observations that entire neighborhoods of Srinagar are still thick with liberation front flags and discounting firsthand reports of the army's harsh campaign against the wall slogans, Jagmohan added, "There is hardly any flag of the militants flying in this city, and the slogans are no longer there on the walls. The people themselves are removing the slogans.

"All these things show there has been tremendous positive gain."

The governor, who had enjoyed wide popular support from the Kashmiris after his first term during a less-troubled time in the 1980s, insisted that the crackdown was regrettable but necessary.

"How many people did Abraham Lincoln have to kill to preserve the American union?" Jagmohan said in justifying the Indian campaign to retain one of it most strategic border states.

"I don't think the people are that upset by the searchers and all—well, maybe some, yes—but we had no other option but to go in for this," he said, interrupting the interview at one point to angrily tell an official of state-run television over the telephone, "Why can't you go film in some remote areas where life is normal and show that."

But there were no film clips of Kashmir on the state-run news that night. There was only an announcer reading from a TelePrompter—one paramilitary soldier shot dead and three others wounded when "terrorists" opened fire on a convoy of troops.

The announcement was followed by a long interview with India's home affairs minister, Mufti Mohammed Sayeed. A Muslim, Sayeed took office last November with Prime Minister Singh's moderate, National Front coalition government, which is under increasing pressure from its coalition partner, the strongly Hindu Indian People's Party, to continue the Kashmir crackdown.

"The National Front government is here to give the healing touch to Kashmir," Sayeed said on the screens of thousands of TV sets throughout Srinagar on Friday night. "Kashmir is a paradise on earth. • • • Kashmir must remain a part of India. • • • India is a multi-ethnic, multicultural, multilinguistic, multi-religious democracy. • • • Kashmir is a symbol of Indian secularism."

In the curfew-closed neighborhoods of Srinagar, however, few felt "healed" by Minister Sayeed, and many simply laughed sardonically and switched off their sets.

But the old professor, Mohammed Yusuf, whose son was nursing his many bruises and paralyzed left arm, simply sighed through his tears and said, "Now, I want to run away from this place, away from my beautiful home. They are killing people daily here. I can't stand it. I just can't stand it. I can't watch my children dying one by one."

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield further to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON].

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I just have one final comment, and that is, first of all, I want to thank my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] for taking this special order, and I would just like to say that I know our hearts bleed for the people of Kashmir and the Punjab who are suffering these atrocities, this inhuman action, these indecent acts against humanity, and I hope and pray that through some way we can get a message to the Indian Government to bring about some change that will end these things, these horrible things that are happening over there, and I would just say to our friends in the Punjab and Kashmir that we will not give up this fight until things change over there. We are going to be on this floor for as long as we are in Congress fighting for human rights, not only in other parts of the world, but in the Kashmir and Punjab as well.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] for his very able contribution and the fact that he has been struggling throughout his entire tenure here in the Congress on behalf of the cause of freedom, wherever it is in the world.

As my friends know, we have been joined by our very good colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. HERGER] who is also a cosponsor of the human rights legislation for India, and I am happy to be with him, and I am very happy that he is a Californian, and, with all due respect to my friend, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON], he is from the other part of the State, and he is the one who also trained for me my very able foreign affairs legislative assistant, Mr. Riggs, who has helped in putting this together. I am happy to yield to my friend from California.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from southern California [Mr. DREIER] for holding this special order today and allowing us to bring out some of the numerous, alarming facts that are so very prevalent and are coming more and more to the attention of the American people and to the world of what is going on in India and, particularly, within the Punjab. My concern is one that is very strong and very strong for the fact that some 15,000 Sikhs live within my district in northern California, and I have been hearing of their plight, the plight of their relatives and their friends who are within India and within the Punjab for many, many years now. So, again I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] and my colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] and so many others who are helping to bring to the forefront the great atrocities that are indeed taking place.

As was mentioned earlier, presently, every single democracy in the world allows independent human rights groups such as Amnesty International to visit their country; that is every democracy except India.

Even the Soviet Union and Cuba have allowed Amnesty International to conduct its investigations within their borders.

It's time for glasnost to reach India.

It's time for Amnesty International to be allowed inside of the world's largest democracy.

The reports I receive as to who is responsible for the tragic civil violence are contradictory.

As expected, each side blames the other.

The Indian Government blames religious radicals. Representatives of the Sikh community blame agents of the state. Those of us on the outside are left to weigh the claims of one side against the other.

If the Indian Government is correct about the source of the terrorism, it should have nothing to hide and therefore should change its policy and allow Amnesty International and other private human rights groups to conduct their investigations.

This last Sunday, the Washington Post reported several incidents of human rights abuses inside India. The story mentioned that the Indian Government believes such reports are concocted by propagandists for those who want a separate state.

But the report also said that "physical evidence of abuses by security forces—in the form of scars, bruises, smashed windows and charred buildings—is widely visible."

After the change of Government in India last December, many believed that there was a chance for hope, hope that a new era of human rights could begin in India.

It was a truly dramatic event last year, when almost 300 million Indian citizens participated in the election of a new government.

The ability to vote, however, is only one aspect of freedom. True democracy involves more than the ability to cast ballots or change administrators. True democracy involves freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of religion, freedom from persecution.

I believe it is interesting to compare what happened in El Salvador, for example, when six Jesuit priests were gunned down. The media was filled with the news of the tragedy, and the voices of condemnation of the Salvadoran Government were loud.

Salvadoran President Cristiani was called upon to conduct a serious and thorough investigation. President cristiani promised justice, and since then, an extensive investigation was conducted. Technical assistance was given by the FBI, Scotland Yard, and the Canadian and Spanish police departments.

In India, however, the investigation into the murder of Mr. Khudian, a newly elected member of the Indian parliament, produced no charges at all. The Indian Government merely stated that they suspected the murder was committed by religious extremists.

The Punjab human rights organization is one of the few sources of information for events occurring inside of the Punjab aside from the Indian press.

□ 1820

I am curious as to why there has not been a worldwide outcry over the behavior of the Indian military during recent violence in Kashmir.

When the Government of China fired on unarmed demonstrators last summer, there was justifiable outrage throughout the free world.

When the Chinese Government restricted the movement of the international press last year after the crackdown in Tiananmen Square, it was front page news.

But when India fires on unarmed demonstrators and removes the news media from Kashmir, the world is relatively silent, and aside from scattered reports in the news media, the international community seems to have ignored the events in Kashmir.

It is my hope that in the future the international community will give the kind of attention to India that it has given to China.

The world's largest democracy deserves the same level of scrutiny that is given to the world's most populous nation.

In closing, I want to reiterate the fact that every democracy in the world allows independent human rights groups to conduct their investigations, every democracy, that is, except India.

I must say that it was interesting to see free Romanians tearing down a statue of Lenin, especially in light of the fact that a bronze statue of Lenin still stands in the Indian capital.

There is definitely irony in this. Romanians have had enough of Lenin, and are moving toward a free market and openness.

India still honors Lenin with a bronze statue on a bronze pedestal, and refuses to allow international human rights groups to visit.

Again I thank the gentleman from California for bringing about this opportunity for us to bring more to the forefront, and hopefully that type of positive pressure to the nation of India to bring about these human rights that are so deserved by the people who live there.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for his fine contribution.

I could not help think as he was referring to the situation in Romania how we all watched that statue of Lenin being torn down, and to think that today that statue of Lenin still exists in India is a very tragic irony.

The gentleman has worked long and hard in behalf of the cause of freedom, and I was not aware of the fact that he had 15,000 Sikh constituents, so this is obviously an interest which is very near and dear to his office, because I am sure that many Sikhs have come in to visit and discuss in detail this situation with him, so I congratulate the gentleman for his fine work on behalf of the cause of freedom and his constituents.

Another Californian has joined us and I am very pleased that our great new freedom fighter, he has been a long-time freedom fighter, but still considered for just another few months a freshman Member of Congress, but soon he will be graduating into the spot of seniority come January 1991. I am very happy to yield to my friend, the gentleman from Long Beach, CA [Mr. ROHRABACHER].

Mr. ROHRABACHER. I am pleased to join with our colleagues today in voicing our outrage over continued human rights abuses in India, as well as India's refusal to permit human rights organizations, like Amnesty International, from coming in to investigate the charges of human rights abuses and the brutality that we hear exists and is going on, continuing to go on in the subcontinent.

We talked a moment ago about Romania and how difficult it was, or we talked about the tearing down of the statue of Lenin, but my colleagues did not mention how difficult it was to tear down that statue. It took days and days of hard work on the part of the Romanians to tear down that ugly reminder of tyranny that had cast its shadow so long in that country.

Well, the same is true in India. India, of course, is now suffering from some of the products of British colonialism of 100 years ago. One wonders what the natural boundaries of India actually are, when you think that the British colonists came in and drew lines regardless of the natural ethnicities of the people and absent those considerations, but instead on their own political considerations of the day. I believe that much of the violence and chaos that is now going on in different parts of the subcontinent, especially in the northern part of India, can be traced back to that colonialism.

To solve these problems, the Indian Government cannot just resort to brutality and raw violence. These are the types of problems that call for a commitment to human rights and democracy. This is what should bring out the best in democratic government. Instead, the Indian Government seems to be going in the opposite direction. It seems to be looking for a more totalitarian model of repression as a solution to problems, rather than the opening of dialog and the recognition and the respect for human rights.

I am happy to join with my colleagues. I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] for his leadership on this issue to make sure that our country and our Congress go on record and support not just freedom against Communist governments, but in favor of freedom in all countries, whether it is India, which is not a Communist government, or Burma, which is not a Communist government, or South Africa, which is not a Communist government; but Americans stand for freedom not simply because we are against communism, but because it is totally consistent with our ideals as a nation.

Mr. DREIER of California. I think the gentleman makes a very good point which really does need to be underscored, and that is we have, through the revolution of 1989, been talking about the victory of freedom over communism. I cannot help but think of a number of comments which have been made about our goal constantly of defeating communism.

I remember when Richard Nixon addressed our conference, he said,

> We really have seen the defeat of communism now, but your challenge is even a greater one. It is the victory of freedom and liberty which is going to be an even greater one, and as we pursue that goal of freedom and liberty, of course it means ensuring it over other types of government which have been repressive.

So yes, the gentleman is absolutely right. We are seeking an end to human rights violations, whether they come from the right, the left, the middle, above, below, wherever, and that is a goal to which the gentleman has aspired to, and I am pleased that he is working on behalf of it.

I am happy to yield further to the gentleman.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. I would hope that the Government of India, as well as the Government of Pakistan, begin their dealings to solve some of the problems in the Kashmir in a spirit of good will that has been absent until this time.

I would just like to place my voice on record as suggesting that both, because Pakistan has been a tremendous friend of the United States and India has been a tremendous example of democracy for the entire world, let those two nations and those two peoples try to solve this program peacefully.

In terms of India itself, I think that we have the right to expect from the world's most populous democracy a better recognition of human rights for their own people and a better assurance to their own people that they can express opposition to some fundamental issues and some fundamental issues are at hand in dealing with the Sikhs and in the Kashmir as to where those boundary lines will be drawn, but their people deserve the right to speak without fear of repression and bloodshed and brutality.

I would like to commend the gentleman again for the leadership he has shown to make sure that America is foursquare on the side of freedom and liberty and good will and respect for human rights.

Mr. DREIER of California. I thank my friend for his very able contribution.

I would like to make a couple of comments in closing along the exact same lines.

It is very important that the United States of America work to ensure strong relations with the Government of India, Mr. Speaker. We know that last November, India's people did experience, as the gentleman said, in that democratic form of government, a free and fair election.

The thing is we do not want to challenge the decision that has been made, but there is no doubt whatsoever that we do have an obligation to challenge violations of human rights, and that is exactly what we are doing here today. We want to see India live up to the claims of democracy and to give single Indian individual the opportunity to determine his or her fate and to feel that they are free of the worries of human rights violations.

I cannot help but think of the quote that was delivered by Mahatma Gandhi when he said:

> Nonviolence is the first article of my fate. It is also the last article of my creed. The pursuit of truth does not permit violence being inflicted on one's opponent, but that he must be weaned from error by patience and sympathy.

□ 1830

I hope very much, Mr. Speaker, that the government of Prime Minister Singh will follow the example and these great words of Mahatma Gandhi. I hope my friends from India and around the world will join in this cry for the recognition of human rights of these brave people.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to incorporate an article from the Christian Science Monitor about brutality that exists there, an article from India Abroad, the Charhdi Kala newspaper, the Tribune, and the New York Times at this point in the RECORD.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the Members for their contribution and yield back the balance of my time.

INDIA TO PROVIDE AID TO GOVERNMENT IN AFGHANISTAN

(By Barbara Crossette)

NEW DELHI, March 6.—India agreed today to provide what a Government spokesman described as humanitarian and technical aid to President Najibullah's Government in Afghanistan, the Press Trust of India reported.

The Government statement, which gave no details, followed a news conference today in which the Afghan Foreign Minister, Abdul Wakil, said he had come to India to ask for material and diplomatic assistance. Afghanistan, now under a state of emergency, is trying to cope with food and fuel shortages as well as an unstable security situation after the withdrawal of Soviet troops on Feb. 15.

Mr. Wakil also said his Government needed help in putting pressure on Pakistan to stop arming the Muslim guerrilla armies trying to topple the Najibullah regime.

AFGHAN MINISTER ASSAILS IRAN

The Indian spokesman did not say what kind of assistance New Delhi might give to Kabul.

India has been alone in South Asia in support of the Soviet-backed Najibullah Government in Afghanistan. India, a nonaligned nation that has generally supported Soviet foreign policies in Asia. continues to maintain a diplomatic presence in Kabul, although all Western and several Eastern European embassies have withdrawn.

At the news conference Mr. Wakil also attacked Iran for wanting to establish a fundamentalist Islamic regime in Kabul. He accused Teheran of being in league with Pakistan in supporting the guerrilla armies.

Iran's role is seen by most other regional nations, however, as more uncertain and problematic following high-level Iranian visits to Moscow and a visit to Teheran by the Soviet Foreign Minister, Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

Iran and Pakistan have apparently not been in total agreement on policies for post-Soviet Afghanistan. Many Pakistanis believe that Iran and Saudi Arabia are competing for influence in Afghanistan, despite the embarrassment this might cause Islamabad, which tries to maintain good relations with both countries.

In Kabul today, an Indian news agency reported, a weekly magazine appeared on the streets carrying an article and the first picture of the former Afghan King, Mohammad Zahir Shah, to appear since his ouster in 1973. Afghanistan, the Soviet Union and India have all tried to persuade Zahir Shah to return as head to a neutral, possible interim, administration in Kabul.

Some of the more powerful, conservative Islamic opposition groups are opposed to the former King's return.

CONSTABLE RAPES, KILLS 2 MINORS

SRIHARGOBINDPUR, July 7—A gruesome incident of rape and murder of two minor girls, allegedly by a Punjab armed Police constable who was deployed at the special police officers (SPO) picket in Bham village, 9 km from here, has left the people of this sensitive area of Batala police district shocked and agitated.

The decomposed bodies of Sarabjit (14) and Salwinder (13), a class VIII student, who had disappeared under mysterious circumstances from the village on June 11, were recovered by the police from a water-filled drain near here on June 16. The parents of the victims and a section of the villagers whom this correspondent met yesterday alleged that the two were kidnapped by the said police constable who strangled them to death after brutally raping them. Later, he disposed of their bodies.

The persistent refusal of the police to register an FIR against the policeman, whose name figures in the preliminary complaint lodged by the parents, and attempts to "hush up" the case have led to strong resentment among the villagers. When repeated requests and representations by the aggrieved parents to police officials from the SHO to the SSP level failed to bring the culprit to book, a delegation of panchayat members tried to meet the Punjab Governor, Mr. S.S. Ray, who was in the nearby town of Kalanaur on June 19. However, the police did not allow them to meet the Governor.

Agitated, the villagers went to the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. S.S. Sadharao, demanding a probe into the incident and also action against those policemen who added insult to injury by severely beating up the father of one of the girls when he refused to give in writing that it was a suicide case. Taking serious note of the incident, the Deputy Commissioner wrote to the SSP, Mr. Gobind Ram, to conduct an enquiry into the circumstances leading to the death of the two girls who belonged to poor families. He also asked the police chief to register an FIR.

Although the police has rounded up two persons—Purshotam Dev, a PAP constable, and Roshan Lal, an SPO—no case has yet been registered against them. Mr. Gobind Ram has deputed Mr. Aml Kumar Sharma, SP (Headquarters), to probe into the incident.

Narrating the sequence of events, Mr. Joginder Singh, a retired army man and father of Salwinder, said his daughter, along with her friend Sarabjit had gone to the outskirts of village to take clay from the dry canal bed on June 11. The two, however, did not turn up by the evening. When frantic search by the worried parents led to nowhere, they lodged a complaint in the police station here. They expressed suspicion against a police constable who was in charge of the SPO picket in the village before it was removed by the police officials on persistent complaints by the villagers. The said constable was seen roaming under mysterious circumstances near the village hours before the girls disappeared by Mr. Makhan Singh, father of Sarabjit.

Later, Mr. Gobind Ram admitted that he had received complaints of drinking and eve-teasing by the SPO men during a surprise visit to the village in the first week of June.

Holding back his tears Jogunder Singh said that despite a number of visits to the police station by him and panchayat members, no FIR was registered against the suspect on the plea that the case would be registered after the girls were recovered—alive or dead. On June 16 a police party took the parents of the missing girls for identification of the two bodies which were recovered in the evening.

True to the fears of the parents, the bodies of their daughters. The police did not even bother to cover the bodies, which were without clothes and decomposed. "I took off my turban to cover the naked girls," said Jogunder Singh, sobbing uncontrollably.

In order to complete the postmortem formalities, the bodies were taken to the Civil Hospital Batala, on June 17, when the accompanying police party tried to force the parents not to lay claim to the bodies and declare them as unidentified in front of the hospital doctor. However, the parents refused to do so and approached the SDM for handing over the bodies.

All this while the police party contacted the municipal committee of the town and asked for the cremation of the "unidentified and unclaimed" bodies of the two girls. When Makhan Singh, father of Sarabjit, and Singh, brother of Salwinder, resisted the lifting of the bodies from the mortuary, the police party beat them up in the hospital premises. It was only after their hue and cry and intervention by the people around that the police relented and left the place. Later, the SDM intervened and the bodies were handed over to the parents.

A farm labourer, Makhan Singh was picked up from the village on the same night and was again beaten up in the police station at Srihargobundpur. Showing his legs to show the torture marks, the dazed Makhan Singh said policemen were forcing him to give in writing that the girls had committed suicide. When the police failed to have its way he was released the next day. The parents again approached the SSP, demanding action against the culprits, but to no avail. "Our hopes for justice were dashed to the ground when the police did not allow us to meet the Punjab Governor of Kalanaur," said Makhan Singh.

Mr. Gobind Ram, however, feigned ignorance about the beating up of the parents of the deceased girls by the police but assured to look into this. He persisted that no attempt was made to hush up the case. The sustained interrogation of the PAP constable, he said, had not revealed anything except that he had an affair with the one of the girls.

17-YEAR-OLD SIKH GIRL GANGRAPED AT POLICE STATION

A resident of village Leharka Gurmit Kaur has said in a public statement that she was blindfolded stripped of her clothes and sexually assaulted by Police of Kathunangal Police station in Amritsar. She was speaking to the press reporters in the district court after she had seen her father S. Swaran Singh and brother lodged in jail since two years. Under charges of sheltering Sikh freedom fighters. Student of grade ten was pale with bandages on her body when she was relating the story of her misery.

On April 21, 1989 when she went to their farm with her mother and sister, police took into custody. After interrogation. They were let free in the evening. Next day she was again arrested and took to village Thiriyewal for identification of few persons. She said she knew none of the persons. Then her sister was released and she was separated from her mother and then blindfolded and beaten up with belts. Powdered chillies and fertilizer was put in to her eyes and was hung upside down.

Gurmit Kaur said that drunken Policemen entered her room between 9 and 10 P.M. raped her after blindfolding and removing all her clothes. For two hours she suffered and cried for help but nobody rescued. So she fainted and found herself stark naked when she came to senses.

On April 23rd at 8 A.M. she again fainted when hung upside down. Later in midday summer heat she was stripped beaten and raped repeatedly and was laid out naked in Police station yard in the evening. Many passers by saw her.

Gurmit Kaur told that after her release from Police station she had to stay in Thiriyewal Hospital for many days.

It May be recalled that since the spearheading against the present Sikh movement in April 1978 (by the neo-Nirankaries) atrocities like that against Gurmit Kaur have not come to light when the baptized Sikh Gurmit Kaur was relating her tale of woes to the reporters tears flew even from the eyes of legal professionals there. Bite marks infected by the teeth of cruel policemen were still visible on her face and body. Her face was blushed with insult and anger and said "I will personally avenge this injustice as a true daughter of my Guru who had said that when morality and honour are at stake the use of arms is inevitable."

WHO ARE THE TERRORIST

Is it the peace loving peasants or police in the Punjab? Where statements are written later on blank papers signed coercion threats of life and torture. Teenagers are subjected to Inhuman treatment to get incriminating statement from innocent people who are held responsible for alleged actions of their relatives.

Canadians who may or may not have read the news of Balkar Singh Ontario will please read the above news published in Indian Newspapers like The Tribune based on the press conference held in District courts Amritsar. This has also been noted by Punjab Human Rights Commission.

PANEL ALLEGES "STATE TERROR" IN PUNJAB—OFFICIALS' ASSAULT ON INNOCENT PEOPLE ALIENATING SIKHS, IT SAYS

(By Shantanu Ray)

NEW DELHI.—Continued repression and brutality unleashed by the police and intelligence officials on innocent people in Punjab has alienated members of the Sikh community from the masses, an independent fact-finding mission said in a recent report.

The report, "State Terrorism in Punjab," was compiled by a team of two lawyers, a journalist and a film maker, all members of the Committee for Information and Initiative on Punjab. It accused the state police personnel and officials of the Central Investigation Agency of terrorizing people, particularly villages near the Pakistan border, while trying to trace terrorists and extremists.

The villagers, mostly farmers, are normally forced to shelter the ultras, who carry out their hit-and-run attacks at night from the area. The poor villagers, the report said, are in a quandry because they cannot afford to incur the wrath of either the militants or the police personnel.

"Persons are first whisked away by unidentified men, then taken to undisclosed places for interrogation and killed either due to torture or in so-called encounters," the report said, adding: "No cause on earth can be used to justify intentional killings of innocent people."

The police atrocities mentioned in the 61-page report were similar to those witnessed in West Bengal during the abortive Maoist uprising in the late 1960s when paramilitary troops, in their efforts to trace the Naxalites, terrorized innocent residents of neighborhoods frequented by the youths.

Citing an incident, the report said a cab driver in Chandigarh, Balwinder Singh, was picked up by intelligence men more than a year ago. Gurdey Singh, Balwinder's father, still knows nothing about what happened to his son. He was told by a neighbor that Balwinder was being detained at Patiala and "severely tortured."

"Together with the elected members of his village and village head Ajayab Singh, Gurdev Singh met the then Director-General of Police, Julio F. Ribeiro, in the first week of April," the report said. "Mr. Ribeiro directed him to see the senior superintendent of police at Patiala, Sital Das. When they met Das at his house in Patiala, Das denied that Balwinder Singh was in his custody and expressed his inability to help them. Several months after his abduction, Balwinder Singh remains untraced."

The report puts much of the blame for the atrocities on Govind Ram, the controversial Senior Superintendent of Police of Batala town in Gurdaspur district bordering Pakistan.

CAMPAIGN OF TERROR

The committee members, who toured the entire district, found that most of the villagers had been terrorized and tortured by the chief of police and his subordinates on the pretext of searching for terrorists.

"We were visiting a primary school—Guru Nanak Dev Academy—in Batala . . . Fifteen children studying in the school had lost their fathers in so-called encounters. At this school, we learned about the campaign of terror which Govind Ram has been carrying out in the village within his domain, ostensibly to demoralize the Sikh militants," the report said.

"Many women of the village Sarchur in the district had left their homes in panic to live with their relatives elsewhere," the report continued. "People gave us many specific instances of police atrocities which, in their magnitude and relentlessness seemed to surpass what we had learned so far of the state terror in Punjah."

Citing one such incident, the report said Ram rounded up 400 villagers and threatened them for "harboring terrorists" and accused their women of cohabiting with terrorists. "He then ordered all young men in the assembly to fall on their bellies on the ground," the report said, "and asked his men to beat them with leather belts, bamboo poles and batons. The public falgellation lasted for more than an hour."

The report declared: "Those who lack the necessary discipline and self-control to refrain from committing such excesses, no matter how emotionally compelled they may feel in their ire, cannot claim the right to rule.

"Such excesses, more than providing the state with an excuse for enhancing its own atrocities, ultimately serve to corrupt the moral sensibilities of those very men who may have started with morally sound motives."

The committee, which lists more than a dozen such incidents in the report, concluded: "We believe that the character of the repression and brutality unleashed by the state indiscriminately on the Sikhs and the moral lowliness of the officials at the helm of affairs have contributed, more than anything else to the growing disaffection among the Sikhs for the Indian state."

The report was prepared by Tapan Bose, documentary film maker; Ashok Aggaral and Nitya Ramakrishnan, lawyers, and Ram Naravan Kumar, a freelance journalist.

ARRESTING INDIAN'S POLICE BRUTALITY—AWARENESS IS GROWING AMONG GOVERNMENT AND POLICE OFFICIALS OF THE NEED FOR REFORM

(By Sheila Tefft)

Last November, the Delhi police hauled Ram Swaroop and seven other poor laborers from their huts and ordered them to work without pay.

The drunken policemen beat the workers, then took Mr. Swaroop away. His body was found in a nearby canal. Human-rights lawyers sued the police and won a Supreme Court order of $3,000 compensation for his family.

They also ordered a rare admission of guilt from police officials investigating the killing. The five policemen involved are being prosecuted for murder.

The tragedy of Ram Swaroop highlights the problem of police brutality in India, for which Indian police have gained a widespread reputation during more than 40 years of independence, human rights activists say.

The incident also points to a new awareness among government and police officials of the need for reform.

"The common perception is that police are bullies who beat people at the slightest provocation and are corrupt," says Rajavijay Karan, Delhi's police commissioner and architect of a new reform campaign aimed at improving the police's image. "We need to change the culture, ethos, and personality of the police."

Today, more than ever, security forces play a pervasive, often troubling role in this diverse, contentious democracy of 800 million people.

In the northern, violence-torn province of Punjab, the police are armed with special powers to combat terrorism and backed by the Army and central paramilitary police. These forces have led an extensive crackdown on Sikh separatists and on innocent people in their path.

Throughout India, from remote corners in the south to crowded urban pockets in the north, the police and increasingly the paramilitary have been called on to douse a level of social conflict and communal violence not seen since the 1950s.

And in major cities like Delhi, exploding population growth, overcrowding, and unemployment have triggered an upsurge in crime and urban discontent.

Government officials say they have been forced to resist the forces tearing at India's delicate social fabric. During the last six years, the central paramilitary police force has grown by 30 percent and now costs the government about $600 million annually. A current expansion program will raise their numbers to more than 400,000 by 1991.

In the states and territories, which control local law enforcement, police forces have burgeoned. For example, since 1984 when Delhi was first hit by a wave of terrorism and communal violence, the police have grown from 32,000 to more than 50,000, the world's largest metropolitan police force.

But police forces here are still hard-pressed. Those demands have buttressed long-standing pressures that have eroded police discipline and deeply politicized law enforcement: ethnic and religious divisions, corruption, and political interference.

Poor training, low pay, long hours, and frustrations in winning court convictions also prompt police to turn to more drastic methods, observers say.

Even the central paramilitary, made up of recruits from throughout the country and sent in as a more neutral check on local police, is now buffeted by similar pressures, due to overuse, fatigue, and lack of time for training.

"The police bring to the force the attitudes, values, and prejudices that are there [in society]. Overnight you can't inculcate different attitudes," says P. Chidambaram, the government official in charge of internal security. "Over the years, the image has suffered because training has been a casualty."

Many social observers, however, claim India is becoming a police state because the central government is grabbing more power and responding to trouble with force rather than deeply needed social and economic reform.

In many places, the police form a nexus with corrupt politicians and wealthy landlords and businessmen and are a tool of brutal oppression.

In what is widely seen as political expediency, the central government has yet to complete an investigation of police complicity in the disappearance of dozens of Moslems in 1987 communal riots in the northwestern town of Meerut.

In Bihar—a state seared by hopeless poverty, class conflict, and police atrocities—police raped, looted, and plundered villagers in Pararia last year. In March, a court acquitted 14 policemen and security guards and chided the village women for poor character.

Recently, New Delhi commentator Khushwant Singh wrote that he had met many Punjabi villagers whose one refrain was "we can deal with the terrorists, you save us from the police."

Amnesty International has repeatedly taken the Indian government and security forces to task for human-rights violations in Punjab as well as elsewhere. The criticism is a touchy subject with government officials, who consider the reports meddlesome and exaggerated and insist India has its own procedures to handle grievances.

I'm not denying there are cases where the police have acted in excess. But there is no situation like Punjab anywhere else in the world," says Mr. Chidambaram, the security official. "It is more than protecting the people. It is protecting the integrity of the country. The very survival of India is at stake."

The police are also deeply mired in spreading corruption and political meddling. The extent of this was highlighted last year in the confrontation between Deputy Police Commissioner Kiran Bedi and Delhi's powerful legal community.

The lawyers were incensed by Ms. Bedi's arrest of an attorney for theft, a police assault on protesting attorneys, and police inaction while a mob stoned their officers and cars.

"Over time, they had been getting a lot of concessions by throwing their weight around. They were getting police officers suspended at the drop of a hat," Bedi says. "Bringing down corruption is the biggest task of a senior officer. You can't root it out but you can make it more difficult for the corrupt to operate."

While social and political changes are difficult in tradition-bound India, police experts say better training and more education can make a difference. Over the last five years in some areas, the government has improved police pay and benefits.

In Delhi, police chief Karan has launched a well-publicized effort to end police torture, purge corrupt officials, add more women to the force and reward strong police performance.

"What we have come to believe is that the country needs a police force that is dreaded by the people, with officers at the top who have been selected for their ability to wink at brutality and corruption," writes K. R. Rustamji, a prominent police expert. "A sense of alienation among the people can help the police in achieving its tasks."

THE ANDEAN AID PACKAGE AND ASSOCIATED ISSUES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DYMALLY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to share with my colleagues and the public a history of the $125 million in military aid which has been made available for the three Andean countries of Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru, and the oversight of the use of these funds carried out by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

On September 5, 1989, the Director of National Drug Control Policy, Hon. William Bennett, submitted the drug strategy required by the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988. Accompanying that strategy were a budget amendment requesting $125 million in military aid for the Andes, and several legislative amendments which were submitted on September 20. The committee held a hearing on September 12 on the strategy, followed by a hearing by the committee's Task Force on International Narcotics Control on November 7 with other executive branch witnesses. On November 8, the committee approved legislation to implement the executive request, H.R. 3611, which was approved by the House by voice vote on November 13, and amended by the Senate by voice vote on November 15. The conference report was approved by the House on November 21 and by the Senate on November 22. The legislation was signed into law by the President on December 13 (Public Law 101-231) as the International Narcotics Control Act of 1989.

At the time the committee considered the executive branch request, a number of issues were unresolved, including who in the executive branch would be responsible for managing the $125 million, how the money would be allocated between the three countries, what items would be provided, how much of the funds would be for foreign militaries and how much for foreign police forces, and so forth. Nor had the implementation plan for the strategy been finalized, although both Dirctor Bennett and Assistant Secretary of State for International Narcotics Matters Melvyn Levitsky assured us that the plan would be submitted in a matter of days. The committee therefore included in the bill a number of safeguards which limited how the funds could be spent, and would ensure that the Congress was kept fully informed of the use of the funds as plans to implement the strategy were developed.

First, section 3(a) of Public Law 101-231 emphasizes that the military aid shall be designed to enhance the ability of the three governments to control illicit narcotics production and trafficking, and to strengthen respect for internationally recognized human rights and the rule of law in efforts to control illicit narcotics production and trafficking. Second, section 3(c) limited to $6.5 million the amount of funds which could be used to provide training to law enforcement agencies or other units organized for the specific purpose of narcotics enforcement, and for the expenses of deploying DOD mobile training teams upon the host country's request to conduct in-country training. This ceiling was also cross-referenced to the fiscal year 1990 Appropriations Act. Third, section 3(d) limited to $12.5 million the amount of funds which could be used to provide weapons to law enforcement agencies or other units organized for the specific purpose of narcotics enforcement. This ceiling was also cross-referenced to the fiscal year 1990 Appropriations Act. Fourth, section 3(e) conditioned the provision of military aid on the host country having a democratic government, and exhibiting respect for human rights. Fifth, section 3(g) specifies that section 502B(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act—relating to country-specific human rights reports upon the request of the Foreign Affairs Committees—applies to the countries being assisted by this aid. Sixth, section 3(h) required that the military aid be coordinated with antinarcotics aid provided by the Department of State. Finally, section 3(f) required that not less than 15 days before funds are obligated pursuant to this section, the Congress be notified of the type and value of the assistance, the law enforcement agencies or other units that will receive the assistance, and an explanation of how the proposed assistance will achieve the purposes specified.

I would note, Mr. Speaker, that even though the $125 million in military aid was requested as an urgent matter, and the Congress approved the request within 8 weeks, the President took almost a month simply to sign the measure. It took another 2 months for the Defense Department to notify us of their preliminary intentions as to how they intended to spend the $125 million. On February 9, the committee received a notification from Hon. Glenn Rudd, Acting Director of the Defense Security Assistance Agency, which contained general information on the allocation of funds for Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru, but which did not meet the specific reporting requirements of section 3(f) of the law outlined above. Staff of the DSAA and the committee met on February 20 to review this notification and associated legal issues. On February 21, Chairman FASCELL responded to DSAA with a letter clarifying that the February 9 notification did not meet the requirements of the law. I ask unanimous consent that both of these letters, along with subsequent correspondence I will discuss later, be entered in the RECORD.

On March 12, almost 4 months after Congress had approved the President's $125 million aid request, the committee received a further notification from DSAA on how these funds would be utilized. While the cover letter and the allocation amounts were unclassified, the detailed list of equipment to be made available was submitted in classified form. Further, the implementation plans—the game plan, if you will—which would explain the context in which this equipment would be used, had still not been finalized, even though Director Bennett had assured us the previous fall that they would be ready by October. I therefore wrote to Chairman FASCELL and requested that the committee put a hold on the aid to be provided under the notification until the implementation plan was finalized and the committee was briefed on it. On March 15, the chairman wrote to DSAA and requested that the notification be placed on hold until the committee was briefed on the implementation plans and had the opportunity to raise concerns on some of the specific items to be provided. The chairman stressed in his letter, as I had in my letter to the chairman, that it was not the committee's intention to unduly delay provision of the assistance, and that we welcomed the opportunity to meet with the executive branch at the earliest possible date to resolve these issues.

The following week, we were informed that the long-overdue implementation plan was finally ready, and on March 22 the Task Force on International Narcotics Matters immediately held a closed, on-the-record classified briefing with officials from the Office of Drug Control Policy, the National Security Council, the Department of State, and the Department of Defense. At the briefing, which all members of the Foreign Affairs Committee were invited to attend, we spent several hours going through both the items listed in the classified notification line by line and item by item, and the somewhat lengthy implementation plan which we saw for the first time that day.

Out of that meeting, three principal concerns emerged. First, although human rights considerations were included in the mechanisms designed to evaluate the effectiveness of our military aid, they did not have quite the prominence that some would have wished. We therefore requested the executive branch to revise the implementation plan to highlight this concern. Second, there was continuing concern that this military aid be focused on counternarcotics objectives and not be permitted to become a counterinsurgency program. I would refer Members to the report language included in the report on H.R. 3611 (Report 101-342, part I) addressing this concern and stating the committee's intentions in this regard. We therefore requested written assurance from the executive branch that they agreed with this principle. Finally, a legal issue arose concerning the provision of aircraft to these countries, a matter I will go into later at some length. Although the executive branch, which by now had taken 6 months to pull together a concrete plan to implement the strategy announced last September, was quite anxious that we immediately release the $125 million, I stated that I would recommend keeping a hold on the aid package until these three concerns had been resolved. I also submitted a set of detailed questions on the items contained in the DOD notification; I would ask that the answers to those questions, submitted in an unclassified form on April 16, be included in the RECORD as well.

The issue of human rights was fairly rapidly resolved with a revision of the implementation plan. However, it took until April 9 for the executive branch to produce written assurances on the counterinsurgency issue. On that same day, Chairman FASCELL, at my request, wrote to DSAA releasing all of the funds except for those related to aircraft.

In the meantime, in order to ensure that the committee understand all of the elements of the Andean strategy and all of the U.S. Government actors involved in providing support to the strategy, the task force held a classified briefing with the Commander-in-Chief of the U.S. Southern Command, Gen. Maxwell Thurman. That briefing took place on April 4.

Frankly, Mr. Speaker, it has been difficult to keep all of my colleagues fully informed of all of these developments because virtually all of the relevant documents have been classified by the executive branch. There are some good reasons why at least initially we have needed to conduct these discussions in a closed forum, but I have informed the executive branch that at some point we need to have open and public debates over some of the concerns various parties have if the strategy is to maintain the support of the Congress and the American people. I have also requested the executive branch to declassify the notification on the $125 million and the implementation plan, and we are working with DOD to declassify the very helpful briefing we received from General Thurman so that that information will be available as well. In the meantime, I wanted to take this opportunity to bring my colleagues up to date on the oversight conducted by the Foreign Affairs Committee so that no one is under the illusion that we have ignored this important new program.

I would also note that I applaud the executive branch for its commitment to the Foreign Affairs Committee to have regular consultative briefings so that we can stay informed of developments related to the Andean program and that both sides can raise concerns and problems as we move forward with the program. Over the past year we have had a number of informal meetings with the executive branch to discuss the strategy, and we have now formalized this process. This is one case where the executive branch has taken steps to ensure that the committee is fully informed and consulted on our policy.

Finally, let me turn to the issue of aircraft titling, to which I previously alluded. One news report has referred to the holdup of the $7 million in aircraft acquisition as an inside-the-beltway "squabble." It is far more than that, however. It is an issue with important policy implications which if we ignore it will be at our own risk.

Under current law, the United States must retain title to any aircraft provided to a foreign country for antinarcotics purposes. If we require the United States to retain title to antinarcotics aircraft provided, we have some capability of monitoring the use of the aircraft and of recalling them if they are misused. This is not only an issue of ensuring aircraft are used appropriately and efficiently for antinarcotics purpose—such an ensuring that spray aircraft are spraying herbicides and not water as occurred in Mexico in the 1980's. It also protects us from having them used for nonnarcotics purposes, such as counterinsurgency campaigns. Given the situation we face in some of the Andean countries, this is not an frivolous matter.

Let me provide some background information on this issue. In 1986, due to concerns over misuse of aircraft we had previously provided for antinarcotics purposes to several countries. I sponsored an amendement to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 which became section 484 of that act. Section 484 reads as follows:

Any aircraft which, at any time after the enactment of this section, are made available to a foreign country under this chapter, or are made available to a foreign country under this chapter, or made available to a foreign country primarily for narcotics-related purposes under any provision of law, shall be provided only on a lease or loan basis.

This very straightforward language, which has now been in the law for 4 years, was designed to ensure that if aircraft were misused the United States would have the ability to withdraw them and use them elsewhere. While the executive branch originally opposed this provision strenuously, it has since come to see the protection this provides all parties. Last November, for example, Assistant Secretary of State Melvyn Levitsky stated that the law "now is a very valuable tool that provides us flexibility for policy purposes to help these countries wherever we can." The State Department inspector general testified in April of this year that "I think the Congress made a wise decision in not transferring title on additional aircraft to other countries * * * I think it is proper that the U.S. Government retain title to the aircraft." Further, a General Accounting Office report on Burma issued in September 1989 noted that for aircraft provided to Burma prior to the 1986 law, the State Department could not adequately monitor or ensure the effectiveness of the activities of the aircraft, and recommended that the U.S. Congress not resume an aid program until the Burmese Government allowed such monitoring. The report also found that the State Department could not ensure that the aircraft were not being used for counterinsurgency purposes.

Despite this extensive and useful experience with this provision, we discovered during our March 22 meeting that the Department of Defense—which, for the first time, was providing these aircraft instead of the State Department through the Bureau of International Narcotics Matters—proposed to transfer title of the aircraft in question to the host countries. I immediately pointed out that transferring title would violate section 484. The executive branch promised to take this issue under advisement, and to get back to us.

On March 26, at the executive branch's request, I again met with their representatives to discuss the issue. They proposed that they revise our agreements with the host country to permit the United States to reacquire the aircraft if we found they were being misused. While this may reflect the spirit of the law, it would still not meet the requirements of section 484 that aircraft be "provided only on a lease or loan basis" and would therefore still be a violation of the law.

On April 17, at my request, staff of the executive branch and the committee met to review a draft proposal which had my approval and would have, for future fiscal years, encoded into law essentially the executive branch's March 26 proposal for provisional titling if the Congress was notified in advance. We were at this time informed that DOD believes that it is forced to grant title to foreign countries because DOD does not have the authority to use the $125 million Andean assistance package to finance leases. This is an unintended consequence of the decision to provide all military aid under the Arms Export Control Act instead of under the Foreign Assistance Act. On April 23, we received an unsigned interim response which rejected our proposal but offered no legislative solution in return.

Because the executive branch has been unable or unwilling to propose or endorse any legislative solution to this problem, and because in the meantime the aircraft in question are being held up from delivery, I will be offering an amendment to the first appropriate legislative vehicle to solve this problem for fiscal year 1990 while we discuss a more generic solution. I have taken this time to go into this issue in some detail to demonstrate that the Congress has acted in good faith, and that we have searched for solutions expeditiously. I also want to stress the long-term implications of this issue. Our decisions on titling affect not only the control issue and the counter-insurgency issue. A decision to allow host country titling on military aid would over the long term lead to "dueling air wings" between the State Department and the Defense Department, with two logistical tails, two operational managers, et cetera. We need to give very serious thought before changing the current requirement for the United States to retain title to antinarcotics aircraft. We are still very hopeful that a satisfactory solution can be found and agreed to with the administration.

Mr. Speaker, I hope these remarks clarify the current status of our antinarcotics efforts under the Andean plan.

DEFENSE SECURITY ASSISTANCE AGENCY,
Washington, DC, February 9, 1990.

Hon. DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to section 3(f) of the International Narcotics Control Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-231) and the proviso to section 602 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1990 (P.L. 101-167), we are providing written notification concerning the funds appropriated by section 602 for counter-narcotics programs. The Department of State has allocated $39.728 million for Bolivia, $48.789 million for Colombia, and $35.945 million for Peru.

These funds will be used to finance the full range of equipment and services for use by the regular military forces and law enforcement agencies of those countries, including communications equipment, command and control equipment, individual field equipment and weapons, ammunition, helicopters and other aircraft, aircraft parts and spares, riverine craft and other vessels (including spares), training, publications, and vehicles, for use in controlling illicit narcotics production and trafficking.

This assistance will provide substantially increased support to counter-narcotics programs in the principal cocaine source countries—Colombia, Peru, and Bolivia. Specifically, military and law enforcement counter-narcotics elements will be more capable of securing cocaine production regions and interdicting the flow of cocaine from those regions to the United States.

Sincerely,

GLENN A. RUDD,
Acting Director.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, February 21, 1990.

Hon. GLENN A. RUDD,
Acting Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. RUDD: I am writing with respect to the $125 million authorized for Peru, Bolivia and Colombia for antinarcotics purposes by Public Law 101-231, the International Narcotics Control Act of 1989. As you know, this authorization is subject to certain conditions and detailed congressional notification before obligations can be made.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs received a notification (I-00217/90) from you on February 9, 1990 which raised some concerns as to whether the notification requirements of the law were being met. In informal discussions with your office and the Bureau of International Narcotics Matters, our staffs reached agreement that: (1) the February 9 notification was in fact a pre-notification of your intent to obligate funds; (2) it does not constitute notice under section 3(f) of the Public Law 101-231; and (3) that when final decisions are reached concerning the exact nature of the assistance to Peru, Bolivia, and Colombia the Committee will receive a formal notification pursuant to section 3(f) containing all of the information required in that section.

In addition, the issue of transferring $16.5 million of the $125 million total was discussed. As you know, INM funds can be used without the restrictions imposed on aid to law enforcement agencies by section 660. The Committee has some concerns that after these funds are transferred, the authority for the Department of Defense to provide up to $19 million in law enforcement assistance, without section 660 restrictions, would remain in force. However, as the Committee does not wish to unduly restrict the ability of the Administration to most effectively use this assistance, we do not object to this transfer with the understanding that any of these funds provided for police related activities by INM would be counted against the ceiling of $19 million, so that combined DOD/INM assistance for police training and equipment for the three countries in question would not exceed the $19 million ceiling.

We appreciate your courtesy in providing the Committee with the pre-notification letter, and look forward to working with you as the process of implementing the Andean initiative moves forward.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman.

DEFENSE SECURITY ASSISTANCE AGENCY,
Washington, DC, March 12, 1990.

Hon. DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In response to the letter from the Chairman of HFAC, dated February 21, 1990, to the acting director of the Defense Security Assistance Agency, I am providing additional information to supplement the information provided in my February 9, 1990, letter to you regarding the $125 million authorized for counter-narcotics purposes for Colombia, Bolivia, and Peru. As indicated in the earlier letter, the Department of State has allocated grant assistance in the amounts of $39.728 million for Bolivia, $48.789 million for Colombia, and $35.945 million for Peru.

A detailed explanation is attached for our intended use of the funds authorized by Section 3 of the International Narcotics Control Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-231) and appropriated by section 602 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1990 (P.L. 101-167). This explanation includes the country to which assistance is being provided, the type and value of the assistance to be provided, the law enforcement agencies and other units that will receive the assistance, and an explanation of how the proposed assistance will achieve the purpose for which the funds were authorized.

Sincerely,

GLENN A. RUDD.

Attachment as stated.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, March 15, 1990.

Hon. DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR DANTE: The Committee today received a classified notification from the Defense Security Assistance agency regarding the $125 million in military aid authorized and appropriated last fall for Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru. As you may recall, in section 3 of the International Narcotics Control Act of 1989 we required the executive branch to notify us under 634A procedures as to the type and value of the assistance to be provided, the law enforcement agencies which would receive the assistance, and an explanation of how the proposed assistance will achieve the purposes for which the funds were authorized. This notification attempts to meet those requirements.

However, the notification by itself gives no real indication of how this assistance will fit into the Andean implementation plans which have been under development for a number of months in the executive branch. These plans lay out how the Andean strategy will be implemented in the field and what the goals, objectives, and measures of effectiveness will be. The executive branch has repeatedly promised to brief us on these plans when they are completed, but the process of approving those documents has fallen behind the aid notification. It is therefore difficult to make sense of the use of the equipment proposed in the notification without some understanding of the overall implementation plan.

It is my understanding that the implementation plans should be completed in the next week or two. Given the sensitivities associated with this military aid, I would respectfully request that you ask the executive branch to "hold" this notification until the Committee can be briefed on the implementation plans. I have already informed the Administration that I will ask for either a briefing or a hearing on the implementation plans in order to address the questions raised by the notification.

It is not my intention, Dante, to slow up this process. On the contrary, we have been actively pushing the Administration to submit the notification and the plans so that the aid can go forward. But I feel we owe it to ourselves to be fully informed on the nature, purposes, and implementation of the aid before we sign off on it.

Thank you for your consideration.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

LAWRENCE J. SMITH,
Chairman, Task Force on International Narcotics Control.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, March 15, 1990.

Hon. GLENN A. RUDD,
Acting Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, The Pentagon, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. RUDD: I am writing in response to your letter of March 12 (I-001207/90) concerning the notification of $125 million in military aid for Bolivia, Colombia, and Peru.

The Committee has two major concerns with this notification. The first is that the Committee has neither nor been briefed on the implementation plans for the Andean initiative. In the absence of information on how the overall strategy will be implemented, it is difficult to assess how the provision of the equipment contained in the notification will support the implementation plan.

A separate concern is the nature of some of the items listed in the notification. While the classification of the notification precludes a listing in this letter of specific concerns, I would note in particular that the Committee has done extensive oversight on the problems associated with equipment we have provided in support of riverine operations in South America.

Given these concerns, I would request that you place this notification on "hold" until (1) the Committee is briefed on the implementation plans, and (2) the Committee has had the opportunity to discuss its concerns on some of the specific items proposed in the notification. It is not our intention to unduly delay the assistance proposed in the notification; it is my understanding that the implementation plans will be completed shortly, and we would welcome the opportunity to meet with the executive branch at the earliest possible date to resolve these outstanding issues.

Thank you for your cooperation. We look forward to working with you to ensure that appropriate aid is provided to these countries in an expeditious manner.

With best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, DC, April 9, 1990.

Hon. DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Following discussions with members of your Committee we are providing further information regarding the relationship between establishing military assistance programs for counternarcotics purposes and the fight against insurgents in the Andean countries.

The President's National Drug Control Strategy recognizes that the governments of the cocaine producing countries require a means to pursue anti-drug military and law enforcement operations more effectively. In order to fulfill these ends, the U.S. Congress determined, in the International Narcotics Control Act of 1989, that enhanced training and additional equipment resources would be necessary to undertake intensified operations against transportation, processing and cultivation areas.

The first priority of our international drug control strategy, as reflected in Section 3(a)(1) of P.L. 101-243, is to enhance our counternarcotics programs in the Andean region in order to increase the effectiveness of the Andean governments in combatting the growing threat of cocaine production and trafficking. While U.S. assistance will focus on enhancing the capabilities of police and other law enforcement activities, only active involvement by the host nation armed forces will enable the governments fully to engage the drug traffickers and to inflict major damage on the cocaine trade. A key focus of our plans therefore is to work with these countries to develop the necessary infrastructure to enable their military forces to assume a greater role in counternarcotics activities, and in particular to enhance the role of host country militaries in remote and inaccessible parts of the country that are beyond the reach of the smaller police organizations.

As the Committee pointed out in its Report on P.L. 101-243 (H. Rpt. No. 101-342, November 8, 1989), the counternarcotics efforts in these countries are frequently conducted simultaneously with counterinsurgency programs. In certain areas, counternarcotics activities are threatened by insurgent groups whose control over the areas prevents any effective government action to combat narcotics trafficking, and whose activities are inextricably intertwined with those of the narcotics traffickers.

In order effectively to attack the narcotics threat, the capabilities of the armed forces of all three countries must be enhanced and training intensified, in order to permit them to regain control over the most important coca growing and transshipment areas, provide protection to police forces on counternarcotics operations from guerrilla insurgents, and develop the capability to strike directly at drug trafficking organizations. While the ultimate purpose of the military assistance, including equipment and training, provided to the Andean countries under this plan is to combat narcotics trafficking and production, it is inevitable that counternarcotics activities will at times require counter-insurgency efforts to regain government control over certain areas.

That said, we share the concern expressed in the Committee's report that assistance provided under P.L. 101-243 not "be used as a new spigot for counter-insurgency aid." In no case do we intend that the assistance will be used for counter-insurgency operations independent of counternarcotics purposes. The agreements pursuant to which the assistance will be provided will make clear that the assistance is being made available only for counternarcotics purposes. By doing so, we can control, to a significant degree, how the host nations use what we provide. These agreements will specify, for instance, monitoring by U.S. personnel and restrictions on the types of equipment and training supplied. In addition, the normal case review process for equipment provided under the U.S. military assistance program will be supplemented by monitoring activities of the international narcotics control program.

I hope that this letter clarifies this important issue.

Sincerely,

JANET G. MULLINS,
Assistant Secretary, Legislative Affairs.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, April 9, 1990.

Hon. GLENN A. RUDD,
Acting Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, The Pentagon, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. RUDD: I am writing in further reference to my letter of March 15, 1990 regarding your letter of March 12 (I-001207/90), concerning $125 million of military aid for Bolivia, Columbia, and Peru.

The Committee has now received and been briefed on the implementation plan, as requested. It has further received clarifications in writing regarding concerns raised on evaluations of military aid effectiveness in light of human rights performance, and on the use of this aid for counter-insurgency purposes versus counter-narcotics purpose. However, questions continue over what are perceived as conflicting provisions in section 484 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (which requires that all aircraft provided for narcotics control purposes after 1986 under that Act or any other provision of law be on a lease or loan basis), and section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act, regarding sales of military equipment. It continues to be the Committee's view that the law requires the United States to retain title of all aircraft provided for narcotics control purposes.

The Committee is therefore prepared to support the obligation of funds of that portion of the $125 million which is not related to aircraft acquisition. However, until legal issues surrounding the titling question are resolved, none of those funds should be obligated for aircraft acquisition.

It is the Committee's intention to prepare legislative language to address this issue, and to enact such a change as expeditiously as possible, in order that further delays and confusion are avoided. Thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, DC, April 16, 1990.

Hon. LAWARENCE J. SMITH,
Chairman, Task Force on International Narcotics Control, Committee on Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This is in response to questions given to Melvyn Levitsky, Assistant Secretary of State for International Narcotics Matters, regarding your concerns about $125 million appropriated by the Congress for U.S. military assistance for counternarcotics programs in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru. Enclosed are answers to your detailed questions.

I share your concerns and assure you that we will continue to work closely with the Congress, the Department of Defense and other appropriate government agencies to ensure the success of this important counternarcotics initiative.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you need further information.

Sincerely,

JANET G. MULLINS,
Assistant Secretary, Legislative Affairs.

Enclosure: Questions and answers.

DETAILED QUESTIONS ON $125 MILLION

Of the $125 million, $16.5 is being transferred to INM for law enforcement purposes. When will you carry out this reprogramming, and when will we be notified as to what that money will be spent for?

COLOMBIA

1. The notification indicates that we will provide $4.5 million for a radar command center and radar site security, and $4.4 million for a forward operating base.

Does this include the cost of acquiring the radar? If not, are the Colombians providing the radar? What kind of radar will this be? what area will it cover?

How is the "forward operating base" connected with the radar? (or, if it's not connected to the radar, what is it for?)

2. We are providing $10.3 million to train and equip Army "strike companies".

Are these new companies? are they specifically dedicated to narcotics control activities, or do they have other responsibilites as well?

3. The equipment list includes $2.12 million for rifles for the Colombian Army. It has been our understanding that the Colombian military is already quite well-equipped and had no need for more arms. Is that not the case?

4. The ammunition we would provide includes 60 millimeter white phosphorous ammo. Should we be concerned about possible hazards for civilians? how would this be used?

5. You propose $2 million to support operations and maintenance for riverine patrol craft.

Is this for boats we have provided, or for those already in the Colombian inventory?

What record have these existing patrol craft had in riverine operations? have they had any results in interdicting precursors?

6. You also propose to spend $500,000 on upgrading the weapons systems on the Bell 212 helicopters. What kind of upgrade is proposed, and for what purpose?

7. You also propose $3 million for secure communications for the military. Will this system be interoperable with whatever system the Colombian police have?

BOLIVIA

8. The notification includes $1.85 million for the Bolivian "National Counternatcotics Command". What is this? does it exist? who runs it?

9. The notification includes $12.8 million to train and equip various unspecified Bolivian Army units.

Can you provide us more detail on what equipment will be provided?

The footnote to this item indicates that this is for Bolivian Army support for "expanded border operations to interdict precursor chemicals". Isn't $12.8 million quite a lot of money for this purpose? do most of the chemicals move on land or on the rivers?

10. There is quite a bit of money (a total of $4.1 million) to support the C-130 transport planes. How many C-130's are in Bolivia? what accounts for the high costs of this support ($3.2 million for depot maintenance alone).

11. What specific role will the AT-33's ($4.9 for repairs) and the T-33's ($1.2 million for repairs) play?

12. You propose $1.5 million to repair and arm PC-7s. How will the PC-7s be armed?

PERU

13. The level of detail you have provided on equipment for Peru is not very specific.

Can you tell us how you would spend the $2.7 million for "troop support"?

There is $3.2 million for a "training center". Where will this be, and who will be trained to do what?

You propose $522,000 for "light anti-tank weapons". Why are these needed?

14. You are proposing $6.1 million to acquire and support riverine patrol craft.

You indicate that you would spend $3 million for "up to six patrol craft". That would be $500,000 per craft. What types of boats would you provide? would these costs include spare parts, or shouldn't they be included under the $3.1 million for "riverine craft support"?

You indicate you would provide aid for operational base facilities. Where would this base be located?

15. Out of the funds proposed for the Peruvian Army, you indicate you want to construct a secure base to conduct counternarcotics training. Where would this base be located, who would be trained, how much would it cost? is this in addition to the Santa Lucia base we have already built?

16. You propose $7.2 million for spare parts for A-37's and Bell 212's.

How many A-37's are there? how useful are A-37's for counternarcotics activities?

Why do we have both Bell 212 helicopters and your proposed Huey helicopters? wouldn't it make operations and maintenance easier if you used the same kind of helicopter?

Q: Of the $125 million, $16.5 is being transferred to INM for law enforcement purposes. When will you carry out this reprogramming, and when will we be notified as to what that money will be spent for?

A: The request to transfer $16.5 million ($10 million for Colombia and $6.5 for Bolivia) of FY 1990 Foreign Military Financing funds to the INM account is being processed in accordance with provisions of Section 610 (transfer between accounts) of the Foreign Assistance Act. Informal consultations with the Office of Management and Budget and the Congress have been completed. The formal request to transfer the funds is being forwarded to the Secretary of State for approval and submission to the White House.

COLOMBIA

Q: The notification indicates that we will provide $4.5 million for a radar command center and radar site security, and $4.4 million for a forward operating base. Does this include the cost of acquiring the radar? If not, are the Colombians providing the radar? What kind of radar will this be? What area will it cover?

A: The funds are for operational costs to integrate radar information obtained from existing programs.

The purpose of the center is to integrate radar information developed by two Caribbean Basin Radar Network sites (developed with U.S. support) and two domestic Colombia radars. Projected FMF funding for the project totals $7 million ($3.5 million from FY 1990 funds and $3.5 million from FY 1991 funds).

Over the near term, radar will be utilized to inderdict air traffic over northern regions of Colombia.

Q: How is the "forward operating base" connected with the radar (or, if it's not connected to the radar, what is it for?)

A: The purpose of the forward operating base is to position counternarcotics aircraft toward the southern border to interdict inbound trafficker flights. Information developed by the radars and operations center will be used to direct interdiction missions from forward bases.

Q: We are providing $10.3 million to train and equip Army strike companies." Are these new companies? Are they specifically dedicated to narcotics control activities, or do they have other responsibilities as well?

A: A total of 10 new companies is being formed in the Colombian Army with a specific mission to conduct counternarcotics operations.

Q: The equipment list includes $2.12 million for rifles for the Colombian Army. It has been our understanding that the Colombian military is already quite well-equipped and had no need for more arms. Is that not the case?

A: The rifles for the Colombian Army are for the new Army companies being formed for counternarcotics missions. The Colombian Army is armed mainly with GALIL and HK 7.62 millimeter rifles, both of which are heavy, older weapons systems best suited for conventional conflict in a Middle Eastern or European environment.

Q: The ammunition we would provide includes 60 millimeter white phosphorous ammo. Should we be concerned about the possible hazards for civilians? How would this be used?

A: The 60 millimeter mortar white phosphorous round is used to mark a target or create smoke for protective cover and concealment while maneuvering toward a target, such as a known cocaine laboratory site. Employed in this manner by the professional and well-trained Colombian Army, the round will not pose a threat to innocent civilians.

Q: You propose $2 million to support operations and maintenance for riverine patrol craft. Is this for boats we have provided, or for those already in the Colombian inventory?

A: This is to support river patrol boats given to Colombia as part of the $65 million provided under the recent 506(a) emergency drawdown.

Q: What record have these existing patrol craft had in riverine operations? Have they had any results in interdicting precursors?

A: The existing patrol craft are being utilized as training platforms for the Colombian Marines. Counternarcotics missions should commence when FY 1990 funds become available to complete training and support operations on the rivers.

Q: You also propose to spend $500,000 on upgrading the weapons systems on the Bell 212 helicopters. What kind of upgrade is proposed, and for what purpose?

A: This is in response to a Columbian request to upgrade their six Bell 212's by installing mini-gun systems. The purpose of the upgrade is to enhance the capability of the helicopters to respond to hostile situations while supporting operations in high altitudes.

Q: You also propose $3 million for secure communications for the military. Will this system be interoperable with whatever system the Colombian police have?

A: The goal is to provide a secure, interoperable communications system to the Colombian military and National Police. A U.S. military assistance communications survey team will be tasked with performing a survey of both Colombian military and National Police communications. The team will review and evaluate existing hardware and frequencies.

BOLIVIA

Q: The notification includes $1.85 million for the Bolivian "National Counternarcotics Command." What is this? Does it exist? Who runs it?

A: This new centralized center will establish a national level command and control capability to encourage Bolivian interagency cooperation and coordination in the fight against narcotics trafficking.

Q: The notification includes $12.8 million to train and equip various unspecified Bolivian Army units. Can you provide us more detail on what equipment will be provided?

A: Two light infantry battalions, each with a medical section for civic action, an engineer battalion, a transport battalion, and a service section. These units will be formed, equipped and trained to support counternarcotics operations in conjunction with the police. They will destroy cocaine laboratory facilities and narcotrafficker infrastructure, control illicit activities in growing areas and engage in civic action programs including medical and civil construction projects. The transport and service units will assist in movement of military and police units in support of counternarcotics operations.

Q: The footnote to this item indicates that this is for Bolivian army support for "expanded border operations to interdict precursor chemicals." Isn't $12.8 million quite a lot of money for this purpose? Do most of the chemicals move on land or on the rivers?

A: Efforts to block the shipment of precursor chemicals, increase the effectiveness of military activities, isolate key coca growing areas, destroy existing laboratories and processing centers, and control key air corridors include expanding riverine capacity and operations, enhancing communications networks and capacity to automate and process data, equipping light infantry, engineering and transport battalions, and participating in interdiction operations.

Precursor chemicals are transported to Bolivia via air, rail and road. Once in Bolivia, precursors are transported to the major coca growing region in the Chapare by road and to cocaine hydrochloride (HCL) processing laboratories in the Beni region primarily by river.

Q: There is quite a bit of money (a total of $4.1 million) to support the C-130 transport planes. How many C-130's are in Bolivia? What accounts for the high costs of this support ($3.2 million for depot maintenance alone)?

A: Bolivia purchased seven excess C-130A's from the U.S. in 1988, adding to the two commercial versions of C-130 aircraft already in the Bolivian inventory. Of the seven C-130A's, four are in operation, two are being used for spare parts and one was lost in an accident.

The Bolivian Air Force has no capacity to provide other than basic maintenance. Spare parts, overhaul expertise and technical expertise of depot level maintenance are expensive.

Q: What specific role will the AT-33's ($4.9 million for repairs) and the TR-33's ($1.2 million repairs) play?

A: The T-33 is a jet trainer utilized by the Bolivian Air Force and can be converted to AT-33 configuration with the capacity to be used to intercept narcotrafficker aircraft traveling in the Chapare and Beni regions.

$4.9 million will be used to upgrade up to eight T-33 aircraft to AT-33 configuration.

$1.2 million will be used to repair T-33 aircraft to be used as a trainer platform.

Q: You propose $1.5 million to repair and arm PC-7's. How will the PC-7's be armed?

A: The PC-7 fire control systems will be replaced with equipment to accept standardized rockets and NATO ammunition.

PERU

Q: Can you tell us how you would spend the $2.7 million for "troop support"?

A: This is to fund individual and small unit field equipment for six infantry battalions, consisting of approximately 625 individuals in each battalion, to be assigned to the Upper Huallaga Valley. The U.S. Army estimates the cost of equipping a soldier with personal field gear, excluding weapon, is $345. Additional equipment, such as compass, binoculars, body armor, costs approximately $275 per soldier.

Q: There is $3.2 million for a "Training center." Where will this be, and who will be trained to do what?

A: A training base will be built in the Upper Huallaga Valley to train military units assigned to counternarcotics operations.

Q: You propose $522,000 for "light anti-tank weapons." Why are they needed?

A: The Light Anti-Tank Weapon (LAW) is being provided for tactical application against armored vehicles (e.g., commercial vehicles with protective armor inserts) and cocaine laboratories.

Q: You indicate that you would spend $3 million for "up to six patrol craft." That would be $500,000 per craft. What types of boats would you provide? Would these costs include spare parts, or shouldn't they be included under the $3.1 million for "riverine craft support"?

A: The patrol craft recommended for counternarcotics operations in the extensive river systems of Peru is a 40-foot river boat with armament. The proposed amount includes procurement, crew training, spare parts and maintenance for approximately two years.

Q: You indicate you would provide aid for operational base facilities. Where would this base be located?

A: The Peruvian Navy is requesting that funds be utilized to upgrade several existing riverine bases.

Q: Out of the funds proposed for the Peruvian Army, you indicate you want to construct a secure base to conduct counternarcotics training. Where would this base be located, who would be trained, how much would it cost? Is this in addition to the Santa Lucia base we have already built?

A: The proposed site of the secure training base is in the Upper Huallaga Valley. The site would be a secure training facility for Peruvian Army troops assigned to units invovled in counternarcotics operations. It is estimated that the base could be built for approximately $8 million.

Q: You propose $7.2 million for spare parts for A-37's and Bell 212's. How many A-37's are there? How useful are A-37's for counternarcotics activities?

A: There are 27 A-37 aircraft in Peru which can be employed in interdiction operations.

Q: Why do we have both Bell 212 helicopters and your proposed Huey helicopters? Wouldn't it make operations and maintenance easier if you used the same kind of helicopter?

A: The initial plan to provide UH-1H helicopters to Peru has been cancelled at the request of the Ambassador, so that we will continue to support the same kind of helicopter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH] is recognized for 60 minutes.

[Mr. GINGRICH addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mrs. COLLINS (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT), for today and the balance of the week, on account of personal injury.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

SMALL BUSINESS WEEK 1990

HON. SILVIO O. CONTE
OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, upon the occasion of Small Business Week, May 6–12, 1990, I rise to pay tribute to America's small businesses. This is the 26th year we have so honored small business. The theme of small business week this year is "Small Business: Leading America into the 21st Century."

Over the years, much has been said and printed about small business: How small businesses employ 55 percent of all workers, create 66 percent of all new jobs, provide 50 percent of all major innovations, and produce 40 percent of the gross national product. It has been said that American small business produces so many goods and services that it can claim to be the world's fourth greatest economic power. Indeed small business is indispensable to a health economy and full employment in this country.

I firmly believe that strong, sustained small business activity is the keystone to a healthy economy, which is why I serve with pride on the Small Business Committee. I first joined the committee in 1965. From 1969 to 1978, I was the ranking minority member during which the committee was upgraded from a select committee to a permanent select committee in 1971 to a standing committee in 1975. It has been my great honor to serve with and lead my distinguished colleagues on a committee rich with history and accomplishments. As ranking minority on the Procurement Subcommittee, I am particularly concerned with small business Federal procurement opportunities. And I would like to address that issue today.

Mr. Speaker, in reviewing the statistics for fiscal year 1988, I note that small business firms accounted for $26 billion of the $174 billion in all Federal prime contract purchases, or 15 percent of total prime contract procurement. Further, small business subcontractors won about $27 billion in awards from prime contractors on Federal projects. In addition, for those contracts under $25,000, which totaled $21 billion, small business won $10 billion, or 46 percent. The combined total of small business participation in Government contract awards is $63 billion or 32 percent of the $195 billion in total awards. This is a 1-percent increase over last year's 31 percent. Impressive as that figure is, I believe we need to renew our efforts to increase small business participation in Federal procurement.

I firmly believe that small business will lead America into the 21st century. Strengthening small businesses participation in Federal procurement will provide America with the necessary competitive capability. As small business champions, we must ensure that small business participation in Federal procurement achieves parity with their contribution to the gross national product, which is now 40 percent. That parity or 8-percent increase should come from prime contracting actions which I believe we can achieve by providing greater opportunities and more competition.

Consistent with that goal, I have authored legislation in 1988 that became section 110 of Public Law 100–590 changing the appeal process of Breakout Procurement Center Representatives to mirror that of Traditional Procurement Center Representatives. BPCR's are advocates of competition in the procurement process. They identify and "breakout" items for competition. They also counsel and encourage small business to compete for the breakout. Last year, breakouts saved the government $260 million. They are cost effective and encourage small business participation.

In the first session of this Congress, I authored H.R. 2274, the Small Business Protection Act and H.R. 2351, the Women's Business Equity Act. Technically, H.R. 2274 codifies Federal Acquisition Regulation subpart 19.202–1 to encourage greater small business participation in acquisitions. It does this by amending section 15(a) of the Small Business Act to provide for a "small business impact statement" whenever contracts currently serviced by small business are proposed for a procurement that would exceed economical ordering and quantities conducive to small business participation. In other words, the Small Business Protection Act defends against "umbrella" contracts—an agency practice that combines several small contracts into one large multi-function contract.

This practice of contract aggregation, also known as "bundling" or "bid consolidation" is, by its very nature, inimical to small business participation in Federal contracting. Contracts that are "bundled" effectively eliminate small business as prime contractors because only large businesses with the concomitant financial and technical resources can respond.

The House Small Business Committee has been concerned about this problem since 1983, when it considered H.R. 2133, an omnibus small business procurement bill. Unfortunately, because of other issues, that bill never came to the floor. Bundling cropped up again in 1985, when former chairman Mitchell sent a letter to then Secretary of the Army, John Marsh, requesting that the Army suspend seven consolidated contracts because they were unduly restrictive of competition, that is, small business was being locked out. In 1987, the committee had a modicum of success when it convinced the Appropriations Committee to report language on H.J. Res. 395, the fiscal year 1988 continuing appropriation, expressing concern about bid consoldation. H.R. 2274, therefore, continues and refines the committees legislative effort to preserve small business prime contracting opportunities.

In 1988, Congress passed Public Law 100–656. Section 502 mandates a governmentwide small business participation goal of not less than 20 percent of the total value of all prime contract awards for each fiscal year. In fiscal year 89, DOD only achieved 19 percent. DOD's actual first quarter 1990 small business prime contracting participation rate is an embarrassing 16 percent. Currently DOD is negotiating with the SBA on its 1990 goal. Reportedly, they are offering only a 17 percent goal.

Mr. Speaker, I have a copy of a letter from Mr. Horace Crouch, Chief SADBU, DOD on this very issue. He lists a number of reasons why DOD cannot increase small business participation—reasons No. 7 and No. 8 are important so I will quote directly "7. The consolidation of smaller construction requirements in the Army Job Orders Contract [JOC] Program and a similar Air Force Program of Simplified Acquisition of Base Engineering Requirements [SABER] placing many of these consolidated requirements beyond the capabilities of small construction firms to satisfy." and "8. The increased use of large single umbrella contracts which aggregate many small tasks previously performed by small business." DOD clearly admits that consolidation will adversely impact upon small business prime contracting opportunities.

Small business participation has already suffered as a result of title VII of Public Law 100–656, the so-called Competitiveness Demonstration Program. Further, as we cut back on the defense budget, the procurement mix will undoubtedly change to favor buildups in the non-small business areas. The time for action is now! The Small Business Act states unequivocally that it is the policy of Congress to insure that a fair proportion of the total purchases and contracts or subcontracts for property and services for the government be placed with small business enterprise. H.R. 2274 is consistent with that intent. Bid consolidation is not.

While H.R. 2351, the Women's Business Equity Act, is a multifaceted bill, several provisions are important from a procurement point of view. H.R. 2351 requires the head of each Federal agency to establish goals for Women's Business Enterprise participation. Goals shall be jointly established by the SBA and the agency and shall be a realistic reflection of WBE capabilities. Any goaling disagreement shall be submitted to OFPP. The head of each agency shall strive to expand WBE participation in each industry category utilized by the agency.

H.R. 2351 reaffirms Federal procurement policy that promotes maximum practicable opportunities in contracts and subcontracts for WBE participation. It also requires prompt payment from prime contractors to subcontractors. For contract purposes it defines WBE's and requires awarding authorities to certify maximum opportunity for WBE's on subcon-tracting. H.R. 2351 further requires offerors/bidders to describe WBE efforts and requires the SBA to submit an annual subcontracting report to Congress on plans/agencies not in compliance. Finally, H.R. 2351 requires each agency to make affirmative efforts to identify and solicit offers from WBE's. H.R. 2351 requires each agency to include at least one bid from a WBE for all purchases under $25,000.

I think it is important to remember that while WBE's are the fastest- growing segment of business today in America, and now in fact account for over 30 percent of all businesses, they only receive about 1 percent of all Federal procurement dollars. Most WBE's will tell you that they have never been awarded a contract because of goals. They got a contract because they were the low bidder and could deliver a quality product within specific timeframes. However, they would never have had the opportunity to bid if it was not for goals. The provision in H.R. 2351, mandating that at least one WBE bid be considered for all purchase orders under $25,000, should open the market to women-owned businesses that are suppliers, manufacturers, or in the service industry. Again, the requirement of having at least one WBE bid is not a set-aside, but merely a way to open the market to WBE companies. The WBE still needs to be the lowest responsible bidder and provide the service or material in a timely manner. This is a crucial provision since the vast majority of all Federal contract actions, about 98 percent, are for amounts of $25,000 or less. This is also the most common point of entry for small business in the Federal procurement process. If enacted and successfully implemented, this provision will greatly increase WBE contracting opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, this week, "Small Business Week—1990," I am introducing three important bills to further small business contracting opportunities with the Federal Government. The first bill is entitled "The Resolution Trust Corporation Procurement Regulation Act of 1990." Simply, this bill would subject the Resolution Trust Corporation to the Federal Acquisition Regulation issued under section 25(c)(1) of the Federal Procurement Policy Act. The Resolution Trust Corporation [RTC] is the agency created to sell assets of the insolvent savings and loan industry.

The agency started gearing up early this year and expects to continue for at least 6 more years. RTC states that 90 percent of its funds are nonappropriated and that though they are not required to follow the FAR, they use FAR guidelines for much of their procurement. RTC has the authority to offer a 3-percent price differential to minority and woman-owned businesses up to $2 million in acquisition dollars for fiscal year 1990. The agency also offers bonus points on technical evaluations to minority and woman-owned business and has a minority and woman-owned business program director in Washington and representatives in their regional offices. RTC has no small business set-aside program. My concern is that since the RTC is not required to follow FAR, they may not implement small business programs such as making small business set-asides, making referrals to the 8(a) program, the requirement for subcontracting plans, certificates of competency, etc.

For most of their work RTC acts as receiver or conservator. Due to the uncertainty of the actual number of assets being taken over, RTC's procurement budget could reach over $1 billion. Approximately half of that amount is expected to be for legal work and the remainder for asset management and repairs to real property and construction. Without my bill, Mr. Speaker, I am afraid small business will be locked out of procurement opportunities with the RTC. It is a well-known maxim that competition drives down prices. My bill would open up the RTC procurements to small business participation—increasing the number of bidders/suppliers and thus maximizing the budget of the RTC.

My second bill, Mr. Speaker, would require the SBA to employ a traditional procurement center representative at each awarding authority in the Washington metropolitan area whose procurement budget exceeds $600 million annually. Currently, the SBA is three PCR's short of this objective. My bill authorizes residency and a budget to correct this critical shortfall.

The Washington metropolitan area is currently covered by 7 traditional PCR's, plus one PCR who travels from Philadelphia to cover two installatons in Maryland. By the addition of three TPCR's, SBA could expand its coverage so that it included the seven Cabinet-level civilian agencies with the largest acquisition budgets, all over $600 million annually. Three additional TPCR's would enable SBA to better monitor the small business programs at all Federal agencies in Washington.

SBA would assign resident coverage to the Department of Agriculture—over $600 million annually; the Navy Sea Systems Command—over $11 billion annually; and the Environmental Protection Agency, with an annual budget over $1.5 billion—including the Superfund program. The first two installations are now covered on a liaison basis and the third has not had a PCR for several years. A resident PCR at these installations should significantly increase their opportunities for small business concerns. The additional TPCR's would also have liaison assignments at 6 to 10 agencies not currently covered.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I am offering the Small Business Machine Tool Access Act of 1990 to provide for small business access to excess industrial plant equipment at DOD. The transfer of excess IPE would increase small business participation in DOD contracts, assist DOD in meeting its annual small business goal and improve the defense mobilization base.

Manufacturing is the life blood of a nation—it is the measure of a nation's sophistication and capability. To manufacture is to control your destiny. America needs to strengthen her manufacturing capability. I would like to quote from a fascinating book on the state of the American machine tool industry today, called When the Machine Stopped by Max Holland. Machine tools are in fact the "mother" or "master" machines, the machines that make all machines. Every manufactured product is made either by a machine tool or by a machine that was made by a machine tool. Machine tools, for example, take all the metal forgings that go into an automobile and fashion them into a finished car. But unlike cars, or any other machines they make, machine tools also reproduce themselves. Thus, at the heart of the industrial health of any nation is its machine tool industry, and for decades this industry was the very badge of U.S. manufacturing prowess. The correspondence between the emergence of the American machine tool industry and the American economy in the 20th century was no coincidence.

It is also no coincidence that the erosion of the U.S. machine tool industry parallels the decline in domestic manufacturing. In 1965, U.S. tool builders were the most productive anywhere, with more than 28 percent of total worldwide production. By 1986, the U.S. share was less than 10 percent, and foreign manufacturers supplied 49 percent of all the machine tools used in the United States. In 5 short years, from 1981 to 1986, the number of U.S. machine tool plants shriveled by one-third because of bankruptcies, takeovers, and reductions in capacity. That figure, moreover does not include the number of firms that went "hollow," that is, became importers and salesmen for machines produced in Asia and elsewhere."

While small business is the backbone of manufacturing, many small businesses cannot afford to buy new, costly machine tools available in today's market. They can, however, if my bill is adopted, buy used machine tools from the government and upgrade to CNC or machine cell capabilities. The Army alone has about 41,000 items of excess IPE of which only 3.5 percent are of foreign manufacture. Making this huge inventory available to small business will recycle important machine tools and boost the manufacturing base of America.

Mr. Speaker, we are in a global battle for market dominance. America's small business, the fourth greatest economic power in the world, plays the pivotal role in deciding America's future. I urge all my colleagues to support America's small business through the adoption of my bills. Let us all work together to make small business week every week of the year. Then small business will truly have the capability to lead America into the 21st century.

"JOURNEY TO FREEDOM," BY NICHOLAS DIMA

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, approximately 2 weeks prior to the national elections that are to take place in Romania, to pay tribute to Nicholas Dima, author of the insightful book Journey To Freedom.

Journey to Freedom describes the history of communism in Romania through the life of the author. It documents the dramatic effects of Communist subjugation on the average individual and the entire nation and, at the same time, demonstrates the complete devastation of the Romanian culture by Communist dictators. In order to survive, individuals were forced to forsake their families to seek accommodation with the political system. Journey to Freedom is one man's personal struggle against totalitarianism that has taken root in his native nation.

As the May 20 national elections approach, the Romanians have a chance to choose their own political system, one that is not at odds with their traditional values. The United States should help ensure that those elections are fair and free by sending a delegation there to monitor them. As the center for the free world, the United States should consider such an initiative a responsibility.

Of all East European nations that have taken the path toward freedom and democracy, the Romanian people have sacrificed the most. Mr. Dima's book outlines the unique Communist experience in Romania and demonstrates just how much Romanians have suffered over the past 40 years. Throughout those years, Romanians were extremely disillusioned with the West because no move was made by any Western nations to free them from their subjugation. On the eve of Romania's first elections since World War II, we shouldn't let them down again. The least we can do is send a delegation there to help ensure that those elections are fair and free.

INTRODUCTION OF THE SMALL PROPERTY AND CASUALTY INSURANCE COMPANY EQUITY ACT OF 1990

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with my colleague from California, Mr. THOMAS, who is introducing The Small Property and Casualty Insurance Company Equity Act of 1990.

As a Californian, I am painfully aware of the personal and financial hardships that were caused by the massive Loma Prieta earthquake last fall. I also sympathize with those who have been harmed by hurricanes, tornados, floods, and other natural disasters.

While I realize that we cannot control Mother Nature, we can at least ameliorate some of the financial costs of natural disasters and accidents through property and casualty insurance. We should strive, therefore, for a system where property and casualty insurance is available to those that want it at competitive prices.

Competition in the property and casualty insurance industry is clearly enhanced by small-sized insurance companies. Small companies often provided much needed coverage which is otherwise unavailable, particularly in periods of coverage shortages as was experience in the mid-1980's.

This legislation provides a mechanism to allow small companies to compete. This bill extends to small property and casualty insurance companies the same tax treatment that has been available to small life insurance companies since 1984. Under this legislation, small companies with assets of less than $500,000,000 could deduct from insurance company income 60 percent of the first $3,000,000 of insurance company income earned each year. That deduction would decrease by 15 percent of every insurance dollar earned in excess of $3,000,000, until the deduction phased out when insurance company income reached $15 million. In determining eligibility for the deduction, small property and casualty insurance companies would be subject to the same rules for determining insurance income and assets as are small life insurance companies.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to cosponsor this legislation introduced by Mr. THOMAS, and I urge my colleagues to join us in this worthwhile effort.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE PHILIPPINES

HON. STEPHEN J. SOLARZ

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. SOLARZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise to bring to the attention of the Members an excellent article, which recently appeared in the Wall Street Journal, concerning the foreign investment climate in the Philippines.

At a time when it sometimes seems as if the only news in the American media about the Philippines is bad news, I think it is important that we don't ignore the good news or become overly pessimistic about the situation in that country.

In this article, Elliot Richardson, who is President Bush's special representative to the Multilateral Assistance Initiative to the Philippines and who has traveled to the Philippines several times over the past few months, indicated that the principal aid donors remain confident about Philippine economic prospects and are unlikely to reduce their levels of support.

Mr. Richardson, who has an outstanding record of distinguished public service spanning several decades, including several Cabinet positions, further commented that foreign investors are still considering investments in the Philippines, despite last December's coup attempt. After visiting Hong Kong, Mr. Richardson noted that private investors there, as well as in Taiwan, were particularly interested in investing in the Philippines.

I commend this article to my colleagues.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Apr. 30, 1990]

RICHARDSON SAYS AID DONORS UPBEAT ABOUT PHILIPPINES

(By Steven Jones)

HONG KONG.—The principal aid donors to the Philippines remain confident about the country's economic prospects and are unlikely to reduce their levels of support, special U.S. aid representative Elliot Richardson said.

Despite a power shortage affecting most of the main island of Luzon and continuing rumors of another coup attempt, "I still think the Philippines is an attractive place to invest," he said in an interview in Hong Kong, where he was traveling on business.

A former U.S. attorney general and defense secretary and now a Washington based lawyer, Mr. Richardson is the special representative of President Bush to the Multilateral Assistance Initiative for the Philippines, a World Bank-led consortium of 19 donor countries and a half-dozen multilateral agencies. The group was formed in July 1989 to coordinate foreign-aid programs and attract more overseas investment to alleviate poverty in the Philippines.

The group pledged $3.3 billion in economic aid for the Philippines in 1990; it will hold a pledge meeting for 1991 aid sometime in this year's second half. Japan is the biggest donor, with about $1 billion pledged, followed by the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank.

The Bush administration pledged $200 million to the assistance initiative this year, but Congress approved only $160 million. However, with military aid, the U.S. is contributing $545 million in direct assistance.

Mr. Richardson said the Bush administration is proposing $200 million in direct assistance.

Mr. Richardson said the Bush administration is proposing $200 million for 1991. He plans to take up the proposal with congressional leaders soon.

The renegotiation of a lease on U.S. military bases in the Philippines won't affect the Bush administration's economic aid program, he said. However, he acknowledged that Congress may cut economic assistance if the U.S. is required to provide more military aid in return for extending the bases agreements beyond the 1991 expiration date. Preliminary talks on the leases are to begin May 14.

Mr. Richardson, who was in Manila at the onset of the coup attempt in December, repeated earlier warnings from Washington that U.S. aid to the Philippines will be cut off by law if there is a successful coup against President Corazon Aquino. He said other donors likely would halt aid too.

But Mr. Richardson said the likelihood of a successful putsch diminishes as the 1992 presidential election grows nearer. He also said the Philippine business community "is increasingly well aware that the prospects for the Philippine economy are good if they can sustain progress along present lines. There is great potential for disaster if a coup attempt should succeed."

Since coming to power in 1986, the Aquino government has beaten back six coup attempts by rebel soldiers. The December coup was the most serious, claiming more than 100 lives. Mr. Richardson likened rebel leaders, several of whom remain at large, to 1930s Italian fascists, "whose only program was to make the trains run on time."

Despite persistent rumors of a seventh coup, Mr. Richardson said foreign companies are still considering investments in the Philippines, attracted by the country's educated, largely English-speaking work force. He cited continued interest especially from companies in Taiwan and in Hong Kong, where he met with territory-based investors during his visit.

However, Mr. Richardson called the electricity shortage that has led to a temporary four-day workweek in Manila an "embarrassing development" that should have been foreseen by the Aquino government when it shelved a controversial nuclear power plant.

But he said the power shortage was correctable" in time, adding that much of the foreign aid is aimed at improving infrastructure.

TRIBUTE TO DR. JAMES BIERDEN

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize an outstanding professor at Rhode Island College who is receiving this year's Faculty Award from the Rhode Island College Alumni Association.

Dr. James Bierden, of North Providence, RI, began teaching math at Rhode Island College in 1969 as an assistant professor. In 1973, Dr. Bierden became an associate professor. In 1977, he became the assistant dean of arts and sciences, and in 1980, he became the associate dean of arts and sciences. In 1982, Dr. Bierden was named as professor of math and secondary education. He is a member of the Rhode Island Math Teachers Association, the Association of Math Teachers in New England, and the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Dr. Bierden has clearly shown his commitment and dedication to academic excellence while at the Rhode Island College community over the years. Dr. Bierden has also contributed countless hours of service to local groups within Rhode Island. Dr. Bierden currently serves as chairman of the Community Way Allocations Committee for the United Way of Southeast New England. He has been a member of the United Way since 1979.

It is with great pleasure that I congratulate Dr. Bierden for all his outstanding efforts on behalf of Rhode Island College and his community. I wish him continued success in the future.

TRIBUTE TO ART McDOLE

HON. LEON E. PANETTA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a tireless public servant and a truly outstanding man from the 16th Congressional District of California, Art McDole. I am pleased to have this opportunity to recognize the accomplishments and lifelong service of this truly exceptional citizen of Monterey County.

Art McDole has been a member of the Associated Public-Safety Communications Officers [APCO] for more than 40 years. During this time he served as chairman of the APCO Regulatory Review Committee for 10 years, and has personally guided the progress of the association and provided a universal and balanced public safety perspective for APCO from the standpoint of Federal, State, county, municipal, and local government entities. Throughout his years of service, Art directed the formation of numerous community projects. Art led the effort to establish an Emergency Broadcast System for Monterey County, installed an educational television system for the county office of education, installed the county's medical network for emergency medical care, and was instrumental in the advent of 9-1-1 service for Monterey County and the entire State of California.

Art McDole has provided leadership and contributed significantly to emergency planning procedure formulation and effectiveness of the operation of APCO throughout his decades of service. He has freely and predominately without compensation offered his unique advice and expertise on public safety matters to members of APCO and all others interested in the furtherance of the goals and objectives of APCO.

Throughout his career, Art McDole has demonstrated exemplary personal and professional dedication at home, in his work, and in every instance which called for his assistance. As a result, he has received virtually every honor which APCO can bestow upon one of its members.

I am sure my colleagues are pleased to join me in recognition of Art's lifetime of public service. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride and respect that I rise to salute the lifelong accomplishments and selfless dedication of Art McDole.

CONGRESS HELD IN LOW ESTEEM

HON. BILL LOWERY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. LOWERY of California. Mr. Speaker, never in the history of our great country has Congress been held in such low esteem by the American people. This unfortunate fact has given rise to much agonizing over rationales, solutions, and cure-alls.

Some point to former Speaker Wright and other cases of ethical misconduct as the cause. So, in a flurry, we rush to judgment and pass broad, new ethics laws.

Others tout the apathy of the average American voter and cite lower and lower voter turnout statistics. So we rush to pass a uniform poll closing bill, blaming apathy on inconvenience.

Still others compare our reelect ratios with the Supreme Soviet, conveniently ignoring those Members who retire, run for other office, or pass away. Their complaints have taken root in a movement to limit congressional terms.

Yet, if we are to regain the respect of the American people, we must be willing to face the underlying and fundamental flaw in our system: the gerrymander.

The gerrymander locks incumbents into place, stifling the accountability our founding fathers built into the Constitution, and encouraging a mood of invincibility. The gerrymander destroys competition. Noncompetitive elections invariably lead to voter apathy and low participation.

The 1991 redistricting will set the tone for a decade. Will we rescue this great institution from the depths of public disgrace by insisting on a fair and equitable process? I certainly hope so.

DR. RICHARD DeLAUER PASSES AWAY

HON. BOB TRAXLER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. TRAXLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in sadness today to share with my colleagues the news of the passing away of Dr. Richard DeLauer, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Fairchild Space & Defense Corp. His loss especially struck me because I had my first opportunity to meet him only a few short weeks before his death, a meeting that was characterized by his vitality, his depth, and range of experience, and his "tell it like it is" spirit. I had looked forward to many similar meetings with him in the years ahead. I know my colleagues will join with me in expressing sorrow to Dick DeLauer's family and his colleagues in the aerospace and defense industries. Fairchild's announcement of Dr. DeLauer's death follows:

Dr. Richard D. DeLauer, Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer of Fairchild Space & Defense Corporation, Germantown, Maryland, passed away in Los Angeles, California, on April 22, 1990. He was born September 23, 1918, in Oakland, California, and has been a resident of Los Angeles since 1958.

From 1981 through 1984, Dr. DeLauer served as Under Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering in the Department of Defense. He subsequently organized his own defense counseling firm, The Orion Group, Ltd., before assuming his position with Fairchild in 1989.

A graduate of Stanford University in 1940, he received his Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology in 1953. He served as an Aeronautical Engineering Officer in the U.S. Navy from 1943 to 1958, and participated in experimental development of nuclear rocket propulsion technology while at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory. He is the co-author of two books on nuclear rocket flight.

From 1958 until 1981, Dr. DeLauer was an Executive Vice President and member of the Board of Directors of TRW, Inc., during which time he was instrumental in the development and implementation of systems engineering and technical direction methodology for the Air Force intercontinental ballistic missile programs and various space, defense, and electronic systems.

He was a member of the National Academy of Engineering, a Fellow of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and of the American Astronautical Society, and had served since 1972 as a member of the Defense Science Board in the Office of the Secretary of Defense. He was currently a member of the NASA Advisory Council, the Air Force Scientific Advisory Board, the Air Force Studies Board of the National Research Council, and the California Council on Science and Technology. He formerly served as a member of the Board of Governors of the Aerospace Industries Association, the Board of Trustees of the University of Redlands, the Engineering Advisory Council of the University of Southern California, the Advisory Committee of the Stanford University School of Engineering, the Advisory Committee of the Institute for the Advancement of Engineering, the Board of Visitors of the Defense Systems Management College, the Naval Research Advisory Committee, and the Associates of Caltech. He also served as regional chairman for the National Alliance of Businessmen and as a Director of the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce. He was Vice Chairman of Governor Reagan's Task Force on California Transportation in 1968, and was founding Chairman of the American League for International Security Assistance. He was currently a member of the Board of Directors of Gencorp. Inc., Akron, Ohio, and the MacNeal-Schwendler Corp., Los Angeles, California.

He is survived by his wife, Ann, son Richard Jr., daughter-in-law, Beverly, two grandchildren, Allison and Adam DeLauer, and two brothers, Clifford and Leland DeLauer.

Private services will be held in Los Angeles, California.

THE MARCH OF THE LIVING

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, on Holocaust Memorial Day, April 22, 3,500 Jewish teenagers from around the world reenacted the forced march Jews had once made on the way to their death camps in Poland. They marched 2 miles between Auschwitz and Birkenau, two of the more notorious Nazi death camps in Poland.

The March of the Living, which included 130 south Florida students, was part of a 12-day tour of Poland and Israel. The idea of touring Poland was to enable the students a sense of reality of the Holocaust. The tour of Israel, enhanced the students comprehension of the modern country Jews founded within 3 years of the Holocaust.

Concerned with American Jewry and the continuity of Jewish traditions, the Central Agency for Jewish Education in Miami, the agency and local groups worldwide, chose students to participate in their second trip in many years. The purpose of the trip was for the students to enhance their vision of Jewish history.

With many fundamental issues of concern to the Jewish community today, educating the young generation with a firsthand experience is worthy of every effort. I commend Gene Greenzweig, the director of the Central Agency for Jewish Education in Miami, for his time and effort in putting together a remarkable event.

THOUSAND POINTS OF LIGHT

HON. NEWT GINGRICH

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call my colleagues' attention to a recent column by Durwood McAlister, editor of the Atlanta Journal editorial page, praising President Bush's thousand points of light.

We only need to look around to see the great work that is being done by individuals and groups to make this a better country. These people are deserving of the recognition they receive from the President's program, and we owe it to them and to the country to promote their work.

Mr. McAlister is right. Thousand points of light may be idealistic, but it is working.

BUSH'S IDEA LIGHTS FLAME IN HEARTLAND

(By Durwood McAlister)

President Bush's call for a "kindler, gentler" nation and his romantic notion of giving it form by putting the presidential stamp of approval each day on another of his "Thousand Points of Light" have drawn the sneers of sophisticates and the jeers of the jokemakers.

Like Diogenes searching for an honest man, Mr. Bush is ridiculed for trying to find and recognize selflessness in a selfish society. In the comedy clubs of New York and among the jaded insiders of Washington, the president's "daily point of light" is a source of great hilarity.

But it's a different story out where most of America lives. There, where the remembered ethic of looking out for your neighbors and helping those who need help is still valued, Mr. Bush has struck a responsive chord.

In small towns and cities all across the country, attention is being focused on successful efforts to address significant social problems through community service by individuals, businesses, families, and organizations.

In announcing his "points of life" initiative, Mr. Bush urged all Americans to make serving others central to their life and work. "If you have a hammer," he said, "find a nail. If you know how to read, find someone who can't. If you're not in trouble, seek out someone who is. Because everywhere there is a need in America, there is a way to fill it. . . . There is no problem in America that is not being solved somewhere."

Last week, President Bush singled out a non-profit Smyrna organization called "Hands, Feet and Mouth" for recognition as a "Daily Point of Light." The group provides academic support and drug counseling to underprivileged children and helps unemployed parents find jobs. It is making a difference in Smyrna's Rose Garden Hills community. It is solving a problem.

The Smyrna group is the 115th recipient of the president's notice. Those honored earlier include:

An Oklahoma City doctor and nurse team, both afflicted with multiple sclerosis, who operate a free medical clinic that has treated some 43,000 indigent people since it opened 15 years ago.

A former illiterate adult in Wind Falls, Ind., who now teaches others how to read.

Newspapers in Memphis, Tenn., and Lawrence, Mass., that have begun their own community-service recognition programs.

The entire town of Hope, N.M., where citizens joined forces in a community-wide improvement program.

Seventeen-year-old Kelley Renee Edwards, of Lilburn, Ga., who works with physically and mentally disabled children and has led efforts for a drug-free coalition in her high school.

A Minnetonka, Minn., high school social studies teacher who has implemented a special, innovative course that makes service to others a fundamental part of their school work.

In those communities, and dozens of others, the president's recognition has inspired others to make their own contribution, to combat drug abuse, homelessness, environmental threats, AIDS, hunger, illiteracy and the myriad other problems that afflict all parts of society.

Mr. Bush's "Thousand Points of Light" may be idealistic, even naive. But the idea is working. And that's no joke.

THE FAIR TRADE IN AUTO PARTS ACT OF 1990

HON. SANDER M. LEVIN

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. LEVIN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, today I join several of my colleagues in introducing the Fair Trade in Auto Parts Act of 1990. This legislation takes long-overdue steps to assist United States auto parts manufacturers in gaining fair access to foreign markets, especially the Japanese market.

It is also designed to ensure that U.S. firms are not excluded from competing fairly with foreign parts suppliers in bids for contracts with foreign auto firms doing business in the United States.

This bill is the culmination of 5 years of congressional effort to open the Japanese auto parts market to United States goods. That effort started with a trip I with other Members of Congress made to Japan in 1985, during which we discussed with Japanese car makers the negligible amount of Japanese purchases of American auto parts.

It continued as some of us in Congress convinced the administration to include auto parts in market oriented sector specific talks with Japan, only to be disappointed by how little was achieved through the MOSS process. Some positive steps have been taken over the past 5 years, but each step forward seems to have been overshadowed by three steps backward. Most recently, members of the Congressional Auto Parts Task Force, which I chair with Representative MARCY KAPTUR, led the effort to have Japanese auto parts practices designated for priority negotiations under the Super 301 provision of the trade law. Once again, the administration refused to act.

There is little doubt that United States firms have been systematically blocked from selling auto parts in Japan by a variety of collusive and exclusionary Japanese business practices—conduct that has been regularly tolerated by the Japanese Government.

Many Japanese parts suppliers and auto manufacturers have close corporate ties, with Japanese car companies often owning substantial equity interest in auto parts firms. This system—known by the Japanese term Keiretsu—acts to exclude United States auto parts firms from bidding for contracts with Japanese auto companies both in Japan and now in the United States.

Like other sectors of the U.S. economy, U.S. auto parts firms must continue to focus on making the highest-quality goods at competitive prices if they are to compete in international markets. But there are systemic barriers to even the most competitive United States auto parts products entering the Ja-panes market, and this has helped fuel a United States auto parts deficit with Japan that reached $5.5 billion in 1989.

While Japanese auto parts firms have been given free access to the United States market, United States suppliers as of 2 years ago had penetrated less than 1 percent of the $60 billion a year Japanese auto parts market.

My bill directs the United States Trade Representative to initate an investigation under section 301 of the United States trade law in an effort to eliminate any unreasonable Japanese practices that limit United States exports of auto parts to Japan.

Quite frankly, the United States got precious little out of the MOSS process—not even enough data to determine the true level of United States penetration of the Japanese auto parts market. Members of the Congressional Auto Parts Task Force last year requested that Japanese officials provide the United States with complete data detailing United States auto parts sales to Japan, but were denied adequate information.

From the information provided under the MOSS agreement, the United States has no way of knowing whether United States auto parts purchased by Japanese manufacturers are destined for factories in Japan or for Japanese-owned plants in the United States. Nor can we determine whether Japanese car makers are purchasing parts from United States-owned subsidiaries of Japanese auto makers' traditional family of suppliers.

My bill directs the Department of Commerce to issue a report every 6 months detailing the extent and nature of United States auto parts sales to Japan. It also requires a semi-annual report by the International Trade Commission detailing the pattern of procurement by foreign auto parts companies conducting business in the United States.

In addition, my bill seeks to curb possible anticompetitive relationships between foreign car makers and their suppliers by directing the U.S. Attorney General to conduct a study of the pattern of procurement of auto parts by foreign automobile companies operating in the United States.

The administration's recent failure to designate Japanese auto parts practices as a priority under the Super 301 provision of the trade law represents the latest shortcoming in a decade of inaction on this issue. The result has been a staggering auto parts deficit with Japan. This legislation takes a much-needed step to help correct that imbalance.

I request that the text of this legislation be included in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, immediately following this statement.

H.R. —

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Fair Trade in Auto Parts Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. NEGOTIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 15 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the United States Trade Representative shall initiate an investigation pursuant to section 302(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2412(b)) with respect to—

(1) the elimination of any unreasonable acts, policies or practices of Japan that limit the importation of United States-made auto parts and accessories into Japan, and

(2) increasing access for United States-made auto parts and accessories to Japanese markets.

(b) DEFINITION OF JAPANESE MARKETS.—For purposes of this section, the term "Japanese markets" has the same meaning as such term has under the Fair Trade in Auto Parts Act of 1988.

SEC. 3. EXPANSION OF INITIATIVE ON AUTO PARTS SALES TO JAPAN.

Section 2123 of the Fair Trade in Auto Parts Act of 1988 (15 U.S.C. 4702) is amended—

(1) by inserting "and" at the end of subsection (b)(5);

(2) by striking "; and" at the end of subsection (b)(6) and inserting a period,

(3) by striking paragraph (7) of subsection (b), and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) SEMIANNUAL REPORT ON EXPORTS OF AUTO PARTS TO JAPAN.—Not later than January 1, 1991, and every 6 months thereafter, the Secretary shall submit a written report to the Congress on the extent of increases in the sale of United States-made auto parts and accessories in Japanese markets, including the extent to which long-term, commercial relationships exist between United States auto parts manufacturers and Japanese automobile manufacturers. The report shall distinguish between original equipment and after-market equipment to the extent possible. The report shall also include separate information with respect to exports of auto parts and accessories that are reexported from the United States, exports of auto parts and accessories by United States affiliates of Japanese companies, and exports by auto parts manufacturers which are more than 50 percent owned by United States citizens or have been engaged in the manufacture of auto parts and accessories for 10 years or more in the United States. In collecting data and market information for any report required by this subsection, the Secretary shall solicit information on a voluntary basis from those auto parts manufacturers which are more than 50 percent owned by United States citizens or have been engaged in the manufacture of auto parts and accessories in the United States for 10 years or more."

SEC. 4. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE STUDY.

The Attorney General of the United States shall conduct a study of the pattern of procurement of auto parts and accessories by foreign automobile manufacturers operating in the United States to determine if there may be unfair methods of competition in connection with the procurement of auto parts and accessories by foreign automobile manufacturers. Not later than January 1, 1991, the Attorney General shall transmit a written report to the Congress detailing the results of the study and a determination of whether an investigation into such unfair methods of competition is warranted.

SEC. 5. INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION REPORT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than January 1, 1991, and every 6 months thereafter, the Chairman of the United States International Trade Commission shall submit a written report to the Congress with respect to the pattern of procurement of auto parts and accessories by foreign automobile manufacturers operating in the United States. The report shall distinguish between original equipment and after-market equipment to the extent possible and shall include information with respect to the extent of increases in procurement from auto parts manufacturers which are affiliated with foreign automobile manufacturers operating in the United States and from auto parts manufacturers which have no such affiliation. In collecting data for any report required by this subsection, the Chairman shall require foreign automobile manufacturers to estimate the percentage of imported auto parts and the percentage of United States-made auto parts they use on automobiles manufactured in the United States and shall include that estimate in the report.

(b) SUNSET.—No report shall be required after January 1, 1996.

NEW COOPERATION IN THE WAR AGAINST TERRORISM IN THE AIR

HON. WM. S. BROOMFIELD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, the U.S. airline industry recently joined our Government's war against terrorism in the air by offering to pay up to $1 million for information about terrorist attacks against American airliners. This effort supplements an existing Federal rewards program and represents welcome cooperation between the private sector and the U.S. Government. Cooperation is critical in the war on international terrorism and I salute this prudent decision on the part of the airline industry.

On May 1, the Air Transport Association [ATA], a trade organization that represents 23 major U.S. airlines, announced that its members had agreed to augment existing Federal rewards for information leading to the arrest of terrorists, or contributing to the prevention of criminal attacks against the association's member companies.

The payment would supplement U.S. Government rewards of up to $2 million that are already available for information about terrorism. The ATA's payment would bring the reward for an individual providing information about planned terrorist attacks to $3 million.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee was instrumental in introducing the concept of a rewards payment and last year increased the original payment from an earlier $500,000 to $2 million.

The airline fund can be used at the State Department's direction to supplement funds paid to informants about potential airline terrorism overseas.

Cooperation is the key element in defeating terrorism. The nations of the world who have been victimized by this menace must work closely together in coordinating counterterrorism efforts. In the United States, our Government agencies responsible for antiterrorism activities must closely cooperate and share information with each other. The ATA's recent decision marks a new era of cooperation between the private sector and the U.S. Govenent in this aspect of the war on terrorists.

I commend the following statement by Robert J. Aaronson, president of the ATA, to my colleagues in the Congress.

OPENING REMARKS OF ROBERT J. AARONSON, PRESIDENT, AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION

Good afternoon, and thank you for coming. The task of improving airline security is an ongoing challenge. The chief executive officers of the major U.S. airlines have been, and continue to be, in the forefront in meeting that challenge. Those CEOs have now made an important decision that it is my privilege to announce to you today. They have agreed to pay up to one million dollars for information about terrorist activities directed against any of their operations worldwide. The objective is to deter new acts of terrorism, but the reward applies to past incidents as well, such as the sabotage of Pan Am 103—a tragedy still fresh in our minds. The U.S. airline industry is committed to using every resource at its disposal to make its passengers the safest in the world, and if that means offering a bounty, we'll do it.

The reward is structured to supplement a two million dollar reward fund recently approved by Congress and administered by the State Department. ATA will match any reward the State Department makes—up to one million dollars—for information concerning criminal activities against ASTA member airlines. Three million dollars—the total combined reward—should be a powerful incentive for people within, or close to, terrorist organizations to reveal plots before they are hatched.

Acts of international terrorism are directed at governments and government policies, but airlines occasionally become surrogate targets, and innocent victims, of these crimes. So we are dedicated to doing all that we can to defend ourselves. U.S. airlines have taken a number of steps in the past year-and-a-half to tighten what was already the world's best security system. For example, they now X-ray or physically inspect all checked luggage on flights from 45 foreign airports in Europe and the Middle East. They have assigned additional security personnel to foreign airports, and have adopted more comprehensive procedures for questioning passengers as they check in. These new steps are in addition to extraordinary procedures that were in effect already—procedures to search and guard aircraft, inspect aircraft service workers, match baggage with passengers and accept baggage only from ticketed passengers.

The U.S. government also has taken important steps in recent months to assist the airlines with their security programs. For instance, at the urging of the airline industry, FAA is stationing more of its security personnel in Europe and the Middle East. The airlines continue to believe the government can, and should, do more to assist the airlines, but we believe the government is moving in the right direction.

I mention all of this to give you some perspective on the tremendous effort undertaken by industry and government over the past year to protect airline passengers, flight crews, and aircraft. We are strongly committed to making it as difficult as possible for terrorists to carry out their heinous plans. The reward we are announcing today is an additional feature to this enormous security effort. We want to do more. We mean business, and we want people to know it.

I now want to introduce several distinguished indivduals who have taken a personal interest in the airline reward fund and, in some cases, have played key roles in bringing the idea to fruition.

First, Ambassador Morris Busby, Coordinator for Counter-Terrorism, U.S. State Department.

Senator FRANK MURKOWSKI from the State of Alaska.

Congressman WILLIAM BROOMFIELD from the State of Michigan.

Administrator James Busey, FAA.

Assistant Director William Baker, Criminal Investigation Division, FBI.

Capt. Bruce Smith, a pilot with Pan American who lost his wife in what is probably the most infamous act of terrorism against an aircraft. Captain Smith was the first to propose the airline reward and has been the driving force behind the concept. The industry admires Captain Smith's dedication and perseverance in making this important reward a reality.

THE PROPOSED POSTAL RATE INCREASE IS TOO MUCH—TOO SOON

HON. RICHARD K. ARMEY

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I commend this outstanding monograph by Richard L. Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, to my colleagues. Mr. Lesher has addressed the impending rate increase by the U.S. Postal Service.

THE PROPOSED POSTAL RATE INCREASE IS TOO MUCH—TOO SOON

A nearly 20 percent postal rate hike is unreasonable and unjustified. If the recent proposed increase is approved, postal costs will have risen 46 percent faster than the rate of inflation between April 3, 1988, the date of the last increase, and next January, when the new rates would be effective. The unchecked practice of raising revenue by increasing rates must stop.

To add insult to injury, the Postal Service recently unveiled a plan to lower its first-class delivery standards. Approximately 5 percent of the mail now delivered overnight will take two days, and about 5 percent of the mail delivered in two days will take three days. This must be the greatest intentional slowdown in postal history. Mail service that gets worse as it gets more expensive should not be accepted.

The proposed slowdown in service is a great leap backward for the Postal Service. It is sending the wrong message to the mailing public and postal workers: If you can't meet the standards—lower them.

The Postal Service has tried to appease the public by saying the rate increase will cost consumers only $10 more a year. This figure is misleading to say the least.

Because postage costs are part of almost every item we buy, the actual cost of the increase will be $8 billion, or about $88 per household. This includes the generally higher costs of business, such as postage for magazine subscriptions and mail-order purchases, which would be passed on to the consumer.

Postal costs have been out of control for too long, and business can no longer bear the burden. According to the Postal Rate Commission, the hike will cost business at least $6.2 billion in direct costs. Small and mid-size businesses that rely on direct-mail marketing will be hardest hit by an increase. Many may go out of business. If the rate goes up 20 percent, and a business sends out 20 percent fewer mailings, for some, that's equivalent to losing one in five prospective customers.

Big mailers began exploring alternative delivery options after the last increase, as indeed they would after any supplier of goods or services raised prices inordinately. Many of them have already put systems in place that bypass the Postal Service.

If postal rates continue to rise in an era of electronic transfer, personal computers and fax machines, the Postal Service may wake up to find itself bypassed by technology and priced out of the market.

Answers to the Postal Service's problems are not easy. Postmaster General Frank has made a valiant attempt at managing the Postal Service with a strategic plan that calls for reducing inflation in postal costs from twice the consumer price index to two points below it by 1995. We support this goal, but at the same time we are skeptical that this can be accomplished. The Postal Service has not kept the growth in postal rates below the inflation rate since the Postal Reorganization Act of 1970.

To turn the Postal Service around, two tasks must be accomplished. First, management must reassert control over its labor force. Second, productivity and service quality must increase.

The current collective bargaining agreement of the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers is clearly out of line with the needs of the Service at this time.

Under the agreement, no employee may be laid off during the three years it covers. In addition, permanent job tenure has been granted to anyone employed prior to 1978, and to anyone hired since then who has worked six consecutive years.

Another bizarre element of the agreement includes a one-time purge of disciplinary letters from personnel files. If the Postal Service's aim is to increase service, what could be the point of erasing the records of problem workers?

A steady stream of pay raises has put total compensation cost per worker at more then $40,000 a year, twice the average for all workers in the private sector. Escalating wages can be justified only in a competitive environment if there is a corresponding increase in productivity.

So far, postal productivity has been flat or actually has fallen in each of the last three years. More than $1 billion has been spent on automation, yet only one-third of the expected saving has been realized. These dismal figures may be explained by the Postal Inspection Service study which found 20 of 22 areas surveyed had workers using less-efficient machines and manually processing the mail to keep clerks busy because union contracts specify that 90 percent of the work force work full time.

In testimony before Congress, the General Accounting Office said, "In its estimate of 1989 costs, the Service expected that it would save about $748 million in reduced clerk and mail handler work hours by installing labor-saving equipment such as automated sorting machinery. Although the equipment was put in place, clerk and mail handler costs exceeded the planned level by $761 million. The Service's savings estimates were not backed up with actions to achieve them."

For the Service to survive, it is imperative it negotiate with labor for more flexibility and accountability from workers.

The U.S. Chamber believes there is no future for an organization whose business strategy calls for being the highest cost/lowest quality provider of any service. The Postal Service needs to decide first and foremost that its priority is to provide quality service to consumers and businesses at the lowest responsible costs. Simply imposing higher rates will drive profitable mail out of the postal system when it is needed most. Before the Postal Service receives another rate increase, it must first realize the other two-thirds of the saving anticipated from automation.

TRIBUTE TO F.A. SEBRING ELEMENTARY

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to F.A. Sebring Elementary of my 17th Congressional District of Ohio. F.A. Sebring Elementary will be celebrating its 40th birthday on May 16, 1990, as well as announcing the successful completion of their Million Minutes Reading Program.

F.A. Sebring Elementary began their Million Minutes Reading Program at the beginning of the 1989–90 school year. The goal of the program was to get the 40 students of Sebring Elementary to read for 1 million minutes during the school year. If a student reads more than 100 minutes in a month their name would be put in a drawing for the book of the month. Area businesses and the local parent association donated the book and also a bicycle which was given as a grand prize.

The students kept track of the minutes read by placing stickers in the hallway of the school. This enabled the students to keep track of their total minutes read as well as visualize what a million really looks like. The students were also allowed to have reading partners outside the school who could donate minutes read to the contest. One of these partners was First Lady Barbara Bush.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate F.A. Sebring Elementary on both their 40th birthday and on the completion of their Million Minutes of Reading. Education is the cornerstone of our country and programs such as a Million Minutes of Reading help promote higher standards of learning in our school systems.

JOHN SLOAT BASIC ELEMENTARY SCHOOL'S SECOND ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF READING

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to rise today and call attention to John Sloat Basic Elementary School's second annual Celebration of Reading. Additionally, I would like to voice my support for the school's efforts in stressing the importance of reading to our children.

It is imperative that we all learn the value of education and the ability to be able to read. The number of adults who may not be able to read, write, speak, or otherwise communicate competently enough to meet the demand of modern society, has increased significantly. It is through Federal, State, and local efforts, such as the Celebration of Reading, that we can work to combat this problem and reinforce in our young people the importance of learning to read.

I am always pleased to hear of individuals, such as those participating in the Celebration of Reading, who have helped to show young people how reading is important in their lives. The students, parents, and staff of John Sloat Basic School also are to be commended on their efforts to help make this special celebration a success.

RT. REV. MSGR. ACHILLE J. D'ANCA: A MAN OF PEACE AND VISION

HON. STEPHEN J. SOLARZ

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. SOLARZ. Mr. Speaker, I take great pleasure in rising today to pay deserved tribute to Rt. Rev. Msgr. Achille J. D'Anca. Monsignor D'Anca has been a priest for 45 eventful years for the Diocese of Brooklyn. For the past 12 years, he has been pastor of St. Francis of Paola in the Greenpoint-Williamsburg section of my congressional district.

The monsignor's fruitful service to his faith and his community is best recognized by the recent honor bestowed on him by Pope Paul John II. He was made a knight commander of the St. Sylvester, Pope—an ancient papal order. This was not the first honor awarded Monsignor D'Anca by the Pope: In 1983, he was created a domestic prelate with the title of Right Reverend Monsignor.

Monsignor D'Anca has been a member of the priest senate for 3 years and has been a board of director member of the diocese's Catholic newspaper, the Tablet, for the past 22 years. For the past 12 years he has been vice-president of the Tablet. The monsignor has also served as a counselor for priests at St. Savior's High School and has been a speaker for vocation speaking at all the high schools in the Diocese of Brooklyn.

In addition to his extensive pastoral duties and obligations, Monsignor D'Anca has served on Community Planning Board No. 1 in Brooklyn for the past 12 years and has been a mediator for the Brooklyn Mediation Center in Brooklyn's Municipal Building for the past 7 years.

Monsignor D'Anca was born in the Tremont section of the Bronx on March 3, 1919. He was baptized at St. Joseph Church and attended St. Joseph Elementary School. His family moved to Brooklyn when he was 8 years old. He then attended Our Lady of Guadalupe Grammar School and later graduated from St. Michael's Diocesan High School in 1938.

The monsignor graduated from St. John's University in 1941, with a B.A. degree in history and English. He then entered the Immaculate Conception Seminary in Huntington, NY, and was ordained a priest on April 3, 1945. He later received his master's of divinity degree from the seminary.

His first assignment was at Sacred Heart-St. Stephen's Parish in Brooklyn where he served from 1945–1958. He was then assigned to our Lady of Guadalupe's Parish before being made pastor of St. Francis of Paola.

Monsignor D'Anca will retire as pastor this coming September and will move to Florida. I am honored to be able to make note of the monsignor's distinguished and rich record of service, and I know his thousands of friends and acquaintances are thankful for his many deeds and wish him Godspeed.

CONGRATULATIONS, DR. MITCHELL MALACHOWSKI

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Dr. Mitchell Malachowski who is being recognized by the Rhode Island College Alumni Association for his outstanding career achievements.

Dr. Mitchell Malachowski graduated from Rhode Island College in 1977 with a degree in chemistry. He attended the University of North Carolina where he received his Ph.D. in chemistry in 1983. While at the University of North Carolina, Dr. Malachowski received the Outstanding Teacher Award for 1981.

In 1983, be began teaching at Gettysburg College as an assistant professor in chemistry. In 1984, Dr. Malachowski went to the University of San Diego as an associate professor of chemistry; and in 1989, Dr. Malachowski was named the associate dean of arts and sciences. During his academic career, Dr. Malachowski has been published several times and has received numerous research grants in the field of chemistry. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, the National Science Teachers Association, and the National Academic Advising Assocation.

It is with great pleasure that I salute Dr. Mitchell Malachowski for his outstanding achievements in the field of chemistry. I wish him continued success in the future.

TRIBUTE TO HENRY J. MELLO

HON. LEON E. PANETTA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the accomplishments and efforts of an untiring public servant of the State of California, State Senator Henry Mello. I am grateful to have this opportunity to express my gratitude and appreciation for his tireless work in behalf of the people of California, and especially Santa Cruz County.

Henry Mello has served the people of California in many capacities for over two decades. This dedicated man began his career in public service by serving for 8 years as a Santa Cruz County supervisor. In 1976, Henry served as assemblyman for Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties before being elected State Senator in 1980. Henry is currently majority whip and chairs the Subcommittee on Aging, the Subcommittee on Economic Problems Facing Agriculture, the Senate Select Committee on Bilingual Education, Joint Committees on the Arts and the 1992 Quincentennial, and vice chairman of the Senate Select Committee on California's Wine Industry and Agriculture and Water Resources.

I have worked with Henry on many occasions. His efforts in the wake of the Loma Prieta earthquake helped quell the effects of this tragic disaster. He was truly instrumental in opening and maintaining channels of communication and ensuring remedial action and recovery efforts were swiftly undertaken. This is just one example of the many times I have witnessed the resolve and dedication of Henry to the community.

It is truly rare to encounter a person so dedicated to the betterment of the community. Henry has selflessly devoted his time to the people he has represented since entering public service in 1968. I am extremely lucky to have the pleasure of working with a man so committed to serving the residents of Santa Cruz and Monterey Counties.

I am sure my colleagues are pleased to join me in recognition of Henry's public service and appreciation for his continuing efforts. It is with great pride and respect that I rise to pay tribute to Henry Mello.

IN HONOR OF PRINCIPAL JIM VLASSIS

HON. BILL LOWERY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. LOWERY of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call your attention to Mr. Jim Vlassis, the man responsible for one of the most dramatic turnarounds in the history of the San Diego County School System. On June 13, Mira Mesa High School will recognize its graduating seniors for their achievements and contributions during the past 4 years. I would like to make certain their principal is recognized on that day as well.

When Jim Vlassis arrived at Mira Mesa High, he inherited a program that was clearly one of the worst in San Diego County. Test scores were low, absentee and dropout rates were high, graffiti scarred the walls, and student and teacher morale had declined to intolerable levels. In short, Mira Mesa suffered from the disease which now plagues too much of American education.

Yet in only 3 years, Jim Vlassis, or "Mr. V," as he is known, has instilled a sense of confidence and commitment which has transformed Mira Mesa High from a decayed, city school into a closeknit, thriving community. Under his leadership, faculty and students have united to create one of the best schools in the county.

Today, the words self-respect and persistence have meaning to every student in every activity at the school. Test scores have risen to surpass the national average, absentee and dropout rates are now the lowest in the county, and the athletic program has won more championships in the last 3 years than the previous 7 combined. The school, once covered with graffiti, has won the campus beautiful contest 3 years running.

Mira Mesa's resurgent pride and enthusiasm recently received national attention when Vice President DAN QUAYLE decided to stop at the school on his last trip to California. All 2,500 students filled the gymnasium and greeted the Vice President with thunderous applause and a deafening display of spirit. Vice President QUAYLE praised the students' accomplishments and encouraged them to carry our Nation to a more prosperous, more productive future.

Mr. Speaker, Jim Vlassis believes in a better future, and his successes prove that our Nation's schools can and will return to excellence. Let his leadership and his vision serve as an inspiration to educators and students everywhere.

SALVATION ARMY CENTENNIAL IN SAGINAW

HON. BOB TRAXLER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. TRAXLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to inform the House of the century anniversary of the Saginaw County chapter of the Salvation Army. The image of the Salvation Army is not just of a service worker ringing bells at Christmas time or feeding people during emergencies. It is a lot more than that. The Salvation Army reaches all populations as a community-wide rescue mission.

The Salvation Army opened its chapter in Saginaw County in 1890 just 10 years after it officially began work in the United States. The Saginaw chapter is now 100 years old. That's quite an accomplishment. Last year, it worked hard for the needs of 31,000 underprivileged. Since 1890 it has gone beyond providing the necessities of food, clothing, and shelter and emergency service. In 1939, on North Baum Street it opened the first day care center which is still thriving today. In 1959, it opened the first home for the elderly in the United States—Eventide, that existed until 1982.

The Salvation Army in Saginaw provides special assistance to low-income and sick residents. Often, hospitals ask the Army to provide walkers, canes, bandages, prescriptions, and special equipment such as hearing aids and vaporizers. More than 55,000 people use its recreation center and gymnasium yearly. Its day care, preschool, and infant care start at 6:15 a.m. and provide care for 73 children and babies aged 2 months and older. Eight-year-old children come after school for a few hours until their working parents pick them up at 5:45 p.m.

More than 2,500 white, black, and Hispanic youths come to the different social adjustment programs offered by the Salvation Army. These programs focus on drug prevention, gang wars, and single parent family stress. Of course, the Salvation Army also helped out in the emergencies of the great flood in 1986 by opening its gym to serve meals and provide clothing. When the GM plant in Saginaw was severely damaged by fire, the Salvation Army opened its canteen to feed GM workers.

I am very proud of the 22 staff members of the Salvation Army in Saginaw, located at 2030 North Carolina. I am proud to tell my colleagues of the enormous help it has given Saginaw. Please join me in wishing a successful centennial celebration to the Saginaw chapter of the Salvation Army May 18–20.

MIAMI-DADE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AWARDS BANQUET

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, the Miami-Dade Chamber of Commerce will be holding their annual awards banquet which acknowledges those people and businesses who have demonstrated outstanding ability. In keeping with their tradition of furthering the best interest of the community, the chamber utilizes money collected from the banquet to encourage economic growth within the black community.

The awards banquet will be held Thursday, May 31, at Studio One–83 in Miami with the renowned group, the Manhattans providing entertainment. Many Miami businesses have placed advertisements in the banquet souvenir booklet to remember the event and to financially assist the chamber. The efforts of Dorothy Baker, president of the Miami-Dade Chamber of Commerce and Marty Pinkston, souvenir booklet chairperson, must be applauded. Their hard work will certainly be seen on May 31.

I commend the Miami-Dade Chamber of Commerce for all of their accomplishments within our community. They have repeatedly displayed initiative in promoting economic development in Miami as well as maintaining the support of the business community. I take great pleasure in recognizing their achievements.

BEYOND FOLK SONGS AND FLOWERS

HON. NEWT GINGRICH

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, as we prepare to debate and vote on the clean air bill, I wanted to share with my colleagues a column by David Broder.

Mr. Broder's column appeared in the Washington Post on Earth Day and offers an interesting perspective to the current clean air debate.

[From the Washington Post, Apr. 22, 1990]

BEYOND FOLK SONGS AND FLOWERS

(By David S. Broder)

If the Earth is not tilting off its axis today, it's not because the Earth Day promoters haven't tried. Rarely has a publicity campaign of such massive proportions been unleashed on—or on behalf of—an unsuspecting world.

Hard to remember that 20 years ago, this thing was just a figment of Gaylord Nelson's imagination. The former Wisconsin governor and senator was flying from Santa Barbara, where he'd looked at the damage of an oil spill, to Berkeley, where he had to improvise a speech. On the way, he pulled out a copy of the radical magazine, Ramparts, in which he read about the "teach-ins" the antiwar movement was using to mobilize sentiment for a withdrawal from Vietnam.

Searching for something to spice his campus talk, Nelson came up with the idea of an environmental teach-in. And eight months later, Earth Day was born.

Now, Earth Day is an extravaganza. The only thing unchanged from 1970 is Nelson himself, a blithe spirit, as uninhibited and funny as ever, puncturing pomposity as he did in his Senate days. But as that first simple Earth Day of 1970 metamorphosed into Earth Week 1990, with every politician, scientist, entertainer and self-promoter trying to get into the act, it began to look like a gimmick that ate the world.

At one level, the environmentalists have swept away all opposition. The "conservative ethic" has become one of the fixed guiding stars of American politics—a "value question" that permits only one answer from anyone who hopes to be part of the public dialogue. It is the current age's version of "God, Flag and Motherhood." Jerry Brown ran for president with the mantra, "Respect the Earth—Serve the People." He didn't win, of course, but his slogan was flawless.

The sure sign that a cause has prevailed comes when its opponents adopt the very tactic that's aimed at them. When Michael Dukakis started his rallies in 1988 with the Pledge of Allegiance, you knew George Bush had made his point.

Well, on Tuesday of Earth Week, I went to a press conference with the National Association of Manufacturers, the Business Roundtable and the representatives of many of the industries the environmentalists love to hate—coal, chlorine, chemicals, compressed gas, electric power, plastics and rubber. They were gathered to proclaim their pride in the environmental advances of the past 20 years. Alexander Trowbridge, former secretary of commerce and former NAM president, said: "A clean enviornment is not just a desired. . . but a realistic goal, to which American industry is committed."

Banished, at least for the moment, were 20 years of business warnings that environmental standards could be achieved only at a huge cost in jobs, in productivity and in competitiveness. Environmental protection "is good business," Trowbridge declared. The current NAM head, Jerry Jasinowski, went further, describing anti-pollution programs as essential parts of the drive for "quality improvement and . . . reducing waste in the production process."

All is not that benign, of course. As the business spokesmen readily conceded, they will be hard at work in the House of Representatives trying to weaken some provisions of the Senate-passed Clean Air bill. Their recognition that the values embodied in Earth Day have prevailed actually puts them in a better position to challenge the environmentalists in specific cases.

Because this Earth Day got so overblown, because the environmental message was so hyped with song and slogan, even the press and television, which normally give short shrift to the other side of the argument, were shamed into admitting that not all these issues offer neat solutions.

There was far more in the press in the last few days about the major NASA study, questioning the global-warming alarms, than there had been when it was published. I saw popular journals expressing skepticism for the first time about the need for the costly asbestos-removal program. A few iconoclasts, like Berkeley's Aaron Wildavaky, even were quoted as suggesting that some in the political Left are simply using environmentalism as a handy tool for achieving more government control of the economy.

The best dissection of what is real and what is phony or dangerous in environmentalism that I read was Gregg Easterbrook's article in the April 30 New Republic magazine. He wrote that the Earth Day extravaganza encouraged "a growing sense that the only socially respectable attitude toward the environment is pushing the panic button."

Given the real progress of the past 20 years, Easterbrook is right in warning that, "Fashionable alarmism may eventually create a Chicken Little backlash: As the years pass and nature doesn't end, people may stop listening when environmentalists issue warnings. The tough-minded case for environmental protection is ultimately more persuasive than the folk song and flowers approach."

What all this suggests is that the argument is no longer about values. That's over, and the environmentalists have won. The argument now is about policies. And those with the best evidence and the best arguments, not just the purest hearts, will prevail.

THE COMMUNISTS DON'T WANT A SOLUTION

HON. PHILIP M. CRANE

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I think it is interesting that while the West seems to view Mikhail Gorbachev as some sort of hero deserving of the title "Man of the Decade", he is perceived quite differently in his own country. Admittedly, there have been a good number of positive changes in the Soviet Union under Mr. Gorbachev; however, we cannot lose sight of the fact that the Soviet economy was in such a shambles when he came into power that he had little recourse other than to implement such changes.

Before we heap too much praise on the man, and before we allow ourselves to alter our foreign policy to please him, we positively must take into account his recent actions in Lithuania, as well as those taken during the Azerbaijan-Armenia conflict. The fact of the matter is, that while the Soviet Union says it has changed, it continues down the same repressive path as always. Meanwhile, here in the West we continue to allow ourselves to be brainwashed into believing that the cold war has ended.

Please take the time to read the following article which highlights a number of thought-provoking statements by one of the Soviet Union's most famous citizens, world chess champion Gary Kasparov.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Mar. 29, 1990]

THE COMMUNISTS DON'T WANT A SOLUTION

(By Gary Kasparov)

(At the age of 26, Gary Kasparov may be the greatest chess player of all time. He is also one of the most eloquent advocates of democracy inside the Soviet Union.)

(A dazzling series of victories in his late teens won Mr. Kasparov the right to challenge Anatoly Karpov, then 33, for the world chess championship in 1984. An observer described the match as a contest between "the apparatchik and the artist": Mr. Karpov, an ethnic Russian and the holder of an Order of Lenin, was known for the correctness and risk-aversion of his game and his politics; Mr. Kasparov, who is half-Armenian and half-Jewish was already showing signs of unorthodoxy and insubordination.)

(After 48 games, Mr. Kasparov was on the verge of defeating Mr. Karpov, when the Soviet-controlled World Chess Federation suddenly called off the match. A new championship match was arranged for the fall of 1985, which Mr. Kasparov won, as he did the rematch in 1986. All the while, he was becoming increasingly alienated from the Soviet authorities.)

(Mr. Kasparov is now touring the United States to promote his plan to set up profit-making chess schools in this country, and sell chess software. He visted the Journal's New York office on Monday; here are some extracts from his remarks, which were made in English.)

The human rights situation in the Soviet Union is far from the ideal. There's still no free press in Soviet Union, television is still under state control, there's no private property in the country and nobody expects it soon, and we're a dictatorship. How can you call it democratization when all power is being gathered into the hands of one man?

* * * * *

I don't believe that Mr. Gorbachev had anything specific in mind when he started these reforms, except to save the system however he could. The Soviet Union was about to die as a state—economically, morally and ecologically. Why do you always give him credit for what happens? He didn't repeal Article 6 [the article of the Soviet constitution that confirmed the Communist Party's "leading role"], because he wanted to, but because nationwide strikes, mass demonstrations and powerful national movements forced him to. The Soviet peoples don't understand how a man so unpopular at home can be so popular in the West.

* * * * *

Mr. Gorbachev promised to bring good people onto the presidential council to achieve reforms. But he didn't include the prime minister, [Nikolai] Ryzhkov—he included the minister of defense, the KGB chief and the minister of the interior. Very significant. Plus Dmitri Yarin and Valentin Rasputin. These five people show that future policy won't be very democratic.

What can be your goals if you want to use the army, the KGB, the police plus neo-communist organizations like the United Workers' Front, which Mr. Yarin runs, and chauvinist groups like Pamyat, of which Valentin Rasputin is the godfather?

* * * * *

It's a joke to imagine that Mr. Gorbachev is in some kind of danger from Mr. Ligachev. Whenever there's a conflict among the Soviet leaders, Mr. Gorbachev wins easily. He's the only hope of the apparatus. They're very smart. They didn't vote for Mr. Gorbachev to destroy the system; but only because any other move would lose the game. They're playing just so they will not lose right away.

The only goal they have is to keep power, especially our leader. The government will use force if necessary, anywhere in the Soviet Union.

Why not use force in Lithuania? People were killed in Georgia one year ago, and there was no reaction in the West. When people were killed in Tiananmen Square, there was a reaction, but it passed, it was forgiven. I saw people killed in Azerbaijan, and there was no reaction. There were many Western networks that didn't show the tapes from Baku, not to upset the Western public and Mr. Gorbachev. Why not again? The Soviets have been occupying Lithuania for 10 days, and there's no reaction. Why not use force? Maybe it won't happen, but I don't think it's very wise just to sit and watch and wait.

* * * * *

You [the U.S.] cannot prevent Gorbachev from sending troops in to kill people, but you can react accordingly. We heard many good statements warning of what would happen if the election in Nicaragua was manipulated—a blockade, a break in relations. But with China and the U.S.S.R. nothing happens. It looks as if American policy depends on the size of the communist country—if you're a big communist country, nothing happens.

* * * * *

The Soviet troops that are withdrawn from Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary are coming to Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, the western Ukraine, Moscow. Troops from Afghanistan went to Baku. Forty-five years ago the Soviet nations saved the East European countries from fascism by our lives; now the same thing is happening, we're saving them from communism by our lives again.

* * * * *

The Soviet people do not care about Mr. Bush's opinion. They cannot live under communism anymore. The problem is, the people will rremember that in the very tough days, the Western democratic countries supported the dictatorship in the Soviet Union.

* * * * *

There was not civil war in Azerbaijan. There was an Armenian genocide in Baku. It continued for six days. People were killed. And 12,000 troops watched as these people were killed. And when it was over, they brought the troops in. [Defense Minister Dmitri] Yazov said, they went to Azerbaijan to save Soviet power. Mr. Sheveradnadze [the Soviet foreign minister] said, they went to save Armenians. I believe Mr. Yazov. They used the Armenian genocide as an excuse to save Soviet power. Even more, I am ready to prove that they organized it.

The KGB armed these Moslem fundamentalists. This war was provoked in Moscow, because they need a reason, a good reason, to keep troops. This was an example for other republics, and they wanted the genocide in order to get full support from the West. When they occupied the city, they didn't arrest the leaders of the Moslem fundamentalists; they arrested the leaders of the national democratic movement immediately.

* * * * *

All the national fronts in the republics consist of different political forces: social democrats, conservatives, ultra-chauvinists, everybody. To find the real majority, you need to get rid of communism and have free elections.

* * * * *

How could it happen that this territorial conflict could lead to civil war? Who armed all these people? Who gave them weapons? Who started the press campaign? Who encourages these people to fight each other? There's only one answer—it's so convenient for the central government. Without Moscow, all sides could find a peaceful agreement. With communist governments there, it will be impossible to find a solution because the communists don't want a solution.

* * * * *

An organization like Pamyat is very noisy, but they always lose elections—even in Leningrad, where they looked especially strong. But they're very useful for the government.

* * * * *

What do I want? Democracy in Russia. An end to the monopoly of power. Basic rights, including property rights. Removal of the old forces from government. And free choice for the national republics. Myself, I'd like a confederation of democratic republics in the Soviet Union, but that may no longer be possible.

The leadership cannot survive if they lose the empire. The democratic mentality believes that all the republics must have free choice; the communists cannot give them up. They promise decentralization and free choice, yes, but I see no sign of new rights for the republics. Mr. Gorbachev announced that a new law about secession is on the way, to give any republic the right to leave after five years. This law is written in a typically communist way: so many obstacles, so much delay, so many conditions, it could not be considered a serious law. And yet I believe that, unless Moscow is willing to kill people, by the end of the year, Latvia and Estonia will also leave and probably Georgia, Azerbaijan and Moldavia too.

* * * * *

I'm half Armenian and half Jewish. I was born in Baku. I saw the growing tensions, I saw people killed. If necessary, our government would not hesitate to kill thousands or hundreds of thousands of people. When I escaped from Baku and got to Moscow, I gave a press conference. I realized that I had some obligations, some duties. These people in my country who are fighting for democracy have no choice of being listened to in the West. Maybe I was the only man who could speak on their behalf, who could help them to be heard—not to stop bloodshed, for I'm not able, but just to talk about it, just to tell another vision of the events in the Soviet Union.

"A CELEBRATION YOUTH" ESSAY WRITING CONTEST

HON. WALTER E. FAUNTROY

OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. FAUNTROY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a group of bright, talented and determined young people who distinguish themselves as the winners of "A Celebration of Youth" Essay Writing Contest. The contest participants were presented a theme and were instructed to construct an essay incorporating within the context of same, goals and dreams that they wish to fulfill for themselves and for the world. This year's theme was, "What Can I do to Make a Positive Difference in my Life and in the World!" The following are excerpts from the winning essays:

Upper Elementary First Place Winner, Joyce Chapman, grade 4, Teacher, Mrs. Lucrishann Tolbert, Draper Elementary School, Principal, Mr. Joseph A. Carter, Jr.

"If you set a goal, work toward it and believe in yourself; you will achieve it! Sure, I can and will be a doctor or lawyer one day."

Upper Elementary Second Place Winner, Joshua Hutchins, grade 6, Teacher, Mrs. J. Baker, Alexander Shepherd Elementary School, Principal, Mrs. Edith R. Smith.

"I can make a positive difference in my life by believing in myself, being confident in myself, and by trying to do my best in everything I do."

Upper Elementary Third Place Winner, Angela Hackett, grade 6, Teacher, Mrs. Anita Lee, Alexander Shepherd Elementary School, Principal, Mrs. Edith R. Smith.

"I will always do my best so that people will judge me by what I do, not by the color of my skin * * * with a good education I should be able to get a job that pays me enough money so that I won't be poor and homeless."

Junior High First Place Winner, Meredith Watson, grade 8, Teacher, Ms. Sharon Graham, Eliot Junior High School, Principal, Dr. Rosella M. Bradley.

"I can make a positive difference in my life by empowering myself for success * * * I have been taught to be proud of myself, to set goals, and to work to achieve them. With strong values, I can be the best that I want to be."

Junior High Second Place Winner, Keith Lamman, grade 9, Teacher, Mrs. J. Smith, Alice Deal Junior High, Principal, Mr. Reginald Moss.

"Making a positive difference in my life is going to take a lot of work. I am not what you would call an angel and I need some work in a couple of areas. This is not going to be easy but with some hard work I think that I will be able to handle it."

Junior High Third Place Winner, Kesha White, grade 9, Teacher, Ms. Rachel Hicks, Jefferson Junior High School, Principal, Ms. Vera White.

"Through education, community involvement and encouraging my friends not to become involved in drugs and to look on the positive side of life, I can make a positive difference in my life and the world."

This annual writing competition is sponsored by The Committee on Promoting Global Harmony Through Personal Excellence, under the leadership of Mrs. Dodie Brady and Ms. Charlotte Travieso. The vision and commitment of the committee members is to "assist youth in bringing greater self-esteem, confidence, and sense of positive purpose to people in all walks of life."

Mr. Speaker, I know that my colleagues join me in congratulating this outstanding group of young men and women and in saluting their accomplishments.

THE FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES COMPETITION IN CONTRACTING ACT

HON. HOWARD COBLE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, we are all aware of our trade deficit and the need to lower it. We have heard many speeches in this very Chamber about unfair foreign trade practices which translate into lost American jobs. This is an important issue which Congress must continue to address, but there is another cause of lost Americn jobs which receives little, if any, attention. More shocking still, this impediment to private sector growth is not an overseas corporation playing by a different set of rules. As a practical matter, it is a taxpayer-subsidized corporation backed by our Government. It is called the Federal prison industries [FPI], or UNICOR.

UNICOR has provided prison inmates with work since the mid-1930's by manufacturing products and selling them to Federal agencies. The concept behind the program—to keep prisoners busy and teach them some work skills which might be applied later in life—was, and still is, a good one. But UNICOR operations have grown to the point where the very workers and companies which support the program with their tax dollars are being driven out of business.

In fact, the problem will become far worse unless we correct it now, as 1989 UNICOR sales—$360 million—are expected to mushroom to $620 million by 1992. This is particularly alarming to me, since more than 40 percent of all UNICOR products compete with goods manufactured by textile, apparel, and furniture workers. North Carolina is the Nation's leading manufacturing State, and there are thousands of workers employed in these very industries in my district.

How has this happened? Under the current system, UNICOR is essentially accorded a super preference when contracting with a Government entity. This preference forces Federal purchasing agents to buy products from UNICOR without soliciting bids from the private sector. Not only does this take jobs away from taxpayers and taxpaying companies, but, by eliminating the bid system, prevents agencies from comparing prices to ensure that UNICOR's are fair market prices. Along with the General Services Administration, UNICOR claims that its products meet the same standards imposed on private sector businesses; but neither organization can document this point.

It is time to level the playing field between UNICOR and the private sector, and legislation which I am introducing today, the Federal Prison Industries Competition in Contracting Act, does just that. My bill would restrict the use of FPI's super preference to give Federal agencies the purchasing flexibility they were intended to have in the original FPI legislation enacted in the early 1930's. It would allow an agency to buy products pursuant to Federal Supply Schedule contracts already negotiated with suppliers, or give agencies the option to solicit offers from FPI and other vendors. FPI, like all other offerors, would be subject to the same agency requirements on price, quality, safety, and delivery.

FPI could invoke its super preference, however, if it were not likely to compete successfully, had not captured more than 10 percent of the Federal market for the specific product to be purchased, and it needed the award to: First, prevent a significant decline in inmate employment in the workshop which fabricates the product, or second, enable FPI to diversify into labor-intensive fabrication of a new product.

American industry is not asking for the elimination of FPI operations, but for a fair opportunity to compete with this Government-sponsored corporation. To this end, Mr. Speaker, I urge support of the Federal Prison Industries Competition in Contracting Act.

SIXTH GRADER'S SCIENCE TEACHES LESSON

HON. GEORGE MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, sometimes we can learn important lessons from kids.

I would like to bring to the attention of my colleagues a story which appeared in the Lahontan Valley News on April 11, 1990.

Kevin Bell, a sixth grader at E.C. Best Elementary in Churchill County, NV, has shown us that effective science does not necessarily mean spending thousands of dollars to reach accurate conclusions. It only takes imagination, resourcefulness, and an eye for a problem in need of study.

We should all commend Kevin for his initiative in taking on the project, and for his first place showing in his school's science fair.

[From the Lahontan Valley News, Apr. 11, 1990]

SIXTH GRADER'S STUDY MATCHES ONE DONE BY AGENCY THAT TOOK MONTHS

(By Susan Goldsmith)

In 1989 the National Fisheries Contaminant Research Center looked at the toxicity of the irrigation drainwater flowing into the Stillwater Wildlife National Refuge. The study took one month and cost approximately $25-30,000, according to Bob Hallock of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Reno.

Kevin Bell, 12, a sixth grader at E.C. Best Elementary, was interested in the same question and knew nothing about the previous government study.

So, for his Churchill County Science Fair project, Kevin pursued his interest and did a study on the water spilling out of the TJ Drain into the Stillwater Wildlife Refuge.

And Kevin's project, which cost approximately $25, came to the same conclusion as the exhaustive 55-page government study.

According to Ron Anglin, Stillwater Wildlife Refuge Manger, both studies found that the water flowing out of the drain into the refuge is highly toxic.

Anglin describes Kevin's project as "a complicated scientific study" which demonstrates that an "inquisitive mind can do science experiments and get good results." And the project recently took first place for sixth graders at the Western Nevada Regional Science Fair held last week in Reno.

Kevin tested the effects of the water on beans, snails, daphnia (small water insects) and three species of fish.

The results of his report showed that in the first five minutes snails that were placed in 100 percent TJ Drain died. Similarly, within the first five minutes 100 percent of the daphnia were dead in 100 percent drain water. And all the other plants and animals tested failed to thrive in the toxic water.

Kevin said he also observed many animals had an instinct to stay away from the water.

The results show that the water flowing out of the TJ Drain "is very bad water," Kevin said. And the government's study concluded that water from the TJ Drain "is acutely toxic to all species tested."

Anglin said both reports suggest there is a strong need to do something about the toxic water contaminating the refuge. While the government study made no recommendations, Kevin said he thinks it's important "to close the TJ Drain," an idea Anglin supports.

While he has no immediate plans for his next study, Kevin said he's sure that he wants to "be a scientist and study nature."

ASIAN/PACIFIC AMERICAN HERITAGE MONTH

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to stand before my colleagues today and call their attention to the designation of the month of May as "Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month." I believe that Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month is a special time. It is a time not only to reaffirm and renew our bonds with our past, but to recognize the formation of new ties which beckon toward our future. Heritage Month also is a time for all Americans to reflect on the accomplishments and contributions made by Asian/Pacific Americans. Although the Asian/Pacific American community has faced some tremendous obstacles in the past, over the last several years, through collective work and responsibility, we have overcome many of these difficulties.

Each Asian/Pacific American community has its own distinct legacy of cultural heritage. While we are proud Americans dedicated to our lives within this great land of opportunity, we take the time during Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month to participate in the celebration of our Asian cultures. Heritage Month will lead to a more thorough understanding of today's needs and concerns of Asian/Pacific Americans across the country. At the same time, our celebration helps to contribute to a growing appreciation for diversity, not only among Asian/Pacific Americans, but among all Americans.

I am confident that Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month will be both enjoyable and entertaining for all those fortunate enough to take part. I highly commend the Asian/Pacific American Heritage Council for their important role in working to create a greater understanding of Asian/Pacific Americans and their role in society. I am proud to be associated with this organization and I am sure that the hertiage council will continue to enrich all of our lives.

TRIBUTE TO LOUIS YOSINOFF

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate a member of my community who is being recognized as Rhode Island College's 1990 Alumnus of the Year.

Louis Yosinoff, of Pawtucket, RI, is receiving the Alumnus of the Year Award for his outstanding fundraising work for the class of 1940's golden anniversary fund. Louis is a retired math teacher who taught in the Providence, RI, school system from 1956 until his retirement 1984. Louis remains an active teacher by volunteering at the Nathan Bishop Middle School.

Louis also actively contributes to his local community beyond the teaching profession as a volunteer at Miriam Hospital in Providence, RI. He also makes regular visits to residents of the Jewish Home for the Aged. Louis is also a member of the Men's Club of Temple Emannu-El, where he received recognition for his exemplary service in 1988.

It is with distinct pleasure that I congratulate Louis Yosinoff as this year's Rhode Island College Alumnus of the Year. I wish him all the best and continued success in the future.

INTERNATIONAL HISPANIC THEATRE FESTIVAL

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to share with my colleagues a special cultural event, that will be taking place in my congressional district of Miami, FL. It is a privilege to be part of the honorary committee for the Fifth International Hispanic Theatre Festival.

The festival, which is being hosted by Teatro Avante in conjunction with the city of Miami, the University of Miami, the James L. Knight International Center, and the downtown Miami Hyatt Regency Hotel, runs from May 18 to June 10 and is an international celebration of Hispanic theatrical arts. The multinational program includes performances from Argentina, Chile, Costa Rica, Colombia, Mexico, Spain, and the United States.

This festival continues the grand tradition of Hispanic drama that has existed throughout the centuries. Hispanic drama, which has its birthplace on the Iberian peninsula, followed Spanish exploration to the New World and blossomed in its own right. The drama presented in this festival depicts the emotions of the human condition with a Latin flavor. It is important for our community to increase its cultural awareness so that our economic development may also advance. The International Hispanic Theatre Festival is one prime example of such a cultural-business relationship.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to recognize the chairpersons of the gala committee, Wilfredo and Marilyn Borroto and Fausto and Nancy Marquez, as well as all those who serve on the gala committee and the friends of the festival committee, for their dedication and efforts to bringing the best of Hispanic theater to Miami.

TRIBUTE TO KAREN CABE GIBSON'S CLASS AT R.B. STALL HIGH SCHOOL BICENTENNIAL COMPETITION STATE WINNERS

HON. ARTHUR RAVENEL, JR.

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. RAVENEL. Mr. Speaker, all of us are aware of the startling statistics of voter apathy in our Nation—a nation to which countless millions struggling for that very right look for inspiration. All of us are aware of the growing constitutional illiteracy in our Nation—a nation to which countless millions struggling to create free and truly constitutional governments look as a model and as a beacon of hope.

It is, therefore, heartening to know that there are dedicated educators throughout our country working together to see that we have the informed citizenry the founders knew was an essential component of our experiment in Republicanism.

I am proud to stand before you today to honor such an educator, Karen Cabe Gibson, and her pupils at R.B. Stall High School. Together they have represented my State of South Carolina in the National Bicentennial Competition on the Constitution and Bill of Rights. It was a pleasure to have my picture made with the students on the Capitol steps this morning. While I missed seeing Mrs. Gibson this year who is awaiting the birth of her child, I was glad to once again greet Principal Mike Turner and the other chaperones. The following young people are shining examples of a new generation of leadership for our Nation, educated in and committed to the fundamental principles and values of our democratic institutions:

April Lynn Armstrong, Jennifer Ann Beers, Jennifer Ruth Brantley, Stephanie Michelle Brown, Ky Ngoc Chau, Michele Clayton, Karen Marie Cronin, Kathryn Verdice Dobbs, Donn Marie Franklin, James Armond Howell, Lori Crystal Lee, Rebecca Lynn Lunsford, and Erik James Martin.

Also Samuel Andrew Mathews, Llarra D. Miller, Thomas Vincent Panganiban, Angela L. Paradis, Jennifer M. Petrusak, Francine C. Plunkett, Guy Richards, Jessie Cleveland Rowe, Angela Allison Stewart, Carolyne Anne Stratford, Amy E. Tomberlin, Samuel Keith Walker, and Mariah Mann Windham.

Due to the voluntary efforts of my coordinators, Susan Boykin and Pam Tuttle of the South Carolina Department of Youth Services, these students and others who participated in this program at the elementary, middle, and secondary levels now have a greater understanding of the appreciation for the Constitution, the Bill of Rights, and the principles and values they embody. And, as these students increase their knowledge, they also become aware of the responsibilities which accompany the rights of citizenship in a democracy.

This is truly an exemplary program and while the primary attention belongs to the educators and students at R.B. Stall High School, without the backing and support of the South Carolina Department of Youth Services, Clara Heinsohn and other members of the Bicentennial Advisory Council, and the many volunteers who served as judges, timekeepers, and runners during the program, it would be impossible to have a quality event. For this you have my sincere gratitude.

GERTRUDE VAN KIRK—SENIOR CITIZEN OF THE YEAR

HON. THOMAS J. DOWNEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, as you know, May has been proclaimed by the President as "Older Americans Month." This is a time we set aside to formally acknowledge the contributions that are made for and by senior citizens in our communities. I am very proud that in my congressional district of Suffolk County, NY, we are honored to have one particular senior citizen who has done so much for the benefit of our seniors. Ms. Gertrude Van Kirk of Lindenhurst is an outstanding individual whose reputation as a leader and as an advocate for the aged has led her to receive many honors throughout New York. I am especially pleased that Ms. Van Kirk was recently selected as the Senior Citizen of the Year by the New York State Legislature and was honored at a special luncheon on May 1 in Albany.

As the chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging's Subcommittee on Human Services, I know that advocacy at the grassroots level is the most successful form of advocacy, especially for senior issues. Ms. Van Kirk has demonstrated outstanding leadership qualities and advocacy services to senior citizens throughout her very full career. She has repeatedly directed her efforts to promote meaningful initiatives and activities as well as to provide a reservoir of resources for the elderly.

Gertrude's expertise and interest in policy making and in improving the quality of life for seniors was nationally recognized when she was appointed by Gov. Hugh Carey to participate as a delegate in the 1981 White House Conference on Aging. White House conferences on aging, ordinarily held every 10 years, have been essential in setting the Nation's aging policy agenda for the next decade.

Volunteers throughout our Nation have made great strides in responding to the critical needs of individuals and communities. Gertrude Van Kirk is certainly no exception. She has devoted nearly four decades to service as a volunteer on behalf of New York State's elderly, youth, disabled, and has been politically involved as well. She has worked tirelessly toward improving the Suffolk County community by keeping her fellow citizens informed and aware of issues of concern. Her accomplishments are innumerable, ranging from her having served on a variety of boards to chairing fundraising drives for worthy causes such as the American Cancer Society and the March of Dimes. She serves or has served as a member of the Suffolk County Democratic Committee, the New York State Democratic Committee, a delegate at State conventions, vice chairperson of the Babylon Town Democratic Committee, secretary and cochair of the Lindenhurst Village Democratic Committee. She has attended all Presidential national conventions as a delegate or alternate since 1964.

For the last 10 years, Gertrude Van Kirk has been extremely involved in senior citizen issues within Suffolk County. She has worked with the New York Statewide Senior Action Council and the Suffolk County Office on Aging, the New York State Conference of Mayors and Municipal Officers, and the Geriatric Psychiatrist Admission Services of Central Islip Hospital. In addition she is the founder and charter member of United Seniors from Babylon, and serves on the boards of the AARP, Senior Citizens Leaders Associations of Suffolk, the National Council on Senior Citizens, Bi-County Alliance of Seniors, Town of Babylon Senior Citizens, and the Older Women's League.

As the U.S. Representative of the Second Congressional District of New York I am glad to have Gertrude Van Kirk on my side. Her knowledge, expertise, enthusiam, and compassion have helped me to better understand the needs of the seniors I represent. I not only consider Gertrude a personal friend, but a valued adviser on many of the issues of concern to Suffolk County.

Gertrude Van Kirk's achievements are testimonials to a life that has been dedicated to the needs of others. It is this type of unselfishness that has set her apart from others and that enables her to guide others in her footsteps. The selection of Gertrude Van Kirk as Senior Citizen of the Year was an inevitable one, and I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate her and wish her many more years of success.

THE NEW SHILOH BAPTIST CHURCH: A TRADITION

HON. KWEISI MFUME

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MFUME. Mr. Speaker, it is with a great sense of pride that I rise today to pay tribute to one of Baltimore's oldest religious institutions, the New Shiloh Baptist Church.

The last 25 years of the church's spiritual life has been spent under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Harold A. Carter. His exemplary spiritual leadership of a dedicated and committed church family has unceasingly promoted and enhanced outreach ministries to a grateful community eager for support and guidance.

Dr. Carter is well renowned, having preached the Gospel in 25 different countries, including the Philippines, Romania, east and west Africa, Europe, and the Caribbean. He is heard as a preacher in major American denominations including Southern Baptist, American Baptist, Progressive Baptist, Methodist, Assemblies of God, Presbyterian, and other denominational families.

Mr. Speaker, on Sunday, May 27, 1990, Rev. Dr. Harold A. Carter will lead his congregation of New Shiloh Baptist Church into a new edifice. The church broke ground for this building in April 1984 and has been looking forward to this moment of victory ever since.

After all that it has done for the community over the years, New Shiloh struggles to do more. After continuous ministries of mission and evangelism. After better than 12 years of maintaining multistaffed ministries, including minister of music and minister of Christian education. After having some 80 percent enter the Gospel ministry in the 25-year pastorate of Dr. Carter, and 17 of whom have been ordained and now serve as ministers. After continuous production of a weekly Radio Miistry that reaches thousands for Christ and an innovative Saturday church school * * * New Shiloh seeks to do more.

The "new" New Shiloh Baptist Church will be multipurposed, having a program of worship, evangelism, clinics, community services, cafeteria, Christian education, and academic nurture. The pastor and congregation are motivated by the theme, "A People Determined To Live With Christ!"

The ecumenical relay of New Shiloh Baptist has seen three strong spiritual leaders since its birth. Rev. Dr. Whit W. Allen pastored from 1902 until 1942, Rev. Dr. J. Timothy Boddie from 1942 until 1963, and from 1967 until present Rev. Dr. Harold A. Carter has carried the Christian baton. Church family and friends, as well as the community at large, have been blessed with New Shiloh's unique ministry.

It all began October 1902, just 2 years into a new century, black people were migrating by the thousands to the urban north, seeking jobs and economic emancipation. Reverend Whit Allen called a prayer meeting that autumn and was joined by two other persons. At that time their agenda was to seek the guidance of God as to whether a church might be founded in His name. History reveals God's approval and the Shiloh Free Baptist Church was originally organized. The three that gathered in His name at that meeting wanted the word "Free" to be expressive of a people powerless in many respects, socially, economically, politically, and educationally, but indomitably free in their profound relationship with God.

From his church base of spiritual fervor, Reverend Allen marshaled under the power of God and moved forward with a definite vision and saw the initial prayer band grow from three persons in 1902 into a church with a following numbering 5,000 a few years later. Dr. Allen's warm personality gave birth to a church with a mass congregational flavor devoid of noticeable class status or social standings. Members were drawn from neighborhoods all around its location, including Harlem Avenue, Myrtle Avenue, Clifton Avenue, Pennsylvania Avenue, and many areas beyond the immediate boundary of the church.

After 5 years of rapid growth, on February 11, 1907, the membership of the church changed its name to Shiloh Baptist Church, deleting the word "Free." The church continued to grow by leaps and bounds, and on July 19, 1926, along with the decision to move into a new building, the congregation also decided to add "New" to the name, thus becoming the New Shiloh Baptist Church.

Mr. Speaker, the remaining pages in the history of the New Shiloh Baptist Church are testimony to the continuation of this living record of a seed of faith planted and nurtured by a loving pastor and congregation.

Reverend Allen's death on Palm Sunday, 1942, brought Dr. J. Timothy Boddie to the pulpit of New Shiloh. The building of faith continued to rise under Dr. Boddie, and even today, the story of the church's faith is the story of the strong gospel foundation laid by Dr. Allen and by Dr. Boddie.

When Dr. Harold A. Carter was called to minister to the congregation 25 years ago, he was careful to follow the tradition of the church and today still reaches out to the community in the true spirit of brotherhood and Christian love. Reverend Carter and his wife, Dr. Weptanomah W. Carter, are one in team ministry. Together, their work personifies positive Christian and civic growth. I applaud them for having brought the New Shiloh Baptist Church to this place in time.

Mr. Speaker, Reverend Carter and his congregation have overcome many obstacles through the years and have persevered in their service to the Christian community, continuing the tradition. I rise before this body to ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating the church family and friends of the New Shiloh Baptist Church on this triumphant occasion.

WASTE ISOLATION PILOT PROJECT LAND WITHDRAWAL ACT

HON. NORMAN F. LENT

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, today I am pleased to join with my colleagues, Messrs. SPRATT, KYL, and CRAIG to cosponsor the Waste Isolation Pilot Project Land Withdrawal Act. This bill withdraws Department of the Interior land in New Mexico from public use, so that the waste isolation pilot project, known as WIPP, can proceed with testing and experimentation. This testing will determine whether WIPP will become the Nation's repository for defense wastes.

No one doubts that a suitable disposal site is needed for wastes generated by the Nation's defense nuclear facilities. Tons of this waste are presently being stored temporarily in above-ground facilities. Such temporary storage is not a desirable solution, since it is less well protected that it would be in a permanent repository. Moreover, State-imposed limitations on waste storage threaten to shut down the production facilities that maintain our Nation's nuclear deterrent.

In 1970 Congress ordered the Atomic Energy Commission to find a way to safely dispose of this waste. In response, the AEC and its successor agencies designed a technological tour-de-force: A vast series of underground caverns mined from a salt dome located near Carlsbad, NM. If WIPP functions as intended, it will isolate these wastes from the environment for at least 10,000 years. After several fits and starts, WIPP is ready to begin accepting waste to test its behavior while in the repository. If this testing is successful, WIPP will become the environmentally safe means of disposing of our defense waste. But before WIPP can begin testing, the land on which it is located must be withdrawn from public use and turned over to the Department of Energy. That land withdrawal is the purpose of the legislation that I am cosponsoring today.

I recognize that this land withdrawal has not been without controversy and that the final terms of the land withdrawal may not be exactly what is in this bill. I also recognize that the record of the Department of Energy in taking steps necessary to open WIPP has not been sterling. I do believe that the leadership of Secretary Watkins will quickly drive DOE to take the steps necessary to open WIPP for testing and I intend to monitor the situation to make sure that this occurs. But the problem will not disappear if this land is not withdrawn, and Congress must face this issue sooner or later. It is in the Nation's best interest to proceed expeditiously toward the opening of a repository for the safe disposal of radioactive and mixed wastes. This bill is an important step in this process and I am pleased to cosponsor it.

TRIBUTE TO MR. DAVID K. MURPHY

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a good friend and distinguished citizen of Sacramento, Mr. David K. Murphy. Dave, an outstanding community leader and entrepreneur, will be honored this evening by the Sacramento Area Chapter of the American Red Cross for his dedication and consistent support for their organization.

Dave's commitment to professional excellence and dedication to serving his fellow man has greatly contributed to the enrichment of the Sacramento community. Dave has provided his leadership, skills, and talent to a variety of service organizations and extends from education and the arts to basic human needs. Through his selfless efforts, he has been an invisible friend to thousands of area residents.

Not only has Dave lent his professional and organizational skills to the American Red Cross, but has excelled in raising funds on behalf of the local chapter. During the winter of 1986, Sacramento was deluged with flood waters which caused millions of dollars in damages and rendered thousands of families homeless. In that time of crisis, Dave's tireless fundraising efforts on behalf of the American Red Cross was instrumental in the Sacramento region's recovery from the terrible disaster. Dave currently serves the American Red Cross as chairman of their capital campaign whose mission is to raise funds for a new home for the Red Cross. Under Dave's leadership, the chapter recently relocated to a new building and the capital campaign is on the fast track to success.

Mr. Speaker, there are many words that I can use to describe Dave Murphy. A devoted father and husband. An outstanding businessman. A community leader. A friend. But perhaps one of the most accurate and admirable statements that embodies the persona of Dave Murphy is echoed in the words of Jim McColm, chapter excecutive for the American Red Cross: "excellence and organization." I congratuate Dave and ask that my colleagues join me in saluting him for his outstanding service.

TRIBUTE TO KATHRYN SASSO

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to today to congratulate a member of my community who is being recognized by the Rhode Island College Alumni Association for her outstanding efforts as a member of the Rhode Island College staff.

Kathryn Sasso, of Esmond, RI, graduated from Rhode Island College in 1969. She began working for Rhode Island College in 1970 as a conference coordinator. Kathryn held that position for 10 years until 1980 when she became the director of conferences and special events for Rhode Island College. She currently holds this position and has continued her involvement with the Rhode Island College community. Kathryn is a charter member of the Rhode Island College Staff Association Executive Board and currently serves as the secretary for the association.

Kathryn is also an active member of her community outside of Rhode Island College. She is a member of the Greater Providence Convention and Visitors Bureau. Kathryn has been the chairperson of the executive council for Thompson Congregational Church, where she also performs in the choir.

It is with great pleasure that I congratulate Kathryn Sasso for her efforts on behalf of Rhode Island College. I wish her continued success in the future.

THE DOLPHIN PRESERVATION ACT OF 1990

HON. JIM BATES

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Dolphin Preservation Act of 1990, an important piece of legislation designed to reduce the number of dolphins killed as a result of harvesting tuna stocks.

Every year, approximately 100,000 dolphins are killed in the eastern tropical Pacific by tuna fishermen using purse seine nets. This figure does not take into account the thousands of dolphins that drown each year in the 40-mile drift nets used by foreign tuna boats in the western Pacific.

These numbers are astounding and reflect the gap between reality and the established mortality goals of the Marine Mammal Protection Act.

The problem of needless slaughter of dolphins has spread from this country to the foreign fleet because our U.S. tuna fleet has reduced the dolphin kill, dramatically.

Dolphins drown in tuna nets, are crushed in equipment used to haul nets back into the boat, or fall victim to sharks after being weakened by attempts to escape from the tuna nets.

To reduce the kill recently, many solutions have been offered, the labeling of tuna products being the current favorite, yet still hundreds of thousands of dolphins die each year. And because of the canneries decision to stop buying all tuna caught with current netting methodology, more and not less dolphin will die.

The numbers assist us in putting the issue of dolphins killed in tuna nets into perspective. The U.S. tuna fleet is actively engaged in developing techniques and new nets that have allowed them to reduce the number of dolphins killed in their nets to 12,500 in 1989, well below the ceiling of 20,500 allowed under the MMPA.

Foreign tuna boats fishing in the ETP account for the remaining 87,500 dolphins killed each year. What type of accountability can we expect from the foreign fleet, with observers aboard only 30 percent of these vessels?

Every 1 of the 28 U.S. tuna boats has an observer from the National Marine Fisheries Service aboard every time that vessel leaves port to record dolphin kills.

The U.S. tuna fleet has responsibly complied with every requirement imposed on them. How are they rewarded? By being forced out of business by the U.S. tuna canneries. Will labeling save the dolphins? Not likely. More dolphins will die because the U.S. tuna fishermen will likely choose to sell their boats to the foreign fishermen where dolphin kills are skyrocketing or sell dolphin-unsafe tuna to foreign markets. Dolphins will continue to die.

With labeling, we can assume every consumer will choose to pay more for a "dolphin safe" product and less for a "dolphin-unsafe" product. Regardless of their choice, without a U.S. fleet leading the industry in dolphin-safe methods and developing promising new equipment, many will choose to save money and more dolphins will die.

We should support the U.S. tuna fleet. These are people who have drastically reduced the number of dolphins killed in tuna nets, who have risked their lives to save dolphins entangled in nets. I offer my support in the form of the legislation I am introducing today. I believe that given additional resources the U.S. tuna fleet can reduce dolphin mortality even further.

Let us not open the world's largest market for canned tuna products to only foreign tuna fishermen. To do so is to reward the people who are killing 80 percent of the dolphins.

My legislation offers help. The development of dolphin-safe equipment will not be arduous or expensive, but time consuming and some modest incentives are needed. My legislation would authorize the Secretary of Commerce to make low interest loans to aid this net or equipment development.

If in the interim it becomes necessary for the U.S. fleet to relocate to the western Pacific my legislation would facilitate this relocation by urging the Secretary of State to renegotiate treaties that set access caps on the number of U.S. boats that can fish these waters. Also, legislation would authorize the Secretary of Commerce to authorize relocation allowances for this purpose.

Encouraged by the success of the International Whaling Commission, my legislation calls upon the President to instruct the U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations to prepare, and open for signature and ratification an international convention that would establish a system of international regulation to ensure proper and effective conservation of dolphin stocks.

I encourage all of my colleagues who wish to protect these incredible marine mammals and ensure the viability of a $2 million domestic industry to become cosponsors of the Dolphin Preservation Act of 1990.

THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE CLEVELAND TRINIDAD PAVING CO.

HON. EDWARD F. FEIGHAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Cleveland Trinidad Paving Co. on the 100th anniversary of its founding. It gives me great pride to know that this Cleveland business is one of the largest paving companies in the Nation. Its projects dot the country from the Avenue of the Americas in New York City, to cities in the Oklahoma panhandle, to the mighty bridges of San Francisco.

One reason for Cleveland Trinidad's longevity and continued success is that it has always been a pioneer in the industry. In 1927 the company introduced the central mixing of concrete which not only produced higher quality cement but also gave us the cement mixer truck. Cleveland Trinidad is also credited for building one of the first of the superhighways, which runs from Canton to Akron, in 1931. It was also one of the first environmentally conscious companies in America and proved this when it began the recycling of asphalt in Ohio in 1978. Not only does this recycling save huge quantities of petroleum and stone, but it reduces the cost of improving the Nation's infrastructure and it produces higher quality asphalt. Today Cleveland Trinidad remains a pioneer in that it is among the most technologically advanced firms in its field.

Central to the firm's continued success is the man presently at the top. My good friend Gary Helf took over the presidency of Cleveland Trinidad in 1968 when he was only in his twenties. Through intense study, he has acquired knowledge of all aspects of the industry. He runs the company with a personal, hands-on, style of management in which the firm seems more like a small, family business than the large company it is. He tells me that he is blessed with a highly dedicated and hard-working staff, without which Cleveland Trinidad would not have been able to achieve the level of success that it has.

So congratulations Cleveland Trinidad Paving Co.—here's to another 100 years of helping keep Ohio industry tops in the Nation.

GUS SAVAGE, UNREPENTANT

HON. WILLIAM (BILL) CLAY

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, for more than a year, the media has gone to unreasonable lengths to portray one of our colleagues, GUS SAVAGE, as a scoundrel, buffoon, criminal, and ignoramus. In many instances, their behavior has been scandalous, if not criminal. They have maligned Mr. SAVAGE without sufficient evidence of culpability. The preponderance of this negative coverage has impacted adversely on Mr. SAVAGE and definitely prejudiced some of our colleagues against him.

Mr. Speaker, I am not an apologist for anyone who engages in unethical or illegal activities, and do not encourage the same. Mr. Speaker, I do not have, nor do any of my colleagues have firsthand knowledge of Mr. SAVAGE's engaging in any such conduct. On the other hand, I am very much aware of the subjective nature of the media and its propensity for distorting facts, smearing public officials and spreading malicious gossip.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I feel compelled to share a different story about GUS SAVAGE; one which might elicit a fairer and more enlightened opinion of our colleague. I recommend the following article written by David Jackson, which appeared in the Chicago magazine, November 1989.

[From the Chicago magazine, Nov. 1989]

GUS SAVAGE, UNREPENTANT

(By David Jackson)

You know Augustus Alexander Savage. He's the 63-year-old congressman who tried to have his way with a 28-year-old Peace Corps worker in the back seat of an embassy limo in Zaire. "He grabbed me," she said. "He put his arms around me. He pulled me up against him. . . . He forced me to kiss him, physically, forced me, pulled my mouth to his, felt my body."

She said he told her she was "a traitor to the black movement if I didn't go along."

The next day, when a reporter approached him, Savage said, "Stay the——out of my face." He shouted, "You heard what I said. Stay the——out of my face."

He bragged about his masculinity at a rally. "Ain't nothing wrong with a full-grown black single man making love, is it?" he asked. "Don't get me wrong, I know how to love."

The media were part of a racist conspiracy, he claimed, one designed to throw him out of office. He referred to specific reporters by name, calling WBBM-TV's Mike Flannery a "faggot."

This is all vintage Savage. Few legislators have been so notorious for so long. Newspaper columnists have been describing him, for almost a decade, as the owner of one of the worst attendance records in Congress, a legislator who has written no meaningful laws, delivered nothing to his district, and voted in a fog when he bothered to vote at all.

He's been given some choice nicknames—"Gashouse Gus," "Our Fool on the Hill," "the Cartoon Congressman." Whole columns have been devoted to rehashes of his wildest remarks.

The only thing the newspapers can't explain is Savage's broad, unshakable popularity.

He gets standing ovations at rallies where Gus Savage Forever T-shirts are sold. He has the unalloyed endorsement of political wheels such as First District Congressman Charles Hayes, who calls Savage "exemplary."

He has the quiet, longstanding support of intellectuals like novelist and editor Herman Gilbert: "Every struggle of the period from the fifties through now, there's never been one he wasn't involved in," Gilbert says. "He is a bona fide civil rights leader," says circuit court judge William Cousins. "He has always been at the forefront."

In next year's election, he faces a talented young opponent, Mel Reynolds, who trails just behind him in the polls. State senator Howard Brookins may also stay in the race. But Savage "will eat his opponents up," predicts South Side newspaper publisher Hurley Green, a long-time Savage critic.

"I'm not a politician, I'm an anti-politician," Savage says. "I don't represent a district. I represent an international movement."

He says, "I beat the Machine five times. Never been a member of the Regular Democratic Organization. Refuse to accept endorsements. But yet I win."

He says, "The Gus Savage the media describes does not exist."

And he's right.

He is, in reality, anything but the buffoon you read about in the Sun-Times. A streetwise social critic with uncanny organizational skills, the real Gus Savage has a solid place in the city's political landscape. Former staffers describe him as a tough taskmaster who will fire people rather than tolerate mistakes. In interviews, he comes off as a man whom you must question with authority or be prepared to listen to at great length.

But he does have things to say.

To examine Gus Savage as a man and a phenomenon, I pored through his congressional and campaign records, tracked down a couple of dozen of the allies and enemies who've played behind-the-scenes roles during his 40 years in public life, and engaged Savage in an extended interview, during which he spoke frankly about his politics and his life. He talked about childhood street fights, his family, his feelings toward whites, the quarrel he had and lost with Martin Luther King, Jr., the one he won with the police department's "Red Squad." And, of course, he spoke about what happened in the back seat of the limo.

His is an astonishing tale, one that covers the sweep of black politics in this half of the city's century.

When the interview was over, he remarked that he had stopped returning phone calls from writers and reporters. "I'm a warrior," he said. "I don't give a damn what you write."

Yeah, I think you can call him the architect of the black independents. I mean, you have to give Gus his due: He mapped out the whole path that led to the election of a black mayor.—Political consultant Sid Ordower.

When you think of the struggle for black political empowerment, you probably think of Harold Washington. By all accounts, without Savage there would have been no Mayor Washington.

Most of the battles Savage fought have been forgotten now, but for a time, they captured black Chicago's imagination. He first made the news in 1946, when he led a protest over the condition of veterans' housing. He helped organize the 1948 packinghouse workers' strike, along with Charles Hayes, labor activist Addie Wyatt, and Sam Parks, now a pillar of the 20th Ward Regular Democratic Organization.

Almost every year after 1950, Savage managed the campaign of a black independent challenger to the Regular Democratic Organization. "In those days the strategy was, they knock you down and you come right back with another candidate," says political organizer Richard Barnett.

Some of Savage's forays were audacious: He put together Lemuel Bentley's 1959 run for city clerk—the first major black attempt at a citywide office—which won 60,000 primary votes; he managed Harold Washington's pathbreaking 1977 mayoral bid, which went wholly unnoticed in publications like the one you're reading now.

But sometimes he won: Savage led a contingent of distinguished Chicagoans to Gary, Indiana, to persuade political consultant and newspaper editor Chuck Stone to drop his support for Richard Hatcher's opponent, thus allowing Hatcher to become the first black big-city mayor in the United States. "It was his consciousness that aroused us," says activist Timuel Black. Savage later helped lead the fight to break the race line in the Chicago Transit Authority's largest union.

He also is credited with a founding role in the Chicago League of Negro Voters. "He was gigantic in the movement," says former steelworker and union activist Ola Kennedy. "He had the ability to excite, motivate, and organize people at a time when they needed inspiration. The real testament to him is what we were able to do under his guidance." He was instrumental in persuading Washington to run again in 1983, according to political consultant Don Rose, who helped run that campaign.

Savage ran for office five times himself and lost before he ran five times and won. Through it all he staunchly refused to have any truck with the Regular Democrats. "He comes from the bowels of black Chicago," says 15th Ward aldermanic chief of staff Bruce Crosby, who ran against Savage in 1982 but supports him today. "He has relationships that have stood from the day he was born to today. That's what made Harold Washington a star, and it's what's going to re-elect Gus Savage."

Savage and Washington both were students at Roosevelt University in 1950. Their stamping ground was a little restaurant called Annie's across the street from the school in the Pick-Congress Hotel. Their associates included playwright and singer Oscar Brown, Jr., Timuel Black, and Dempsey Travis, now a real-estate mogul and local historian. Over french tries at Annie's, they traded licks in heady, perpetual verbal jam session. "We used to have the damndest arguments," says Travis. Black recalls that Annie's owner let them hang out all afternoon, but he wouldn't seat them for lunch. "Strange as it may sound, at the time, blacks were not welcome at most Loop restaurants," Black says.

Savage fashioned a response: He organized black and white students to troop into Annie's at ten every morning, take over the booths, and sip coffee until the luncheon crowd had been driven away. "His method was simple," says Black. "Go in there and do not move."

In a way, it was a family legacy.

He does have roots.—Political activist Richard Barnett.

When Savage's son, Thomas, married, he gave his bride, Drella, the wedding ring that Savage's great-grandfather Alexander gave to his bride in the late 1860s. Alexander and his wife had been slaves on a plantation outside of Macon, Georgia, until Union general William T. Sherman marched through the area, freeing slaves and reducing plantations to cinders. Savage's father, Thomas, their grandson, brought his wife north during the First World War, when Northern packinghouses were recruiting blacks from Southern farms. "They had no idea they were strikebreakers," Savage says. "All they knew was, get in that boxcar and get out a day later with a paying job."

Savage's mother scrubbed floors. His father retired as a skilled steelworker and union grievance officer. He was "fiery and courageous—too much so, "Savage says. "The kind of guy who would not take shit off anybody. And I mean anybody."

The family—ten in all—lived in the rear half of a "chop-up" apartment at 4212 South Cottage Grove Avenue. At the time, the east side of Cottage was white, the west side black. "To get to the lake to swim, you had to fight," Savage says. After sneaking into Comiskey Park, "you had to fight your way out of Bridgeport."

His father "would caution me that he did not want anything to happen to me, but he would not admonish me or chastise me. I realize in hindsight that he felt a little pride."

At 42nd and Cottage, Savage fell in with a local gang who called themselves the El Reys, and eventually became their leader. He says, "When I came up, you didn't have any ambitions. You didn't have any role models. All the things you aspired to were antisocial. The same things you see black kids aspire to now."

He says, "I was always in a fistfight with everybody."

He says he entered high school at the top of his class, but graduated from Wendell Phillips High School 243rd out of a class of 243. He had one saving grace: "I was artistically inclined." One of his art teachers talked the administrators at Wilson Junior College (now Kennedy-King College) into giving him a second chance. But at Wilson, "I was no less of a troublemaker."

Fortunately, he was drafted, he says, "before they kicked me out." In the army, he scored high on military aptitude tests and was "thrown in with something I never thought existed: blacks who had achieved things."

Savage began reading voraciously to catch up with his bunkmates. He recalls making his father send him, one book at a time, a 24-volume set called World's Greatest Poetry.

It surprises even him that he fell so hard for verse. He says, "With all the hostility that was in me, the belligerence, and the violence, there was always a lot of dreaming. I spent a lot of time by myself. I had a large family, but I always found ways to hide away and think and dream."

One book awakened him: Gunnar Myrdal's American Dilemma, a pioneering analysis of racism. Before reading it, Savage had joined black servicemen in protests against discrimination on the base, but he calls those "visceral" battles. "I was simply embittered about the question of race, and I carried that into the service from my childhood." American Dilemma "taught me how much I didn't know about what I should know the most about," he says. "I came out of the service with an attitude: I wanted to learn."

He went through Roosevelt on the GI Bill and was offered a stipend to say on as a teaching assistant in the Department of Philosophy, but went to Kent law school, where he was an intercollegiate debating champ his first year. He was forced out during his second year after getting into an argument with a professor in which, Savage concedes, "I was disrespectful."

Gus and Harold would get mad and call each other blankety-blanks, but they wouldn't let anybody else say that about them.—Former city department head Brenetta Howell Barrett.

The most interesting thing about any politician is the relationships he forges over time. Savage has attracted steadfast loyalists, such as Herman Gilbert and Brenetta Howell Barrett—who ran the city Department of Consumer Services under Mayors Washington and Eugene Sawyer. They both wrote for community newspapers he published, helped him organize campaigns, and served on his congressional staff.

More interesting are the friendships that had their spells of rivalry. Savage has had many friends to whom he has taken exception, and enemies of whom he has spoken fondly.

Wilson Frost, for one. For the past 30 years, ward committeeman Frost has kept the Regular Democratic Organization alive in Savage's Second District—where it used to be Savage who ran the hostile outpost. Frost, a classmate at Wendell Phillips High, has beaten Savage twice in aldermanic races, beaten his son, Tommy, but unsuccessfully sponsored two candidates to run against Savage for Congress. Frost reportedly will back Savage's opponent Mel Reynolds this time. "Despite how constantly and bitterly we have opposed each other," Savage says, "he knows me."

"Gus is a formidable opponent, a fighter," Frost says. "His rhetoric in the sixties was substantially the same as it is today. And he still enjoys controversy."

The controversy extends to his friendships—as illustrated by his off-and-on support from a network of white activists. In his first aldermanic campaign, he was actually scored by one of his black opponents for the "outside help he brought in from Hyde Park": liberal whites such as Sid Ordower, Sam Ackerman, David Canter, and Rose.

Except for Rose, they've drifted away and are hesitant to speak on the record about Savage. One recalls Savage writing newspaper columns in which he listed the officers of the then Independent Voters of Illinois, pointing out which ones were white and Jewish. Another says, "Sure, he's got certain white friends, but down deep, there is a very strong nationalistic feeling. It's hard for him to overcome that. He thought of me as a 'different' white, but in the final analysis, every white can't be like that."

Rose says, "At times he's impossible, but we've been friends long enough that it tends to roll off. His worst quality politically is that over the years he has lost many supporters with one or another feud. He and David Canter fell out over the make-up of the front page of a newspaper they were doing for Richard Hatcher in 1967. He's an extremely difficult personality."

He adds that since Savage's wife died, in 1981, "there is an erratic quality to him. Highly emotional. He'll get on a tangent and just develop a blindness around that." Rose calls Eunice, who helped run the newspapers and offered Savage constant counsel, "his true gyroscope."

Savage's thorniest friendship was with Harold Washington. Savage says they were the two main student leaders at Roosevelt. Although the student body was more than 80 percent white, Washington was elected president of the student council, Savage says, "because I was the alternative."

In 1980, both were elected freshmen congressmen. A year later, after the 1980 census was completed, Washington proposed a new legislative map that strengthened his incumbency by taking middle-class precincts away from Savage, and pushing Savage's district into the near southern suburbs. "This wasn't just another of the spats one might have with Gus over the course of 20 years—it produced a serious rupture," says Rose, who had worked closely with both men.

With some modifications, Washington's map prevailed, though some say the remap ultimately worked to Savage's benefit. The black suburban working poor have proved to be a loyal constituency. "It may have been the best thing for him," Gilbert says, "because the more middle class you are, the less you like people like Gus." Rose concurs. He says that although Savage and Washington said many of the same things, "in style and mode, the rising middle class doesn't want to hear too much of Gus's anti-white rhetoric. It's perceived as an embarrassment, while working- and lower-class blacks probably care less about the style, because he is expressing hostilities and political views which they share."

As for Washington, Savage says, "He was looking out for himself as a politician would. Don't forget, he was a professional politician"—meaning, apparently, someone who, unlike Savage, joined a Regular Democratic ward organization. By the time Washington died, Savage says, they had become friends again. He pauses, then adds, "I can't say I could have beaten him. I can't say that about Harold."

The relationship that gets you to the core of Savage's racial views is his short, tempestuous term of service to Martin Luther King, Jr. "We ended up differing, King and I," Savage says, "The fact that I lost did not deter me in the least from supporting the position he ended up taking."

Savage had marched with King in the South. By 1966, when King came to Chicago, Savage was well enough established that King sought him out. King had dispatched his aide James Bevel to the city a month earlier, to scout out the place he should live and the issue he should focus on. Bevel and King's other aide Andrew Young were leaning toward a dilapidated stretch of West Lawndale, and felt that slum housing was the issue that most vividly belied the myth of integration in this prosperous Northern city. But before he settled in, King arranged for the issues to be debated in a small meeting held just outside the city. Young and Bevel faced Savage, who says he "was invited to be there as a representative of . . . the militant wing of the black movement in Chicago."

Savage laid out an argument that, in Rose's words, "turned out to be quite accurate and predictive." He said that middle-class South Siders were in a better position to lead the fight for racial equality; the West Side's welfare-dependent poor would not have the means to stick with King through the stormy years to come. He said that the crucial issue, of which slum housing was just an adjunct, was the exclusion of blacks from political power. That should be addressed first, Savage said, and unlike slum housing, it was a battle that could be won.

When he'd said his piece, King "came up on stage and supported Andy and Jim Bevel and that, of course, won the day," Savage says. "Once King spoke, that was it."

King struck the West Side like angelic lighting, but, "as I predicted," Savage says, King failed to change housing conditions. "The people in the building he rehabbed wouldn't even pay him rent."

More fundamentally, says Savage, "I have a question about integration as a means of liberation. It's a means but not the only means. The Irish in Northern Ireland are not pushing for integration. I think blacks in America should also consider—I don't say adopt, but consider—the strategy of independence. But blacks need more power before they're in a position to decide. We're not in a position to integrate or separate right now. King sacrified his life but the schools in Chicago and the housing in Chicago are more segregated than ever—because he did not have the authority to integrate. Just as Elijah Muhammad and Marcus Garvey did not have the power to separate. The immediate problem is gaining enough authority to be able to decide."

He says, "I also questioned King's tactics of nonviolence, but that's another question."

The King debate marked a chapter of renewed vigor in Savage's life. He began to run for office himself, creating the model for a type of campaign that would later serve Harold Washington and Jesse Jackson: He eschewed the traditional mechanisms of ward organization, and built power around block clubs and community newspapers. After starting an unsuccessful West Slide weekly, and editing Bruce Sagan's Bulletin Newspapers, Savage founded the South Side Citizen Newspapers, which thrive today under the guidance of his friend William Garth. "He was a strong believer in using the paper to boost people he liked," says Hurley Green, who runs the competing Bulletin Newspapers. "Anyone who went against [Mayor Richard J.] Daley, he backed."

Savage wrote a column, "Uh-Ruh," which offered detailed critiques of neighborhood businesses, pointing out which were owned by blacks, and which gypped customers. This proved to be a community service, and also built a network of influencial business people. Today, says Green, the Citizen papers do "better than any other of the black weeklies. A lot of that has to do with the connection between Gus and Jesse Jackson, who pushes a lot of advertising business into the paper."

Savage also spent a great deal of energy inspiring and linking together block clubs and became well known in the process. By 1977, when he was walking through the streets of the South Side with mayoral candidate Harold Washington, he was so familiar that people would stop them, Herman Gilbert recalls, "and say, 'Hey, Gus! Who's that you've got with you?' "

But Washington became mayor of playing coalition politics, and it's clear that Savage does not. His current opponent Mel Reynolds has a labor liasion who pitches Reynolds to labor leaders by stressing one theme: "Trade unions have to deal from a coalition basis, and that includes all nationalities, Gus, with his rhetoric, has not been one to build coalitions across the line."

Interestingly, those people who are probably most often exposed to this rhetoric—the congressmen and congressional aides who work beside Savage daily on Capitol Hill—see his fiery racial speeches as essentially just a prop in his political theatre, not as the full measure of the man. Congressman Marty Russo says, "I've seen Gus and worked with Gus and I fly back and forth with Gus, and my botton line with Gus is, I think he uses the black-white issue in an inflammatory way. He plays to a certain constituency and I think he would be much more effective if he didn't. But one-on-one, he is a totally different person. He's a bright guy, funny, articulate. On issues, he knows what he's talking about."

As for his attendance record, it was the worst in the House during Savage's first year, and he made no apologies about that. He said he was elected to agitate as well as legislate. But since then his voting participation has reached 90 percent.

He receives, to no one's surprise, excellent ratings from the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Abortion Rights Action League, and the AFL-CIO, among others. And he has introduced a fair amount of legislation that created jobs—primarily by increasing minority set-asides from the Department of Defense, Federal Highway Administration, and other contracting agencies of government. In 1984 he also wrote laws mandating that the Department of Housing and Urban Development spend 15 percent of its advertising dollars in black-owned media.

It's not surprising that many of these programs benefitted his constituents; in that respect, he acts as a good, traditional congressman. I couldn't determine by press time if any HUD spending went to the Citizen papers—publisher Garth wouldn't return my calls—but it wouldn't be unusual: There have been many instances in which Savage has created business for minority companies—and his boosters. He helped secure a defense contract potentially worth $268 million—the largest ever awarded to a minority firm—for the Sonicraft Corporation, which, according to Brenetta Barrett, employs people from his district. In 1985, Sonicraft's president, Jerry Jones, co-chaired a fund-raiser for Savage that was held at Sonicraft's headquarters.

Savage also was responsible for laws authorizing the construction of the new 27-story Federal office tower that will go up on Clark Street and Jackson Boulevard; among the beneficiaries of the $44 million in set-asides for minorities and women on this project as Globetrotter's Engineering, a minority-owned company that has contributed frequently to his campaigns.

There is no indication that any of these companies perform shoddy work or evade the bidding process. But the fact that money flows to them does suggest that Savage uses his legislative position to help minority-owned businesses whenever possible. (In fact, he was in Zaire to make connections for black U.S. exporters when the limo incident occurred.)

This political agenda hasn't prevented him from having what insiders describe as an especially open relationship with Congressman William Lipinski—even though Lipinski rose through the ranks of the Regular Democratic Organization and is considered Congress's spokesman for white ethnics. One legislative aide recalls seeing Savage and Lipinski flying to Chicago together after they'd argued tooth and nail on the television show Newsmakers: "They were on the plane joking about it."

The more you know about Savage, the more you see why the media can't seem to get a handle on him. He's an utter contradiction: a Chicago pol without a single precinct captain, a U.S. representative who considers the separation of blacks from the United States government to be an open question, an opinion maker who could care less how the major media covers him.

And perhaps you can see why he treated the Zaire scandal as a joke—and one that he's heard before: Through most of the 1950s, Savage was subjected to surveilance by the police Intelligence Division Subversive Activities Unit, or 'Red Squad," and through the 1960s by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He won possession of his own files. He says they show that for ten years the police "followed me to every meeting where I spoke, wherever I went socially, every tavern I went to. They followed me when I left home in the morning and all the way back. For ten years. And found nothing."

It is salient, he says, that the congressional hearings on the King assassination revealed that the FBI routinely compiled clandestine information on the black leader, fed it to the scoop-hungry media, then announced that it was open investigations based on the published press reports.

That seems to be the pattern in this case. The Peace Corps worker, who has not been named, has never filed any type of charges. The story was leaked to the Washington Post by an anonymous tipster, then confirmed by government officials. Based on the Post story, Congressman Barney Frank filed charges with the House Ethics Committee. (Frank would later admit to hiring a male prostitute to work in his office, then allowing the prostitute the use of his apartment, which became a haven for nongovernment business.)

As for what happened in Zaire, Savage is unrepentant. "What's wrong with a grown single man making a pass at a grown single women and vice versa?"

He says, "Let's say that I advanced on her heavyhandledly. That's not a crime! I'm a single grown man. She's a single grown woman. And she was not alone where she could be pressured. We were in the company of others."

He goes so far as to point out that the embassy entourage made several stops, and he and the woman were constantly in and out of the car. "She kept getting back in the same damn car—and she didn't want to?"

Before the story broke, he adds, Washington columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak reported that Republican leaders, furious at finding one of their own snagged in an ethics conflict, had drawn up a "hit list" of Democratic congressman who could be similarly smeared, and Savage was at the top. Five days after that, the U.S. Attorney General opened an investigation into an apparent conflict involving Savage's son, Tommy, who had been paid as an aide to Walter Fauntroy, the District of Columbia delegate to Congress, while simultaneously campaigning in Chicago for the Illinois house of representatives. (Tommy, like Jesse Jackson, Jr., is viewed around town as a rising young star or as a mere ride-along, depending on whom you talk to.) According to witnesses who will testify—probably this month—the hearings will focus less on Tommy than on the fact that Savage has required his congressional staffers to do campaign work for him.

Then the limo scandal broke, and then came press reports—which changed substantially over time—that Savage had acted bizarrely while on a congressional fact finding mission in China, and wound up locking himself in his room.

The newsbreaking Washington Post devoted a recent editorial to the upcoming ethics hearings on Savage, Frank, and Congressman Donald Lukens, who faces censure for having been convicted of having sex with a minor. The Post passed over the obvious distinction between the cases—Savage has not been convicted of any crime, or even charged, and has not had the chance to cross-examine his accuser—and decided that the difference between them was that Frank and Lukens had the consent of the people with whom the broke the law, while the complaint against Savage involved an allegation of assault. The Post urged the ethics committee to go lightly on Frank and Lukens, and voters to throw Savage out of office.

That advice may have an opposite result. It has stiffened the resolve of Savage's supporters, and brought anxiety to his rivals. "I live in the district, I talk to a lot of people, and even if it's one on one, in my judgment, Gus will win this race," says Alderman Robert Shaw, who has supported Savage's opponents in the past. "The media comes off as a bunch of white folks who are going to pick a congressman for black folks, and black folks tend to reject that. And I agree with them."

Tim Black says, "I think his constituency, looking at his overall record and his behavior on the question of the empowerment of black people, is not going to ask whether it's true or not. They're going to vote for Gus Savage because they believe in what he does."

Richard Barnett says, "The community will slap Gus's hand and tell him, If this is that important to you, you've got to have a little more decorum."

As for Savage, he says, "I give less than a damn" about what the various reporters write. He says he's been interviewed in South Africa and Huntsville, Alabama, and "The Washington Post is more racist." He says, "I don't go down to the white papers, the Tribune and Sun-Times, to be questioned for an endorsement. I'd rather stick it up their ass."

TRIBUTE TO TRUDY COXE

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODES ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a member of my community who is being recognized for her outstanding contributions to both Rhode Island and our Nation.

Trudy Coxe, of Edgewood, RI, will receive the 1990 Alumni Service Award from the Rhode Island College Alumni Association. This award is presented annually to an outstanding citizen who has made an important contribution to Rhode Island or our Nation which reflects Rhode Island college's ideals of service to humanity.

Ms. Coxe's environmental efforts are well known throughout Rhode Island but perhaps not so across our Nation. Since 1977, she has worked for an outstanding national environmental organization based in Rhode Island called Save The Bay. Since 1979, Ms. Coxe has served as the executive director of Save The Bay, responsible for all activities of the 13,000-member volunteer group. Under her direction, this small, local group has developed into a major presence in the environmental community throughout New England. Ms. Coxe, together with the many members of Save The Bay, has helped preserve and protect our Nation's environmental and natural resources.

Ms. Coxe has truly dedicated her life to saving our environment. She has published several books on environmental protection and has received awards for her past efforts. Among these citations are the Environmental Merit Award from the Environmental Protection Agency in 1984, and the 1987 Woman of the Year from the Rhode Island Women's Political Caucus.

It is with great pleasure that I congratulate Trudy Coxe for her outstanding and exemplary efforts on behalf of our environment. Her continued concern for the environment is a model for us all. I wish her continued success in the future.

SKELTON SPEAKS AT CHRISTENING OF U.S.S. "JEFFERSON CITY"

HON. IKE SKELTON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, on March 24, at Newport News Shipbuilding in Norfolk, VA, my wife, Susie Skelton, christened a nuclear submarine in honor of Missouri's capital, Jefferson City. The U.S.S. Jefferson City is a Los Angeles class nuclear attack submarine which will sail strong and true for many years, through the depths of distant seas but close to the heart of Missouri. I submit the address that I delivered at this ceremony for inclusion in today's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Distinghished guests, fellow Missourians, officers, men and families of what will be known as the U.S.S. Jefferson City, and employees of Newport News Shipyard. Today, every Missourian is a Jefferson Citian. This is a great day for Missouri's capital city. This is a great day for Missouri. This is a great day for the U.S. Navy.

All Missourians were honored when the then Secretary of the Navy James Webb designated the name of this ship to be the U.S.S. Jefferson City. For my wife Susie to have been chosen by the former Navy Secretary Will Ball to sponsor this ship is the honor of a lifetime.

This is the first namesake naval vessel of the capital city of the State of Missouri, and tonight the eternal partnership begins between the people of Jefferson City and the officers and men of this nuclear-powered attack submarine.

On another day, in another place, out of the past, another great American ship was christened. The immortal poem of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow entitled "The Building of a Ship," commemorated the launching of the U.S.S. Constitution, Old Ironsides, which played an important role in the defense of our Nation in the War of 1812.

"Build me straight, O worthy master!
Stanch and strong, O goodly vessel,
That small laugh at all disaster,
And with wave and whirlwind wrestle!"

Those words are as appropriate today as they were in the day of the great ships of sail.

This ship, the U.S.S. Jefferson City, will guard our Nation's sea-lanes and protect American interests on the high seas. This ship is to be named for a great city, populated by great people whose roots are in the heart of our Nation. They are a strong people, a kind people, and a patriotic people, grateful to the U.S. Navy for selecting the name of their community for a ship that has such a high calling in our national defense. With this ship go the hopes and prayers of the people of Jefferson City and of the people of our State of Missouri. May this ship be an instrument of peace enabling the dreams and desires of all Americans to come true in a world of peace and democracy.

To the Captain of this Ship, Cmdr. Russell E. Harris, we wish you well as you lead your men through the rigorous task of preparing this vessel for its first journey to sea—to the officers and men of this ship, we wish you safety and success as you compete the difficult task ahead—and to the wives and families of the men who will go to sea in this ship, we give our heartfelt thanks, because your support is so crucial to the well-being of these men as they set about their awesome tasks.

You officers and men of the U.S.S. Jefferson City will do your duty much the way former generations of sailors did theirs. We know the hours are long and the tasks are arduous, but we want you to know that you carry the pride of the people of Jefferson City and of the Great State of Missouri as you are entrusted with the mission of protecting America's freedom.

Freedom is never free. It comes with a price. There is a monetary price to build this ship. There is a price for those skilled hands who made this ship. There is a price of officers and men who will sail this ship into the darkness of the depths—the price of wives and families whose husbands and sons will be gone for countless months away from home. Through the years, Americans have paid the price for freedom, just as we see it being done today. This was done with a sense of duty, to keep our country as the bastion of freedom down through the decades. Just as we rely on our country to be the bulwark of those liberties that we enjoy daily, this ship, the U.S.S. Jefferson City, will be a protector of our country that embodies those freedoms.

Just as the freedom of our Nation may well depend on this ship and its officers and men doing their duty, freedom in other parts of the world depends upon the United States to maintain the beacon of liberty shining for all humanity. Whether we speak of this ship or whether we speak of our Nation, Longfellow said it best when he penned the timeless words:

"Thou, too, sail on, O ship of State
Sail on, O Union, strong and great
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!"

May God be with you. May God be your companion on all of your voyages.

RHODE ISLAND SMALL BUSINESS OWNERS OF THE YEAR

HON. CLAUDINE SCHNEIDER

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Ms. SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to take note of the selection of an outstanding business as the Small Business Administration's Rhode Island Small Business Owner of the Year. I am particularly proud of this year's Rhode Island winners because Jason and Susan Dittelman of East Greenwich Photo have served me personally.

The small business owner is the backbone of the American system. By investing their own money and sweat, they create jobs and wealth for the Nation. The story of the Dittelman's rise to success is a story that has been repeated from our country's beginning. Starting with their own labor, they have added 10 new jobs to the Rhode Island economy.

The Dittelman's store has also grown nearly tenfold in its floor space as they have added such features as custom frames, camera repair, electronic goods, darkroom equipment, and photo restoration work.

Like many other small business owners, Jason and Susie have been very active in their community. In addition to raising their two children, they have been active in the Boy Scouts, the Rhode Island Special Olympics, Little League, the East Greenwich Chamber of Commerce, and the East Greenwich Rotary Club.

Mr. Speaker, the entrepreneurial spirit demonstrated by Susan and Jason Dittelman represents an outstanding example for all Americans. I am proud to have them as constituents an even prouder to have them as neighbors. They have consistently gone beyond what is necessary in giving of themselves to their family, to their business and to their community.

A TRIBUTE TO FARGO SOUTH HIGH SCHOOL

HON. BYRON L. DORGAN

OF NORTH DAKOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the students of Fargo South High School for their outstanding achievement in the State and National Bicentennial Competition on the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

Fourteen students in Cheryl Watkins' advanced placement U.S. Government class won the North Dakota State championship, excelling on tests about content, principles, and applications of the Constitution. Fargo South went on to win a unit award in political philosophy at the national championship held in Washington on May 5–7.

These hard-working students make me proud of my State and optimistic for its future: Sarah Conyers, David Engberg, Heather Himmerick, Jessica McNair, Lance Myxter, Eric Pederson, Jeffery Roberts, Justin Schardin, Shad Thurlow, Melissa Tuomihen, Brandon Volbright, Caroline Wagner, Maria Winters, and Aaron Yeater. In addition, the State bicentennial competition could not have been possible without the dedicated and voluntary efforts of district coordinator Karen Montgomery.

Once again, I am pleased to salute the outstanding effort and achievement of North Dakota's delegation to the National Bicentennial Competition on the Constitution and Bill of Rights. Good job Fargo South! Your knowledge of and care for the Constitution will help to keep its legacy strong.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. CLOTILDE P. GARCIA

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give praise and credit to Dr. Clotilde P. Garcia of Corpus Christi, a doctor, teacher, and author. In addition to all these things, she is also the founder and president of the Spanish American Genealogical Association [SAGA], which explores the heritage of great Spanish Americans.

SAGA will soon host a Texas gala historical reception to honor Dr. Garcia, at which time she will be awarded Spain's Royal American Order of Isabella the Catholic, ordered awarded by His Majesty the King Don Juan Carlos I.

To further the honor, I submit herewith the following proclamation:

Whereas, Dr. Clotilde P. Garcia has made enormous contributions to the poor and disadvantaged citizens of Corpus Christi and Nueces County as a physician, as a past Regent Board member of Del Mar College for twenty-one years, as a mother; and

Whereas, Dr. Garcia founded the Spanish American Genealogical Association, and as the Genealogist and Historian that rediscov-ered Texas' Last Frontier as well as authoring many books on the Rediscovery; and

Whereas, Clotilde P. Garcia will be presented with Spain's Royal American Order of Her Majesty the Queen Isabella The Catholic, ordered awarded by His Majesty the King Don Juan Carlos I;

Therefore, let it be known that the United States House of Representatives joins with the State of Texas in proclaiming May 16, 1990, "Clotilde P. Garcia, M.D. Day."

A TRIBUTE TO MAY MORGAN ROBINSON

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to May Morgan Robinson, one of my constituents who recently passed away. Mrs. Robinson was a true leader of our community and her presence will be sorely missed. She was an inspiration to all who knew her.

Raised in Yonkers, NY, she began her extraordinary lifetime of service when she became active in voter registration campaigns as a teenager. She developed a strong sense of moral, social, and political awareness as a young person that was to guide her in her quest for justice and equal rights for all Americans.

She was a founding member of the first black democratic club in Yonkers as well as the Nepperhan Community Center which she began in her home.

In the early 1950's, she was a volunteer chaperon for the Yonkers Service Club, where she escorted young people to U.S. army bases and West Point to entertain military personnel. She was also a foster mother for unwed mothers, sharing her home with young women in desperate need of a helping hand.

In the early 1960's, May Robinson was arrested for taking part in a demonstration at Yonkers City Hall where a sit-in was being staged to aid 40 families left homeless by fire. In 1963, she organized a caravan of 10 buses for the Civil Rights March on Washington. She was also elected as the first Black delegate from what was then the 25th Congressional District to a National Democratic Convention.

In 1974, the National Urban League appointed her to head its voter registration program in Yonkers. Mrs. Robinson continued until her death to campaign for candidates who are proponents of peace, women's rights, nuclear freeze, and equality and justice for all.

Mr. Speaker, May Robinson made outstanding contributions through her involvement in organizations that make our community a better place to live. Mrs. Robinson was an extraordinary American, and she will be greatly missed. Her service to our Nation has left an imprint—a better world for future generations.

HONORING KEW GARDENS SYNAGOGUE ADATH YESHURUN

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Kew Gardens Synagogue Adath Yeshurun, which will mark its golden jubilee with a dinner dance on May 13 at the Beth Sholom Synagogue in Lawrence, NY.

The Kew Gardens Synagogue is one of the oldest Jewish congregations in the central Queens area of New York City. Those who established the synagogue came from many different ethnic backgrounds, including many who escaped the Holocaust in Europe and were able to come together to establish a congregation that has been a place of prayer and charity for the past 50 years. In that time the synagogue has witnessed its congregation grow from a modest 14 congregants to its now thriving community of 380 active members.

The Kew Gardens Synagogue throughout its 50-year history has been more than a house of worship. Founded by the late David Levine, it has fulfilled the need for community services for Jews and gentiles alike. The services the synagogue provides to the community include a nursery school, youth activities such as little league baseball and sports programs for all children, sabbath youth groups, educational and cultural programs for men and women, including study groups and cultural lectures given by reputed individuals from outside the synagogue. The synagogue has also developed special programs to support single parent families, and assist recent immigrants from the Soviet Union in adapting to life in the United States.

The many programs and activities were expended through the years under the stewardship of many dedicated men and women. I would especially like to honor: board of trustee members David Weil, Richard Koppel and Arnon Hiller; Vice-Presidents Gregory Binkiewicz and Hymen Arbesfeld; Treasurer Eli Mirzoeff; Financial Secretary Noah Diamond; Correspondence Secretary Simon Mietles; and Recording Secretary Nathan Rahimi for their timeless dedication over the years to the Synagogue and the Kew Gardens community. At present, the synagogue is led by President Fred Friedman in partnership with Rabbi Dr. Barnard Rosenweig, the spiritual leader of the Kew Gardens Synagogue. These men, with the help of the other members of the synagogue, have worked diligently to adapt to the ever changing needs of the Kew Gardens community.

The Kew Gardens Synagogue has survived many trials and tribulations during its first half century, but it has survived and prospered as a place the community turns to in times of joy and need. I would like to ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Kew Gardens Synagogue Adath Yeshurun on its 50th anniversary and to extend the hope that the next 50 years will be as successful as its first.

FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF CHERNOBYL

HON. STENY H. HOYER

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, with each passing anniversary of the April 26, 1986, Chernobyl nuclear disaster, we learn more and more about the devastating toll on the surrounding population and environment. Within the last few months, information about the full extent of this tragedy, previously concealed by the Soviet Government, is slowly coming to light.

The devastating consequences of Chernobyl, Mr. Speaker, are found everywhere. The consequences are found in the poisoning of the surrounding environment, with many places unfit for human habitat; farm animals born deformed; deadly crops, berries and mushrooms. They are found in the astounding economic consequences which, according to estimates by Soviet economists, amount to over $300 billion.

But much more importantly, the consequences are found in the devastating effect on human beings. They are found in lives lost—some 300, according to Yuriy Shcherbak, a deputy chairman of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet's Environmental Subcommittee. They are found in the deterioration of the health of thousands upon thousands among the surrounding population in Ukraine, Byelorussia and the Russian republic, as the incidences of leukemia, thyroid cancer and other radiation-related illnesses among the population have grown dramatically and continues to grow. The consequences are also found on the faces of these surrounding populations—faces which display fear, uncertainty, and anxiety about the future. Indeed the psychological effects of Chernobyl—both on those who were uprooted and evacuated from their homes and on the many thousands who stayed unknowingly when they should have been evacuated—may be as traumatic as the physical effects. And, Mr. Speaker, the consequences are found in a crisis of trust in official Soviet bodies that confused or hid the full tragedy of Chernobyl.

At long last, Soviet officials are beginning to recognize the profound crisis of trust that Chernobyl engendered and are beginning to address its effects. The Ukrainian ministry of health, with its new head, Yuriy Spizhenko, is increasingly revealing Chernobyl's medical consequences. And on April 22, the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers accepted a new 16-billion-ruble plan to assist Chernobyl's victims over the next 3 years.

That the truth is emerging about Chernobyl and some action is being taken is due to persistent pressure by independent groups such as green world and the popular movement Rukh in Ukraine which fought to break through the Soviet Government's "conspiracy of silence." In the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, 80 miles from Chernobyl, 70,000 people turned out for a commemorative meeting on the April 26 anniversary sponsored by Rukh. Leaders of the demonstration called for a drastic reduction of the nuclear energy industry and stressed the importance of securing genuine sovereignty for Ukraine. In the Byelorussian city of Gomel, workers went on strike to demand that their region be declared a disaster zone. Mr. Speaker. There is growing recognition that the consequences of Chernobyl, and perhaps even the catastrophe itself, might have been avoided if the people of Ukraine and Byelorussia had a greater role in determining their own fate. The recent republican elections in Ukraine and Byelorussia, with significant victories by democratic, progressive candidates, given cautious hope that the horrible consequences of Chernobyl will be dealt with in a more rational, humane way than they have in the past.

TRIBUTE TO LEE AND ROSE ELDER

HON. WILLIAM H. GRAY III

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of this body two great African-Americans whose accomplishments and achievements are worthy of note, particulary at this juncture in our history. I am speaking of Lee and Rose Elder, the consummate golf professional and his business manager and wife.

This year the Elders will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Lee Elder Invitational Tournament, August 17-19 in Nashville, TN. This is a phenomenal tradition that has continued in the face of numerous obstacles for 20 consecutive years. I invite you to join me in offering congratulations to them for this stellar accomplishment.

In 1974, the Elders created the Lee Elder Scholarship Fund. The scholarship fund was established primarily to provide financial scholarships to qualified, deserving, and financially disadvantaged minority youths. Since its inception, over 85 scholarships have been awarded, and the Lee Elder Invitational Tournament has been the prime source of financial support for those awards and the scholarship fund.

The tournament is an excellent example of the commitment of Lee and Rose Elder. VIP's, celebrities, professionals, and amateurs from the world of sports, entertainment and the arts, politics, education, religious, and business along with the other guests sensitive to the need to help youths achieve their educational goals have been consistent supporters of this tradition. They have shared in the ultimate triumph of the Lee Elder Tournament—generating funds for academic scholarships through quality tournament productions which have created youth training experiences, as well as good times, fond memories, and lasting friendships for the participants.

The Elders have taken the lead in creating programs to provide opportunities for youth advancement and development in education, in sports and in the business of sports. Their emphasis on youth education, business training, personal development, and pursuit or excellence come directly out of their life experiences.

Robert Lee Elder was born in Dallas, TX, July 14, 1934. While still a child, he moved with his family to Los Angeles, CA, where he resided until 1966 when he moved to Washington, DC. Here he met and later married Rose Harper of Washington, DC, a noted golfer in her own right. Her perspicuity and business training enabled her to be his business manager.

Lee Elder became a professional golfer in 1959, seasoning his play by participating in tournaments throughout the United States sponsored and conducted by the United Golfers Association. In the fall of 1967, he attended the Professional Golfers Association training school. Successfully completing its course, he became a member of the prestigious PGA Tour.

In his first full year as a tour rookie, Lee Elder made his dramatic entrance onto the professional circuit finishing in the top 60 money winners in the country—a first for a black golfer.

His outstanding play had a marked impact on the Nation. Finishing in the money in his first nine events, he found himself 1-on-1 with Jack Nicklaus in a nationally televised historic tournament playoff. Although Nicklaus eventually prevailed, Lee Elder became an instant star and a household word.

Lee Elder has been recognized both in the United States and abroad for his professional and personal achievements. He serves on the National Advisory Board of Goodwill Industries of America and on the board of directors of the D.C. Metropolitan Police Boys Club. He has been honorary chairman of the annual March of Dimes Golf Tournament for 5 years. He is also a member of the Grambling University Athletic Foundation, Concerned Athletes Against Apartheid, a life member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and he is a Mason.

Although the demands of a touring professional golfer are strenuous, they have never kept Lee Elder away from providing exhibitions and clinics for youth in the District of Columbia and around the country. These events are designed to stimulate interest in golf, to raise scholarship funds for disadvantaged and underprivileged youth, or to guide youth toward more positive and constructive ways of living. He has been consistently instrumental in securing thousands of dollars worth of equipment and convincing and coordinating other professional golfers to donate their time to these programs.

Rose Elder is an accomplished businesswoman and entrepreneur in the fields of special events management, golf tournament direction, foundation management, and public and media relations. She was a U.S. delegate to the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics. In addition to being the president and chief executive officer of Rose Elder & Associates, Inc., she is the executive director and founder of ESMII—Elder Sports Management and Instructional Institute. ESMII was established in 1986 under the Lee Elder Scholarship Fund and is designed to increase minority participation in jobs and career opportunities in the sports industry, rather than on the playing courts and fields. It provides exposure, information, training, and experience for the interested youth and is a catalyst in finding part-time, full-time, and internship opportunities in sports related organizations.

One program of which Rose Elder is particularly proud was the historic ESMII Youth Delegation to the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, Korea. This program was designed to expose minority American youth to the experiences and operations of the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympic Games and made the youth available as volunteers to the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee [SLOOC]. The youth participated in the Youth Camps organized by the SLOOC Youth Camp Directors, which allowed them to interact with the young adults from the other Olympic nations.

Rose Elder is involved in a variety of civic and community organizations. She is a member of the board of trustees of the City National Bank in Washington, DC, a member of the board of trustees of the Lincoln Theater Foundation, and a member of the board of trustees of the National Association of Christians and Jews. She is a commissioner of the D.C. Baseball Commission, a member of the board of directors of Junior Achievement of Metropolitan Washington, Inc., and a member of the D.C. Stadium Advisory Committee. Mrs. Elder is also a player-manager of the PGA Tour and a member of the International Protocol Association.

Please join me in congratulating these two people for their good works and their involvement for the betterment of our society.

"CARESAVE"—A NEW WAY TO CUT HEALTH COSTS

HON. CLIFF STEARNS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, the No. 1 overriding concern that I hear when I meet with my constituents, whether it is at the town meetings, in the office, or on the phone, is the continuing rise in health care cost. The cost of health care in America comprises almost 10 percent of the GNP. This cost has been shifting from employer to employee. It seems that lately we cannot turn on the television or read a newspaper without a news item concerning the cost of health care. The cost of health insurance is getting more and more expensive which is causing many individuals and businesses to go without any health insurance or with a deductible so high it's like not having any insurance at all.

But there is relief in sight. There is a company in my district by the name of CareSave Outpatient Center, Ltd. that is reversing the rising tide of health care cost.

CareSave is a one-stop community-owned outpatient diagnostic and treatment center, community partners working together in health care services.

The CareSave concept is an idea whose time has come. It allows individuals to own an interest in private medical facilities, to share in the financial success of the company while at the same time controlling the cost of health care services.

CareSave puts health care into the hand of those who need it the most, the residents, self-insured employers, HMO's, and private industry.

CareSave is a prime example of what the American enterprising spirit can do, by seeing a problem and a need and solving that problem and need through hard work, long hours, and self-sacrifice.

CASA PROGRAM: CHAMPIONS FOR CHILDREN

HON. ROMANO L. MAZZOLI

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, late last month I attended the opening session of the annual conference of the National Court-Appointed Special Advocate Program [CASA], held in New Orleans.

Our colleague in the House—a great and charming person—Representative LINDY BOGGS attended the session and extended a warm and gracious Louisiana welcome to all the conferees.

I was honored to receive the president's award at the CASA conference for my support for CASA over the years and especially for having aided in obtaining a $650,000 line item for CASA in the fiscal year 1991 Justice Department Appropriation.

A whole lot of the credit for this funding, however, should go to the chairman and ranking member of the Appropriations Subcommittee, Representatives NEAL SMITH and HAL ROGERS. They have been extraordinarily receptive and supportive of CASA over the past few years. Credit, too, goes to Judge Tom McDonald, the president of the National CASA Association and juvenile court judge in my district.

For those of our colleagues who are not familiar with CASA, it is a program which provides volunteers to help neglected and abused children who are in the court system. Too many of the Nation's young people are not served by today's overworked and overburdened court system, and their guardians-ad-litem and their caseworkers cannot take up the slack.

CASA volunteers usually have only one child to look after and nurture. All evidence indicates that CASA kids fare better in court, have more chance to avoid institutionalization and eventually function in today's society because of CASA caseworkers. Typically, these are volunteer workers, and, subsequently, the CASA program is more cost effective than traditional child advocacy programs.

Our Louisville CASA Program, under the strong leadership of Sally Erny, has grown in tandem with the other 393 grassroots CASA organizations which have opened all over the country.

CASA programs do good work, and I urge my colleagues to visit their local CASA program to see these champions for children in action.

DEDICATED TEACHER INTERESTS STUDENTS IN CONSTITUTION AND BILL OF RIGHTS

HON. HELEN DELICH BENTLEY

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, these are truly amazing times in which we live. It seems as if almost daily history is being made across the globe. The cry for freedom and democracy has been seen in the most unlikely places and has prevailed over even the most oppressive of regimes.

Today's generation of Americans indeed are fortunate for we have never had to endure nor experience a struggle for freedom as our forefathers did or as much of the world is undergoing today. Undoubtedly, history has many lessons to provide. Perhaps freedom's greatest safeguard against ever having to experience such a struggle again is a knowledge, a willingness, and an ability to learn from previous experiences and mistakes.

For this reason it is with great respect and admiration that I commend the efforts of Ms. Roberta Richardson, a reading teacher with the Baltimore County schools. Through the voluntary efforts of Ms. Richardson, thousands of schoolchildren will learn about the formation of our Nation and the Constitution as a result of the We the People * * * Bicentennial Programs on the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

This program along with the We the People * * * text will introduce students to the philosophical ideas of our Founding Fathers and the forces which shaped and influenced the writing of our Constitution.

Indeed, there could not be a more appropriate time to study the formation of our country as around the world people struggle to achieve independence and self-determination. Through the efforts of such people as Ms. Roberta Richardson, students will achieve a greater understanding of the struggle and hardships that so many endured to secure our freedom.

All too often, we are too quick to forget the sacrifices others have made for us. Because of the hard work and dedication of persons like Ms. Roberta Richardson, future generations will be conscious of how and why our Nation was created and the foundation upon which it stands. With such knowledge, the chance of losing that freedom is much more unlikely, for we must remember that we are all charged with the responsibility of ensuring that freedoms reign both today and in the future. The cost of freedom is a precious one and its maintenance demands the greatest of care. As Thomas Paine said, "Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it."

Unfortunately, we often become apathetic in our care and attention to the freedoms which we so greatly enjoy. Hopefully, due to the efforts of such people as Ms. Richardson, we can encourage greater participation and interest in the governing of our great land. Sadly enough, only a minority of the voting public takes advantage of that right. It is even more discouraging when one considers that a lower turnout can be expected on election days when it rains. Yet, in many nations, voter turnout is over 90 percent despite violence and threats to voters. Sadly, we have become a nation which neglects its right to vote because of rain, while in other countries voters are literally dodging bullets to cast their vote. I only can hope that this trend does not continue and that more individuals such as Ms. Richardson realize the need to teach our Nation's young people about the values, responsibilities, and opportunities this great Nation has to offer.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great respect and admiration that I commend Ms. Roberta Richardson for her dedication and commitment to teaching Baltimore County students the importance and need for active and responsible citizenship. Through her efforts, she not only has made this a better community but a better Nation as well.

FARMERS HOME ADMINISTRATION AND WOMEN'S COALITION TEAM UP TO BUILD BETTER FUTURE FOR ST. CROIX

HON. RON de LUGO

OF VIRGIN ISLANDS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Speaker, since Hurricane Hugo swept through the U.S. Virgin Islands nearly 8 months ago, the people of the Virgin Islands have been tremendously busy recovering and rebuilding. With the help of Government agencies, they have been rebuilding thousands and thousands of houses, businesses, and community facilities.

In this flurry of activity, I recently received word of one very important Federal loan on the island of St. Croix that stands out in my mind. This relatively modest loan of $95,000 represents great hope for some of the most troubled people in the Virgin Islands and shows the immense potential when Government agencies and private community groups work together for the common good.

I am speaking of a loan from the U.S. Farmers Home Administration to the Women's Coalition of St. Croix. This loan will enable the women's coalition, which does a superlative job of counseling and helping battered women and children, buy a building for its office and crisis intervention services. It is just a small loan, but it will make a big difference for these people who are rebuilding their lives and deserve all the help we can provide.

This loan represents teamwork on the part of two of the most outstanding public and private agencies in our community. The women's coalition, under the courageous leadership of Mary Mingus, has been providing valuable services under tough conditions for many years now. Relying on volunteers and local support, it has been able to offer comfort, counseling, and new strength to women and children trying to rebuild their lives. I am pleased to see the women's coalition getting this assistance from the Federal Government so it can expand its service.

I am not surprised that, with all the lending agencies in the Virgin Islands, it is the Farmers Home Administration that is making this loan. I have been very impressed by Farmers Home since Hurricane Hugo hit our islands. This Agency, under the able leadership of Regional Director Bernice Murray, responded to the hurricane with determination and creativity. Despite innumerable obstacles in the days when we had no power or phone or communications in the Virgin Islands, Farmers Home shipped in supplies and personnel and reached out to provide services that are essential to rebuilding. Bernice Murray saw the need and she made sure that Farmers Home met that need to the very best of its abilities.

It gives me great pleasure to see the women's coalition and Farmers Home Administration working hand in hand to provide a better future for our community.

TRIBUTE TO CONGREGATION BETH SHALOM OF POMPTON LAKES, NJ, ON ITS 55TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, it is with the deepest revence and sense of pride that I rise today to salute an outstanding house of worship which, for more than a half century has been a spiritual focal point and a beacon of faith for countless numbers of worshipers of the Jewish faith in the greater northern New Jersey area.

I am speaking of Congregation Beth Shalom of Pompton Lakes, NJ, which is celebrating its 55th anniversary this year. In honor of this historic occasion, Congregation Beth Shalom is holding a gala dinner-dance on Saturday, May 12. I know this event will be a great success, which will be a tribute to the dedicated efforts of the 55th anniversary committee: Dora Mester, general chairperson; Louis H. Katz, cochairman; Dr. Louis M. Lees and Brain Gordon, ad-journal; Barbara Goll, Debbie Lees, and Sandra Yenk, dinner; Geri Klinger, ad-journal pictures, and Nahum Mester, member-at-large.

Mr. Speaker, I know, too that the success of this landmark event will also be an enduring tribute to Congregation Beth Shalom's guiding spiritual force, Rabbi Bernard Schecter, who has helped lead the congregation to this fine moment in its history.

Mr. Speaker, Congregation Beth Shalom had its beginnings in 1933, when a small number of Jewish families in the Pompton Lakes area gathered for a wedding celebration. Initially, the congregation met in a room in the Washington Building on Wanaque Avenue and later in Schlessinger's Hotel on Wanaque Avenue. The idea of Jewish families sharing cultural and religious activities grew to the point that a formal center was needed.

Jennie Wecht Feinbloom was a guiding light at this time. The solution to this need for a center was to have a religious school and social functions in an apartment in the Risden Building on Wanaque Avenue, which was tragically destroyed by fire 2 years ago. At first, there were weekend rabbis. The first full-time Hebrew schoolteacher was the late Dave Goldberg.

When these facilities became inadequate, the home of Henry Hershfield on Wanaque Avenue was purchased and renovated so that it contained a sanctuary, classrooms, and meeting areas. When the Hershfield facility, in turn, became inadequate, a new building was needed. It was indeed my honor and privilege to be in attendance when ground was broken for the new building in 1967.

Mr. Speaker, at this juncture the name of the congregation became Beth Shalom, and a modern building was erected on Passaic Avenue in Pompton Lakes. Several years ago, a Holocaust Torah was rededicated at Beth Shalom and has been a constant reminder of the past and a link to future generations.

Today, Congregation Beth Shalom continues to maintain an excellent Hebrew school, a hard-working auxiliary, social and social action committees, religious services, and all the other activities spearheaded by the dedicated congregation officers and board members.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to present the history of this distinguished congregation that has become a vital part of the lives of so many people of the Jewish faith in the northern New Jersey area. As Congregation Beth Shalom celebrates its 55th anniversary, I know that you and all of our colleagues here in Congress will want to join me in extending our warmest greetings.

COMMENDATION OF FRANK J. PASQUERILLA

HON. THOMAS M. FOGLIETTA

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. FOGLIETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to Frank J. Pasquerilla as he is about to be honored by the Sons of Italy. Frank Pasquerilla embodies the American dream come true. Mr. Pasquerilla is a self-made man, rising through the ranks of the Crown American Corp. to become its sole owner.

In addition to Mr. Pasquerilla's devotion to his business interests and family, he has made extensive community and philanthropic investments. Mr. Pasquerilla was State president of Pennsylvania Jaycees, trustee of the University of Pittsburgh, delegate to the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention from the 35th Senatorial District, president of the Greater Johnstown Chamber of Commerce, chairman of the Economic Development Corp: Johnstown Area Regional Industries, Inc., trustee of Notre Dame University, and a trustee of International Council of Shopping Centers. This is only a small sampling of his achievements.

The breadth of Frank Pasquerilla's contributions can be matched only by the recognition and exaltation he has received for his endeavors. Frank was the recipient of the Prime Minister's Silver Anniversary Medal from the State of Israel, Government of Italy, recipient of the Assisi Award from St. Francis College, Loretto, PA, and he received the Arthur Young/Venture Magazine Entrepreneur of the Year Award.

Mr. Speaker, on May 12, 1990, Mr. Pasquerilla will be honored at the Purple Aster Ball, by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. I wish to extend both my sincere congratulations and whole-hearted thanks for Mr. Frank J. Pasquerilla's service to Pennsylvania as well as the Nation.

RESOLUTION REGARDING GRAZING ON PUBLIC LANDS FROM THE ARIZONA CATTLE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION

HON. JOHN J. RHODES III

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, today I am placing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a resolution signed by 4,256 Arizona individuals representing 120 different occupations who are concerned about misleading media reports about the impact of livestock grazing on America's public lands.

I am a cosponsor of House Joint Resolutions 496, designating the week of June 10 through June 16, 1990, as "Multiple-Use Sustained-Yield Week." Cattle and other livestock grazing on our public lands is a historic use which helped to build and strengthen America during its westward expansion. Livestock grazing remains a fundamental and important use of public lands.

On behalf of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association, I am pleased to present for my colleagues attention, the text of the resolution presented to me:

RESOLUTION REGARDING GRAZING ON PUBLIC LANDS

Whereas, Cattle Grazing on the Public Lands of the western states is a significant part of a healthy economy in those states; and

Whereas, beef calves raised on Public Lands of the west are a significant part of the American Food Chain as well as America's agricultural economy; and

Whereas, contrary to the opinion of environmental activists, the western livestock industry is not an isolated, freestanding, expendable segment in America; and

Whereas, false information on cattle grazing in the west is being presented as truth to the American public and was so presented on January 9, 1990, on NBC's Today Show: Now therefore, be it

Resolved, That state and federal legislators be informed that removal of cattle from public lands would be disruptive to the economy of the western states as well as the American food chain and would adversely affect the Consumer Price Index; and be it

Further resolved, That these legislators be informed of the determination of the undersigned that management of public lands should continue for multiple-use, including cattle grazing, as a practice vital to the preservation of resources, the continued productivity of those rangeland resources and the well being of wildlife.

(Signed by 4,256 signatures representing 120 different occupations.)

TRIBUTE TO DR. DAVID FARBER

HON. GUS YATRON

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a great friend and humanitarian from Reading, PA, Dr. David Farber. I am pleased to inform my colleagues in the House that Dr. Farber has been selected to receive the 1990 Maimonides Award of the Israel Bonds Committee. Dr. Farber will receive the Maimonides Award at a special dinner at the Berkleigh Country Club in Kutztown, PA, on June 7, 1990.

Dr. Farber was born in Cleveland in 1914 and earned his bachelor of arts and doctor of medicine degrees at the Ohio State University. He then went on to serve in the Coast Guard during the Second World War. After completing his residency in Philadelphia in 1947, Dr. Farber settled in Reading, and we have been blessed with his presence these past 33 years.

Dr. Farber is a model citizen, actively and intimately involved in community affairs. For instance, he has served as president of the Berks County Medical Society, the Reading Jewish Federation, the Kesher Zion Synagogue, and the Berkleigh Country Club. Professionally, he has been an active member of the American Medical Association, the American College of Surgeons, the American Academy of Ophthalmology, and a diplomate of the American Board of Ophthalmology. Thus, Dr. Farber's devotion to his fellow man and community is beyond doubt.

Mr. Speaker, although this listing alone is reason enough to understand why Dr. Farber was chosen as the 1990 recipient of the Maimonides Award, it is in the areas of foreign policy that Dr. Farber's expertise and concern for humanity is most immediately felt. Deeply alarmed by the proliferation of nuclear weapons, Dr. Farber has been active with various groups in increasing societal awareness about nuclear proliferation and the impact this might have upon the international system as we now know it. Having cultivated a tremendous insight into the intricacies of foreign policy, Dr. Farber is constantly developing, refining, and promoting workable solutions to the toughest problems confronting diplomats and presidents. He is also a staunch defender of human rights and principled government. Finally, his unwavering support for Israel can serve as a guideline for us all as we try to foster real and permanent solutions to the interweaved national, religious, and economic problems which plague the Middle East. If more citizens followed Dr. Farber's lead in struggling with these tough issues, there is no doubt that our job as legislators in Congress would be made much easier.

Mr. Speaker, it is indeed an honor for me to count Dr. Farber as one of my close and personal friends, and I want to congratulate him on this most auspicous occasion. I am sure that the rest of my colleagues join me in extending our best wishes to Dr. Farber, and we look forward to working with him as we strive to construct a more humane and just world order.

INTRODUCTION OF THE SMALL PROPERTY AND CASUALTY INSURANCE COMPANY EQUITY ACT OF 1990

HON. WILLIAM M. THOMAS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, I am today joining Mr. MATSUI in introducing the Small Property and Casualty Insurance Company Equity Act of 1990, in order to correct a gross inequity that exists between the current tax treatment of small property and casualty insurance companies and the current tax treatment of small life insurance companies.

Small casualty and property insurance companies play an essential function in the insurance industry, by enhancing the level of competition within the industry and by providing coverage in areas where other companies often fear to tread. However, small property and casualty companies are more at risk than are the large diversified companies to the vagaries of nature—massive earthquakes and damaging hurricanes, such as those suffered recently by California and our Southeastern States. Small property and casualty insurance companies also are subject to surplus requirements that limit the amount of premiums they can write, thus making it difficult for such companies to grow.

Instead of imposing an impediment to the existence of small property and casualty companies, the tax law should at least provide a level playing field for such companies in relation to small life insurance companies.

Life insurance companies have the benefit of acturial tables to aid in the prediction of losses, which makes the life insurance business inherently less risky than the property and casualty business. Small life insurance companies—those with total assets of less than $500,000,000—are entitled to the small life insurance company deduction under section 806 of the Internal Revenue Code.

This legislation will put small property and casualty insurance companies and small life insurance companies on an equal footing for tax purposes. Under the bill, the small company deduction now applicable to life insurance companies would be made available to property and casualty companies of similar size. Thus, a small property and casualty company with asset of less than $500 million would be entitled to exclude from its insurance company income 60 percent of the first $3 million of insurance company income earned each year. The special deduction would be decreased by 15 percent for every insurance dollar earned in excess of $3 million. Thus, the small company deduction would phase out once insurance income reached $15 million for the year.

The same limitations that currently apply to small life insurance companies, for purposes of determining their assets and their insurance income, would apply to the deduction allowable to small property and casualty companies.

I strongly encourage my colleagues to cosponsor this important legislation and to work for its prompt enactment, so that small property and casualty companies and small life insurance companies will be subject to equal tax treatment.

LOW LEVEL RADIOACTIVE WASTE POLICY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1985

HON. BILL SCHUETTE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. SCHUETTE. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation to amend the Low Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act of 1980, as amended by the Low Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act Amendments of 1985. Few are unaware of the frustration States within the Midwestern compact, to which my home State of Michigan belongs, and in other compacts, have experienced under the Federal mandates of this legislation. Yet, the Federal Government has little role under the act beyond the purely technical advisory role, and that of rebate collector, assigned to the Secretary of the Department of Energy.

However, experts including the Office of Technology Assessment have reported recently that the volume of radioactive waste generated in this country has been reduced by half in the past decade, and is expected to further decline. Currently, 19 total sites are planned to house waste which could be more than adequately stored by at most 5, and more likely, 2, sites.

Thus, my legislation would prohibit the siting of low level radioactive waste facilities in areas with more than 18 inches of annual rainfall. Not only should this result in an optimum number of sites, this concept is advocated by many environmental organizations in order to protect water supplies from contamination. Furthermore, my bill would pursue other sound environmental policies by prohibiting shallow land burial in areas of eligibility, and putting responsibility for class C waste squarely on the shoulders of the Federal Government, where waste with a radioactive half life of 500 years belongs.

In order to protect compacted States, my legislation would indemnify them from any financial and legal liability which resulted from its provisions. Furthermore, in order to protect the taxpayers of both sited and other compacted States, it would create a $150 million fund to be used at the Secretary of Energy's discretion for the purpose of paying claims such as those which might be put forward by members of a compact against a site State. This is an appropriate use of Federal dollars, since the requirements themselves were made by our Federal Government.

However, the bill would retain the current surcharge structure and final milestone. It sets site location criterion which would allow some States which are currently furthest along in the siting process to continue. Thus, it would leave in place incentives for the current sites to remain open, while resulting in an optimal number of two to five sites put forward by experts. Indeed, experts also point out that most projected sites plan to recoup their capital and operating cost by raising fees for disposal; thus a higher waste volume at each site should reduce fees to generators.

I hope I may have the support of my colleagues not only from Michigan and the Midwest compact but that of those who represent other compacts as well. If so few sites are needed, the Federal Government can and should intervene to ensure they are placed in the environmentally safest areas.

BUSH IS RIGHT ON LITHUANIA AND JAPAN

HON. BILL RICHARDSON

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, many on both sides of the aisle have criticized the President recently for his decisions to exempt Japan from our unfair traders list as well as his refusal to impose economic sanctions on the Soviet Union for its Lithuania policy. Mr. Speaker, President Bush is right on both of these issues and instead of being criticized he should be commended for his courageous action and supported on a bipartisan basis.

Mr. Speaker, one of the strengths of the Democratic party should be to support the President when he makes the right decision, especially on foreign policy.

The bottom line on the Lithuania issue is that we cannot undercut Gorbachev at a time that he is trying to reform the Soviet system and negotiate arms control treaties with the United States. While we strongly support self-determination for the Lithuania people, we cannot jeopardize our entire relationship with Gorbachev by weakening him with sanctions.

Mr. Speaker, in the future the United States and Japan will be key players on the world scene. Antagonizing Japan by placing them on a list of unfair traders at a time when we are negotiating with them to remove trade barriers to United States products would be counterproductive especially after Japan has already made some internal structural economic adjustments to lower their exports to the United States. Instead of bashing Japan, let us start working with them. Again, the President, should be supported strongly.

SMALL BUSINESS IN AMERICA: GOOD NEWS AND BAD NEWS

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have this opportunity to share with colleagues my thoughts regarding the state of small business in America. As this is Small Business Week, it is fitting that we examine the issues facing small business in America.

On a national level, the state of small business—in both the number of new business formations and business failures—was very healthy in 1989. The total number of new business formations was 677,394 in 1989, very close to the 685,095 in 1988, and marking the fourth year in which new incorporations averaged at least 675,000 per year. Business failures witnessed the third straight year of decline with only 49,719 in 1989. This is particularly impressive given the large number of new business formations over the past few years.

While the news for small business nationally is good, on a regional basis the news is both good and bad. In New England, and my home State of Connecticut, the news has not been very good. New England new business formations declined by 12.3 percent, while business failures increased by 22.3 percent. Given the impending reductions in the defense budget, and the high per capita defense spending in New England, the outlook does not hold great promise.

The question which we must address, Mr. Speaker, is how to spur economic growth in areas like New England where small business is being hit the hardest. The urgency surrounding this issue rests completely on the fact that without a vibrant small business environment, economic growth cannot be sustained, let alone bolstered. For example, while we in Congress congratulate ourselves on tackling the savings and loan crisis last year, we are now learning the full ramifications of one definitely unintended consequence of this legislation. I am sure that many of my colleagues have heard from small businessmen and businesswomen in their districts who are being denied llines of credit, or badly needed loans by their banks. And most of these businesses have been exemplary borrowers, never missing a payment or defaulting on any loans.

Currently, there are several issues pending in Congress with which small business is keenly interested, family and medical leave, health insurance availability, repeal of section 2036(c), funding for the Small Business Innovative Research [SBIR] Program to name just a few. These are important issues, Mr. Speaker, and will be addressed. However, if we do not act quickly to ease the financial crisis which has already begun to force many small businesses into failure and left thousands of others teetering on the brink of failure, there will be no small businesses around to care.

The intrinsic value of small business to the U.S. economy and our proud free market heritage demands that we take action now. The money supply and credit must be eased in a coordinated, careful, but expedited fashion. Not next month, or next year, but today. If we allow our small businesses to go under, we will only exacerbate the regional effects of declining defense spending, the number of insolvent thrifts and banks, and bring to an abrupt halt the 7 years of economic growth which we have enjoyed this decade.

THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS WILL NOT BE FORGOTTEN

HON. ROBERT J. MRAZEK

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. MRAZEK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of my colleagues the upcoming retirement of nine teachers at J. Taylor Finely Junior High School in Huntington, Long Island. This distinguished group of educators will be honored on May 22, and the gratitude of their community is in order for the day because of the scores of years they collectively have brought to their jobs and the thousands of lives they have touched during their tenures.

The nine are William J. Boyd, Jr., Charles F. Carcano, Remo A. Cavalluzzi, Ronald B. Cuppernull, David P. McGrath, William H. Moles, Lucy Kang Sammis, Peter J. Shelfo, and Stanley C. Vansant.

Mr. Speaker, the American historian Henry Brooks Adams once wrote, "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops." Indeed, the contributions of these nine teachers will go far beyond the classes they held or the papers they graded. They have affected the minds, hearts and souls of the young people of Huntington. It is difficult to imagine a more worthwhile or gratifying calling in life.

I'm sure that my colleagues join me today in wishing the best to each of these individuals as they move forward in life. Their contributions will not be fogotten.

TRIBUTE TO A.A. MILLIGAN

HON. ROBERT J. LAGOMARSINO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, it gives me special pleasure to rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding citizen and valued friend Arthur Achille "Bud" Milligan, who is being honored, on May 19, by the Ventura County Economic Development Association, for his contributions as a visionary community leader, entreprenuer, and philanthropist.

Bud Milligan entered the economic and philanthropic community in 1940, after completing business studies at Stanford University, when he began work at the bank his grandfather founded in 1882. Two years later, he answered his country's call, entering the U.S. Navy where he served through the end of World War II.

In 1955, Bud became president of the Bank of A. Levy, and in the following 23 years, under his stewardship, the bank grew from one office and $14 million to 20 offices and over $329 million.

This tremendous growth came as a result of Bud's committment to putting the bank's resources to work locally. The bank played a large part in financing the Oxnard Frozen Food Cooperative, assuring that millions of dollars in farm income would be used to benefit the local community.

With Bud Milligan as president the bank earned a national reputation. He was appointed to the Select Task Force to Fight Inflation under President Jimmy Carter. In 1977, he was elected president of the American Bankers Association, becoming the leader of the country's 14,000 banks.

Bud Milligan has made numerous contributions to the community. He has served as president, trustee, chairman, and director of more than a dozen philanthropic and community groups and agencies, including president of the Thatcher School, and the Ventura County chairman of CARE, Inc. Bud was also instrumental in the merging of the Community Chest and AID Givers into the United Way of Ventura.

In 1959, Bud and the board of directors established a foundation, the Achille Levy Foundation, which has donated more than $1 million to local community philanthropic organizations and scholarships to graduating high school seniors.

Mr. Speaker, across our country, communities are struggling with social and economic problems. I would suggest that had these communities had the benefit of their own version of Bud Milligan, this country would be far ahead. Bud is a man who understands the value of service, and is respected as much for his compassion, as his superior business skills.

On May 19, Bud will become the second recipient of the Ventura County Economic Development Association's "Hall of Fame Award." Mr. Speaker, it has been my privilege to have known and worked with Bud in both a personal and professional capacity. For many years, he chaired my reelection committee, and for many more, he provided wise and sage advice. Please join me in honoring Bud Milligan and his wife Jean for their service and leadership both to his community and country. He has truly enriched the lives of those who know him and many that do not, and I will always value his friendship.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN INDIA

HON. VIC FAZIO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, the principles of individual and national freedom and the elimination of racial, ethnic, and religious discrimination have been guiding principles for the development of democracy in India, the world's most populous democracy. All of us who support these key democratic principles wish India success in achieving the full implementation of these key principles as quickly as possible.

In recent years, however, India has been plagued with increasing religious and ethnic violence in many sections of the country, most notably in Punjab and Kashmir. In response to sectarian violence, the Government of India has unfortunately resorted to violence and brutal repression. I rise today to reaffirm my strong belief that all parties in these disputes must recommit themselves to condemn all acts of violence and terrorism, whenever they occur and regardless of who the perpetrators may be. There is no room for violence and terrorism, on any side, in this process. These can only serve to undermine a true and lasting peace between all the peoples of India. Just and lasting settlements in these disputes can be achieved only through peaceful negotiations, conducted in good faith, between the Indian Government and the ethnic minorities in Punjab, Kashmir and elsewhere in India.

The press, both Indian and worldwide, and nonpartisan human rights organizations, including Amnesty International, have repeatedly documented human rights abuses in Punjab and Kashmir. In seeking to suppress dissent and separatism, the Government of India has resorted to violence and has forgotten the principles of democracy upon which India was founded. I call upon the Government of India to renounce the use of excess force, to stop the human rights abuses, and to honor the commitments for regional autonomy which were an integral part of the formation of India in 1947.

Today, the Government of India persists in a deplorable policy of prohibiting the world's press and human rights organizations, including Amnesty International, from areas such as Punjab and Kashmir. This self-destructive policy allows unsubstantiated rumors to fan the flames of extremism. To regain the respect and support of the international community, as well as the respect and support of ethnic minorities, the Government of India must not fear to conduct its administration of government in an open and public manner. The world's press and nonpartisan human rights organizations must be allowed full access to Punjab, Kashmir and other regions of India.

By declining to open these areas to responsible scrutiny, the Government of India further substantiates the widespread reports of government violence and government abuses. By showing good faith and allowing press and human rights organizations access, India could calm fears and reduce speculations, exaggerations and distortions. Therefore, I call upon the Government of India to open all areas of the country to the world's press and human rights organizations.

CONGRATULATIONS TO REED HIGH SCHOOL

HON. BARBARA F. VUCANOVICH

OF NEVADA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to congratulate the team from Reed High School in Sparks, NV, for finishing among the top 10 finalists in this year's National Bicentennial Competition on the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

The members of this outstanding team from my district included Michael Armitage, Kimberly Arnott, David Bernardi, Ralph Cinfio, Brenda Degn, Jason Dunphy, Genevieve Gaustad, Steve Gill, Jenny Harcourt, Joella Harlan, Todd Hudson, Brian Irvine, Kevin Johnson, Kris Jussila, Wendy Krajewski, Michelle Ludwig, Mark Mendenhall, Allison Miller, Tricia Nelson, Adam Pearl, Nicole Pereos, Andrea Rivas, Tamaron Smith, Stephanie Trow, Robert Trowe, and Kim Zimmerman. Their sponsoring teacher was Denton Gehr, and the district coordinator was Judy Simpson.

I am very proud of the Reed High School team for doing such a fine job in a very tough competition. Students are expected to become real experts on the Cosntitution and the Bill of Rights, and are questioned by some of the leading constitutional authorities in the country during their final rounds.

These days, we read so much about voter apathy and lack of interest in the political process. Yet more than 2 million students participated in the program during the past year, and more than 33,000 teachers were willing to take extra time beyond their required cirriculum to implement the bicentennial competition in their schools.

These outstanding young people and their teachers provide an inspiring example to their peers, indeed, to us all.

KOONTSES TO RETIRE AFTER 71 YEARS AT ERSKINE

HON. BUTLER DERRICK

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 8, 1990

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to two very distinguished educators, Dr. and Mrs. J. Calvin Koonts.

The Koontses are retiring at the close of this academic year after a combined 71 years of service on the faculty of Erskine College in Due West, SC.

Now a professor of education, Dr. Koonts joined the Erskine faculty in 1949 and is currently senior faculty member. He headed the school's department of education until 1987. Under his leadership, the Erskine teacher education program received an Excellence in Teacher Education Award in 1966 from the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education. He is a former member of the South Carolina Board of Education and has authored several books of poetry.

His wife—Cortlandt—came to Due West in 1951 and she has three decades of service in Erskine's department of music. She has written reviews for The American Music Teacher, the official journal of the Music Teachers National Association. Now a professor of music, Mrs. Koonts is a highly acclaimed concert organist and pianist. In that capacity, she traveled to Eastern Europe to study an organ played by Bach to prepare for a special concert in honor of the composer's tricentennial birthday celebration in 1985.

I join the Koontses' family, many friends, and colleagues in wishing them a happy and healthy retirement. Their seven decades of service to Erskine is an impressive achievement. Beyond that, the couple's numerous academic and musical contributions will not be soon forgotten by any of us who have had the pleasure of knowing them.

SENATE—Wednesday, May 9, 1990

(Legislative day of Wednesday, April 18, 1990)

The Senate met at 10:30 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Honorable HERBERT KOHL, a Senator from the State of Wisconsin.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

*Run ye to and fro through the streets * * * and seek in the broad places thereof, if ye can find a man, if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth * * .—Jeremiah 5:1.

Almighty God, Your command to Jeremiah brings to mind a prayer by J.G. Holland:

God, give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking!
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking;
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land and waiting Justice sleeps.

Amen.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, May 9, 1990.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable HERBERT KOHL, a Senator from the State of Wisconsin, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. KOHL thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume the pending business, S. 135, which the clerk will now report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 135) to amend title 5, United States Code, to restore to Federal civilian employees their right to participate voluntarily as private citizens, in the political processes of the Nation, to protect such employees from improper political solicitations, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL] is recognized to offer an amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 1591

(Purpose: To protect employees from political activities of Federal employee labor organizations)

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL] proposes an amendment numbered 1591.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, at line 4, insert "(a)" before "An" in section 7323.

On page 4, between lines 21 and 22 in section 7323, insert the following:

"(b) No employee may knowingly solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution from any person for a contribution to the multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4)) of the employee's Federal employee organization, unless that organization—

"(1) provides, at least once annually, to all employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit or units (and to new employees within 30 days after commencement of their employment) written notification presented in a manner to inform any such employee—

"(A) that an employee cannot be obligated to pay, through union dues or any other payment to a labor organization, for the political activities of the labor organization, including, but not limited to, the maintenance and operation of, or solicitation of contributions to, a political committee, political communications to members, and voter registration and get-out-the-vote campaigns;

"(B) that no employee may be required actually to join any labor organization;

"(C) that an employee who elects to be a full member of the labor organization and pay membership dues is entitled to a reduction of those dues by the employee's pro rata share of the total spending by the labor organization for political activities;

"(D) that the cost of the labor organization's exclusive representation services, and the amount of spending by such organization for political activities, shall be computed on the basis of such cost and spending for the immediately preceding fiscal year of such organization; and

"(E) of the amount of the labor organization's full membership dues, initiation fees, and assessments for the current year; the amount of the reduced membership dues, subtracting the employee's pro rata share of the organization's spending for political activities, for the current year; and the amount of the agency fee for the current year.

"(2) the labor organization provides (for purposes of verifying the cost of such labor organization's exclusive representation services) to all represented employees an annual examination by an independent certified public accountant of financial statements supplied by such organization which verify the cost of such services; except that such examination shall, at a minimum, constitute a special report as interpreted by the Association of Independent Certified Public Accountants.

"(3) the labor organization maintains procedures to promptly determine the costs that may properly be charged to agency fee payors as costs of exclusive representation, and explains such procedures in the written notification required under subparagraph (1).

"(4)(A) a labor organization that does not satisfy the requirements of subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3) shall finance any expenditures specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (2) only with funds legally collected under this Act for its separate segregated fund.

"(B) For the purposes of this paragraph, subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2) shall apply only with respect to communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of any clearly identified candidate for elective public office.".

At the end of the bill, add the following new title:

TITLE II—PROTECTION FOR EMPLOYEES FROM POLITICAL ACTIVITIES OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS

SEC. 201. PROTECTION OF EMPLOYEES FROM POLITICAL COERCION BY LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) AMENDMENT OF TITLE 18 UNITED STATES CODE.—Chapter 29 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sections:

"SEC. 611. POLITICAL COERCION BY LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

"(a) It shall be unlawful for an officer, employee, or agent of a Federal employee labor organization to intimidate, threaten, coerce, or address an order to, or to cause to be expended any dues, fees, or assessments levied on the membership of the labor organization for the purpose of intimidating, threatening, coercing, or addressing an order to—

"(1) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit for the purpose of interfering with the right of an employee to vote as the employee may choose;

"(2) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit for the purpose of causing an employee to vote or to refrain from voting for any candidate or any measure in an election;

"(3) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit to make or refrain from making a contribution to a candidate, political party, or committee, or political cause of any kind; or

"(4) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit to engage in or refrain from engaging in any legal form of political activity.

"(b) A person who violates subsection (a) shall be fined not more than $5,000, imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 29 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"611. Political coercion by labor organizations."

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, during the course of this debate, I have discussed at length my concerns regarding S. 135. At root, we have before us a political bill, brought before us for partisan reasons, and with partisan timing, which ultimately would engender a partisan advantage at the expense of the other party—to say nothing of the S. 135's assault on the integrity of the civil service.

Let me say again, that this is bad legislation which should be opposed by all those who care about the integrity of both the civil service, as well as of the political arena. I will vote against S. 135, and if it passes this body, and is subsequently before the President, I will certainly support what in all likelihood will be the second Presidential veto of Hatch Act legislation.

While this bill is before us, however, I believe it is important that we discuss every issue fairly raised. Several of my colleagues have previously discussed the campaign finance implications of this legislation—particularly the legislative machinations which will only allow Federal employee union members to solicit PAC contributions from each other. In effect, this legislation creates a private preserve in which Federal employee union members can solicit PAC contributions from other union members for later delivery in the form of a PAC check to, as the statistics indicate most likely, candidates for the Democratic Party.

I think all PAC's should be banned, and still believe that a good amendment to S. 135 would ban PAC's either universally, or specifically in the context of Federal employee union PAC's. However, that is not the amendment that the Senator from Kentucky is proposing—at least not at this time. Instead, my amendment seeks to address the threat to Federal Employees' political freedom that will surely arise if S. 135 is enacted into law.

This threat stems from the government-like powers that have been conferred upon Federal and Postal Union and union officials through statutes enacted in recent years—statutes that were not around when the Hatch Act was enacted in 1939. Let me explain.

The Civil Service Reform Act of 1978 gave Federal employee unions the power to become the exclusive bargaining representative for all Federal employees in a particular bargaining unit. Under the Civil Service Reform Act, a union can become the exclusive bargaining agent for all employees in a bargaining unit without even having to demonstrate support from a majority of all employees in the unit. The union bargains with the appropriate Federal agency over working conditions, grievances, and other issues vital to Federal employment. Once the Federal union gains exclusive representation—no other group—and no individual employee—not even a nonmember of the union—is allowed to negotiate with management.

The Postal Unions have even more power over our civil servants working in the Postal Branch. Postal Union officials are granted similar exclusive bargaining powers through the Postal Reorganization Act, which put postal workers' collective bargaining under the National Labor Relations Act. However, Postal Union officials also have the exclusive power to bargain for pay. Thus, Postal Unions not only control postal employees' condition of employment, they also control their livelihoods.

Mr. President, opening up the Hatch Act now in this new environment of powerful Federal and Postal Unions would open up a Pandora's Box of problems. For example, what happens to the union member who, when contacted by a fellow employee who is a member of the union's collective bargaining committee, refuses to contribute to the union's political action committee? Will his grievance languish?

And what about the nonunion member who refuses to put up a Dukakis or Bush sign in his front yard? Would the union organize its members to orchestrate subtle, but real pressure against workers work do not support the union's agenda?

Nobody knows for sure, but I submit, Mr. President, that one point is clear—the aggregation of power in the hands of a few people is certain to attract corruption. If we are going to create an environment where the exclusive powers of Federal union officials would have an opportunity to corrupt our civil service, we ought to at least take some steps to lessen the dangers.

Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today would take two modest steps to address this danger.

First, my amendment would give Federal union members who object to the political agenda of their union leadership the option to pay only for their share of the direct costs of collective bargaining. Under my amendment, the union cannot collect dues to pay for the costs of running their PAC's, for advocacy mailings, or for get-out-the-vote drives, unless union members voluntarily choose to pay these dues. Union members who choose not to pay for political purposes would maintain their union status, and thus their right to vote on collective bargaining and other vital employment issues.

At this juncture, Mr. President, it might be appropriate to discuss some of the questions raised by the Supreme Court in its Beck decision, and the progeny that have followed that decision.

In the 1988 Supreme Court case, Communication Workers of America versus Beck, workers paying compulsory union dues faced a choice of either resigning from their union, or having dues go to political causes with which they disagreed (in violation of first amendment rights). The Supreme Court ruled that workers could receive a partial rebate of union dues if they objected.

The union member would resign, and then pay reduced dues for direct cost of representation. The worker would lose the right to vote on collective bargaining and other vital employment issues.

In the U.S. District Court for the district of Maryland's decision this year in Kidwell versus Transportation Communications International Union, railroad workers paying union dues faced a choice of either resigning from their union, or having dues go to political causes with which they disagreed. Although these dues were voluntary under some circumstances—depending on the place of employment—these dues were, in fact, coercive in nature because workers could not affect terms of employment unless they paid dues.

The court ruled that railroad workers could be full members of their union, but need not pay for political activities with which they disagreed.

Federal and Postal workers face a situation somewhat analogous to that of the worker in the Kidwell case I just referred to. Although Federal employee unions cannot collect compulsory union dues, Federal employees are faced with the choice of forfeiting their vote on collective-bargaining matters vital to terms of employment in order to avoid paying union dues for candidates and causes they oppose. My amendment would provide workers the opportunity—just the opportunity—to refuse to pay dues for political purposes they oppose without losing their right to vote on collective-bargaining matters.

In fact, my amendment follows a comment made by Justice Thurgood Marshall in the majority opinion for the Supreme Court in the Austin versus Michigan Chamber of Commerce case. Justice Marshall said that a union may not compel union members to financially support union activities that infringe on their first amendment rights. Although it is not yet clear if the Supreme Court is prepared to adopt the holding in the Kidwell decision, that decision—and my amendment—are clearly the coming trend in the law.

The second provision of my amendment is designed to protect workers from political coercion. Although I note with interest the addition of the Robb-Glenn amendment earlier in the debate purporting to ban the coercion of political activity from Federal employees, I respectfully state that—in this Senator's opinion—it simply does not reach far enough. The Senator from Kentucky is not aware of any other provision, either in this bill or the United States Code, which bans coercion of political activity from Federal employees by Federal employee unions or union agents. The second part of my amendment corrects this oversight.

Mr. President, I note that this provision simply extends the same ban against political coercion of civil servants by Federal managers to the Federal and Postal union officials with exclusive control over collective bargaining. Since Federal and Postal union officials have been granted this quasi-governmental power, it seems only fair that they, too, be prohibited from coercion. If there is no intent by union officials to coerce Federal employees, then they and their Senate allies should have no objection to this proposal.

Mr. President, the Hatch Act has served this country well for more than 50 years by shielding our Federal work force, and the American taxpayers, from the corrupting influence of machine politics. If the Senate insists on voting to gut the Hatch Act, it should at least adopt my modest and reasonable proposal to curb some of the abuses of our civil servants' political freedom that will most surely arrive should the Senate take this unwise step.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, one of the difficulties in dealing with the Hatch Act on the floor has been a difficulty in getting some of the very involved amendments enough in advance that we could comment on them intelligently once they were officially offered. Once again, that has proven to be the case. This amendment put forth by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky does have some ramifications to it that we wish to study. I had requested all day yesterday that we be given the amendment just as early as possible when I knew the Senator from Kentucky was going to offer it. We could not get a copy of it yesterday, so we are going to have to take a little bit of time this morning to look at it before I know exactly what we want to do.

Mr. McCONNELL. Will the Senator yield on that one point?

Mr. GLENN. Certainly.

Mr. McCONNELL. When I reached the floor yesterday, the Senator from Kentucky discovered that the amendment might not be germane, and since we had all wanted to proceed on this bill with germane amendments, it took some time yesterday afternoon to make it germane. It is germane this morning, and I apologize for not being able to get it to my friend from Ohio yesterday.

Mr. GLENN. All right, I understand. Let me make just a couple of comments off the top of my head while we have staff giving this a little more thorough look than we have been able to do so far.

Mr. President, Federal employees are already protected by statute from paying union dues for use in any activities to which they may object. Under section 7102 of title 5 of the United States Code, each employee shall have the right to join any labor organization or refrain from joining without fear of penalty or reprisal. Furthermore, a labor organization which has been accorded exclusive recognition in a unit must represent all employees of that unit without regard to whether they are members of that labor organization as stated in section 7114 of title 5.

When we discussed some of these things yesterday very briefly, I believe this was a followup to the Beck decision in the Supreme Court. That particular decision was directed at protecting employees who were forced to pay union dues because of the union's bargaining agreement. In other words, they had a closed shop, union shop, everybody had to be a member to work at that particular place, and then could employees' political contributions be used properly or not in that situation where they were forced into a union because of the contract with that particular company.

So this is a different situation because Government unions, employee unions are strictly voluntary. That is provided for in law.

Now, 5 U.S.C. 7102, employees' rights, says:

> Each employee shall have the right to form, join, or assist any labor organization, or to refrain from any such activity, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, and each employee shall be protected in the exercise of such right. Except as otherwise provided under this chapter, such right includes the right—
> (1) to act for a labor organization in the capacity of a representative and the right, in that capacity, to present the views of the labor organization to heads of agencies and other officials of the executive branch of the Government, the Congress, or other appropriate authorities, and
> (2) to engage in collective bargaining with respect to conditions of employment through representatives chosen by employees under this chapter.

Another part of 5 U.S.C. 7114:

> Representation rights and duties.
> (a)(1) A labor organization which has been accorded exclusive recognition is the exclusive representative of the employees in the unit it represents and is entitled to act for, and negotiate collective bargaining agreements covering all employees in the unit. An exclusive representative is responsible for representing the interests of all employees in the unit it represents without discrimination and without regard to labor organization membership.

It goes on with some other things there. So it would appear at least after a first look at this it probably is already covered under existing law, but we wish to look into it in more detail. Then I will decide whether we wish to accept this or dispose of it by whatever means the distinguished Senator from Kentucky might wish.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, the problem as the Senator from Kentucky understands it is simply this. Under current law, the employee has a Hobson's choice; he can pay dues and get to vote on the collective-bargaining agreement, or he cannot pay dues and have no vote. What the Senator from Kentucky is trying to cure is that problem. We would like for this Federal employee to be able to pay that portion of his dues related to the job of negotiating the terms of employment and not, if he chooses not to, have to be charged for political activities with which he might disagree.

That is the purpose of the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, would the distinguished Senator from Kentucky want to make this applicable not only to Government employees but to all employees, wherever, there was a similar employment situation in business or industry; that those employees would be given the right with their company or with whatever the organization is, business PAC's or whatever, to make the same limitation?

I do not see why we would necessarily say that Government unions are bad except that it is the perception on the other side of the aisle that they only contribute to Democrats, which happens to be not right. But there are a lot of PAC's out there that from a Democratic viewpoint mainly contribute to Republicans and Republican causes, too.

Would the distinguished Senator from Kentucky want to apply the same standards to all unions for whatever political purposes and not limit it just to Government employees?

Mr. McCONNELL. I say to my friend from Ohio, the Senator from Kentucky would like to do precisely that, but it is his hope to keep the amendments on this bill germane. Later today, as a matter of fact, the distinguished Republican leader and myself will be introducing a McConnell-Dole Republican alternative on campaign finance which will do precisely that. But it has been our goal, as this discussion has unfolded on this bill, not to have the campaign finance debate on the Hatch Act reform proposal, and so the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky is narrowly crafted to be germane to this bill.

But it certainly would be my view that this should be applied more broadly, and such an effort will be made at a subsequent time.

Mr. GLENN. We are having staff look at this and go through it right now, and we will decide what our position will be on it. I just wanted to raise those few comments starting out. I am sorry we did not have it available for overnight study, but we will get at it as fast as we can and get it disposed of.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DIXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. KERREY). The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed as though in morning business on another subject for a brief period of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INCUMBENT ADVANTAGES: A MYTH THAT SHOULD NOT CONTROL CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM DECISIONS

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, the Senate will soon take up the issue of campaign finance reform. I hope some of my colleagues may be listening right now or that their staffs will be because I am going to report on some facts that I think may be surprising to many Senators.

I strongly support sound reform, and I intend to work hard to see that the Senate achieves final action on a workable, effective reform package. I do not want to take the time of my colleagues now to discuss the specific issues we will be considering. There will be time for that later.

Instead, Mr. President, I would like to talk for a moment about the myth of incumbent advantage—the theory that campaign reform should be structured to protect challengers, who now find it impossible to compete with entrenched incumbents. I am sure all my colleagues have seen the stories:

Incumbents have all kinds of staff, who do nothing but spend time burnishing their image;

Incumbents have the frank, and mail ever-increasing volumes of junk mail to their constituents, giving them real electoral advantages over their potential opponents; and,

Incumbents have access to their own TV and radio facilities, and command much more press attention than challengers.

Story after story goes on and on in this vein. Frankly, if I took any of them seriously, I would never have run for office in the first place.

These reports often sound convincing, and because of sheer repetition, a lot of people seem to think that they are true. The fact, however, is that our electoral system is very competitive, and the theory of incumbent advantage is not supported by the facts, at least, Mr. President, not in the Senate.

That the incumbent advantage is a myth in the Senate becomes obvious when one takes a few moments to review the last several Senate elections, starting with 1978.

I admit 1978 is a somewhat arbitrary choice, but I chose it for three reasons:

One, because it allows a review of six Senate elections, two full 6-year terms' worth;

Two, because it includes two elections when the President of the United States was a Democrat; and,

Three, because starting with the 1978 election instead of earlier avoids any aberrations that might have been caused by the Watergate scandal.

Mr. President, in 1978 there were 35 seats up for election. Ten Members of the Senate retired that year. Ten incumbent Senators were defeated that year, three in primaries, and seven in the general election.

What that means is that looking only at the contested seats, only 60 percent of the incumbents—60 percent, Mr. President—running for reelection were, in fact, returned to office by the voters. Stated another way, challengers won 40 percent of the seats contested by incumbents.

Those figures alone, convincingly demonstrate, I think, that incumbency was of no advantage that year. Sixty percent is a far cry from the 98-percent retention rates that are talked about so very much. However, it is worth remembering, Mr. President, that even the 60 percent figure tends to understate challengers' real competitiveness. After all, some incumbents retire because they do not believe they can win reelection.

It is worth stating the statistic one other way. Based on the percentage of freshmen elected to the Senate in that election cycle, and on that basis, Mr. President, freshmen won 57 percent of the seats at stake. In other words, over half of the seats at stake that year, 1978, were not retained by incumbents.

And, 1980 was, if anything, even more dramatic. That year, of course, control of the Senate shifted from the Democrats to the Republicans; 34 seats were contested in that election. Only 5 incumbent Senators resigned, but 13 incumbents were defeated, 4 in primaries, 9 in the general election.

Again, looking at only the seats contested by incumbents, challengers defeated incumbents in 45 percent of the seats contested by incumbents. Fifty-three percent of the seats at stake went to freshmen, and were not retained by incumbents.

In 1982, although we were in a deep recession, it was a more proincumbent year; 33 seats were at stake. Only three Senators retired, only two incumbents were defeated. So challengers won only about 6 percent of the contested seats. In 1982, therefore, Senate incumbents achieved a 94-percent retention rate.

Looking at the overall numbers, however, incumbents only retained 85 percent of the seats at stake, newcomers won five.

Although 1984 was not as kind to incumbents as the prior election, it was still much less dramatic than the 1978 and 1980 elections.

In 1984, there were 33 seats up for election; 4 Senators retired, 3 incumbents were defeated. Interestingly all three of these incumbents, two Republicans, and one Democrat, outspent their challengers. More money though, did not save them from defeat. Ten percent of the seats contested by incumbents were won by challengers, and freshmen won 21 percent of the overall seats at stake.

After two relatively status quo elections, 1986 was another poor year for incumbents. Control of the Senate came back to the Democrats; freshmen won 38 percent of the 34 seats up for election. Six Senators retired, seven incumbents were defeated; six of the seven defeated incumbents outspent their challengers once again. But again, having more money did not save them. Incumbents retained only 75 percent of contested seats, challengers won 25 percent.

The most recent Senate election in 1988 again demonstrated how competitive Senate races are. Newcomers won over 30 percent, over a third of the 33 seats at stake. Sixty-seven Senators retired, and four incumbents were defeated in the general. Challengers, therefore, won 15 percent of the contested seats. Two of these incumbents outspent their successful challengers.

In the other two races, the challengers and the incumbents had essentially equal amounts of money to work with.

I have cited a lot of figures because the figures are important. They make a compelling case that there is no particular incumbent advantage in the Senate. In the six elections I reviewed only once was the incumbent retention rate over 90 percent. In at least two elections newcomers won over 50 percent of the seats at stake. Incumbents retained 60 percent or less of the contested seats.

Senators serve 6-year terms and only one-third of the Senate, therefore, faces the voters in any given election year.

Mr. President, that makes it even more significant that there are only 55 Senators here today that were also here in 1978. Slightly more than half of the Senate—think of it. Slightly more than half was here in 1978. During that time period 34 incumbents retired, 39 were defeated by their challengers. What this means is that, believe it or not, Senators have only slightly better than a 50–50 chance on average of staying in the Senate more than two terms. I think it is fair to say, then, that the Senate therefore bears no resemblance to the "incumbents' protection club" we always read about. It is in fact already extremely competitive—a fact that we should carefully keep in mind, in my view, as we work to achieve the necessary consensus on campaign reform.

Mr. McCONNELL. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. McCONNELL. I was listening to the Senator with some interest. I think his speech was outstanding, and it is certainly the case that under existing law the Senate has been a dynamic, competitive place. It has changed hands twice in terms of the majority, and I think the Senator made an outstanding speech which pointed out how competitive the Senate elections are, on the whole, under the existing legislation. I simply want to commend the Senator from Illinois for a fine speech.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I want to respond to my friend by saying that I appreciate those remarks. The only thing that compelled me to make this speech was that I keep reading all these 98 percent figures, and I kept wondering how that could occur when this Senator, who is only in his ninth year, is about in the middle of seniority in the Senate, and I am thinking, there has to be some flaw in this figure.

When I had my folks research it, I was frankly astounded to find that this Senator who came here in 1980, had he come in 1978 would be in the upper half of his class probably. So quite obviously, while I cannot comment and do not know the numbers on the House side, I think it is pretty clear it is competitive over here.

I want to say to my colleague, because I think we have a substantial difference of opinion about campaign finance limitations, that I do not think that does anything to change the position of some of us, which I understand my friend from Kentucky does not share, that we ought to put caps on campaign spending. I genuinely believe, without regard to all the other things that are done, on the question of PAC's, whether you limit PAC's or eliminate PAC's altogether or soft money and all the other things, I say to my colleague, I genuinely believe that if we do not have campaign spending limitations that meet the standards somehow of the Supreme Court in the most recent case, I would want a strong nonseverability clause to see that part of the bill become law and the rest fail. If we do not have caps, I believe we are going to have some major scandals around here. This money-chasing around the country is an outrage—not just by incumbents but by challengers as well.

When you see that kind of money being spent in the country, it is an outrage. I say to my colleague that I believe people are going to get in trouble if we do not do something about it.

If I recall the bill that we have—and I understand there is an honest difference of opinion, and I hope we ultimately get some kind of an accommodation, but my recollection roughly of the bill we have is that my State of Illinois would permit candidates on both sides to spend $4.5 million, maximum, in the campaign spending limit we have in our bill, and then would permit another 20 percent under that flexible rule, money raised in your own State in increments of small amounts, which would be roughly $5.5 million.

I have to tell my friend, and others in the room, that is not an unreasonable number for my State. It is more than I have spent any time I have run. My colleague spent more, but he was running against an incumbent the last time. Perhaps he and his opponent will spend more this time. I suspect he and his opponent could live within a cap of about $5.5 million.

I do not want my speech misinterpreted. I did not come here to say that the existing law is OK. I came here to say that it is not true that we need to figure out some way to make this a level playing field, because I suggest there is already fairly much of a level playing field, and what I further urge is that we have that in mind when we craft the bill. I have to say once again what I deeply and truly feel, that is, there needs to be campaign spending limits.

I think—no offense meant to any Senator—any bill that one passes here that does not have a cap on it is not effective. It is, in my view, not sufficiently responsive to the needs of the country. But I understand—and I say this in the warmest way to my colleague—that we may have some honest differences of opinion around here about that.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, one further brief observation. We can have the campaign finance debate later, but I want to point out further that the Senator from Illinois makes an important point, that under the existing law, the Senate has been a competitive place and the House has not. People typically mix apples and oranges when they talk about a lack of competition. They use House statistics to argue for Senate revisions. I, too, am not a defender of the status quo and think there ought to be dramatic changes in the way we handle campaign finance in the country.

I will offer later a bill that does just that. I do not intend to begin debate on that here this morning. Rather, I want to say that the Senator from Illinois made an important contribution to raising the level of understanding regarding an issue about which there is appalling ignorance in this body and outside among those who follow the issue. I thank the Senator from Illinois for the contribution.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with consideration of the bill.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, it is going to take some time for the staff and for us to study the proposal by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky. What I would like to suggest, if there are other amendments that can be brought to the floor, we could temporarily set this aside while we consider other amendments, so we make the best use of the Senate's time. That way we can move the bill along more expeditiously.

It will require a little while to study this particular amendment. If others can be brought to the floor, and people in the offices could bring them over here now, we would be glad to consider them while we give this a bit more study. I suggest that as a way of moving this along.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, over the last 5 or 6 days that we have been dealing with these reforms of the Hatch Act, we have given some of the purposes of this change many times, but I would like to give them one more time here and then specifically address the proposal by my distinguished colleague from Kentucky.

Mr. President, S. 135, the Hatch Act reform amendments are exactly that, they are reform. They are not the repeal that keeps being referred to, nor do letters from particularly interested organizations referring to this as a repeal act add any validity whatsoever. They are not repeal at all.

There have been a number of abuses under the Hatch Act that have been permitted through the years in some cases by some 3,000 interpretations of what could or could not be done that were folded into the Hatch Act in 1939 that came out by previous interpretations and applied to the civil service system. They were incorporated. They are very confusing. It has left many Federal employees not knowing what they can do or what they cannot do.

S. 135 proposes changes that would allow these civil servants to participate voluntarily—they cannot be coerced; that is prohibited in the law now; it does not change that at all; voluntarily—as citizens in the Nation's political process.

Another misconception of this bill that has come out repeatedly in the debate is reference to some of the dire things in the House bill. This is not the House bill. It does not do the same things. The House bill specifically permits Federal employees to go out and to solicit contributions and permits Federal employees to run for elected public office.

We specifically prohibit that in this. We are going to have a great conference when we get together, once this passes, with the House. That is another subject, and we will deal with that in its time.

We view S. 135 as a very modest proposal which tries to bring some order so people will know where they are violating law and where they are not violating law and specify, make more clear, what can be done on the job and what cannot be done on the job or off the job. It would eliminate many of the complicated and restrictive rulings that presently govern the political activities of Federal civilian and postal employees.

The committee held 2 days of hearings on the Hatch Act in February of 1988, and one in July of last year. Much of the testimony focused on the fact that under current law, as I indicated, civilian and postal workers must comply with some 3,000 separate administrative rulings about what kinds of political activities are permissible or not.

Witness after witness testified that the set of rulings have become so confusing and illogical and trival over the years that they do not know what to do.

I admit to being very lukewarm going into the discussion about whether there should be any changes to the Hatch Act or not. It worked reasonably well. Nobody is really happy with it or that unhappy with it. A few people are, but I doubted whether I should get involved in it or not.

The more I got into it, the more I looked at some of these differences of interpretation under the law, I finally came to be a firm believer that we have to do something just in simple fairness to bring a little bit of understanding to what the Hatch Act provides.

Let me give some examples. Those who have followed the floor action have heard these before. So bear with me if you are hearing it for the second, third, or fourth time.

But if "Hatched" right now, what can you do? You can wear a campaign button on the job. As my distinguished colleague from Wyoming pointed out the other day, how would you like to be a dyed-in-the-wool, card-carrying Republican, walk into the IRS office, and the IRS agent who is there to audit your account has a big Dukakis button on? It would not give you much confidence that you are going to get a square shake, perhaps.

Or to put it the other way around, I walk in, and here is a fellow with a big 3-inch Bush-Reagan button on. Am I going to get a fair shake? I hope I will. I, as an American citizen, should not just hope in a situation like that.

So you can wear a campaign button on the job, and that person, as a Government employee, can write a $1,000 check to a candidate. That is fine. But do you know what he cannot do? That same person cannot go down and stuff envelopes in a back room someplace. He cannot put things in to be mailed: he cannot contribute any of his time. He can take part of that $1,000 and hire a professional firm to do that and that would be legal, but he cannot do it himself.

Those are the rulings. I did not make them up. They are there. Is that right? It seems a little crazy.

Let me add another example. If you are "Hatched" right now, under some of these 3,000 interpretations, you cannot go to a rally and hold a political poster. You cannot do that; that is illegal. But I can go outside and put 50 of those posters on my car and drive around, or I can go to my home and put all sorts of signs up in the yard. Does it make any sense to have a restriction in one area but not in another?

What if I am at a political rally and a friend of mine comes by? I am "Hatched"; I am a Government employee. I am standing in the back of the room. I am permitted to be at the rally, but I am not permitted to participate. A friend comes by and says, "I have to repark my car; it is on a meter. Will you hold my sign"—that has somebody's name on it—"for me a minute until I come back in a few minutes?"

So I, being a good friend, hold the sign. I am in violation of Federal law, by present interpretation. I can be cited for that. I can receive a penalty for that. I can be suspended for a certain length of time from my job for temporarily holding a sign. That is prohibited under the interpretations. Is that right? I cannot imagine we really want to put that kind of an interpretation on this.

Another example: If you are "Hatched," you may express your opinion about a candidate publicly, but it goes on to say you cannot make a speech or campaign for or against a candidate. What is meant by that? People do not have any idea what is meant by that.

If I make a speech, but it is not to anybody—I am going to have to be out in the middle of the woods someplace—is it a speech or is it not a speech? I do not know.

My distinguished colleague at the moment says he recommends I go out in the middle of the woods and give that speech. Maybe that is the general consensus. But if I go out in the middle of the woods and I have one other person there, does that become a public speech? Am I required to have three, four, or five people present? What is the definition of a public speech?

This is not all that ridiculous, because one of the things that came up during the last election was in the State of Washington, Navy shipyard workers were notified they could not actively participate in the State's Presidential caucuses, State caucus, where you have to be there for the duration of the caucus. Some vote by hand; some vote by ballot. But you have to stay there. You do not have a vote unless you stay. They could not even attend without violating the Hatch Act, they were told. It seems to me that denies them rights that every American citizen has a right to expect.

The current Hatch Act, up until about a year ago, even extended to the letters to the editor. You could write not more than five letters to one newspaper, or one letter to five newspapers on a political matter without being in violation of the Hatch Act.

Those are just some examples, and they are not ridiculous examples. They are things that some 3 million Federal workers right now have to live with, and they try to make interpretations and try to decide what they can do and cannot do. That does not make much sense.

So the changes we are making do not make great sweeping changes in the Hatch Act. They are not a repeal of the Hatch Act. What they are trying to do is bring some sense and order out of a situation like this.

The right of American citizens in good standing to participate in the politics of the Nation is a serious and an important constitutional right.

We first started this debate the other day. It kept being stated over and over again that the Hatch Act does not violate the Constitution. I agree with that 100 percent. The Supreme Court has ruled on that, and I agree with that. That did not have anything to do with our debate here, really.

But I submit that this constitutional right that people have is a right that, if restricted, which we do with the Hatch Act, should be restricted only to the extent necessary to prevent more profound violations from occurring.

When the Hatch Act was passed some 50 years ago, the development of a professional civil service was being undermined and seriously undermined by patronage appointments.

At that time—this was back in the Great Depression days, the days of the New Deal and WPA and all of those things—more than 60 new Federal agencies had been created by the end of 1934—60 new Federal agencies—to deal with the dire economic straits this country found itself in at that time. But do you know how many of those 60 new Federal agencies had been put under the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission? Only five. So this meant that the majority of these agencies were being staffed on the basis of political patronage rather than merit competition, and that rapid growth of patronage jobs, 300,000 we estimate now—300,000 jobs, straight patronage jobs, straight patronage jobs—created congressional concern that some civil servants might be working for partisan rather than national interests. I think that was a very legitimate concern.

So in 1939, a special Senate investigation disclosed that political appointees in the WPA had, in fact, coerced relief workers into making political contributions in return for their jobs, a flat out deal, and that was wrong.

The Hatch Act was quickly passed. It was passed without congressional hearings, with little debate, in order to protect the Federal employees. That was very fast action. In fact, the Senate vote on the act was so hasty, so hasty, that a subsequent amendment had to be offered on the House floor to exempt the President, the Vice President, and Members of Congress from Hatch Act restrictions that would have prevented them from even seeking reelection because they were Government employee and could not have done anything politically to run for reelection. A ridiculous situation. That is how fast it was passed.

In passing the Hatch Act, Congress attempted to guard the civil service from undue political influence by prohibiting Federal workers from engaging in partisan political activities altogether. Fifty years later we have a dramatically different situation. We have an established professional civil service hired on a competitive merit basis. We also have a system of checks and balances to guard against political abuses. I believe that a compelling case has been made for revamping restrictions on the political liberties of today's work force. At the same time, I am acutely aware of public concern that too dramatic a change in the Hatch Act might serve to repoliticize the civil service and expose workers to coercion.

So what we face in proposing reform of the Hatch Act is a balancing act; we balance a need to protect the integrity of the civil service with our duty to protect the constitution right of all citizens to participate to the greatest permissible extent in the Nation's political processes.

How do we do this? We do it by being very careful about what can be done on the job and what can be done off the job. That is where much of the confusion has arisen through the years over these some 3,000 or more interpretations with which civil servants have to try to live.

Under the bill, "Hatched" employees would enjoy more freedom after hours by being allowed to wear voluntarily—voluntarily, could not be coerced, that is in the law now—as private citizens for the candidates and causes of their choice. Could they carry a poster at a political rally or stuff envelopes or participate in voter registration drives and distribute campaign material while off the job? Why not? These are basic rights that other Americans take for granted. However, we do not just open up everything off the job. We keep some restrictions on off-the-job activities. For instance, first, current law prohibitions against Federal and postal employees soliciting campaign contributions from the general public would remain in force— no campaign contributions solicitation from the public. That is permitted in the House bill. It is not permitted in this bill.

Second, this bill would keep current law prohibitions against Hatched employees running for partisan elective office. The House bill would permit that; the Senate bill does not.

At the same time, it would allow them to participate in local party organizations or affiliated groups, precinct chairmen, committee men, whatever. They cannot do that today, but I think that should be permitted. This bill provides it.

S. 135 would ensure the continued protection of Hatched employees from political coercion by making a very, very clear distinction between activity on the job and activity away from work on an employee's own time.

On the job, nothing, no political activity. Off the job, we still keep the prohibitions of not running for elective office and no solicitations, no contributions solicitations. Outside of that, should people be able to enjoy the same political freedom as everyone else? Why not? I do not see any reason why not.

The Department of Justice and other opponents of the bill have charged that provisions of S. 135 intended to prevent abuses will be ineffective in achieving that goal as a practical matter because of the difficulties inherent in proving even the most patent abuses.

That is true right now under existing law. The problem right now is that some of those abuses people do not even know are abuses because of the confusion in the law itself. On the other hand, such a statement by the Justice Department that we should not have a law because of difficulties inherent in proving abuses is a little bit astounding because it is incredible that these officials, having the primary responsibility for upholding the laws of our country, would maintain that criminal statutes are ineffective because of difficulties in proving the charges. Such difficulties are often the case, but surely Justice officials would not advocate repealing the statutes involved in those cases because it is difficult to bring a case under certain law.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to give Federal workers the right to participate more fully in the political process. This is a right that has been denied to them for over 50 years. We bring some clarity to the law with S. 135. That is all it does.

I believe that this action by the Senate is long overdue.

Mr. President, let me address briefly and make a few remarks regarding the amendment before us by my distinguished colleague from Kentucky.

I point out that the provisions he makes in this amendment apply to Government unions. They are not the same as the Supreme Court Beck case where some employees brought a case to the court to point out that they were forced in a union shop, or a closed shop, to join the union to get a job. They did not like their money being used for political purpose, and they sued under that.

Now, this is not the same as the Beck case. Government unions are all voluntary. There is no closed shop, no union shop for Government employees. Let us take the provisions that the distinguished Senator from Kentucky is proposing and say that we will apply them to outside corporations. What happens to outside corporations? Are they permitted political activity? Yes, they are to some extent under certain rules. They quite often fund foundations that take political views or can even take a political position.

We have all seen the Mobil Gas Co. ads, the ads in the paper in which they make straightforward political statements. They lobby—political statements, public policy.

What happens to the stockholders of that company? If the stockholders do not like that, they cannot say, "Wait a minute, Mobil. I'm a stockholder, so I want you to not use my part of what might otherwise be dividend money, I want you to send my part back on a pro rata share because I do not agree with your share that was in the paper." No. What is the procedure if a stockholder has a beef against a company? He cannot just say, "I want my part of that back." What he does, if he does not like the ads, he goes to the stockholders' meeting and he gets a majority vote to agree with his opinion, if he can do so.

Similarly, inside the Government, it would appear to me that Government employees who join the union on a voluntary basis, completely voluntary, can do exactly the same thing. These unions that are voluntary unions inside Government cannot force anybody to join. Government employees can go to meetings and change the internal way that union operates if they can get the votes. These unions operate on a majority vote of their members.

Why is that not adequate? There is no infringement of rights here.

Let us look at the costs. If we went ahead with the costs put forward by my distinguished colleague from Kentucky, we have some 3 million Government employees I believe. The mailing he suggests would have to go to every one of them every year. Let us say the cost of postage being what it is right now at 25 cents, I guess that means we would have some $750,000 cost just to do the mailing every year. It costs at least that much again to prepare the letters, have them printed, and have them sent out.

I guess we are probably asking for $10.5 million, and for what purpose? I do not see it really accomplishes that much.

Let me add that at the hearings we had where people came in and expressed themselves who were in opposition to S. 135, not a single person, to my memory, and I was at all of the hearings, brought up anything like this. Nothing was even brought up that indicated that there is any problem at all. I would think if this is such a major issue that this would have been brought up at those hearings.

Mr. President, I further say to my distinguished colleague from Kentucky that title II deals with coercion. I support very fully that same feeling he has that coercion should absolutely not be permitted in any way, shape, or form. But I would also submit that is covered in the bill in that you cannot coerce anybody for any reason period, and that is it. It is illegal to do that. So, I do not know whether we need to repeat it again in title II. I do not believe we do.

As I indicated earlier, we are still studying the proposal here. But I wanted to make these few remarks on it from the review that I have made of the proposal by the Senator from Kentucky so far.

Mr. President, staff just gave me a copy of a bill, a copy out of the morning paper, Wednesday, May 9, by Bell Atlantic in which it is basically a political ad. It is lobbying people to support a particular piece of legislation that Senator HOLLINGS has put in. "Mr. HOLLINGS' bill would stimulate more telecommunications breakthroughs, it will promote healthier competition, provide better phone service"; a lengthy article here on the page, strictly political.

What if somebody does not agree with the Hollings bill and they are a stockholder in Bell Atlantic? Should they be able to go out and say, Bell, send me my pro rata share of that, deduct it or add it on to my next dividend check?

I hardly think so. That is the situation we find ourselves in.

We will continue our study of the amendment. If there are other amendments to be brought forward, we can set this aside and continue with it. As soon as we are prepared to make a more complete statement, I will seek recognition to do exactly that.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL]. This amendment will serve to add additional protection for Federal workers. Further, it will give employees of the Federal Government both the ability to be represented by union leadership at the bargaining table, and independently choose if they want the union to represent them in the political arena.

The Federal worker, I believe, deserves the freedoms the Hatch Act reform bill seeks to give them. However, we must make these freedoms equitable. Due to a unique situation that exists within the Federal work force, many workers have no choice but to accept collective-bargaining representation by union officials. Workers may choose to join a union because of this negotiating power—the choice to do so being a personal one—but those choosing against such an option must not be penalized.

The dues paid to the union are used to represent the worker at the bargaining table, but additionally, they are often used to further the union's political agenda. A Federal employee wanting to have a grievance mediated may be forced to utilize union services, and because of that may join a labor organization. However, the civil servant may not agree politically with the union that represents him or her at the negotiating table. Because of the monopoly status the unions enjoy in this area, the individual civil servant should have the right to join that union, but maintain the right to choose what political causes he or she wishes to financially support.

Additionally, this amendment adds important language to S. 135 to explicitly prohibit any form of political coercion of Federal civil servants by union officials. I believe that both proponents of the bill and those opposed to this legislation agree that we must take every step to ensure that coercion be eradicated from the Federal workplace. This amendment takes important steps to give our civil servants the security of knowing that any person who attempts to coerce them, either union or Government official, will face severe penalties.

Mr. President, the civil servants of this country are vital to our Nation's continued well being and prosperity. Their importance cannot be underestimated, and they should not be penalized for serving our Nation. S. 135 seeks to restore to these individuals certain freedoms that the private sector now enjoys. This amendment furthers that goal, and I believe is important to make sure that we do not cause unforseen and inappropriate pressures in our Federal work force. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and ensure that the civil servants of our Nation are given the opportunity to work in an environment free of coercion and one that cherishes the freedom of choice.

Mr. McCONNELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. McCONNELL].

AMENDMENT NO. 1591, AS MODIFIED

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I send a modification amendment to the desk. This modification will replace the previous amendment entirely. It will not change the substance of the amendment. It is purely procedural in nature.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, would the Senator yield for a moment for a parliamentary inquiry? Was the agreement last night that we would proceed to campaign finance reform at 11:45? Was that set aside, or have we gone beyond the time?

Mr. McCONNELL. There was an understanding, if I may.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was an understanding, not an order.

Mr. GLENN. I gather we are not proceeding to campaign finance reform at 11:45. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is an understanding. The Senator from Kentucky does have the right to modify the amendment. The amendment is so modified.

The amendment (No. 1591), as modified is as follows:

On page 4, after line 2 strike through line 21 and insert the following:

"§ 7323. Political activity authorized; prohibitions

"(a) An employee may take an active part in political management or in political campaigns, except an employee may not—

"(1) use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with or affecting the result of an election;

"(2) knowingly solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution from any person, unless such person is—

"(A) a member of the same Federal employee organization;

"(B) not a subordinate employee; and

"(C) the solicitation is for a contribution to the multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4))) of such Federal employee organization; or

"(3) run for the nomination or as a candidate for * * *

"(b) No employee may knowingly solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution from any person for a contribution to the multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4)) of the employee's Federal employee organization, unless that organization—

"(1) provides, at least once annually, to all employees within the labor organization's bargaining unit or units (and to new employees within 30 days after commencement of their employment) written notification presented in a manner to inform any such employee—

"(A) that an employee cannot be obligated to pay, through union dues or any other payment to a labor organization, for the political activities of the labor organization, including, but not limited to, the maintenance and operation of, or solicitation of contributions to, a political committee, political communications to members, and voter registration and get-out-the-vote campaigns;

"(B) that no employee may be required actually to join any labor organization;

"(C) that an employee who elects to be a full member of the labor organization and pay membership dues is entitled to a reduction of those dues by the employee's pro rata share of the total spending by the labor organization for political activities;

"(D) that the cost of the labor organization's exclusive representation services, and the amount of spending by such organization for political activities, shall be computed on the basis of such cost and spending for the immediately preceding fiscal year of such organization; and

"(E) of the amount of the labor organization's full membership dues, initiation fees, and assessments for the current year; the amount of the reduced membership dues, subtracting the employee's pro rata share of the organization's spending for political activities, for the current year; and the amount of the agency fee for the current year.

"(2) the labor organization provides (for purposes of verifying the cost of such labor organization's exclusive representation services) to all represented employees an annual examination by an independent certified public accountant of financial statements supplied by such organization which verify the cost of such services, except that such examination shall, at a minimum, constitute a "special report" as interpreted by the Association of Independent Certified Public Accountants.

"(3) the labor organization maintains procedures to promptly determine the costs that may properly be charged to agency fee payors as costs of exclusive representation, and explains such procedures in the written notification required under subparagraph (1).

"(4) (A) a labor organization that does not satisfy the requirements of subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3) shall finance any expenditures specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (2) of 316(b) of the Federal Election Campaign Act only with funds legally collected under this Act for its separate segregated fund.

"(B) for the purposes of this paragraph, subparagraph (A) or paragraph (2) shall apply only with respect to communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of any clearly identified candidate for elective public office."

SEC. 7323A. PROTECTION OF EMPLOYEES FROM POLITICAL COERCION BY LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) AMENDMENT OF TITLE 18 UNITED STATES CODE.—Chapter 29 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sections:

"SEC. 611. POLITICAL COERCION BY LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

"(a) It shall be unlawful for an officer, employee, or agent of a Federal employee labor organization to intimidate, threaten, coerce, or address an order to, or to cause to be expended any dues, fees, or assessments levied on the membership of the labor organization for the purpose of intimidating, threatening, coercing, or addressing an order to—

"(1) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit for the purpose of interfering with the right of an employee to vote as the employee may choose;

"(2) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit for the purpose of causing an employee to vote or to refrain from voting for any candidate or any measure in an election;

"(3) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit to make or refrain from making a contribution to a candidate, political party, or committee, or political cause of any kind; or

"(4) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit to engage in or refrain from engaging in any legal form of political activity."

"(b) A person who violates subsection (a) shall be fined not more than $5,000, imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 29 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"611. Political coercion by labor organizations."

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, if I may——

Mr. GLENN. That was not part of this. This was to set aside the Hatch Act considerations as I understood it at 11:45 to 12:15 so that the campaign finance reform from the Republican side could be introduced on the floor. I do not want to impinge on that time, if they are ready to proceed. It is my understanding that was the agreement last night.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the anticipated procedure with the understanding.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the distinguished minority leader is on his way back and should be here within a very few minutes. So we could just proceed.

Mr. GLENN. The distinguished minority leader has arrived.

Mr. ROTH. I yield the floor.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. METZENBAUM].

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the distinguished minority leader and our colleague from Kentucky—do I understand this will take until 12:15 or will it go longer?

Mr. DOLE. If the Senator will yield, we had 30 minutes. It will probably take until about 12:30 now, at least. We are late getting started.

Mr. METZENBAUM. There are some others who want the floor.

Mr. DOLE. Does the Senator want to cosponsor our package? I will let him speak first.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I want to consider that.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the majority leader is on his way back. I do not think he will have any objection to extending the time since we are starting late. But I will wait until he returns. He can make the request. I would be happy to yield the floor. I think other Senators have been waiting, Senator PACKWOOD, and Senator MCCONNELL. I will speak last.

Mr. MCCONNELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SHELBY). The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Will the Senator from Kentucky be willing to yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Ohio for the the purpose of introducing a bill at this point?

Mr. MCCONNELL. I am happy to yield.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. METZENBAUM pertaining to the introduction of S. 2602 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

COMPREHENSIVE CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM ACT OF 1990

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today on behalf of myself, the Republican leader, Senator PACKWOOD, Senator NICKLES, and 30 other Senators to introduce the most comprehensive campaign finance reform bill ever introduced in the history of our country, including 34 different points.

Mr. President, covering some of the highlights of this measure, there is in the proposal that we are introducing today a complete ban on contributions from political action committees. Mr. President, this puts the PAC's out of business.

If the American people have an interest in this issue, and we think they do, their interest is in special interest funding of political campaigns. This measure is the most comprehensive measure ever introduced on this subject.

In addition, the American people are concerned that money that comes into campaigns be limited and disclosed. One of the great scandals of American politics has been the so-called soft money, particularly, Mr. President, those who hide behind the Tax Code and who benefit from that tax exemption and go out and get involved heavily in political campaigns.

The bill we are introducing today would ban non-party soft money entirely. Also, Mr. President, the bill we introduce today draws a distinction between those who can vote for a candidate and those who cannot, in terms of the amount of their individual contribution. This bill makes that distinction and lowers the limit on contributions from those outside of the candidate's State.

In addition, this bill eliminates Keating-style bundling and also closes the millionaires' loophole. All of us have been frustrated, on both sides of the aisle, by the growing tendency in recent years of people of great wealth simply writing out a check for political campaigns. It is not possible to entirely eliminate that problem, because there is a constitutional difficulty in eliminating millionaire contributions, but there are other ways of getting at it.

This bill requires that if a candidate is going to spend more than a quarter of a million dollars of his own money in a race, he must so notify the FEC, and thereby his opponents, who are given then the opportunity to raise up to $5,000 per individual for their own campaigns. Further, if an individual expects to spend in excess of $1 million on his own behalf, then there would be no individual contribution limits whatsoever for his opponents.

In addition, Mr. President, this bill has a significant broadcast discount, from 50 to 70 percent for every contested race for television and radio time. It is simply not possible to get a handle on campaign costs without a significant reduction in the rates for broadcast time.

This bill requires that 60 days before the general election and 45 days before the primary candidates be allowed to buy fixed time, that is time that will certainly run at the time purchased for the lowest time cost available during that period.

I might say, Mr. President, that later as this debate unfolds, I expect other suggestions will be offered by others to further lower the cost of broadcasting to political candidates. I think those ought to be looked at very carefully.

The final point I make, of the 34 points contained in this bill, this bill provides a ban on franked mail during election years. No franked mail whatsoever during election years.

So we, as the campaign finance debate unfolds, some time later this week, or next week, will be looking forward to debating all of these issues that will be before us. The Republicans are in large measure unified behind the bill that we introduced today. And at this point I yield to my friend and colleague from Oregon [Mr. PACKWOOD].

Mr. PACKWOOD. Let us look at what we are trying to achieve by campaign reform. What are the charges now made against campaigns? One, PAC's, political action committees, are allegedly evil. They are controlling money, they are getting an ear, they have an unfair advantage, and they are skewing honesty in politics. That is a charge that is made. Two, sewer money, or soft money, as some people call it, money outside of the spending limitations, goes to State parties, and it is all lumped together in some people's minds as sewer money, but it is not subject to any serious restraints under present law. That is the charge.

Three, bundling. You can give me $1,000 for my primary campaign. You can give me a thousand for my general election, too. If you as a PAC officer go around to everybody in your industry and gather up $100,000 in checks and hand me $100,000, you have not violated the $1,000 limit, because they are 100 separate checks at $1,000 apiece from different people. Bundling is an evil.

Four, campaign costs. Campaign spending costs too much, or we spend too much. There is that charge. We are too beholden to out-of-State people. There is that charge.

Now, without arguing as to whether or not those charges are right or wrong, the charges are there. So what does this bill do to address these charges?

One, PAC's are out. They cannot give to candidates. They cannot give to parties. They are out of business.

Two, bundling is prohibited. It is easy enough to define and prohibit it. It is out. You can no longer go around to an industry and collect a $100,000 check and give a candidate $100,000.

Three, sewer money is out. Four, campaigns are too expensive. This bill puts a $500 limit on out-of-State contributions. That is going to be a serious impingement for some people from smaller States where they do not have a sufficient population base to raise sufficient money in a campaign to run a campaign. We are saying they are going to have to do that. Henceforth, you have to be more proportionately dependent than you used to be on people in your State. Those in-state contributions can still give $1,000 each.

What is going to be the effect of this? If you have no PAC's, no bundling, no soft money, and lower the out-of-State limit to $500, the inevitable result, at least for the next two or three election campaigns will be that spending is going to go down, because almost everyone in the Senate and Congress to this point has taken the easy way to raise money—the easy way is to raise it in large contributions from relatively few people or few PAC's. We are going to be forced now under this bill to go out, and I think it is a good step, and raise money in smaller amounts from many, many more people.

We are going to have to broaden our base. Instead of $5,000 PAC contributions from one source, we will have to seek much smaller contributions from many sources. If you want the $5,000 now that you used to get from PAC's, you are going to have to find five individuals who will give you $1,000 apiece to make up $5,000. My hunch is you are going to have a lot of people give you $50 apiece. When you finally get 100 of them, it adds up to $5,000—but you have to involve 100 people in your campaign.

Now, what is the criticism of what this bill does? Because if anyone were to look at it on its face they would say, "Well, you get rid of PAC's, you get rid of bundling, you reduce spending costs for the campaign, you reduce the contributions from out of State." It does all those things.

Where does the criticism come from? And in fairness the criticism is partisan because this bill does not have spending limits in it; it does not have some kind of enforceable mechanism whereby, on this side of the aisle, we are forced to give up some of our rights now in exchange for accepting a spending limit.

I would maintain there is in this bill a de facto reduction in spending; that is what people want, a reduction in spending. I have been in this business of elective politics since 1962. I am willing to stake my knowledge of politics on this fact. If this bill passes, less money will be spent on Senate campaigns in 1994 and 1996, less money will be spent in those years for Senate campaigns on average than will be spent in 1992.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a quick observation?

Mr. PACKWOOD. Yes.

Mr. McCONNELL. That will continue the trend that has already begun.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Yes.

Mr. McCONNELL. Because spending will be down all right, down from 1986 to 1988. The Senator is on the mark; that will decline campaign spending.

Mr. PACKWOOD. I think it will take us, in my judgment, four or five elections to get back to the spending level that we had in 1988. If we do get back to it, the only way we will get there is by broadening the base so dramatically that we are raising literally the same amount of money from 100,000 people that we used to raise from 20,000 people, the same amount of money. But what it means is that you will have found lots and lots of people to give you $20, $30, $40. If they will give you $20 or $30 or $40, they will also probably come out and man a phone bank one night a week or help put up lawn signs on Saturday afternoon, and probably help register voters in their office. That is not wrong. That is good for politics. I think if we could get 30 million to 40 million people—and I think we can, 30 or 40 million people in this country to give $20 or $30 or $40, to a campaign—that is a step in the right direction, not a step in the wrong direction. You are hard pressed to say you are beholden to some special interest when the special interest is 20,000 or 30,000 or 40,000 people giving you $20 apiece. There is no uniform, single interest in those 20,000 or 30,000 or 40,000 people. You have diverse interests. You have some that are pro choice on abortion and some antichoice on abortion. You have some who work for mutual insurance companies and some work for stock insurance companies and have opposing views on how insurance companies should be taxed.

Some work for trucking outfits and some work for railroads, and each thinks the other side has advantage and all of them, if they have given $20 or $30 or $40, may hope that you vote with them. This situation cannot be likened to PAC giving, some 20 or 30 PAC's each of which may give up to $5,000, and all of which have roughly a similar interest.

So the only objection to this bill that I have found, because I think I can say this in fairness and honesty, the only objection one could possibly find to this bill is that it does not have spending limits in it. That is a touchstone difference, and make no mistake, spending limits are dependent on some kind of Federal largess. It may not necessarily be money directly from the Treasury, but it will be some form of Federal largesse in exchange for agreeing to spending limits: It will be reduced mail rates or free television time or free something else if you agree to the spending limits. Public financing of campaigns whether it be direct or indirect, is not in this bill, and that is a touchstone difference between the Republicans and the Democrats. The Republicans are very adverse to asking the taxpayers to fund our campaigns when we are running $150 billion deficits. Whether it is direct payment from Treasury, as in Presidential campaigns, or subsidized mailing rates, it is still money from the Government. When we are running $150 billion deficits, we should not be asking on top of that for taxpayers to fund our campaigns, either fully or partially.

Democrats, by and large, say the only way you can have meaningful reform is if you have some quid pro quo: Agree to spending limits in exchange for the incentive of Federal Government largess, a big incentive it turns out to induce a candidate to adhere to those spending limits.

I contend, and I will say this once more, when you have gotten rid of PAC's and sewer money, when you have gotten rid of bundling and lower the out-of-State contribution limit to $500, the effect will be to drive campaign spending down.

And it will stay down until we learn how to raise the equivalent amount of money that we spend now from hundreds of thousands of tens of millions of people instead of a few people in large amounts.

So I would hope that the Senate would accept this. Apart from this spending limit issue, I think most people of good conscience can say these reforms go in the right direction. I would hope that this reform would not get hung up on the sole issue of spending limits and the assertion that if there are no spending limits, there will be no reform at all.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my formal statement be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I rise today to join with my colleagues in introducing a very far-reaching, comprehensive campaign finance reform bill. This measure goes farther than any other reform proposal to date. It achieves what I believe should be the goals of campaign finance reform. Those goals are twofold.

First, if PAC's are an evil, then ban PAC contributions altogether. If the special interest spending is troublesome, and more and more people across the nation seem to think it is, then we can do something about it. That something is, in my view, doing away with PAC contributions. Whatever may have been the public perception of campaign financing in the past, there is today widespread feeling that elections are principally financed by groups who have a very narrow interest as opposed to a broad public interest. In a democracy, the public must perceive the law to be fair or confidence is severely undermined. The obvious way to respond to the growing perception that Members of Congress are "bought and paid for" by the special interests is to eliminate all PAC contributions—corporate, labor, trade association, and independent. The bill we are introducing today does this.

Second, any campaign finance reform bill should encourage massive participation in campaigns. You don't accomplish this with expenditure limits. Such limits simply drive a candidate to raise money in the least expensive, quickest way possible and with the least effort. The candidate contacts a minimal number of contributors who are able to give the largest amount until the contribution limits are reached. I don't think this is what we want to achieve. Our goal should be to encourage millions of people to give small financial contributions directly to campaigns. If we can encourage 10 to 20 million people to give $5, $10, or $50 directly to a campaign, we will ensure the massive voter participation we are trying to achieve. While the bill before us does not go as far as I would like in this regard, it is a good start. We cut in half (from $1,000 to $500) the individual contribution limit for out-of-state contributions. The in-state individual contribution limit is left unchanged at $1,000.

I do not believe most candidates have explored the extent to which they can finance a campaign through small contributions. In every instance where candidates have tried to collect small contributions, they have succeeded. In my campaign for re-election in 1986, I had over 161,000 contributions—95 percent of those were contributions of $50 or less.

The challenge, then, is to create a device that will seek to make congressional campaigns more competitive, less dependent on large contributors, and financed by a broader segment of the population. This bill provide the means by which to accomplish this. If we force candidates to finance their campaigns with thousands and thousands of small contributions, then the candidate will have to go door to door; they will have to be involved at the grassroots level.

Ironically, the candidates this will favor the most are not incumbent United States Senators or Representatives, who of necessity must spend most of the year in Washington, DC. Rather it will favor their challengers, who can stay in the state all year long, who will have a good base of support, and who will have hundreds of followers who believe in them and will help them raise money through small donations. The link between voters and candidates is strengthened by this grassroots approach. Candidates are made aware of voters' concerns and are hence more responsive once elected. The bill we are introducing today puts people back into the political process.

In addition, the bill contains a number of other sweeping and, I believe, very necessary reforms. We get rid of soft money contributions. We limit bundling and independent expenditures. We eliminate the "millionaire's loophole." A candidate should work hard to get elected. He or she should earn the seat.

What we really want to accomplish with campaign reform legislation is voter participation, a galvanization of grassroots volunteers, and money raised in small amounts. This would be good for the voters, good for our states, good for politics, and good for challengers who are in local politics in our home states. you than have every benefit without having to resort to PACs, soft money or bundling. At the same time, you are able to run a successful campaign without one penny of public funds.

Mr. President, it is time to put aside partisan differences and ambitions and correct the flaws in our campaign finance system. There is genuine bi-partisan agreement on a number of the proposed solutions. The time has come, and I believe we have the commitment, to enact comprehensive, meaningful reform, reform which will foster competition and encourage broad-based individual participation in our nation's political process.

Mr. PACKWOOD. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I rise today in conjunction with our colleagues, Senators DOLE, MCCONNELL, and PACKWOOD, and others in support of the bill we are introducing which is significant campaign reform.

I might note I would venture to say that every Senator has said, "Yes, I am for campaign reform." But that is where the similarities cease. The Republican bill, which we are introducing—I call it the Republican bill because we do not have any Democrats on it yet. I hope we will. It is significant campaign reform. It does ban PAC's. I have heard Common Cause and others say, wait a minute, we have too much special interest money, and too much of that money is all biased toward incumbents. I looked at the figure in 1988, the PAC's, the PAC community gave $118 million to incumbents. They gave $18.7 million to challengers. That is about a 6-to-1 ratio for incumbents. We talked about it.

Under the Democrat bill, they do not reduce the amount of money PAC's can give. They give $5,000 per election, that would be $10,000. Republicans said ban them. Some people say it is unconstitutional. We also put a provision if determined unconstitutional and we reduce the amount PAC's can give from $5,000 to $1,000, the same amount an individual can give. So we would significantly reduce the amount of money that PAC's are giving which would again restore some balance for challengers. But we make some other changes, too.

We reduce the amount of money that out-of-State persons can give to one half. They can only give $500 per election, $500 for primary, $500 for the general. Right now they can give $1,000. So that would reduce a lot of out-of-State special interest fundraisers.

Again, incumbents have the power or the authority to command, and very few challengers do. So that would reduce some of the special interest money.

Then we go a giant step further—and this is a very significant reform in this Senator's opinion, one of the most important—we ban unsolicited mass mailings in an election year.

If my colleagues have paid any attention whatsoever to the cost of mass mailings, this is a very significant, very real reform that needs to happen if we want to allow challengers a real chance at winning a seat to the U.S. Congress or to the U.S. Senate.

In 1988, $113 million were spent on mass mailings. Again, in an election year we have mass mailings pouring out. In the House they are building new buildings to house new printers. It costs millions of dollars to crank out the mail. So we need to limit mass mailings, particularly in an election year, so they cannot be abused by incumbents. We do that in our bill.

We either ban PAC's or limit PAC's. We cut the amount of money that can be raised from individuals out of State by one half. We ban mass mailings in election years. Those are real reforms. I think Common Cause and people who are really interested in reforms should take a look at that proposal and say, "Yes, that is a good idea; let us do it."

We also ban soft money. We ban soft money. I have heard some people use the term sewer money. I do not call it that, but we do ban undisclosed, unreported, undocumented money. We require all of those contributions to be documented. We require all of them to be disclosed.

It is interesting. In the Democrat bill they ban party soft money, but they do not ban any soft money coming from unions or corporations. That is crazy.

They say, well, we ban PAC money to individuals. But then the PAC's can give money to other parties, to other organizations, and they can contribute. So what the Democrat bill does on PAC's, it allows a gigantic filtering system for hidden money. We should not be trying to hide the money. We should be trying to increase disclosure and we should be encouraging individual contributions, not discouraging individual contributions.

The Republican bill tries to limit PAC's. We try to limit soft money. We try to ban those. We try to cut down on the amount of money from outside interests. The Democratic bill does just the opposite. It tells PAC's, well, you give money to different groups, State party organizations and so on, and they will give it to the candidates. Soft money is fine from unions and corporations; that is fine. They do not have any restrictions on that. I think that is ridiculous.

Then they come with the ultimate insult to taxpayers: Under the Democratic bill they say, we want the taxpayers to pay 90 percent of the cost of general elections. I find that to be an outrage. I think if the taxpayers knew that was a serious proposal they would either laugh or they would be quite upset.

I took a look at what that would do in my State of Oklahoma. It is very interesting. In my State of Oklahoma, if a gentleman or women won the election for the primary, if they raised $55,000 in State and $55,000 out of State, they are going to be the beneficiary of $1 million coming from Uncle Sam. And that does not even count the amount of money for the discounted mail. They get the mail at one-fourth the cost the rest of the citizens in this country pay. What a subsidy that is. We are going to increase the mail cost again.

I find that to be an outrage. To think a person can raise $110,000 and get over $1 million from Uncle Sam, from the taxpayers, to subsidize their campaign, I find that to be an outrage.

Then at the same time they are going to limit what individuals from that Senator or Congressman's district can contribute.

Why should we tell somebody, no, you cannot contribute any more to a campaign, to a person you happen to agree with. We are going to limit that. No, you cannot contribute to them. We are going to take care of it from the public trough. I do not think the public is going to support it.

We are going to have increased deficits, so we will have a fund that does not have any funds there. How are we going to write these $1 million checks when there is no money there? It is not that popular even on the Presidential level. It is estimated we will not be able to finance all the people on the 1992 or 1996 race for President. Yet the Democrats want to have the people pay 90 precent of the general cost of an election.

I do not think it is a serious proposal. I think what they are doing is jockeying for position or something, because they cannot be serious that they want the taxpayers to pay 90 percent of the costs of a general election.

I cannot really think they are serious, that they want the taxpayers to subsidize mail costs for election purposes to where somebody running for office would only have to pay one-fourth the postal expense that other individuals pay. I find the Democrats' proposal to be an outrage and it should not be accepted. It is not even a serious proposal.

On the other hand, the Republican proposal is serious. It does ban PAC's and reduces PAC's from $5,000 to $1,000. It limits out-of-State contributions, cuts that in half. It bans the use of unsolicited mass mailings in an election year. It is a serious proposal, a good proposal, and one I think we should pass this year.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it's the witching hour for campaign finance reform.

Those of us in Congress have talked about reform for quite some time. During the past several months, we have done our share of posturing. And both parties in the Senate have unveiled their own comprehensive reform proposals.

Now it is time for us in Congress—and in the Senate—to either put up or shut up. It is time for us to grab the legislative mop and clean up the campaign finance mess, and clean it up now.

REPUBLICANS WANT REFORM

Despite what you may read in the liberal press, Senate Republicans have always been committed to meaningful campaign finance reform.

Senate Republicans wanted meaningful reform last year when we introduced S. 7. We wanted reform when we introduced the President's bill, S. 1727. And we want reform today.

That is why Senate Republicans last week unveiled the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Act of 1990. And that is why I am joining with 33 of my Republican colleagues in formally introducing the bill today.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE INITIATIVE

The Republican reform initiative is bold, it is broad, and it has a very simple and straightforward goal—to put the beltway special-interest peddlers out of business for good.

Comprehensive in scope and daring in approach, the Republican initiative adopts the following three core principles.

One, political action committees lie at the heart of the special interest problem now plaguing Congress. PAC's are not shy in their efforts to influence Congress on behalf of their own special interest agendas. And, frankly, Congress should not be shy in response.

The Republican initiative zero's-out PAC's from the Federal election process entirely. No exceptions. No loopholes. No PAC's. It is that simple.

I am pleased to see the Senate Democrats following the Republican lead on this issue. But unlike the Democrat bill, the Republican initiative goes all the way, and it does not contain any gaping PAC loopholes.

Not only does the Republican initiative ban PAC contributions to Senate candidates, it bans PAC contributions to House candidates, to the national and State parties, and to the senatorial and congressional committees.

Two, the tide of unreported and unregulated soft money—or sewer money, as it is now fashionably called—continues to rush through the campaign finance pipeline.

The sewer money stinks up the political system, and it links political success with a candidate's coziness with the special interest soft money operators.

The Republican initiative takes a heads-on approach to the soft-money problem by banning soft money outright.

It prohibits all tax-exempt 501(c) organizations from engaging in partisan activities on behalf of a specific candidate for Federal office. It codifies the Supreme Court's Beck decision. It prohibits unions and corporations from engaging in get-out-the-vote campaigns aimed at their members or stockholders. It requires all party committees to disclose their Federal and State accounts with the Federal Election Commission. And it ensures that party activities benefiting Federal candidates are, in fact, financed with hard Federal dollars.

Three, last February, Senator MITCHELL and I commissioned a six-member bipartisan panel of experts to review our current system of campaign financing. One idea offered by the panel was the now famous flexible spending limit, which proposed a cap on PAC money and on money from out-of-State sources.

Like the panel, the Republican initiative recognizes how important it is for campaigns to be financed primarily by the people who ought to count in the campaign process, our constituents. And it recognizes that congressional campaigns should not be financed exclusively by a litter of fat cats living thousands of miles away from a candidate's home State.

As a result, the Republican reform initiative cuts in half—from $1,000 to $500—the maximum contribution that an out-of-State resident may make to a congressional campaign.

By putting a premium on individual in-State contributions, the Republican initiative adopts the approach of the bipartisan panel. And by banning PAC contributions—in addition to reducing the limits on out-of-State contributions—the Republican initiative takes the panel's approach one step further.

OTHER PROVISIONS

Mr. President, the Republican reform initiative contains many other important proposals that will increase competition in politics and reduce the costs of campaigns.

The initiative, for example, incorporates a seed money mechanism that would allow the national parties to match—up to $100,000—the in-State contributions raised by a candidate challenging an incumbent. This proposal will obviously increase political competition by giving viable Senate and House challengers a well-deserved and much-needed jump-start in the early stages of their campaigns.

The initiative incorporates the broadcast discount provision, originally proposed by Senator DANFORTH. This provision would allow candidates to purchase nonpreemptible television time at the cheapest price a television station offers for preemptible time.

No doubt about it, the broadcast discount will significantly reduce the cost of television advertising, which is today the most expensive component of any congressional campaign.

The Republican initiative also contains a provision, originally proposed by Senator DOMENICI, that will close the millionaire's loophole that now exists in the Federal election law.

It goes without saying that no person should be able to buy a seat in Congress. By raising the contribution limits for the challengers of those candidates who intend to finance their campaigns with personal funds in excess of $250,000, this provision will help level the playing field for wealthy and nonwealthy candidates alike. And it will help ensure that the initials M.C. do not become shorthand for the millionaire's club.

PUBLIC FINANCING—NO!

Let me just say a few words about what the Republican bill will not do.

The Republican bill rejects outright the public financing of congressional campaigns.

If history teaches us anything, it teaches us that public financing is bad public policy, and it is very, very expensive.

In case you have not noticed, we have an enormous Federal budget deficit, and it is a deficit that is, unfortunately, not getting any smaller.

During these difficult budgetary times, the American people want their money spent on programs that work. They want their money spent on programs that are tried and tested.

And you can bet the house that the American people are not interested in the taxpayer-financing of politicians.

THE NEED FOR BIPARTISANSHIP

Mr. President, last week, I pointed out that I was optimistic about the propsects for developing a bipartisan reform package, particularly now that both parties have unveiled their respective campaign finance bills.

Today, I remain optimistic, though no one should expect any miracles from the majority leader and myself. There continue to be many disagreements and many different points of view.

We will try our best to bridge these differences in the days ahead, as we get down to the business of serious bipartisan negotiations. It is my hope that these negotiations will produce some common ground upon which we can build a serious, a comprehensive, and a bipartisan, campaign finance reform package.

Mr. President, I thank my colleagues, the Senator from Oklahoma, the Senator from Kentucky, and the Senator from Oregon, and I know others who will not be speaking but will be speaking when the bills are before us, maybe this Friday or Monday or sometime soon.

I think the point is that we have talked about campaign reform on both sides of the aisle for a long time. I am not certain the American people have really followed this closely. I do not know what percent of the American people even contribute to campaigns. But I have a feeling, if they have followed it, they would be wanting us to do something to reform the system. So, I reiterate, I think it is time for us to pick up the legislative mop and try to clean up the mess we are in.

I must say it is going to take a lot of give and take on both sides. We are not close to anything yet.

We think we have a good bill and we are introducing that bill today. We wanted reform last year when we introduced S. 7 and when we introduced the President's bill, S. 1727. And we want reform today.

We did unveil last week what I think has been already addressed here in detail, so I will not repeat them, a comprehensive campaign finance reform plan. We now have 34 sponsors. We hope to have more.

Some of our colleagues who are with us but are not for every provision will not be cosponsors, but I think it is fair to say somewhere around hopefully 40 on this side feel pretty much the same.

I also want to particularly thank the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. McCONNELL] for his tireless efforts, daily, weekly, monthly efforts, the past 2 or 3 years, just to bring us this far. He has been able to work with other Republicans and I hope we can work together now with Democrats in the weeks ahead and see if we can put something together.

Political action committees go to the heart of it. I think it is rather amusing, in a way, we have a bill on the floor that is going to make Federal employees' PAC's bigger. Instead of trying to eliminate PAC's, we are going to try to make it possible to have bigger pots of gold where 90 percent of the money goes to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

We eliminate PAC's, as opposed to the Democratic bill which is sort of a money-laundering bill. You cannot give it to the Senate candidates but you can give it to the committees and the candidates and everybody else in the country so they will end up giving the money to the candidates. We zero out PAC's.

Then there are some political action committees who think this is a bad idea. I would say most PAC's are probably legitimate. They reflect the views of a lot of their members. It was a hard decision to make, but we made a decision.

Maybe there is some way to compromise it. I do not know. But, I say again, our initiative goes all the way and it does not contain any gaping loopholes. We not only ban PAC contributions to Senate candidates but we ban PAC contributions to House candidates, to the national State parties and senatorial-congressional committees. All the Democratic bill does is ban PAC contributions to Senate candidates. Everything else, you can have a PAC or you can contribute to one.

Also, as has been indicated by the Senator from Oregon at length, we do go after the so-called sewer money, the soft money, the sort of money that stinks up the political system. You do not have to disclose it or account for it or tell anybody how much you spent.

I think we will be able to show after we get into debate in a number of States, a lot of money was dumped into States, never reported, never disclosed, and had the same impact as all the other money in the campaign. It had to be reported and it made a difference, changing some of the races. So we take a head-on approach to that.

I also commend at this time the so-called bipartisan panel of experts. Senator MITCHELL picked three. As Republican leader, I picked three. These people deal in campaigns and campaign financing all the time. They have different ideas.

One idea offered by the panel is the now famous flexible spending limit which proposed a cap on PAC money, on money from out-of-State sources. Like the panel, the Republicans recognized how important it is for campaigns to be financed primarily by the people who ought to count in the campaign process, our constituents, and recognized congressional campaigns should not be financed exclusively by fat cats living thousands of miles away from a candidate's home State.

What we try to do is to encourage candidates to go back to their States to raise money, rather than to the New York Times; 90 percent of their money was coming from outside their State. There are a lot of good reasons for that.

In any event, we say in our bill the most you can receive from an individual out-of-State is $500, compared to $1,000 in-State. So we put a premium on in-State contributions.

We adopt the approach of the bipartisan panel, and by banning PAC contributions, in addition to limiting out-of-State contributions, we take the panel's approach one step further.

So we think we have addressed many of the areas that should be addressed. We also have television provisions in our proposal so we can spend less money. It is always kind of interesting to watch during the day some TV stations around the country. They are running spots for Democrats and Republicans in all kinds of races. Then at night, at 10 o'clock, they have an editorial saying we are spending too much on campaigns, when 60 to 70 percent of the money goes to the electronic media. Again, they may have it both ways, but we hope we can reduce the cost of television.

Finally, I think the biggest problem with the Democratic bill is I do not think they can pass it. If we did nothing but stand here, they could not get 51 votes for public financing. Maybe I am wrong, but I doubt it. I do not believe there are that many Democrats who think the only answer is to turn it over to the Federal Government and let the Government pay for it.

That is why we have a $3.2 trillion debt. We have been turning too much over to the Federal Government. Now we want to get the Federal Government involved in funding our campaigns. Despite all the things you can say—that will eliminate all the special interests, eliminate all the temptation—I do not really believe that with the deficit problem we have we are going to end up with public financing. I would be surprised if some of the Democrats, maybe half the Democrats, not many more than half, vote for that.

Let me make the same statement I have made before. When it is all over, it is going to take bipartisanship, and we have to have enough Members on each side of the aisle willing to forget about their own particular situation. If we try to draft a campaign bill that protects 100 Senators, we are not going to have one. So we have to find some broad general guidelines and agree to those.

If it makes it more difficult to raise money or makes it more difficult if you are an incumbent, but makes it easier for a challenger, in my view, those are all positive things. But if we do not bite that bullet, then we probably are not going to be able to put campaign finance reform together.

There are some who do not want it. They may talk about it and say they want it, but they really do not want it. They like the present system.

In my view, you should not have to spend, even in the smallest States, $3 or $4 million to be elected to the U.S. Senate. In some of the other States, it will be $12 million, $15 million, maybe $20 million before long unless we find some way to limit campaign spending.

So, again, I thank my colleagues on this side. I thank the majority leader. He has indicated a willingness after we have a couple day's discussion of these bills, the Democratic bill and the Republican bill, that we then start some negotiations perhaps a small group of four or five Members on each side, to see if they can find common ground or common cause. Common ground I guess is a better word.

In any event, we look forward to working with our colleagues on the other side. Again, I thank my Republican colleagues.

It is my understanding the Senator from Kentucky is now prepared to introduce the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I want to thank the Republican leader and the others who have worked so hard on this issue. Next week when we begin the debate, I think it ought to be clear that Republicans are not in favor of the status quo. We would like to see change. But in the course of the debate, I do think it is important that we deal with facts and not certain mythology that has arisen.

For example, on the floor of the Senate just yesterday, it was said that Senators have to raise $15,000 a week every week. The fact, Mr. President, is that only six Senators have raised an average of $15,000 or more a week since their last election.

In fact, Mr. President, 83 percent of the total campaign receipts of incumbent Senators up for reelection in 1988 was raised in the last 2 years of the cycle.

How many times have you heard around here about the money chase; that people are not doing anything but raising money? The fact of the matter is the only people who are raising any money to speak of are those who are in the last 2 years of their cycle.

We did a study of the class of 1988. As I am sure is typical of any class, 6 percent of the money raised by the class of 1988 was raised in the first 2 years, only 8 percent in the second 2 years, and 83 percent in the last 2 years.

In fact, what is happening, Mr. President, is people are raising money only in the last 2 years before their election, and they are only doing it if they have a challenger, or are running for President.

I think it is important we deal with reality and not myth. The final myth is we will soon be spending, it was said yesterday, $40 million, $50 million, $60 million on campaigns. In fact, campaign spending is going down. It went down 5 percent from 1986 to 1988. The trend line is already down.

So, Mr. President, as the debate unfolds next week, we will try to deal with reality and not mythology.

Mr. President, I rise today to offer the most comprehensive bill which has ever been introduced on the subject of campaign finance reform. I am joined in this effort by 33 of my colleagues who will serve as the initial cosponsors of this legislation.

Republicans are tired of being accused of obstructing reform of our campaign laws. It is an outrageous assertion. As the minority party in both the House and the Senate, we have a very strong interest in rewriting the rules which govern campaigns and elections. However, we believe that any new rules should be developed in a truly bipartisan manner and not through a process where the controlling party perpetuates its majority by trying to railroad a bill through the Congress.

We organized a filibuster against the original Byrd-Boren spending limits bill because it did not represent true reform. Instead, it was designed as a partisan measure which advanced Democratic objectives at the expense of the Republican Party. It was ludicrous for anyone to think that our party would stand by and let that happen to us shortly before the important 1992 elections.

For the last 3 years, Democrats in the Senate have been trying to sell the concept of spending limits as the only way to reform the campaign finance laws. Let me tell you why they are doing this—because it serves the partisan interests of the Democratic Party. And these partisans have been aided in their effort by one tax-exempt organization, Common Cause, whose members act more like they are an arm of the Democratic Party than bipartisan advocates for true reform.

As an incumbent Senator, I should vote for the Byrd-Boren spending limits bill. It is clearly going to ensure that I never have a competitive race again in the State of Kentucky. With a State-by-State spending limit, my opponent will have to run a shorter campaign and will never be able to overcome my name recognition and incumbency advantages. We will see more challengers lose close races and a lot of us will be free to stay in the Senate until we decide it is time for a comfortable retirement.

I don't support a concept which is in my own best interests as an incumbent because I think it is important for us as officeholders to encourage competition in politics. I think it is our responsibility to avoid enacting laws which create barriers to public office. Instead, we should be encouraging people to run for public office and suporting policies which stimulate policital debate and the expression of ideas.

I am not asserting this proposition because I believe that—in every case—a challenger must spend more than an incumbent to win. Rather, the problem is that good challengers must be able to reach voters and convince them it is time for a change. And that is no small task in a race if you are facing an incumbent who has built a statewide organization and has all of the perks of office at his disposal.

The Byrd-Boren spending limits bill will limit the ability of challengers to mount effective campaigns. If the State-by-State limits in that bill applied to the last three election cycles, 8 of the 13 successful challengers who won close races would not be here because they would have had to spend more than the limit assigned to their State. Look at what PAUL SIMON and TOM HARKIN spent in 1984. What TOM DASCHLE, BOB GRAHAM, and DICK SHELBY spent in 1986. And what DICK BRYAN, BOB KERREY, and JOE LIBERMAN spent in 1988. All of these challengers had to exceed the Byrd-Boren limits to win. These races were very close and an arbitrary limit on the challenger's spending ability probably would have saved most, if not all, of the incumbents they were facing.

I think the time has come for us to stop trying to build on those advantages we enjoy as officeholders and try to approach this issue in a sensible and bipartisan manner. The real problem in campaign finance is the source of political money, not how much spending is necessary.

The advocates of the Byrd-Boren bill use the spending limits concept to address every problem in campaign finance. Yet the bill directly curtails Republican fundraising advantages while conveniently excluding from any disclosure or limitations many activities by special interest sources which benefit Democratic candidates.

If we really want to tackle the campaign finance issue, we should be looking at where political money is coming from and where it is being spent. We need to look at:

The special interest influence of political action committees [PAC's];

The soft money activities of unions and other tax-exempt organizations; and

The activities of large out-of-State contributors.

A second area we need to explore is why some Federal races are not competitive. I think this is primarily a problem in the House of Representatives, where the reelection rate is an astounding 98 percent. By contrast, the Senate has been a fairly competitive place. In the last decade, we have sworn in many new Senators and majority control has turned over twice.

Challengers in the House, unfortunately, do not stand a chance. Norman Ornstein has described the process as a 100-yard dash where the incumbent starts from the 50-yard line. The incumbent has a large staff, can mail numerous franked newsletters to everyone in his or her district throughout the election cycle, appears frequently on television, radio, and in the local newspapers to discuss issues of importance, and can raise a huge campaign warchest from special interest groups.

These practices have turned the House of Representatives into the House of Lords. We need to look at measures which will limit incumbent advantages and help challengers mount effective and competitive campaigns.

A third area we need to look at is the cost of campaigns. The reason we have to spend so much time fundraising is primarily because the cost of television advertising is escalating higher and higher.

Let us face it, a modern Senate campaign is a television event. It requires, on average, 50 percent of the budget of a competitive candidate and the cost is skyrocketing. In my race for reelection this year, our media consultant has estimated that my television costs will be double what I spent in 1984 for the same amount of advertising time. We need to deal effectively with this problem so we can reduce the fundraising pressures on everyone.

The Republican alternative is designed to deal with these three areas in campaign finance. The bill is a 30-point plan which combines a variety of legislative ideas, old and new. We even have incorporated almost all of the ideas presented by the bipartisan panel of experts commissioned by Senators MITCHELL and DOLE to offer suggestions for reform.

This bill has three titles. The first title is designed to curtail the influence of special interests on congressional elections. In this title, the bill sponsors propose:

The elimination of all political action committees, including leadership PAC's;

A ban on all soft money from being used by unions, corporations, tax-exempt organizations, and parties to influence a Federal election;

A substantial reduction in the amount, from $1,000 to $500, that an out-of-State individual can contribute to a Senate candidate;

Provisions which were recommended by the Mitchell-Dole panel report to strengthen the role of political parties;

The elimination of Keating-style bundling and fundraising activities; and

More regulation over independent expenditures.

The second title of the bill is designed to increase competition in all Federal elections. In this title, the sponsors propose:

The creation of a seed money mechanism to help qualified House and Senate challengers obtain more party money at an early stage in the campaign;

A provision which prohibits an incumbent from supplementing official office expense accounts with campaign funds;

Special protections for individuals who are facing millionaire candidates;

A prohibition on using the congressional frank for mass mailings during an election year;

Limitations on gerrymandering activities; and

New provisions to combat election fraud at all levels of government.

The third and fourth title of this bill deal with campaign costs and FEC enforcement. The most important provision in this title provides a meaningful discount for television and radio advertising 45 days before a primary and 60 days before a general election. In my opinion, this is the most important provision in the bill because it deals directly with the reason that Senate campaigns are so expensive: the cost of television.

Let me conclude my remarks with several additional observations. First, this bill is the most comprehensive piece of legislation which has ever been offered to solve the problems in campaign finance. We have assembled ideas which have been offered by many Senators, House Members, the administration, campaign finance scholars, and the recent report by the Mitchell-Dole panel of experts.

Second, the provisions of this bill, taken together, demonstrate that Congress can legislate true reform in this area without the need for spending limits. It was not even necessary to adopt the concept of flexible spending limits recommended by the Mitchell-Dole panel. Instead, we decided to limit more directly the two less-favored sources of political money which would be capped by flexible spending limits: PAC's and out-of-State money. Rather than establish a large limit on how much of a candidate's money can be derived from these two sources, we have abolished one source completely—PAC's—and have reduced by one-half the contribution limit for out-of-State donations.

Finally, this bill is an attempt at a bicameral solution to the campaign finance issue. I think everyone recognizes that we should not have two separate campaign finance systems in the Congress. We have tried to address certain issues which are unique to the House in addition to proposing a comprehensive plan for our own institution. I will not say we have drafted perfect solutions to every problem, but this bill can serve as a useful starting point for what I hope will be meaningful bipartisan negotiations in both Houses of Congress. It is time we reform the campaign finance laws and I call on my colleagues in both bodies to stop playing partisan politics with this issue and get on with enacting sensible reforms to our campaign finance laws.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this bill and a section-by-section summary be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2595

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—REDUCTION OF SPECIAL INTEREST INFLUENCE

Subtitle A—Elimination of Political Action Committees From Federal Election Activities

SEC. 101. BAN ON ACTIVITIES OF POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title III of FECA (2 U.S.C. 301 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"BAN ON FEDERAL ELECTION ACTIVITIES BY POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

"SEC. 324. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no person other than an individual or a political committee may make contributions, solicit or receive contributions, or make expenditures for the purpose of influencing an election for Federal office."

"(b) DEFINITION OF POLITICAL COMMITTEE.—(1) Paragraph (4) of section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(4)) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) The term 'political committee' means—

"(A) the principal campaign committee of a candidate;

"(B) any national, State, or district committee of a political party, including any subordinate committee thereof;

"(C) any local committee of a political party which—

"(i) receives contributions aggregating in excess of $5,000 during a calendar year;

"(ii) makes payments exempted from the definition of contribution or expenditure under paragraph (8) or (9) aggregating in excess of $5,000 during a calendar year; or

"(iii) makes contributions or expenditures aggregating in excess of $1,000 during a calendar year; and

"(D) any committee jointly established by a principal campaign committee and any committee described in subparagraph (B) or (C) for the purpose of conducting joint fundraising activities."

(2) Section 316(b)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)(2)) is amended by striking subparagraphs (B) and (C).

(c) CANDIDATE'S COMMITTEES.—(1) Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) For the purposes of the limitations provided by paragraphs (1) and (2), any political committee which is established or financed or maintained or controlled by any candidate or Federal officeholder shall be deemed to be an authorized committee of such candidate or officeholder."

(2) Section 302(e)(3) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 432) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) No political committee that supports or has supported more than one candidate may be designated as an authorized committee, except that—

"(A) a candidate for the office of President nominated by a political party may designate the national committee of such political party as the candidate's principal campaign committee, but only if that national committee maintains separate books of account with respect to its functions as a principal campaign committee; and

"(B) a candidate may designate a political committee established solely for the purpose of joint fundraising by such candidates as an authorized committee."

(d) RULES APPLICABLE WHEN BAN NOT IN EFFECT.—For purposes of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, during any period in which the limitation under section 324 of such Act (as added by subsection (a)) is not in effect—

(1) the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall not be in effect; and

(2) it shall be unlawful for any person that—

(A) is treated as a political committee by reason of paragraph (1); and

(B) is not directly or indirectly established, administered, or supported by a connected organization which is a corporation, labor organization, or trade association, to make contributions to any candidate or the candidate's authorized committee for any election aggregating in excess of $1,000.

Subtitle B—Ban on Soft Money in Federal Elections

SEC. 111. BAN ON SOFT MONEY.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(i) BAN ON SOFT MONEY.—(1) It shall be unlawful for the purpose of influencing any election to Federal office—

"(A) to solicit or receive any soft money; or

"(B) to make any payments from soft money.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'soft money' means any amount—

"(A) solicited or received from a source which is prohibited under section 316(a);

"(B) contributed, solicited, or received in excess of the contribution limits under section 315; or

"(C) not subject to the recordkeeping, reporting, or disclosure requirements under section 304 or any other provision of this Act."

SEC. 112. RESTRICTIONS ON PARTY COMMITTEES.

(a) DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION BY POLITICAL COMMITTEE.—(1) Subsection (c) of section 302 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 432(c)) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "; and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) each account maintained by a political committee of a political party (including Federal and non-Federal accounts), and deposits into, and disbursements from, each such account."

(2) Subsection (b) of section 304 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(b)) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (7), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (8) and inserting "; and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) each account maintained by a political committee of a political party (including Federal and non-Federal accounts), and deposits into, and disbursements from, each such account."

(b) ALLOCATION OF EXPENDITURES FOR MIXED ACTIVITIES.—Title III of FECA, as amended by section 101(a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REQUIRED ALLOCATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS AND EXPENDITURES FOR MIXED ACTIVITIES BY POLITICAL PARTY COMMITTEES

"SEC. 325. (a) REGULATIONS REQUIRING ALLOCATION FOR MIXED ACTIVITIES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the Commission shall issue regulations providing for a method for allocating the contributions and expenditures for any mixed activity between Federal and non-Federal accounts.

"(b) GUIDELINES FOR ALLOCATION.—(1) The regulations issued under subsection (a) shall—

"(A) provide for the allocation of contributions and expenditures in accordance with this subsection; and

"(B) require reporting under this Act of expenditures in connection with a mixed activity to disclose—

"(i) the method and rationale used in allocating the cost of the mixed activity to Federal and non-Federal accounts; and

"(ii) the amount and percentage of the cost of the mixed activity allocated to such accounts.

"(2) In the case of a mixed activity that consists of a voter registration drive, get-out-the-vote drive, or other activity designed to contact voters (other than an activity to which paragraph (3) or (4) applies), amounts shall be allocated on the basis of the composition of the ballot for the political jurisdiction in which the activity occurs, except that in no event shall the amounts allocated to the Federal account be less than—

"(A) 33⅓ percent of the total amount in the case of the national committee of a political party; or

"(B) 25 percent of the total amount in the case of a State or local committee of a political party or any subordinate committee thereof.

"(3) In the case of a mixed activity that consists of preparing and distributing brochures, handbills, slate cards, or other printed materials identifying or seeking support of (or opposition to) candidates for both Federal offices and non-Federal offices, amounts shall be allocated on the basis of total space devoted to such candidates, except that in no event shall the amounts allocated to the Federal account be less than the percentages under subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (2).

"(4)(A) In the case of a mixed activity by a national committee of a political party that consists of broadcast media advertising (or any portion thereof) that promotes (or is in opposition to) a political party without mentioning the name of any individual candidate for Federal office or non-Federal office, amounts allocated to the Federal account shall not be less than—

"(i) 50 percent of the total amount in the case of advertising in the national media market; and

"(ii) 40 percent in the case of advertising in other than the national media market.

"(B) In the case of a mixed activity by a State or local committee of a political party or any subordinate committee thereof that consists of broadcast media advertising (or any portion thereof) described in subparagraph (A), costs shall be allocated on the basis of the composition of the ballot for the political jurisdiction in which the activity occurs, except that in no event shall the amounts allocated to the Federal account be less than 33⅓ percent of the total amount.

"(5) Overhead and fundraising costs of a political committee of a political party for each 2-calendar year period ending with the calendar year in which a regularly scheduled election for Federal office occurs shall be allocated to the Federal account on the basis of the same ratio which—

"(A) the aggregate amount of receipts and disbursements of such political committee during such period in connection with elections for Federal office, bears to

"(B) the aggregate amount of receipts and disbursements of such political committee during such period.

"(c) MIXED ACTIVITY.—(1) For purposes of this section, the term 'mixed activity' means an activity the expenditures in connection with which are required under this Act to be allocated between Federal and non-Federal accounts because such activity affects 1 or more elections for Federal office and 1 or more non-Federal elections.

"(2) Activities under paragraph (1) include—

"(A) voter registration drives, get-out-the-vote drives, telephone banks, and membership communications in connection with elections for Federal offices and elections for non-Federal offices;

"(B) general political advertising, brochures, or other materials that include any reference (however incidental) to both a candidate for Federal office and a candidate for non-Federal office, or that urge support for or opposition to a political party or to all the candidates of a political party;

"(C) overhead expenses; and

"(D) activities described in clauses (v), (x), and (xii) of section 301(8)(B).

"(d) ACCOUNTS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'Federal account' means an account to which receipts and disbursements are allocated to elections for Federal offices; and

"(2) the term 'non-Federal account' means an account to which receipts and disbursements are allocated to elections other than non-Federal offices."

SEC. 113. PROTECTION FOR EMPLOYEES.

(a) CONTRIBUTIONS TO ALL POLITICAL COMMITTEES INCLUDED.—Paragraph (2) of section 316(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)(2)) is amended by inserting "political committee," after "campaign committee,".

(b) APPLICABILITY OF REQUIREMENTS TO LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.—Section 316(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8)(A) Subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (2) shall not apply to a labor organization unless the organization meets the requirements of subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D).

"(B) The requirements of this subparagraph are met only if the labor organization provides, at least once annually, to all employees within the labor organization's bargaining unit or units (and to new employees within 30 days after commencement of their employment) written notification presented in a manner to inform any such employee—

"(i) that an employee cannot be obligated to pay, through union dues or any other mandatory payment to a labor organization, for the political activities of the labor organization, including, but not limited to, the maintenance and operation of, or solicitation of contributions to, a political committee, political communications to members, and voter registration and get-out-the-vote campaigns;

"(ii) that no employee may be required actually to join any labor organization, but if a collective bargaining agreement covering an employee purports to require membership or payment of dues or other fees to a labor organization as a condition of employment, the employee may elect instead to pay an agency fee to the labor organization;

"(iii) that the amount of the agency fee shall be limited to the employee's pro rata share of the cost of the labor organization's exclusive representation services to the employee's collective bargaining unit, including collective bargaining, contract administration, and grievance adjustment;

"(iv) that an employee who elects to be a full member of the labor organization and pay membership dues is entitled to a reduction of those dues by the employee's pro rata share of the total spending by the labor organization for political activities;

"(v) that the cost of the labor organization's exclusive representation services, and the amount of spending by such organization for political activities, shall be computed on the basis of such cost and spending for the immediately preceding fiscal year of such organization; and

"(vi) of the amount of the labor organization's full membership dues, initiation fees, and assessments for the current year; the amount of the reduced membership dues, subtracting the employee's pro rata share of the organization's spending for political activities, for the current year; and the amount of the agency fee for the current year.

"(C) The requirements of this subparagraph are met only if, for purposes of verifying the cost of such labor organization's exclusive representation services, the labor organization provides all represented employees an annual examination by an independent certified public accountant of financial statements supplied by such organization which verify the cost of such services; except that such examination shall, at a minimum, constitute a 'special report' as interpreted by the Association of Independent Certified Public Accountants.

"(D) The requirements of this subparagraph are met only if the labor organization—

"(i) maintains procedures to promptly determine the costs that may properly be charged to agency fee payors as costs of exclusive representation, and explains such procedures in the written notification required under subparagraph (B); and

"(ii) if any person challenges the costs which may be properly charged as costs of exclusive representation—

"(I) provides a mutually selected impartial decisionmaker to hear and decide such challenge pursuant to rules of discovery and evidence and subject to de novo review by the National Labor Relations Board or an applicable court; and

"(II) places in escrow amounts reasonably in dispute pending the outcome of the challenge.

"(E)(i) A labor organization that does not satisfy the requirements of subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) shall finance any expenditures specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (2) only with funds legally collected under this Act for its separate segregated fund.

"(ii) For purposes of this paragraph, subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2) shall apply only with respect to communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of any clearly identified candidate for elective public office."

SEC. 114. RESTRICTIONS ON SOFT MONEY ACTIVITIES OF TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exemption from tax) is amended by redesignating subsection (n) as subsection (o) and by inserting after subsection (m) the following new subsection:

"(n) DENIAL OF TAX-EXEMPT STATUS FOR ACTIVITIES TO INFLUENCE A FEDERAL ELECTION.—An organization shall not be treated as exempt from tax under subsection (a) if such organization participates or intervenes in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for Federal office."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to any participation or intervention by an organization on or after September 1, 1990.

SEC. 115. DENIAL OF TAX-EXEMPT STATUS FOR CERTAIN POLITICALLY ACTIVE ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exemption from tax), as amended by section 114, is amended by redesignating subsection (o) as subsection (p) and by inserting after subsection (n) the following new subsection:

"(o) DENIAL OF TAX-EXEMPT STATUS FOR CERTAIN POLITICALLY ACTIVE ORGANIZATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An organization shall not be treated as exempt from tax under subsection (a) if—

"(A) such organization devotes any of its operating budget to—

"(i) voter registration or get-out-the-vote campaigns; or

"(ii) participation or intervention in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office; and

"(B) a candidate, or an authorized committee of a candidate, has—

"(i) solicited contributions to, or on behalf of, such organization; and

"(ii) the solicitation is made in cooperation, consultation, or concert with, or at the request or suggestion of, such organization.

"(2) CANDIDATE DEFINED.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'candidate' has the meaning given such term by paragraph (2) of section 301 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(2)).

"(B) MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.—The term 'candidate' shall include any Senator or Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress unless—

"(i) the date for filing for nomination, or election to, such office has passed and such individual has not so filed, and

"(ii) such individual is not otherwise a candidate described in subparagraph (A)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending after the date of enactment of this Act, but only with respect to solicitations or suggestions by candidates made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 116. CONTRIBUTIONS TO CERTAIN POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS MAINTAINED BY A CANDIDATE.

(a) CONTRIBUTIONS BY PERSONS IN GENERAL AND BY MULTICANDIDATE POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—(1) Section 315(a)(1)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "candidate and his authorized political committees" and inserting "candidate, a candidate's authorized political committees, and any political organizations (other than authorized committees) maintained by a candidate,".

(2) Section 315(a)(2)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(2)(A)) is amended by striking "candidate and his authorized political committees" and inserting "candidate, a candidate's authorized political committees, and any political organizations (other than authorized committees) maintained by a candidate,".

(3) Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)), as amended by section 101(c), is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(10) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(A), the term 'political organization maintained by a candidate' means any non-Federal political action committee, non-Federal multicandidate political committee, or any other form of political organization regulated under State law which is not a political committee of a national, State, or local political party—

"(A) that is set up by or on behalf of a candidate and engages in political activity which directly influences Federal elections; and

"(B) for which that candidate has solicited a contribution."

(b) CONTRIBUTIONS BY NATIONAL BANKS, CORPORATIONS, AND LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.—(1) Section 316(b)(2) of the FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)(2)) is amended by striking "candidate, campaign committee" and inserting "candidate, political organization (other than an authorized committee) maintained by a candidate, campaign committee,".

(2) Section 316(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)), as amended by section 113(b), is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) For the purposes of paragraph (2), the term 'political organization maintained by a candidate' means any non-Federal political action committee, non-Federal multicandidate political committee, or any other form of political organization regulated under State law which is not a political committee of a national, State, or local political party—

"(A) that is set up by or on behalf of a candidate and engages in political activity which directly influences Federal elections; and

"(B) for which that candidate has solicited a contribution."

(c) DATE OF APPLICATION.—The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply to contributions described in sections 315 and 316 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a and 441b) made in response to solicitations made after January 24, 1990.

Subtitle C—Other Activities

SEC. 121. MODIFICATIONS OF CONTRIBUTION LIMITS ON INDIVIDUALS.

(a) INCREASE IN CANDIDATE LIMIT.—Subparagraph (A) of section 315(a)(1) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "$1,000" and inserting "the applicable amount".

(b) APPLICABLE AMOUNT DEFINED.—Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)), as amended by section 116(a)(3), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(11) For purposes of subsection (a)(1)(A)—

"(A) The term 'applicable amount' means—

"(i) $1,000 in the case of contributions by a person to—

"(I) a candidate for the office of President or Vice President or such candidate's authorized committees; or

"(II) any other candidate or such candidate's authorized committees if, at the time such contributions are made, such person is a resident of the State with respect to which such candidate seeks Federal office; and

"(ii) $500 in the case of contributions by any other person to a candidate described in clause (i)(II) or such candidate's authorized committees.

"(B) At the beginning of 1991 and each odd-numbered calendar year thereafter, the Secretary of Labor shall certify in the same manner as under subsection (c)(1) the percent difference between the price index for the preceding calendar year and the price index for calendar year 1989. Each of the dollar limits under subparagraph (A) shall be increased by such percent difference and rounded to the nearest $100. Each amount so increased shall be the amount in effect for the calendar year for which determined and the succeeding calendar year."

SEC. 122. POLITICAL PARTIES.

(a) ITEMS NOT TREATED AS CONTRIBUTIONS OR EXPENDITURES.—(1) Section 301(8)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(B)) is amended—

(A) in clauses (x) and (xii), by inserting "national," after "the payment by a"; and

(B) in clause (xii), by inserting "general research activities," after "the costs of".

(2) Section 301(9)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(9)(B)) is amended—

(A) in clauses (viii) and (ix), by inserting "national," after "the payment by a"; and

(B) in clause (ix), by inserting "general research activities," after "the costs of".

(b) AGGREGATE LIMITS NOT TO APPLY TO PARTY COMMITTEES.—Section 315(a)(3) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(3)) is amended by inserting "to political committees which are not established and maintained by a national, State, or local political party" after "$25,000 in any calendar year".

SEC. 123. CONTRIBUTIONS THROUGH INTERMEDIARIES AND CONDUITS.

Section 315(a)(8) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(8)) is amended to read as follows:

"(8) For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) Contributions made by a person, either directly or indirectly, to or on behalf of a particular candidate, including contributions which are in any way earmarked or otherwise directed through an intermediary or conduit to such candidate, shall be treated as contributions from such person to such candidate.

"(B) If a contribution is made by a person either directly or indirectly to or on behalf of a particular candidate through an intermediary or conduit, the intermediary or conduit shall report the original source and the intended recipient of such contribution to the Commission and to the intended recipient.

"(C) No conduit or intermediary shall deliver or arrange to have delivered contributions from more than 2 persons who are employees of the same employer or who are members of the same trade association, membership organization, or labor organization.

"(D) No person required to register with the Clerk of the House of Representatives or the Secretary of the Senate under section 308 of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act (2 U.S.C. 267), or an officer, employee or agent of such a person, may act as an intermediary or conduit with respect to a contribution to a candidate for Federal office."

SEC. 124. INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES.

(a) ATTRIBUTION OF COMMUNICATIONS; REPORTS.—(1) Section 318 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) If any person makes an independent expenditure through a broadcast communication on any television or radio station, the broadcast communication shall include a statement—

"(A) in such television broadcast, that is clearly readable to the viewer and appears continuously during the entire length of such communication; or

"(B) in such radio broadcast, that is clearly audible to the viewer and is aired at the beginning and ending of such broadcast, setting forth the name of such person and, in the case of a political committee, the name of any connected or affiliated organization.

"(2) If any person makes an independent expenditure through a newspaper, magazine, outdoor advertising facility, direct mailing, or other type of general public political advertising, the communication shall include, in addition to the other information required by this section—

"(A) the following sentence: 'The cost of presenting this communication is not subject to any campaign contribution limits.'; and

"(B) a statement setting forth the name of the person who paid for the communication and, in the case of a political committee, the name of any connected or affiliated organization, and the name of the president or treasurer of such organization.

"(3) Any person making an independent expenditure described in paragraph (1) or (2) shall furnish, by certified mail, return receipt requested, the following information, to each candidate and to the Commission, not later than the date and time of the first public transmission of the communication:

"(A) Effective notice that the person plans to make an independent expenditure for the purpose of financing a communication which expressly advocates the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate.

"(B) An exact copy of the intended communication, or a complete description of the contents of the intended communication, including the entirety of any texts to be used in conjunction with such communication, and a complete description of any photographs, films, or any other visual devices to be used in conjunction with such communication.

"(C) All dates and times when such communication will be publicly transmitted."

(2) Section 318(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d(a)) is amended by striking "Whenever" and inserting "Except as provided in subsection (c), whenever".

(b) DEFINITION OF INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE.—Paragraph (17) of section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(17)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(17) The term" and inserting "(17)(A) The term"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(B) For the purpose of subparagraph (A), an expenditure shall be considered to be made in cooperation, consultation, or concert with, or at the request or suggestion of, a candidate, authorized committee, or agent, if there is any arrangement, coordination, or direction by the candidate or the candidate's agent prior to the publication, distribution, display, or broadcast of a communication, and it shall be presumed to be so made when it is—

"(i) based on information about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs provided to the person making the expenditure by the candidate, or by the candidate's agents, with a view toward having an expenditure made; or

"(ii) made by or through any person who is, or has been—

"(I) authorized to raise or expend funds on behalf of the candidate or the candidate's authorized committees;

"(II) serving as an officer of the candidate's authorized committees; or

"(III) providing professional services to, or receiving any form of compensation or reimbursement from, the candidate, the candidate's committee, or agent."

(c) HEARINGS ON COMPLAINTS.—Section 309(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(13) Within 3 days after the Commission receives a complaint filed pursuant to this section which alleges that an independent expenditure was made with the cooperation or consultation of a candidate, or an authorized committee or agent of such candidate, or was made in concert with or at the request or suggestion of an authorized committee or agent of such candidate, the Commission shall provide for a hearing to determine such matter."

(d) EXPEDITED JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Section 310 of the FECA (2 U.S.C. 437h) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "It shall be the duty of the courts to advance on the docket and to expedite to the greatest possible extent the disposition of any matter relating to the making or alleged making of an independent expenditure."

TITLE II—INCREASE OF COMPETITION IN POLITICS

SEC. 201. SEED MONEY FOR CHALLENGERS.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 111, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(2), the congressional campaign committee or the senatorial campaign committee of a national political party, whichever is applicable, may make contributions to an eligible candidate (and the candidate's authorized committees) which in the aggregate do not exceed the lesser of—

"(A) $100,000; or

"(B) the aggregate qualified matching contributions received by such candidate and the candidate's authorized committees.

"(2) Any contribution under paragraph (1) shall not be treated as an expenditure for purposes of subsection (d)(3).

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified matching contributions' means contributions made during the period of the election cycle preceding the primary election by an individual who, at the time such contributions are made, is a resident of the State in which the election with respect to which such contributions are made is to be held.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'eligible candidate' means a candidate for Federal office (other than President or Vice President) who does not hold Federal office."

SEC. 202. USE OF CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

Section 313 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 439a) is amended by inserting "(a)" before "Amounts" and inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a), a holder of Federal office may not transfer any amounts received as contributions or other campaign funds to any account maintained for purposes of defraying ordinary and necessary expenses in connection with the duties of such Federal office."

SEC. 203. CANDIDATE EXPENDITURES FROM PERSONAL FUNDS.

(a) Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 201, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k)(1)(A) Not less than 15 days after a candidate qualifies for a primary election ballot under State law, the candidate shall file with the Commission, and each other candidate who has qualified for that ballot, a declaration stating whether the candidate intends to expend for the primary and general election an amount exceeding $250,000 from—

"(i) the candidate's personal funds;

"(ii) the funds of the candidate's immediate family; and

"(iii) personal loans incurred by the candidate and the candidate's immediate family in connection with the candidate's election campaign.

"(B) The declaration required by subparagraph (A) shall be in such form and contain such information as the Commission may require by regulation.

"(2) Notwithstanding subsection (a), if a candidate—

"(A) declares under paragraph (1) that the candidate intends to expend for the primary and general election funds described in such paragraph an amount exceeding $250,000;

"(B) expends such funds in the primary and general election an amount exceeding $250,000; or

"(C) fails to file the declaration required by paragraph (1), the limitations on contributions under subsection (a), and the limitations on expenditures under subsection (d), shall be modified as provided under paragraph (3) with respect to other candidates for the same office who are not described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

"(3) For purposes of paragraph (2)—

"(A) the limitation under subsection (a)(1)(A) shall be increased to $5,000; and

"(B) if a candidate described in paragraph (2)(B) expends more than $1,000,000 of funds described in paragraph (1) in the primary and general election—

"(i) the limitation under subsection (a)(1)(A) shall not apply;

"(ii) the limitation under subsection (a)(2) shall not apply to any political committee of a political party; and

"(iii) the limitation under subsection (d)(3) shall not apply.

The $5,000 amount under subparagraph (A) shall be adjusted each calendar year in the same manner as amounts are adjusted under subsection (a)(11)(B).

"(4) If—

"(A) the modifications under paragraph (3) apply for a convention or a primary election by reason of 1 or more candidates taking (or failing to take) any action described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (2); and

"(B) such candidates are not candidates in any subsequent election in the same election campaign, including the general election, paragraph (3) shall cease to apply to the other candidates in such campaign.

"(5) A candidate who—

"(A) declares, pursuant to paragraph (1), that the candidate does not intend to expend funds described in paragraph (1) in excess of $250,000; and

"(B) subsequently changes such declaration or expends such funds in excess of that amount, shall file an amended declaration with the Commission and notify all other candidates for the same office within 24 hours after changing such declaration or exceeding such limits, whichever first occurs, by sending a notice by certified mail, return receipt requested.

"(6) Contributions to a candidate or a candidate's authorized committees may be used to repay any expenditure or personal loan incurred in connection with the candidate's election to Federal office by a candidate or a member of the candidate's immediate family only to the extent that such repayment—

"(A) is limited to the amount of such expenditure or the principal amount of such loan (and no interest is paid); and

"(B) is not made from any such contributions received after the date of the general election to which such expenditure or loan relates.

"(7) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'immediate family' means—

"(A) a candidate's spouse;

"(B) any child, stepchild, parent, grandparent, brother, half-brother, sister, or half-sister of the candidate or the candidate's spouse; and

"(C) the spouse of a person described in subparagraph (B).

"(8) The Commission shall take such action as it deems necessary under the enforcement provisions of this Act to ensure compliance with this subsection."

SEC. 204. FRANKED COMMUNICATIONS.

(a) AMENDMENT OF TITLE 39, UNITED STATES CODE.—(1) Section 3210(a)(6)(A) of title 39, United States Code is amended—

(A) by striking clause (i) and inserting the following new clause:

"(i) if the mass mailing is mailed during the calendar year of any primary or general election (whether regular or runoff) in which the Member is a candidate for reelection; or"; and

(B) in clause (ii)(II), by striking "fewer than 60 days immediately before the date" and inserting "during the year".

(2) Section 3210(a)(6)(C) of title 39, United States Code, is amended by striking "fewer than 60 days immediately before the date" and inserting "during the year".

(3) Section 3210(a)(6) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (D), (E), and (F) as subparagraphs (E), (F), and (G), respectively; and

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D)(i)(I) When a Member of the Senate disseminates information under the frank by a mass mailing, the Member shall register annually with the Secretary of the Senate such mass mailings. Such registration shall be made by filing with the Secretary of the Senate a copy of the matter mailed and providing, on a form supplied by the Secretary of the Senate, a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed.

"(II) The Secretary of the Senate shall promptly make available for public inspection and copying a copy of the mail matter registered and a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed."

"(ii)(I) When a Member of the House of Representatives disseminates information under the frank by a mass mailing, the Member shall register annually with the Clerk of the House of Representatives such mass mailings. Such registration shall be made by filing with the Clerk of the House of Representatives a copy of the matter mailed and providing, on a form supplied by the Clerk of the House of Representatives, a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed.

"(II) The Clerk of the House of Representatives shall promptly make available for public inspection and copying a copy of the mail matter registered and a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed.

(b) AMENDMENT OF STANDING RULES OF THE SENATE.—(1) Paragraph 1 of Rule XL of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended by striking "less than sixty days immediately before the date" and inserting "during the year."

(2) This subsection is enacted—

(A) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate; and

(B) with full recognition of the constitutional right of the Senate to change the rules at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of the Senate.

SEC. 205. LIMITATIONS ON GERRYMANDERING.

(a) REAPPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES.—Section 22 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses and to provide for apportionment of Representatives in Congress," approved June 18, 1929 (2 U.S.C. 2a), is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (c); and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(c)(1) In each State entitled in the One Hundred Third Congress or in any subsequent Congress to more than one Representative under an apportionment made pursuant to the second paragraph of the Act entitled "An Act for the relief of Doctor Ricardo Vallejo Samala and to provide for congressional redistricting", approved December 14, 1967 (2 U.S.C. 2c), as in effect prior to the date of enactment of this subsection, there shall be established in the manner provided by the law of the State a number of districts equal to the number of Representatives to which such State is so entitled, and Representatives shall be elected only by eligible voters from districts so established, no district to elect more than 1 Representative.

"(2) Such districts shall be established in accordance with the provisions of this Act as soon as practicable after the decennial census date established in section 141(a) of title 13, United States Code, but in no case later than such time as is reasonably sufficient for their use in the elections for the One Hundred Third Congress and in each fifth Congress thereafter.

"(d)(1) The number of persons in congressional districts within each State shall be as nearly equal as is practicable, as determined under the then most recent decennial census.

"(2) The enumeration established according to the Federal decennial census pursuant to article I, section II, United States Constitution, shall be the sole basis of population for the establishment of congressional districts.

"(e) Congressional districts shall be comprised of contiguous territory, including adjoining insular territory.

"(f) Congressional districts shall not be established with the intent or effect of diluting the voting strength of any person, group of persons, or members of any political party.

"(g) Congressional districts shall be compact in form. In establishing such districts, nearby population shall not be bypassed in favor of more distant population.

"(h) Congressional districts boundaries shall avoid the unnecessary division of counties or their equivalent in any State.

"(i) Congressional district boundaries shall be established in such a manner so as to minimize the division of cities, towns, villages, and other political subdivisions.

"(j)(1) It is the intent of the Congress that congressional districts established pursuant to this section be subject to reasonable public scrutiny and comment prior to their establishment.

"(2) At the same time that Federal decennial census tabulations data, reports, maps, or other material or information produced or obtained using Federal funds and associated with the congressional reapportionment and redistricting process are made available to any officer or public body in any State, those materials shall be made available by the State at the cost of duplication to any person from that State meeting the qualifications for voting in an election of a Member of the House of Representatives.

"(k) Nothing in this section shall be construed to supersede any provision of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973 et seq.).

"(l)(1) A State may establish by law criteria for implementing the standards set forth in this section.

"(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting the power of a State to strengthen or add to the standards set forth in this section, or to interpret those standards in a manner consistent with the law of the State, to the extent that any additional criteria or interpretations are not in conflict with this section."

"(m)(1) The district courts of the United States shall have exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine any action to enforce subsections (c) through (l).

"(2) A person who meets a State's qualifications for voting in an election of a Member of the House of Representatives from the State may bring an action in the district court for the district in which the person resides to enforce subsections (c) through (l) with regard to the State in which the person resides.

"(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the district courts of the United States shall have authority to issue all judgments, orders, and decrees necessary to ensure that any criteria established by State law pursuant to this section are not in conflict with this section.

"(4) With the exception of actions brought for the relief described in paragraph (3), the district court for the purposes of this section shall be a three-judge district court pursuant to section 2284 of title 28, United States Code.

"(5) On motion of any party in accordance with section 1657 of title 28, United States Code, it shall be the duty of the district court to assign the case for briefing and hearing at the earliest practicable date, and to cause the case to be in every way expedited. The district court shall have authority to enter all judgments, orders and decrees necessary to bring a State into compliance with this Act.

"(6) An action to challenge the establishment of a congressional district in a State after a Federal decennial census may not be brought after the end of the 9-month period beginning on the date on which the last such district is so established.

"(7) For the purposes of this section, an order dismissing a complaint for failure to state a cause of action shall be appealable in accordance with section 1253 of title 28, United States Code.

"(8) If a district court fails to establish a briefing and hearing schedule that will permit resolution of the case prior to the next general election, any party may seek a writ of mandamus from the United States Court of Appeals for the circuit in which the district court sits. The court of appeals shall have jurisdiction over the motion for a writ of mandamus and shall establish an expedited briefing and hearing schedule for resolution of the motion. Such a motion shall not stay proceedings in the district court.

"(9) If a district court determines that the congressional districts established by a State's redistricting authority pursuant to this Act are not in compliance with this Act, the court shall remand the plan to the State's redistricting authority to establish new districts consistent with subsections (c) through (l). The district court shall retain jurisdiction over the case after remand.

"(10) If, after a remand under paragraph (9), the district court determines that the congressional districts established by a State's redistricting authority under the remand order are not consistent with subsections (c) through (l), the district court shall enter an order establishing districts that are consistent with subsections (c) through (l) for the next general congressional election.

"(11) If any question of State law arises in a case under this section that would require abstention, the district court shall not abstain. However, in any State permitting certification of such questions, the district court shall certify the question to the highest court of the State whose law is in question. Such certification shall not stay the proceedings in the district court or delay the court's determination of the question of State law.

"(12) With the exception of actions brought for the relief described in paragraph (3), an appeal from a decision of the district court under this section shall be taken in accordance with section 1253 of title 28, United States Code. An appeal under this paragraph shall be noticed in the district court and perfected by docketing in the Supreme Court within thirty days of the entry of judgment below. Appeals brought to the Supreme Court under this paragraph shall be heard as soon as practicable.

"(13) For purposes of this section, the term "redistricting authority" means the officer or public body having initial responsibility for the congressional redistricting of a State."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS AND REPEALER.—(1) The first sentence of section 1657 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking "chapter 153 or" and inserting "chapter 153, any action under subsection (m) through (l) of section 22 of the Act entitled 'An Act to provide for the fifteenth and subsequent censuses and to provide for apportionment of Representatives in Congress,' approved June 18, 1929 (2 U.S.C. 2a), or".

(2) Section 141(c) of title 13, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "In circumstances in which this subsection requires that the Secretary provide criteria to, consult with, or report tabulations of population to (or if the Secretary for any reason provides material or information to) the public bodies having responsibility for the legislative apportionment or districting of a State, the Secretary shall provide, without cost, such criteria, consultations, tabulations, or other material or information simultaneously to the leadership of each political party represented on such public bodies. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'political party' means any political party whose candidates for Representatives to Congress received, as the candidates of such party, 5 percent or more of the total number of votes received statewide by all candidates for such office in any of the 5 most recent general congressional elections. Such materials may include those developed by the Census Bureau for redistricting purposes for the 1990 Census."

(3) The second paragraph of the Act entitled "An Act for the relief of Doctor Ricardo Vallejo Samala and to provide for congressional redistricting", approved December 14, 1967 (2 U.S.C. 2c), is repealed.

SEC. 206. ELECTION FRAUD, OTHER PUBLIC CORRUPTION, AND FRAUD IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

(a) ELECTION FRAUD AND OTHER PUBLIC CORRUPTION.—(1) Chapter 11 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 225. Public corruption

"(a) Whoever, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of the honest services of an official or employee of such State, political subdivision, or Indian tribal government shall be fined under this title, or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of a fair and impartially conducted election process in any primary, runoff, special, or general election—

"(1) through the procurement, casting, or tabulation of ballots that are materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent or that are invalid, under the laws of the State in which the election is held;

"(2) through paying or offering to pay any person for voting;

"(3) through the procurement or submission of voter registrations that contain false material information, or omit material information; or

"(4) through the filing of any report required to be filed under State law regarding an election campaign that contains false material information or omits material information, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, being a public official or an official or employee of a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribal government, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of the right to have the affairs of the State, political subdivision, or Indian tribal government conducted on the basis of complete, true, and accurate material information, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(d) The circumstances referred to in subsections (a), (b), and (c) are that—

"(1) for the purpose of executing or concealing such scheme or artifice or attempting to do so, the person so doing—

"(A) places in any post office or authorized depository for mail matter, any matter or thing whatever to be sent or delivered by the Postal Service, or takes or receives therefrom, any such matter or thing, or knowingly causes to be delivered by mail according to the direction thereon, or at the place at which it is directed to be delivered by the person to whom it is addressed, any such matter or thing;

"(B) transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire, radio, or television communication in interstate or foreign commerce any writings, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds;

"(C) transports or causes to be transported any person or thing, or induces any person to travel in or to be transported in, interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(D) uses or causes to use of any facility of interstate or foreign commerce;

"(2) the scheme or artifice affects or constitutes an attempt to affect in any manner or degree, or would if executed or concealed so affect, interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(3) as applied to an offense under subsection (b), an objective of the scheme or artifice is to secure the election of an official who, if elected, would have some authority over the administration of funds derived from an Act of Congress totaling $10,000 or more during the twelve-month period immediately preceding or following the election or date of the offense.

"(e) Whoever deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of the United States of the honest services of a public official or person who has been selected to be a public official shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(f) Whoever, being an official, public official, or person who has been selected to be a public official, directly or indirectly discharges, demotes, suspends, threatens, harasses, or in any manner discriminates against an employee or official of the United States or any State or political subdivision of a State, or endeavors to do so, in order to carry out or to conceal any scheme or artifice described in this section, shall be fined under this title or subject to imprisonment of up to 5 years or both.

"(g)(1) An employee or official of the United States or any State or political subdivision of such State who is discharged, demoted, suspended, threatened, harassed, or in any other manner discriminated against because of lawful acts done by the employee as a result of a violation of subsection (e) or because of actions by the employee or official on behalf of himself or others in furtherance of a prosecution under this section (including investigation for, initiation of, testimony for, or assistance in such a prosecution) may bring a civil action and shall be entitled to all relief necessary to make such employee or official whole. Such relief shall include reinstatement with the same seniority status that the employee or official would have had but for the discrimination, 3 times the amount of back pay, interest on the back pay, and compensation for any special damages sustained as a result of the discrimination, including reasonable litigation costs and reasonable attorney's fees.

"(2) An individual shall not be entitled to relief under paragraph (1) if the individual participated in the violation of this section with respect to which relief is sought.

"(3) A civil action brought under paragraph (1) shall be stayed by a court upon the certification of an attorney for the Government, stating that the action may adversely affect the interests of the Government in a current criminal investigation or proceeding. The attorney for the Government shall promptly notify the court when the stay may be lifted without such adverse effects.

"(h) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'State' means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and any other commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States;

"(2) the terms 'public official' and 'person who has been selected to be a public official' have the meaning set forth in section 201 and shall also include any person acting or pretending to act under color of official authority;

"(3) the term 'official' includes—

"(A) any person employed by, exercising any authority derived from, or holding any position in an Indian tribal government or the government of a State or any subdivision of the executive, legislative, judicial, or other branch of government thereof, including a department, independent establishment, commission, administration, authority, board, and bureau, and a corporation or other legal entity established and subject to control by a government or governments for the execution of a governmental or intergovernmental program;

"(B) any person acting or pretending to act under color of official authority; and

"(C) includes any person who has been nominated, appointed or selected to be an official or who has been officially informed that he or she will be so nominated, appointed or selected;

"(4) the term 'under color of official authority' includes any person who represents that the person controls, is an agent of, or otherwise acts on behalf of an official, public official, and person who has been selected to be a public official; and

"(5) the term 'uses any facility of interstate or foreign commerce' includes the intrastate use of any facility that may also be used in interstate or foreign commerce."

(2)(A) The table of sections for chapter 11 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following item:

"225. Public Corruption.".

(B) Section 1961(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "section 225 (relating to public corruption)," after "section 224 (relating to sports bribery),".

(C) Section 2516(1)(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "section 225 (relating to public corruption)," after "section 224 (bribery in sporting contests),".

(b) FRAUD IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE.—(1) Section 1343 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking "transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire, radio, or television communication in interstate or foreign commerce, any writings, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds" and inserting "uses or causes to be used any facility of interstate or foreign commerce"; and

(B) by inserting "or attempting to do so" after "for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice".

(2)(A) The heading of section 1343 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 1343. Fraud by use of facility of interstate commerce".

(B) The chapter analysis for chapter 63 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the analysis for section 1343 and inserting the following:

"1343. Fraud by use of facility of interstate commerce.".

TITLE III—REDUCTION OF CAMPAIGN COSTS

SEC. 301. BROADCAST DISCOUNT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) in the 45 days preceding a primary election, and in the 60 days preceding a general election, candidates for political office need to be able to buy, at the lowest unit charge, nonpreemptible advertising spots from broadcast stations and cable television stations to ensure that their messages reach the intended audience and that the voting public has an opportunity to make informed decisions;

(2) since the Communications Act of 1934 was amended in 1972 to guarantee the lowest unit charge for candidates during these important preelection periods, the method by which advertising spots are sold in the broadcast and cable industries has changed significantly;

(3) changes in the method for selling advertising spots have made the interpretation and enforcement of the lowest unit charge provision difficult and complex;

(4) clarification and simplification of the lowest unit charge provision in the Communications Act of 1934 is necessary to ensure compliance with the original intent of the provision; and

(5) in granting discounts and setting charges for advertising time, broadcasters and cable operators should treat candidates for political office at least as well as the most favored commercial advertisers.

(b) AMENDMENT OF COMMUNICATIONS ACT.—Section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 315) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(1), by striking "class and";

(2) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (d) and (e), respectively; and

(3) by inserting immediately after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) A licensee shall not preempt the use, during any period specified in subsection (b)(1), of a broadcasting station by a legally qualified candidate for public office who has purchased such use pursuant to subsection (b)(1)."

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Federal Election Commission Enforcement Authority

SEC. 401. ELIMINATION OF REASON TO BELIEVE STANDARD.

Section 309(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(2)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" after "(2)"; and

(2) by striking the first sentence and inserting the following: "Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (B), if the Commission, upon receiving a complaint under paragraph (1) or on the basis of information ascertained in the normal course of carrying out its supervisory responsibilities determines, by an affirmative vote of 4 of its members, that an allegation of a violation or from pending violation of this Act or chapter 95 or 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 states a claim of violation that would be sufficient under the standard applicable to a motion under rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Commission shall, through its chairman or vice chairman, notify the person of the alleged violation. Such vote shall occur within 90 days after receipt of such complaint."

SEC. 402. INJUNCTIVE AUTHORITY.

Section 309(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(2)), as amended by section 401, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(B) The Commission may petition the appropriate court for an injunction if—

"(i) the Commission believes that there is a substantial likelihood that a violation of this Act or of chapter 95 or 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is occurring or is about to occur;

"(ii) the failure to act expeditiously will result in irreparable harm to a party affected by the potential violation;

"(iii) such expeditious action will not cause undue harm or prejudice to the interests of others; and

"(iv) the public interest would be best served by the issuance of an injunction."

SEC. 403. TIME PERIODS.

Section 309(a)(4)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(4)(A)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i) by—

(A) striking ", for a period of at least 30 days,"; and

(B) striking "90 days" and inserting "60 days"; and

(2) in clause (ii) by striking "at least" and inserting "no more than".

SEC. 404. KNOWING VIOLATION PENALTIES.

Section 309(a)(5)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(5)(B)) is amended by striking "may require that the person involved in such conciliation agreement shall pay a civil penalty which does not exceed the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation" and inserting "shall require that the person involved in such conciliation agreement shall pay a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $5,000 or an amount equal to any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation, except that if the Commission believes that a knowing and willful violation of this Act or of chapter 95 or chapter 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 has been committed during the 15-day period immediately preceding any election, a conciliation agreement entered into by the Commission under paragraph (4)(A) shall require that the person involved in such conciliation agreement shall pay a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation."

SEC. 405. COURT RESOLVED VIOLATIONS AND PENALTIES.

Section 309(a)(6) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A) by—

(A) striking "Commission may" and inserting "Commission shall";

(B) striking "including" and inserting "which shall include"; and

(C) striking "which does not exceed the greater of $5,000 or an amount equal to any" and inserting "which equals the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any"; and

(2) in subparagraph (B) by—

(A) striking "court may" and inserting "court shall"; and

(B) striking ", including" and inserting "which shall include"; and

(C) striking "which does not exceed the greater of $5,000 or an amount equal to any" and inserting "which equals the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any".

SEC. 406. PRIVATE CIVIL ACTIONS.

Section 309(a)(6)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)(A)), as amended by section 405, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(i)" after "(6)(A)"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(ii) If, by a tie vote, the Commission does not vote to institute a civil action pursuant to clause (i), the candidate involved in such election, or an individual authorized to act on behalf of such candidate, may file an action for appropriate relief in the district court for the district in which the respondent is found, resides, or transacts business. If the court determines that a violation has occurred, the court shall impose the appropriate civil penalty. Any such award of a civil penalty made under this paragraph shall be made in favor of the United States. In addition to any such civil penalty, the court shall award to the prevailing party in any action under this paragraph, all attorneys' fees and actual costs reasonably incurred in the investigation and pursuit of any such action, including those attorneys' fees and costs reasonably incurred in bringing or defending the proceeding before the Commission."

SEC. 407. KNOWING VIOLATIONS RESOLVED IN COURT.

Section 309(a)(6)(C) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)(C)) is amended by striking "may impose a civil penalty which does not exceed the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation" and inserting "shall impose a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation, except that if such violation was committed during the 15-day period immediately preceding the election, the court shall impose a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $15,000 or an amount equal to 300 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation".

SEC. 408. ACTION ON COMPLAINT BY COMMISSION.

Section 309(a)(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(8)(A)) is amended—

(1) by striking "act on" and inserting "reasonably pursue";

(2) by striking "120-day" and inserting "60-day"; and

(3) by striking "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" and inserting "appropriate court".

SEC. 409. VIOLATION OF CONFIDENTIALITY REQUIREMENT.

Section 309(a)(12)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(12)(A)) is amended—

(1) by striking "$2,000" and inserting "$5,000"; and

(2) by striking "$5,000" and inserting "$10,000".

"(C) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit or prevent the Commission from making information contained in compliance files available to the Attorney General, at the Attorney General's request, in connection with an investigation or trial."

Subtitle B—Other Provisions

SEC. 421. DISCLOSURE OF DEBT SETTLEMENT AND LOAN SECURITY AGREEMENTS.

Section 304(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(b)), as amended by section 112, is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (8), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (9) and inserting a semicolon, and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(10) for the reporting period, the terms of any settlement agreement entered into with respect to a loan or other debt, as evidenced by a copy of such agreement filed as part of the report; and

"(11) for the reporting period, the terms of any security or collateral agreement entered into with respect to a loan, as evidenced by a copy of such agreement filed as part of the report."

SEC. 422. CONTRIBUTIONS FOR DRAFT AND ENCOURAGEMENT PURPOSES WITH RESPECT TO ELECTIONS FOR FEDERAL OFFICE.

(a) DEFINITION.—Section 301(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(A)) is amended by striking "or" after the semicolon at the end of clause (i), by striking the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting "; and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) any gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value made by any person for the purpose of drafting a clearly identified individual as a candidate for Federal office or encouraging a clearly identified individual to become a candidate for Federal office."

(b) DRAFT AND ENCOURAGEMENT CONTRIBUTIONS TO BE TREATED AS CANDIDATE CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)), as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) For purposes of paragraph (1)(A) and paragraph (2)(A), any contribution described in section 301(8)(A)(iii) shall be treated, with respect to the individual involved, as a contribution to a candidate, whether or not the individual becomes a candidate."

SEC. 423. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act or any amendment made by this Act, or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of any other such provision, and the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 424. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided in this Act, this Act and the amendments made by this Act shall become effective on November 7, 1990 and shall apply to all contributions and expenditures made after that date.

THE COMPREHENSIVE CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM ACT OF 1990

By Mr. McConnell (for himself, Mr. Dole, Mr. Packwood, Mr. Bond, Mr. Boschwitz, Mr. Burns, Mr. Chafee, Mr. Coats, Mr. Cochran, Mr. Domenici, Mr. Garn, Mr. Gorton, Mr. Gramm, Mr. Grassley, Mr. Hatch, Mr. Hatfield, Mr. Heinz, Mr. Jeffords, Mrs. Kassebaum, Mr. Lott, Mr. Lugar, Mr. Mack, Mr. McCain, Mr. McClure, Mr. Murkowski, Mr. Nickles, Mr. Roth, Mr. Rudman, Mr. Simpson, Mr. Specter, Mr. Symms, Mr. Thurmond, Mr. Wallop, and Mr. Wilson)

SECTION-BY-SECTION SUMMARY

Section 1. Short Title.—This act may be cited as "The Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Act of 1990".

TITLE I—REDUCTION OF SPECIAL INTEREST INFLUENCE

SUBTITLE A—ELIMINATION OF POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES FROM FEDERAL ELECTION ACTIVITIES

Section 101. Ban on Activities of Political Action Committees in Federal Elections.—This section eliminates all "special interest" political action committees (corporate, union, and trade association PACs). This section also bans all non-connected or ideological PACs and all "leadership" PACs. [Note: if a ban on non-connected PACs is determined to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, the legislation will subject non-connected PACs to a $1000 contribution limit.]

SUBTITLE B—BAN ON SOFT MONEY IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS

Section 111. Ban on Soft Money.—This section bans all "soft" money from being used to influcence a federal election. "Soft" money is the raising and spending of political money outside of the source restrictions, contribution limits, and disclosure requirements of the Federal Election Campaign Act and its regulations.

Section 112. Restrictions on Party Committees.—This section establishes new rules for political party committees to ensure that "soft" money is not used to influence federal elections, including:

(1) the requirement that national, state and local political parties establish a separate account for activities benefiting federal candidates and a separate account for activities benefiting state candidates;

(2) the requirement of full disclosure of all accounts by any political party committee that maintains a federal account; and

(3) the establishment of minimum percentages of federal funds which must be used for any party building program (e.g. voter registration, get-out-the-vote, absentee ballot, ballot security) which benefits both federal and state candidates.

Section 113. Protections for Employees—This section codifies the Supreme Court decision in Beck and provides certain rights for employees who are union members. [S. 1645 (McConnell); S. 1727 (Bush); House Republican Task Force]

Section 114. Restrictions on Soft Money Activities of Tax-Exempt Organizations.—This section prohibits tax-exempt, 501(c) organizations from engaging in any activity which attempts to influence a federal election on behalf of a specific candidate for public office. This section accomplishes this goal by extending to all 501(c) organizations the current prohibition on campaign activity which applies to 501(c)(3) charities. [Note: the effective date for this provision will be September 1, 1990.]

Section 115. Denial of Tax-exempt Status for Certain Politically Active Organizations.—This section restricts tax-exempt organizations from engaging in voter registration or GOTV activities (which are not candidate-specific) if a candidate or Member of Congress solicits money for the organization. [S. 2148 (McConnell)]

Section 116. Contributions to Certain Political Organizations Maintained by a Candidate.—This section restricts federal activities by state PACs created by Members of Congress [S. 2148 (McConnell)]

SUBTITLE C—OTHER ACTIVITIES

Section 121. Modification of Contribution Limits on Individuals.—This section reduces from $1000 to $500 the maximum allowable contribution by individuals residing outside of a candidate's state.

This section also indexes the individual contribution limit ($1000 per election for in-state contributions or $500 per election for out-of-state contributions) for Congressional candidates using the Consumer Price Index; adjustments would be rounded to the nearest $100. [Mitchell/Dole Panel Recommendation (modified)]

Section 122. Political Parties.—This section exempts certain organizational activities (research, GOTV, voter registration) from coordinated or other limitations; requires disclosure and allocation for these activities; and retains the same coordinated expenditure limits for media expenditures. [Mitchell/Dole Panel Recommendation]

This section also exempts contributions to political parties from the $25,000 annual limit. [Mitchell/Dole Panel Recommendation]

Section 123. Contributions Through Intermediaries and Conduits.—This section prohibits "bundling" by registered lobbyists, unions, trade associations, corporations, and other employers. Bundled contributions which are permitted must be made payable to the candidate and disclosed to the candidate and the Federal Election Commission. [Mitchell/Dole Panel Recommendation; S. 1727 (Bush)]

Section 124. Independent Expenditures.—This section requires all independently-financed political communications to disclose the person or organization financing it; requires that disclosure be complete and conspicuous; and requires timely notice to all candidates of the communications' placement and content. [S. 7 (Dole-McConnell-Stevens); House Republican Task Force]

This section also defines "independent expenditure" to prohibit consultation with a candidate or his agents; requires the FEC to hold a hearing within 3 days of any formal complaint of collusion between an independent expenditure committee and a candidate. [S. 7 (Dole-McConnell-Stevens); House Republican Task Force]

Finally, this section creates an expedited cause of action in federal courts for a candidate seeking relief from expenditures which are not "independent". [Mitchell/Dole Panel Recommendation]

TITLE II—INCREASE OF COMPETITION IN POLITICS

Section 201. Seed Money for Challengers.—This section permits political party committees to use a special coordinated expenditure fund to "match" early, in-state contributions by challengers to help begin a campaign. Party committee matching funds would be permitted to a maximum of $100,000 for any House or Senate candidate who is a challenger. [Ornstein (modified)]

Section 202. Use of Campaign Funds.—This section prohibits Members from supplementing their official office accounts with campaign funds. [S. 1727] (Bush)]

Section 203. Candidate Expenditures From Personal Funds.—This section requires Congressional candidates to declare upon filing for an election whether they intend to spend or loan over $250,000 in personal funds in the race; raise the individual contribution limit to $5000 per election from $1000 for all opponents of a candidate who declares such an intention. No limits would apply to individual contributions and expenditures by party committees if a candidate spends more than $1 million in personal funds. [S. ___ (Domenici); S. 7 (Dole-McConnell-Stevens)(modified)]

This section also prohibits candidates from recovering personal funds or loans used in their race from contributions raised after the election. [S. 332 (McConnell)]

Section 204. Franked Communications.—This section prohibits franked "mass mailings" during the election year of a Member of Congress.

This section also requires more disclosure of the use of the frank for unsolicited mailings. [House Republican Task Force]

Section 205. Limitations on Gerrymandering.—This section requires new standards for Congressional reapportionment and redistricting, including the full and fair enforcement of the Voting Rights Act. This provision will: (1) codify current case law and maintain previous statutory requirements that Congressional districts be of equal population, and be contiguous and compact in form; (2) repeal current statutory provisions permitting multi-member Congressional districts and require single-member Congressional districts; and (3) limit the division of county and political subdivision boundary lines, as well as redistricting egregious partisan gerrymandering. [S. 1727 (Bush); House Republican Task Force]

Section 206. Election Fraud and Other Public Corruption.—This section creates a new public corruption statute which codifies current case law and increases the authority of the U.S. Justice Department to combat election fraud at all levels of government. [S. ___ (Biden-McConnell)]

TITLE III—REDUCTION OF CAMPAIGN COSTS

Section 301. Broadcast Discount.—This section allows Presidential and Congressional candidates to purchase non-preemptible time at the lowest unit rate for preemptible time, in the last 45 days before a primary and the last 60 days before the general election. [S. 1009 (Danforth-Hollings); S. 744 (McConnell); S.7 (Dole-McConnell-Stevens)]

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SUBTITLE A—FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY

Section 401. Elimination of Reason to Believe Standard.—This section eliminates the "reason to believe" standard. The Commission, upon receiving a complaint, will have to investigate a complaint if the identity of the complainant is known, and the complaint is sufficient on its face. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 402. Injunctive Authority.—This section provides the FEC the authority to seek injunctive relief to stop certain violations or an impending violation. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 403. Time Periods.—This section streamlines the administrative procedures for a complaint brought by the Commission by eliminating the minimum waiting period of 30 days and lowering the maximum period for post-probable cause conciliation bargaining to 60 days. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 404. Knowing Violation Penalties.—This section increases the penalties for knowing and willful violations which are resolved informally and requires these penalties to be mandatory. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 405. Court Resolved Violations and Penalties.—This section increases the penalty for violations that must be resovled in court and requires the penalty to be mandatory. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 406. Private Civil Actions.—This section permits a candidate, or a person authorized by a candidate, to sue on a complaint whenever the Commission declines to pursue an alleged violation by a tie vote. In such an action, the complainant may bring suit in U.S. District Court and any monetary award would be made in favor of the United States. The prevailing party would collect attorney's fees from the loser to discourage frivolous suits. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 407. Knowing Violations Resolved in Court.—This section increases the penalties for knowing and willful violations resolved in court. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 408. Action on Complaint by Commission.—This section reduces the time period by which the Commission must act on a complaint from 120 to 60 days. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 409. Violation of Confidentiality Requirement.—This section increases the fines for violations of the confidentiality requirement. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 410. Penalty in Attorney General Actions.—This section increases the penalties for violations of the election laws where the Attorney General separately prosecutes. [S. 1655 (McConnell-Reid)]

Section 411. Amendments Relating to Enforcement and Judicial Review.—This section implements several procedural recommendations proposed by the Mitchell/Dole Panel on Campaign Finance Reform. This section will:

Provide the Commission with more authority to informally resolve both complaint- and internally-generated investigations before any determination by the Commission;

Provide respondents with more access to documents provided by third parties in an investigation;

Provide respondents with access to any report submitted to the Commission by the General Counsel after the respondent has filed his or her brief;

Provide respondents with the right to present oral arguments before a Commission finding of probable cause;

Eliminate the ability of the Commission to routinely require admissions by the respondent that a violation has occurred; and

Establish time limits for investigations and require the Commission to publish an index of all investigations which have been concluded. [Mitchell/Dole Panel Recommendation]

Section 412. Tightening Enforcement.—This section repeals the shortened 3 year statute of limitations for violations of the Act and returns to the general 5 year statute of limitations. This section also permits the Attorney General to have access to FEC compliance files pursuant to a criminal investigation or trial. [S. 1727 (Bush)]

SUBTITLE B—OTHER PROVISIONS

Section 421. Disclosure of Debt Settlement and Loan Security Agreements.—This section clarifies FEC rules on campaign credit, loans, and debt settlement. [House Republican Task Force]

Section 422. Contributions for Draft and Encouragement Purposes With Respect to

Elections for Federal Office.—This section 3 defines "contribution" to include donations made to draft or exploratory committees advocating that a clearly identified individual becomes a candidate for federal office. [House Republican Task Force]

Section 423. Severability.—This section provides that if any portion of this Act is found to be invalid, then the remaining portions of the Act shall continue in full force and effect.

Section 424. Effective Date.—This section requires the Act to be effective on November 7, 1990, unless a specific section provides otherwise.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I wish to state my strong support for the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Act of 1990, and to commend the Senator from Kentucky, Mr. MCCONNELL, the Republican leader, Mr. DOLE, and others who worked so very hard to bring together this package of true and meaningful reforms to the way we finance congressional campaigns.

This is progressive legislation. This is a bill that offers real reform, not partisan reform. It is fair to say that this bill makes it tough on Republicans and Democrats alike. That is the way it should be.

Frankly, the bill does not achieve everything I would have sought, but this bill provides some thoughtful changes to solve some very difficult issues.

If Democrats and Republicans in the Senate are truly serious about campaign reform, they should adopt this bill. It is legislation that gives no candidate or party an inherent advantage. Certainly, incumbents would no longer carry any advantage.

I want to discuss several specific initiatives in the McConnell-Dole bill, as many are quite close to provisions that I introduced two months ago in S. 2265, the Grassroots Campaigning and Election Reform Act of 1990.

As this Senator sees it, the most important components of the McConnell-Dole bill are those totally outlawing political action committees [PAC's] and what has come to be called "soft money," but has been more aptly termed "sewer money" by the New York Times.

I support those prohibitions. Both were in my bill. Both are critical if we are to have real campaign reform. Without those prohibitions, I do not see how we can ever pass a reform bill.

Many Members in the Senate—and many so-called experts inside the Washington Beltway—want to put arbitrary spending limits on campaigns, and then provide an option for funding campaigns out of the Federal Treasury. Others want to bully the American taxpayer into direct financing of our campaigns.

I reject both concepts. They are wrong.

It is interesting that most of those same reformers would continue to allow contributions from PAC's, and would allow the open sewer of soft money, by which they have lived for decades, to continue to spew out funds.

With that said, and recognizing the desire of some to use campaign reform for strictly partisan advantage, this Senator believes there are two fundamentals we ought to be able to agree upon:

Removal of the undue influence that could be exercized by PAC's and other big-spending institutions, and Returning campaign financing to our constituents, to the grassroots.

The McConnell-Dole bill achieves both of these goals. It would wring a lot of money out of the system, but in a natural way that leaves all candidates playing on a level field.

Let me describe several of the very basic changes contained in the McConnell-Dole bill, changes I support enthusiastically.

Section 101 eliminates PAC's.

When the American people are asked about campaign financing, they state their strongest concerns over the role of PAC's.

We must listen, and this bill does. Under the McConnell-Dole bill, when an individual wants to give, he or she must give directly to a candidate, no longer using a high-powered intermediary.

Section 111 of the McConnell-Dole bill eliminates soft money, contributions for voter registration drives and other forms of spending designed to assist one party or one candidate.

That prohibition is total and absolute. I support that. Since soft money expenditures, according to some experts, exceeded $500 million—half a billion dollars—during the 1988 election cycle, this prohibition could well be the most significant reform of all. It certainly is critical to my support for this bill or any bill.

Section 203 includes an initiative I suggested several years ago to create a strong disincentive to a superwealthy candidate overloading a campaign with family money.

Under section 203, if a superrich candidate opens the family coffers—committing more than $250,000 to a campaign—the opponent or opponents get a fighting chance with higher per-person giving limit for their donors. This is only fair. Further, section 203 tracks my proposal prohibiting anyone from recovering large loans he or she gave to his or her own campaign.

Section 204 prohibits all franked mass mailings during any candidate's election year, another excellent and progressive step.

Section 205 places restrictions on gerrymandering of House districts, which we all know has been a major factor in the near invincibility of House incumbents over recent years.

The one area where the McConnell-Dole bill fails to go as far as I would like appears in section 121. This is the provision involving individual contribution limits.

Under the McConnell-Dole bill, an in-State donor is permitted to give $1,000, plus inflation, after passage of the bill, per election to each congressional candidate running in the donor's home State. A donor would be limited to a $500 contribution, plus inflation, to any candidate running in another State.

When I introduced S. 2265, I included a flatout prohibition on House and Senate candidates raising money outside their home State. The $500 out-of-State limit in this legislation moves in the right direction, but not far enough. If we are to have out-of-State giving, I would have preferred limits of $100 or $200 per candidate.

Nevertheless, I support the compromise approach in the McConnell-Dole bill. This is an outstanding reform bill, and it deserves the Senate's full support.

This bill clearly restrains campaign spending, limiting sharply the sources of available funds. Importantly, it limits campaign spending in a natural way, not using some arbitrary, federally imposed ceiling.

Nor does this approach use tax dollars to underwrite our campaigns.

I think the time has come for the Senate to adopt legislation that really reforms our system of campaigning. We achieve that goal with this bill.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I still have my leader's time reserved?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has his leader time reserved.

DEFICIT REDUCTION

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I will take a minute and a half to indicate we did meet again this morning with President Bush, the four leaders: my colleague, the majority leader; myself; the Speaker of the House; and the Republican leader in the House, Congressman MICHEL.

We did, again, discuss getting underway an effort to reduce the deficit. It is not going to be easy. I know that some of my colleagues are already positioning themselves to oppose anything that might not suit their fancy.

Let me say on the other side, I hope my colleagues will not lock themselves in. The easiest answer around here is:

"I am not going to do it; we will let somebody else do it; or, I will vote no and hope enough people will vote yes, and nobody is going to blame me for being part of the problem." What I think is, we should be responsible.

Let me say, the President is dedicated to moving ahead with a bipartisan approach on deficit reduction. The four leaders have pledged to the President they were willing to cooperate, as long as it is totally nonpartisan, bipartisan, everything is subject to negotiations, "everything on the table."

That means process reform, which is very important. If we are going to have any meaningful, long-range deficit reduction or any discipline, we have to have process reform.

We must agree on some figure. How much are we going to reduce the deficit? We have not agreed on that yet. Is it going to be multiyear? We have not agreed on that. What do we do with defense? What do we do with mandatory programs? What do we do when it comes to revenues? All those areas have not yet been specifically addressed.

In my view, to make it a very positive package, it must provide different provisions that would, in fact, encourage economic growth.

If we want the support of the American people, we need to make certain that they understand that the primary purpose of the deficit reduction package, in addition to being responsible and being good fiscal policy, is that it is going to provide economic growth, by reducing long-term interest rates and increasing investment and productivity.

So these are the goals that we have in general. We want to increase investment. We want to increase productivity. We want it to be bipartisan. We want to make certain we have substantial deficit reduction. It has to be a bold package so that the American people understand that we finally were serious in the Congress about the most serious problem that has been overlooked for the past dozen years—or swept away every year for the last dozen years.

So I again congratulate the President. It is not an easy choice for him, I might add. If you read the papers or watch television, he is being bombarded from all sides about taxes, taxes, taxes. I think he has decided that the first thing you must consider is future economic growth in America—jobs, opportunities for those who now have jobs, for young people coming into the job market. We need to address inflation. We need to be more competitive around the world. We need to reduce the cost of capital. We need to do all these things that, in my view and the view of the President, hinge on an impressive deficit reduction package.

So I assume there is some talk about a meeting next week of the group of 25 or whatever it will be, 25 or 26, and that will initiate what we hope will be a successful beginning and will have a successful ending, and we have to do it very quickly.

One thing I think frustrates the American people is that Congress never seems to do anything quickly. We take forever; what we might do in 2 or 3 weeks, we do in 2 or 3 months. We do not have that much time. We did not set any deadline. There were no deadlines set. But the leaders agree with the President that we ought to move as quickly as we can if we are going to implement this package and have it have an impact yet this year and the outyears.

So, Mr. President, I thank my fellow leaders in the House and Senate and the President of the United States and the members of my staff. I think we are prepared to begin. We may succeed. It is like I said, putting Humpty Dumpty back together again. It is not impossible but it is almost. We will need public support. We will need to reach out to our colleagues on both sides of the aisle. But the bottom line is let us not lock ourselves in. Let us give the President a chance if you are a Republican, or if you are a Democrat, let us give the Democratic leadership a chance. But above all, let us give the American people the opportunity to improve the economy and to sustain economic growth so that their lives will be better. In my view, we are on the right track.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. GLENN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRYAN). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENT OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in favor of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill. I particularly have waited to this point because several times during this debate there has been mentioned a particular thing that happened in the State of Washington, where certain Federal employees really had their rights, political rights and, as such, their constitutional rights of free speech infringed upon the provisions and the way in which the Hatch Act was enforced.

So I want to state my strong support for the reforms brought to us by the chairman of the committee and for S. 135. I also want to state that, as a former Federal prosecutor and a Senator whose constituents have been adversely affected by current restrictions, I am well aware of the history and controversy involved with the enactment of the Hatch Act and its implementation.

The question before us is not whether or not the Hatch Act should be reformed. I believe the answer to that question is a most emphatic yes.

As a Senator whose constituents' freedom of speech has been adversely affected by the current law, I believe the reforms provided in S. 135 are necessary and warranted. So it is not just a question of should we do it but yes, we should, and this is the vehicle to do it.

As my colleagues know, the Hatch Act was enacted in 1939 after investigations revealed that political appointees of the Works Progress Administrations coerced Federal employees into political contributions in return for jobs. Back then only 32 percent of the Federal work force was under the classified merit system and Federal jobs were being increasingly awarded on a patronage basis. However, today, close to 80 percent of the jobs are covered and protected by the Civil Service system. Today, both the employees and the public are insulated from political influence and coercion by a system based upon merit.

Mr. President, it is apparent that times have changed and that the Federal employee should be given many of the political freedoms currently denied by a hastily enacted and now badly outdated measure and badly outdated regulations which, as the chairman has repeatedly stated, are confusing due to their number and to the manner in which they are applied.

This body has already heard some of the confusing and illogical rules that currently govern political activities of Federal employees resulting from the Hatch Act, and these rules have directly affected the first amendment rights of my constituents. In 1988 Federal employees at the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard in Bremerton, WA, were astonished to learn that they could attend party caucuses but that regulations implementing the Hatch Act prohibited them from addressing the caucus in support of or in opposition to a particular partisan candidate once the caucus began its deliberations for the purposes of choosing a candidate. In other words, the employees are required by law to remain passive observers during one of the most important and purposeful parts of the caucus.

As expected, many Federal employees were confused as to exactly what they could or could not do. Washington State is a caucus State. These caucuses were to select the person that would be supported by the delegates from the State of Washington at the Presidential nominating convention and would be in a position to hopefully participate in the choosing of the next President of the United States. These caucuses are an affair where you must vote for a particular candidate and your vote is then tallied with the other votes in the caucus. Those are then gathered together to select delegates and these delegates then go to another convention in the State and those delegates eventually go to the national convention. So this is a direct political right to select a Presidential candidate.

The Puget Sound Naval Shipyard is not a small institution. It varies with employees from 6,000 to over 15,000 employees. In one area it is of course completely dominant. So you can imagine that removing from a whole congressional district this number of people or at least confusing them to a point where they did not participate was certainly a violation of their constitutional first amendment rights and, yes, could skew the election by skewing the nomination of delegations selected from that particular area.

Such uncertainty breeds frustration and hesitation reduces involvement even in allowed activities. They did not know what they could do, and as has been pointed out by the chairman of the committee, there was confusion at that time as to whether or not they could wear buttons. I had that case when I was a Federal prosecutor in 1960 and it was decided people could wear buttons but none of us were sure by 1988 whether the button rule was on or off. The chairman of the committee has described many times about how you can put a sign on your car but cannot put a sign a lot of other places.

Indeed, our employees, having been warned of substantial penalties associated with this exercise of free speech, the many shipyard workers just simply did not attend their caucuses and many leaders of both parties believed this skewed the outcome of the Presidential caucuses in Washington State. Under the current Hatch Act, Federal employees who choose to speak their minds run the risk of losing their careers.

The bill we are considering today addressed the problem I just described. It provides for a Federal employee's full expression during political caucuses, rallies, and running for party office such as delegate or chairman and for other off-time political events. At the same time, it keeps restrictions prohibiting fundraising and running for partisan political office. It also increases the range of penalties for coercion and intimidation.

Mr. President, at this time when the Iron Curtain is lifting from Eastern Europe resulting in greater political freedoms in that part of the world, it is ironic that an archaic curtain of silence stills hangs over American Federal employees, barring them from participating in legitimate and reasonable acts of political expression.

Civil service should not carry with it a vow of silence when the subject is politics. Government and postal workers are decent, thoughtful, and patriotic individuals who deserve our respect. Our Federal and postal employees have put up with this unfair law for over 50 years. It is time to make the reforms necessary to bring these several million citizens back into the mainstream of American life.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation because it would be tragic if American civil service employees had fewer rights than the new parties and people in Eastern Europe who are now beginning for the first time to exert their political rights in the selection of the delegates to their conventions and caucuses and eventually their government.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CONRAD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to address the Senate for 5 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

WHERE IS THE PRESIDENT

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, it is time for the end of this good cop/bad cop business that has been going on related to the White House on environmental issues. The bad cop is obviously the Chief of Staff of the White House, John Sununu, and we can all justifiably beat up on Mr. Sununu. That is a very convenient relationship for the White House to have.

All the hatcheting gets done by Sununu, and the President benignly says, "I am the environmentalist. I do not know anything about this."

It is time to end the good cop/bad cop, Mr. President. And it is time for us to ask the question: Where is the President? We can say it more derisively—which I do not want to do—as it was done during the campaign: Where is George? But where is the President?

The issue before us right now is the issue of chlorofluorocarbons, and the reluctance, unwillingness, and refusal of the administration to participate in the world fund, to work with developing countries, particularly India and China, to help them through the economic problems they are going to face as we phase our chlorofluorocarbons, an absolutely imperative position for us to take.

That one has been addressed here earlier today. It was recommended by Mr. Riley, recommended by the State Department, and turned down by the bad cop. Where is the President on that? Where is President Bush on this issue? Where is the President on the issue of global warming?

During the campaign, he said, "Don't worry about the greenhouse effect; watch the White House effect." We have not seen anything of that. Why? Because again, the bad cops got involved in this, vetoed, intervened with, tried to wear down with a lot of revisionist science the evidence that is very clear on the subject of global warming, and the administration has backed off of its earlier position. Where is the President on that?

On the issue of wetlands, probably as difficult an issue we face in the United States, and enormously important for the development of the whole food chain, the administration has espoused a policy of no net loss of wetlands. But that has been eroded away, too. The bad cops have gotten involved in that, and the Office of Management and Budget and the Office of Chief of Staff of the White House have once again eroded away the no net loss of wetlands policy. Where is the President on that?

The World Bank, Mr. President, met in town during just this last week. There was a major commitment by the World Bank to a $300 million fund focused on particular environmental issues in the developing world of crucial nature to the whole of the world. World financial institutions all got together and agreed to participate in that $300 million fund, except for one major country: Embarrassingly, the United States of America. Where is the President on that issue?

World population: The conference that was here this last week, which was attended by more than 300 delegates from around the world and more than 42 countries, focused on issues of the environment. At the top of the agenda was the issue of population growth and the need for us to again urge the United States to again resume the position that we had in the sixties and seventies of world leadership on population, making sure we do all the variety of things that have to be done in providing population planning information, empowerment of women, a whole series of things that have to be done.

But the U.S. participation in that has eroded as well very sharply. President Bush, who used to be in a very enlightened position on that subject as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives, has now apparently done a "180." We ought to ask the question on population as well, Mr. President: Where is President Bush?

These issues stack up and become clearer and clearer and clearer. From this morning's very disturbing and embarrassing news about the U.S. position on chlorofluorocarbons to the issue of global warming to the issue of wetlands to our responsibilities to the World Bank to the population issue, the good cop/bad cop routine continues.

I think what we must do, Mr. President, is continue to ask the question: Where is President Bush on this? He says that he is an environmentalist. He says: Look for the White House effect. He tells us with all the good stuff, he is an environmental advocate, but his administration is doing just the opposite.

I hope my conclusion is wrong. I hope the President is an advocate. I hope the President's environmental policy is more than "Do not eat broccoli." I hope the President is involved in this issue. He certainly must be.

The issue is not Sununu. Sununu works for the President, and we have to ask the questions on these terribly important issues of the future: Where is President Bush? Where do we see his influence? He is the only elected official downtown. Where is President Bush?

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DIXON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the manager of the bill is shortly going to go to a vote. Let me just summarize.

First, there was an excellent article on the Beck case by columnist James J. Kilpatrick recently. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Lexington (KY) Herald-Leader, May 2, 1990]

PLAYING HARDBALL POLITICS WITH SOFT MONEY: IT'S TIME TO REFORM

WASHINGTON.—In the hardball league of big-time politics, "soft money" constitutes a key element of the game. This is the money that goes not directly to a candidate, but only generally for such gauzy purposes as "voter education."

As Congress nudges its way toward election reform, the topic of soft money cries out for attention. How much money are we talking about? No one knows, because soft money is not reported. It is well established, however, that the great bulk of it comes from labor unions. Congressional Quarterly quotes one estimate that unions spent "at least $45 million" in the 1988 elections, all but $5 million on activities that favored Democrats.

To be sure, corporations and trade associations also may contribute soft money to voter education and registration, but industry tends to the timid side. Its soft money—there isn't much of it—generally is spent as a manifestation of civic virtue. When unions mount a campaign to get out the vote, it's nonpartisan in name only.

Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky heads a Republican task force on campaign finance. He wants to write a provision into the pending bill for election reform that would compel disclosure of soft money spending. He proposes "to regulate and restrict it," a goal more easily promoted than achieved. Democrats understandably oppose the idea.

Republicans will mount a companion effort to add another desirable amendment to the bill. This would write into law the salutary substance of what is known as the "Beck decision." It is an effort that merits more attention.

The Beck case dates from 1976, when 20 employees of AT&T and its subsidiaries brought formal charges against the Communications Workers of America (CWA) and four of its local unions. Harry Beck and the other plaintiffs were not members of the union; but under a union shop contract, they were compelled to pay fees and dues equivalent to those paid by union members. Their complaint was that most of these payments went to purposes that were irrelevant at best and odious at worst.

Specifically, Beck and his coworkers objected to spending by the CWA in support of causes and candidates they opposed. They contended that their payments, wrested from them under the coercion of a union shop contract, could be used only for the legitimate purposes of collective bargaining, contract administration and grievance adjustment. To spend their fees for other purposes violated their First Amendment rights of free speech.

The case was bitterly fought. In the union's view, the relevant provisions of the National Labor Relations Act put no restrictions whatever upon their spending. If Harry Beck didn't like it, so what? He could join the union and argue his position from within.

The trial court was not persuaded. It insisted upon a detailed accounting of CWA expenditures. After months of haggling, an astonishing figure emerged: Only 21 percent of the outlays were for purposes reasonably related to collective bargaining with AT&T and its subsidiary companies. The other 79 precent went for other union activities—for publications, for entertainment, for lobbying, for organizing workers in other companies and so on.

Twelve years after the suit began, it reached the Supreme Court. In June 1988, Justice William Brennan spoke for a five-member majority. The law, he said, does not leave unions free "to exact dues equivalents from non-members in any amount they please, no matter how unrelated these fees may be to collective bargaining activities." Non-members may be compelled to pay fees intended to defray the costs of bargaining in their behalf—they cannot derive benefits as free riders—but beyond that limit, no. The excess must be refunded.

Regrettably, the court did not reach the constitutional issue. The National Right to Work Legal Defense Fund, which supported Beck's suit, contended that under the peculiar circumstances of a union shop contract, the union functions in effect as an agency of the state. No state may abridge a right of free speech. Harry Beck's right was plainly being abridged, but the high court put off the questions.

The statutory interpretation enunciated in Brennan's opinion ought to be written into law. Union members, of course, have a right to form voluntarily a political action committee and support any candidate they like. They have no right to hijack non-members.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, the McConnell amendment, the one that we will be voting on shortly, has the following purpose: It is to protect Federal employees from political activities of Federal employee labor organizations and to protect Federal employees from political coercion by Federal employee labor organizations. The scope of this amendment is that it applies to all Federal employees and postal workers.

Mr. President, the Federal employee and postal unions would have to inform their members of their constitutional right not to pay for such political activities as "get out the vote," political communications to members, and expenses of PAC fundraising. Members would have then a right to a partial refund of dues if they object.

This is based on the 1988 Supreme Court case, Communication Workers of America against Beck, and on the U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland 1990 decision in Kidwell versus Transportation Communications International Union.

This amendment would prohibit labor organizations or their agents from engaging in political coercion against Federal employees and postal workers. Protected worker activities would include the right of an employee to vote as the employee may choose; the voter may refrain from voting for any candidate or any measure in any election, to make or refrain from making campaign contributions, to engage or refrain from engaging in any legal form of political activities. There will be political penalties—fines of not more than $5,000, or imprisonment for not more than 3 years, or both.

Let me further say, Mr. President, that I strongly support extending this concept to other labor organizations including, for that matter, other segments of society.

Federal and postal workers presently must finance through their union dues political causes that they, in fact, may not support. The differences between this situation and that considered by the Supreme Court in the Beck case is illusory at best. The Beck case involved compulsory union dues. Here dues are voluntary. However, precisely the same coercive element at issue in Beck is present here.

Federal and postal workers are presented a Hobson's choice—pay union dues and gain the right to vote on terms of employment. But under present law a portion of their dues may go to support, through soft money, a candidate or candidates the worker may vehemently oppose.

The other part of the Hobson's choice is you do not pay the union dues, and you do not provide financial assistance to candidates that you continue to support. Only now under present law you will lose your voice on vital terms of employment issues.

My amendment would lift the burden of that Hobson's choice from the shoulders of Federal and postal workers.

It is somewhat ironic that we are discussing what purports to be workers rights legislation and a majority apparently does not want the support of this workers rights amendment. Indeed one of the issues that delayed the Senate last night was that my amendment was too expansive in terms of workers rights, and it had to be limited.

So I again urge passage of this narrowly crafted amendment which is germane to the bill.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. GLENN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, first, I ask the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, can I have a copy, please, of the Kilpatrick article that he referred to? I would like to look at it.

Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky remarked about the debate on this last night, or discussion of this last night. It must have been in the Republican Cloakroom that that occurred, because I could not get a copy of the amendment last night. It must have been at some other place. I do not believe we made any comment on the floor.

Mr. McCONNELL. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLENN. Yes.

Mr. McCONNELL. I did not mean to imply we were discussing it on the floor. We were trying to make the amendment germane yesterday afternoon, is what I was referring to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, the amendment by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, my colleague, Senator McCONNELL, is a six-page amendment. It is a little complicated. I am sorry for the delay this morning but we did not get copies of it until the Senator from Kentucky proposed it this morning. We have had time to look through it and analyze it.

I just basically do not see the need for the amendment. The amendment has two basic parts.

The first part provides that no Federal employee labor organization can operate a multicandidate PAC unless that organization gives written notification annually to all Federal employees eligible to be represented by the organization that—you have to notify all Federal employees—those employees are not required to join the organization and then they can withhold part of their dues if they do join to the extent that those dues are used in part for political purposes.

The political purpose is not very clearly defined in the amendment. It is not defined at all. But, quite apart from that, this would mean that unless there was written notification to all Federal employees, all 3 million of them, each year would not be just to those who are union members; it would be to all Federal employees, telling them basically what they already know: They do not have to join the union to begin with.

The reason I do not think this is necessary is that is a fact within the Federal service that all these people are aware of already and the reason I object to it is this: This is not a cheap thing to do. It is not easy. You are talking about going out to some 3 million people. Just the cost of the postage for that is going to be about $750,000, probably duplicate that again in the cost of preparing the material and putting it out, and you are talking about $1.5 million or so just to make that kind of notification of something that they already know about.

This part of the McConnell amendment attempts to track a Supreme Court decision that was directed at protecting employees who were forced to pay union dues because they had a union shop. There is no analogy to the Federal employee organizations because they are completely voluntary.

A statement by columnist Mr. Kilpatrick was entered in the RECORD a few moments ago and in it he makes a good point. He talks about the need for something like that in those cases as I understand it, and I have not had a chance to really study this, and he points out that this was a union shop contract. But that is not what we have with Government employment. There is no union shop in Government. So it is a completely different situation than applied in the Beck case.

Federal employees are already protected by statute from paying union dues for use in any activities to which they may object. Under section 7102 of title 5 of the United States Code, each employee shall have the right to join any labor organization or refrain from joining without fear of penalty or reprisal.

Furthermore, a labor organization which has been accorded exclusive recognition in a unit must represent all employees of that unit without regard to whether they are members of that labor organization as stated in section 7714 of title 5.

My friend from Kentucky says he wants Federal employees who belong to a union to be able to vote on collective-bargaining agreements and still be able to withhold part or all of their union dues if they disagree with any expenditures for political activity, again a term that is not really defined in the amendment.

Mr. President, whether we are talking about unions or corporations or business or whatever we are talking about, we do not allow people who choose to invest or people who are in other unions outside the Government to say that majority will not rule, that they could come in and say I want back part of my whatever it is, union dues or purchase price of stock or whatever, and Federal employees I do not believe should have this kind of restriction placed on them unnecessarily because they do not have to join the union to begin with. That is the main point.

They do not have union membership as a requirement for their employment. So I do not see how this applies.

I think it is ludicrous to think that Federal employees do not know they are not required to join a union in order to work for the Federal Government.

What the amendment does is say we have to spend $1 million, $1½ million, $2 million, whatever it will require to send a letter to every Government employee each year to tell them what they already know.

The law says that any Federal employee may or may not join the union; it is that person's choice. In places where there is a union, he will be represented by that union in any case. If he wants to vote, then he pays dues just like a citizen who wants to vote at a corporation annual meeting or union outside where a person has a vote in union affairs and if those persons feel they do not like what is going on with the representation of that union, they have a full right to address that in their union meetings and by majority vote try and change whatever the union is doing.

The first part of the McConnell amendment is already covered by existing law. No Federal employee must join or pay any dues to a union. The second part of the amendment deals with preventing political coercion by labor organizations. Once again, there is nothing in this part which is not already covered by existing law, particularly title 42, United States Code, sections 1971 and 1973, as well as title 18, United States Code, section 594 and section 597.

Mr. President, even if those things were not included in existing law, in this legislation we already had an amendment which I cosponsored. It was submitted by Mr. ROBB for myself and Mr. WARNER and it is now part of this bill, part of S. 135, and it deals very specifically with coercion. It is section 610. I will read this so there cannot be any doubt about how coercion is prevented, and I think it preempts what the distinguished Senator from Kentucky is trying to do here.

Let me read this. Section 610. Coercion of Political Activity.

And I would say that is in or out of government. It does not limit it just to this.

It shall be unlawful for any person to intimidate, threaten, command, or coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, command, or coerce, any employee of the federal government as defined in 5 U.S.C. 7322(1), as amended, to engage in, or not to engage in, any political activity, including, but not limited to, voting or refusing to vote for any candidate or measure in any election, making or refusing to make any political contribution, or working or refusing to work on behalf of any candidate. Any person who violates this section shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

Mr. President, I think these things are already covered. I do not want to cut off debate if there are other speakers, but at the appropriate time I will move to table the amendment by the Senator from Kentucky.

I hope we can get on with the other amendments this afternoon. I discussed some of these procedures with the majority leader a short time ago and I know it is his intent to go to a vote tomorrow morning on the cloture motion. At that time, as he indicated to me, if the vote is favorable, we would continue on the 30 hours permitted under cloture at that time and run it right around the clock. We would be continuous for 30 hours of Senate session to run it off.

I know this interferes with some of the plans that people have for certain travel and so on, but that is what has been indicated. So I hope we can get some of these things out of the way this afternoon. I also hope we can get copies of any other amendments to be brought up so we can look at them so we do not have to wait and wait; we can consider them. We have now wasted half a day on this one when, if we had had it yesterday, we could have taken action on it and we would have been much further on today.

Let me just say, before we vote on this, S. 135, once again, what it does, it does not repeal anything. What it does, it takes a whole mass of very confusing and conflicting statements, interpretations that have built up under the Hatch Act over many years. Some of the ones I read into the RECORD again this morning, and it has been several times I read those in.

If you are "Hatched" you can wear a campaign button on the job and write a $1,000 check, but you cannot give any in-kind donation of any kind. You cannot go down and stuff envelopes. You can take the $1,000 and hire a professional firm to stuff them if you wanted to, but you could not do it yourself. You can go to a political rally, but you cannot hold a sign at that rally. If I am standing in the back of the hall as a Government employee and someone hands me a sign and says, "I have to go check my car. It is parked outside. I have to put another dime in the meter," and I am caught holding that man's sign for 5 minutes, I am in violation. I can be suspended from my job for a period of time. Those are interpretations under the Hatch Act now.

We have asked them year after year after year to correct some of these things which are ludicrous. But they do not seem to want to do it.

You cannot hold that sign at the rally but you can put all kinds of signs on your car and drive around or you can post a sign in your yard at home.

If asked, you can express your opinion about a candidate publicly. What is publicly? One person listening to you? Two people? Five? Fifty? That is not defined.

So people do not really know what they cannot do and what they can do. That is the biggest problem we heard about at the two hearings we held on this subject.

This became a serious issue in the State of Washington during the last election when shipyard workers were notified they could not actively participate. It was published, given to them, that they could not participate in the Presidential caucuses without violating the Hatch Act. They could not even go and vote, something you can do in a primary State. In a caucus State it is different, you have to go and stay there, personal presence. Well, that was one of the interpretations of the Hatch Act. Then it was later corrected.

This has created all sorts of confusion. Letters to the editors. Until it was corrected about a year ago, you could send five letters to one paper, one letter to five papers, and if you went beyond that you were in violation of the Hatch Act under some of these 3,000 interpretations that were folded into the Hatch Act out of the old civil service experience when the Hatch Act was passed in 1939.

There are many examples like that we can go into. The reason I read these once more is because all we do in this is try to clarify this. This is not a repeal. And to clarify what can be done, we say on the job you cannot do anything, period. That is it. No political activity. Nothing.

That political button there, as my distinguished colleague from Wyoming said on the floor here yesterday—how would you like to come in as a diehard, died-in-the-wool Republican, and sit down and the IRS auditor across the table from you has a big Dukakis button on? That would stop people. If it were reversed, the other way around, a Democrat coming in and the Republican button there, I suppose that would give people pause. That is permitted now. You can do that now. But with S. 135, that will be prohibited because on the job you cannot do anything politically; it is prohibited, and that is that.

Off the job what do we do? We are contrary to our colleagues over in the House. They would permit you, in the House bill that has been passed, to run for elective political office. And they permit solicitations of campaign funds from the public under the Hatch Act. I cannot go along with that, and we do not in this legislation. We say you cannot run for public office and you cannot solicit contributions. Those are two mighty big protections and those are big differences between the House version and our version here.

I think we give those protections. Outside of that, should a person be able to be over in Arlington County, next to Washington, DC, and participate as the local—whatever, board chairman or precinct captain or something like that? Well, why not? Why restrict things if not necessary. Because every other protection of law, as far as coercion protection or raising money, is already prohibited.

The very basic principle here is we should not restrict unduly, unless there is a reason to restrict. I think we fit that kind of a balance here. What we do is we do not change the basic Hatch Act. We clarify it so people, perhaps inadvertently, will not make a mistake and violate the Hatch Act. It is so confusing now, with all these interpretations, they do not know what they can do. And for those who would deliberately subvert the Hatch Act for their own nefarious purposes, whatever they might be, it makes it more difficult for them to operate also.

I wanted to give that little bit of background here. At the appropriate time, when all debate is done on this particular amendment, I will move to table the amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky and to identify myself strongly with the remarks of the Senator from Ohio, my distinguished chairman of the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

This amendment pending now that has been offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL] really does compound the basic inequity that we are trying to deal with in S. 135. The inequity is that we are treating 3 million plus of our fellow Americans who happen to be employees of the Federal Government in a way that deprives them of their political rights, the same rights that you and I and all the rest of us have who are privileged to be citizens of this country, just because they work for the Federal Government.

We do that in spite of the fact that there is a litany of laws that protect the public from any possible mixing of politics and governmental service. There is a long list of laws that protect individual Federal employees from any mixing of politics and their public service. For instance, it protects them from being coerced or influenced by their superiors based on their political activities. And still the Hatch Act says after all those specific wrongs are protected against, we are going to tell you, you cannot participate in exercising your political liberties.

We treat the Federal employees differently than we treat everybody else. We treat them, in a sense, as second-class citizens. I suggest this amendment perpetuates that in a slightly different way by taking a court decision, the Beck decision, which related to employees of the private sector, and applying the principles through a codification that would be carried by this amendment to employees of the Federal Government who are distinguished from their counterparts in the private sector who belong to unions primarily by this factor.

Membership in a public employee association, Federal Government employee association, is not mandatory. They have the liberty to come and go as they want. So the additional options and limitations on their associations that is being carried out, and would be carried out by this amendment, would really further inhibit the opportunity for those associations to adequately represent their members and put burdens on those Federal employee associations in their attempt to exercise some of the same opportunities for political involvement that are exercised repeatedly by unions of workers who work in the private sector and by all the rest of us who are privileged to be citizens of this country.

Mr. President, it is time to give some measure of equal rights to the 3 million plus Federal employees.

S. 135 will do so. This amendment by the Senator from Kentucky would not and I, therefore, oppose the amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky yields the floor.

Mr. GLENN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I have listened with great care, both this morning and this afternoon, to what my distinguished chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee has to say about this legislation, as well as the distinguished Senator from Connecticut.

One of the allegations is that it is not fair; it is not equitable to have the Hatch Act in place because it prevents 3 million Federal employees from participating in the political process.

If one buys that argument, is it not ironic that yesterday no concern was shown about the military, who likewise are not able to participate in the political process? All of them, whether they are civilians or military, are, of course, citizens of this great country and should enjoy the same political rights.

But it seems to me that if the advocates really believed what they were saying, they would have supported the Gramm amendment, which proposed that we extend to the soldiers, those in uniform, the right to participate exactly the same as they are proposing for the civilians.

Mr. President, that is not really what is behind this legislation. This legislation is essentially a political grab, a political thrust. What we are suddenly doing is letting Federal employees off duty become involved in partisan political events. The Hatch Act, of course, forbids that.

For 50 years, the Hatch Act, which was enacted by a Democratic Congress under the stewardship of a Democratic President, has been on the books and has served the Federal employees and the Government and the American public very well, indeed; so well that, in fact, we have little demand for repealing the Hatch Act, as S. 135 would do. And make no mistake about that.

But the thing that bothers me in talking about the impact of the Hatch Act on the Federal employee is that nothing is said about the rights of the American public. We are all in agreement that Federal employees, like those in the private sector, should have the right to exercise his or her vote; a very important right, indeed.

I think we should also be in agreement that it is critically important in the administration of the Federal laws that they be administered in not a political or partisan manner, but in a neutral, nonpartisan manner.

The reason for the Hatch Act became law in 1939, was because people were weary of the spoils system. It not only involved those in the private sector but in the public sector. One of the principal purposes of the Hatch Act is to protect the Federal employee from coercion, direct or indirect, blatant or subtle. Time after time, there were examples where the way the Federal personnel system was administered depended upon the political activity or lack of political activity of a public servant.

That was a principal reason for the law. It was to prevent the Federal employee from becoming involved in partisan political activity, but also to protect him from being coerced, from being required to make political contributions, to participate in the political process.

As I said, we have several objectives. One is to protect the Federal employee; another is to protect the public. And when you try to strike a balance with these competing goals, one has to draw a line somewhere, and that is exactly what the Hatch Act did.

The advocates of this legislation keep arguing that the law is so complex, and they refer time and again to 3,000 administrative decisions that were made prior to the Hatch Act. They know as well as I that those old decisions are not part of the rules and regulations of today.

Essentially, we have distilled from the various rules and regulations, or the administration has, 29 rules and regulations that are relatively simple in context. People like to sit back and say it is too complex. It reminds me of years ago when I went to law school and the professor, wherever you drew the line, tried to take a case very close to where that line was drawn to show how complex the law was. But there is nothing that complex about the Hatch Act. It guarantees that the employees has the right to be involved in the sense of voting and registering, but it is also very clear he or she does not have the right to become involved in partisan political activity.

That means that there are some lines to be drawn. As a Federal employee, one can write a letter to the local newspaper or 5 letters or 10 letters on a partisan issue saying where he or she stands. This is taken as part of a private right. What you cannot do is to become part of a partisan effort, so that if you are writing those letters as a part of a candidate's campaign, it is forbidden. It is a pretty simple line to draw.

I think in most cases, the Federal employees know whether or not they are coming up close to that line or not. But if they have any question as to what they are doing, as to whether it is lawful or prohibited, there is a hotline which they can reach and propound their question and get an answer.

Mr. President, just let me recite what Federal employees may do now.

As I said:

First, they can register to vote and vote.

Second, a Federal employee can contribute money to partisan political campaigns.

Third, they can express their views in private and in public, though not in a concerted way to elicit support for a candidate or party.

Fourth, they can attend conventions and rallies but only as a spectator. That means that they cannot carry banners and run around in a demonstration. That is part of partisan political action. But they can attend a convention.

Fifth, they can run as an independent candidate in certain partisan contests in designated areas with a high concentration of Federal employees.

Sixth, they can assist a nonpartisan voter registration drive.

Seventh, they can campaign for or against political referendum questions.

Eighth, they can participate as a nonpartisan poll-watcher or election judge.

Ninth, they can wear buttons off duty or on duty subject to various agency restrictions.

Tenth, they can participate in nonpartisan campaigns.

Additional activities that Federal employees could do under S. 135:

First, hold office in a political party.

Second, distribute campaign literature and solicit votes, off duty.

Third, organize and participate in phone banks, off duty.

Fourth, organize and participate in political meetings, off duty.

Fifth, politically endorse candidates and urge others to support them, off duty.

Sixth, solicit contributions to the PAC of a Federal employee organization to which both the employee and the donor belong, off duty.

This latter list of activities is, as I said, a repeal, a 180-degree change in direction of the law, if enacted. Today the Federal employee cannot become involved in partisan political action. What S. 135 proposes to do is reverse that trend and encourage—not permit but encourage—Federal employees to indulge in partisan political activity.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I will reply briefly and then at the appropriate time move to table the amendment. I do not believe anybody else wants to speak.

Mr. McCONNELL. If the Senator from Ohio will yield, I will need 30 seconds and I am through.

Mr. GLENN. That is fine.

Mr. President, let me respond to the remarks of my colleague from Delaware. Once again we hear this rhetoric being trotted out that this is some kind of political grant. I never heard anything any more ridiculous, when all we are trying to do is clarify some of the uncertainties of the law right now.

Of course, the Hatch Act is needed. I agree with that. But I want to make it workable. I want to make it do something, not be so confusing that nobody knows what is occurring. So, once again, to refer to S. 135 as a repeal of the Hatch Act is just not true. I have corrected this quite a number of times.

We are talking about the rights of the American public to vote. Of course, they need Federal laws administered in a nonpartisan manner. I agree with that 100 percent, and that is exactly what S. 135 does. It says that on the job you cannot do one single thing that is political. That tightens up the law.

Under a spoils system which existed at one time, the Hatch Act was passed to protect people from coercion. I agree with that 100 percent. There already is protection against coercion in law. What we do specifically in this bill is exactly the same thing—the amendment by Mr. ROBB.

The objective is, indeed, to protect the employee and protect the public, and what we do is make that a workable line so that people will understand what is happening.

The 3,000 interpretations that we refer to, those were folded into the Hatch Act when it was passed and have not all been done away with yet, as witness the examples I have given on the floor many times. They have not all been distilled down to where there are very clear rule and regulations. Otherwise, why would we need something like a hotline for Federal employees to call to get an interpretation of whether they can or cannot do something? Is it not a ludicrous situation that the law is that unclear? And yet that is what we have. We have to establish a hotline so people can call in and say, can I stuff envelopes, or am I going to be charged with a violation if I stuff some envelopes down here in the boiler room some place? Or can I go to a political rally? What can I do? We have to have a hotline to try to describe these different interpretations that have grown up and been there under the Hatch Act through a good part of its existence since 1939.

All this bill tries to do is clarify some of that so that, exactly as the Senator from Delaware said, the public is protected, the employee is protected because they now will know without benefit of a hotline that they cannot do anything political on the job, that they cannot even wear that infamous buttons we have talked about on the floor repeatedly. So we tighten it up in that respect.

On the other hand, we keep some of the restrictions outside, such as no raising of political funds from the general public and not running for public office. The House bill permits both of those. This is a long-needed revision that S. 135 has made.

Mr. President, with regard to the amendment by the Senator from Kentucky, the basic point is we do not need all the same things, and that is what took us so long, we had to research this. We were trying to go through line by line and search whether each item in there is covered in some way under existing law. As I said in my remarks a few moments ago, we have determined that they are covered under other law so we do not need this amendment. That is the reason I rise to oppose it. Whenever the sponsor of the amendment has finished, I will be prepared to move to table.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, in conclusion, it is the view of the Senator from Kentucky that the present law does not cover this situation. Federal and postal workers presently must finance, through their union dues, political causes that they in fact may not support. My amendment is about the Hobson's choice that Federal and postal workers currently are presented. The Hobson's choice, Mr. President, is this: Pay union dues and gain the right to vote on terms of employment. But under present law, a portion of their dues may go to support, through soft money, a candidate or candidates that the workers may vehemently oppose. That is the first choice. If you pay your dues in order to gain the right to participate in a collective-bargaining agreement, your money can be diverted to political causes in which you may not believe, or as a Federal worker or postal employee, you choose not to pay the dues because you do not want to provide financial assistance to those whose views you do not support. Only under present law you lose your voice on vital terms of employment issues.

So the purpose of the McConnell amendment is to eliminate the Hobson's choice and to eliminate in the future the possibility that, against the will of the Federal or the postal employee, his dues money can be diverted for the purpose of supporting political causes with which that union member may not agree.

So, Mr. President, I urge adoption of my amendment. I yield the floor.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I point out one last time that this is not the same as the situation under Beck where, for employment, a person was required to join the union or they would not have any employment.

They will not have any employment. The Government employees have full choice on whether to join the union or not. If they object to any of the union rules, then they do not have to join. Yet they are represented by that union. That is required by law.

They do not have to join. They can go their own way and still be represented. If they want to join—and under the rules, each union has set up what they are going to do if they want to join the union—work from inside on the majority rule in a situation like that to change the what the union is doing, that is permitted. That is not only permitted but encouraged. That is democracy at its best.

Let me read one other statement into the RECORD. Then I will move to table.

As the Supreme Court has recently explained, the Federal statutes authorizing union security agreement, that is, agreements that require the payment of dues or fees as a condition of employment, have been construed in a way that "does not permit a union, over the objection of nonmembers, to expend compelled agency fees on political causes." Communications Workers v. Beck, — U.S. —, 108 S.Ct. 2641, 2648 (1988). These decisions rest on the principle that putting all other considerations aside, employees who choose not to join the union should not be compelled to contribute financially to the union's political activities.

Union security agreements are not allowed in the Federal sector. A Federal employee may choose to join the union acting as a collective bargaining representative and pay dues, or may choose not to join and not to pay anything. And the union is required by the Federal law to fairly represent each and every employee in the bargaining unit whether or nor the employee joins the union and whether or not the employee pays a penny in union dues. Thus, the problem addressed in cases such as Beck simply does not arise in the Federal sector, because there are no "compelled agency fees," and therefore no danger of Federal sector unions "expend[ing]" such fees "on political causes" "over the objection of nonmembers * * *." Communications Workers v. Beck, supra, 108 S.Ct. at 2648.

The Supreme Court, in defining the right of objecting nonmembers to prevent the expenditure of their agency fee payments on political causes, also took care to note that the majority "has an interest in stating its views without being silenced by the dissenters." Machinists v. Street, 367 U.S. 740, 773 (1961). To express their views, the majority of employees who support the union must be allowed to freely associate in that organization as members. And this freedom of association has always been understood to include the right through proper democratic processes first to adopt the organization's goals and programs and second to establish membership rules that ensure that all who join will meet their financial obligations to the organization.

A public law that requires the majority to take employees in as members who refuse to accept the union's rules, including its dues requirements, would, in other words, be contrary to the most basic notions of free association. So far as I am aware, neither the Federal Government nor any State legislature has intruded in the affairs of a voluntary private association in that way.

In short, Federal employees who disagree with a union's political positions can simply refuse to join—or if they have joined, can resign—and they will suffer no adverse consequences, because the union must fully represent members and nonmembers alike. Thus, there is no reason to allow such employees to join the union on some terms other than those normally required for membership. On the other hand, forcing the majority of employees who have freely joined the union to accept into their ranks employees who wish to join on their own terms is contrary to the essential tenets of freedom of association.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does any Senator seek recognition.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, if there is no other discussion of this amendment, I move to table the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. ROTH. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Ohio to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] would vote "nay."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 63, nays 35, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

Wilson

So the motion to lay on the table amendment No. 1591, as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion to table was agreed to.

Mr. BRADLEY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, we stand ready for any other amendments now. We had a long delay getting this one. We understand we have a couple more. We would like to get them on the floor as rapidly as possible.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum having been suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is not in order. The Senate will be in order. Those who have business other than that before the Senate will please adjourn to the cloakroom.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I just wanted all my colleagues to know that in discussions earlier this morning with the majority leader, it is his intention that if we cannot resolve this and get amendments to the floor and if there is delay such as we have experienced, it is his intention, so stated this morning, to move tomorrow to cloture; and if that is necessary and cloture is invoked, it is his intention to go right around the clock for 30 hours. I know what this does to some of the travel plans for many Senators on the other side of the aisle who have important meetings that are taking place outside the country, but that is the intention.

So I hope that anyone with additional amendments would get them to the floor so we can consider them. We are ready to consider the amendments and that is the plan that was expressed this morning.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum have been suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1607

(Purpose: To provide that the employees of each department and agency may select either current law or the proposed amendment to subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, to apply, and for other purposes)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE] proposes an amendment numbered 1607.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 8, insert between lines 13 and 14 the following new section:

SEC. . EMPLOYEE REFERENDUM ON APPLICABLE LAW.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, each department and agency shall conduct a referendum of all employees (as defined under section 7322(1) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by section 2(a) of this Act) in such department or agency to determine the provisions of law to apply to the political activities of such employees.

(b) The provisions of law described under subsection (a) shall be limited to—

(1) the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, in effect before the effective date of this Act; or

(2) the provisions of such subchapter as amended by this Act, and the other provisions of this Act.

(c) The Office of Personnel Management shall promulgate regulations—

(1) governing procedures and other matters for the conduct of such referendum which shall occur—

(A) no later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(B) at such regular intervals, thereafter, as determined by the Office of Personnel Management, but in no event more often than every 5 years;

(2) providing that a majority of those employees voting in such a referendum shall determine which provisions of law shall apply; and

(3) informing and educating employees of the standards for political activities that apply to their department or agency.

(d) For any department or agency in which employees select the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, in effect before the effective date of this Act to apply in accordance with a referendum under this section, such provisions shall apply with the same force and effect of law as though the amendments in this Act had never been enacted.

(e) The provisions of this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this is the all-American amendment. The purpose is simple: To provide employees of each department and agency of the Government the opportunity to select either current law or S. 135, the embodied law, within their particular agency or department.

The amendment does not change in any way any of the permitted activities and prohibited activities set forth in S. 135. It does not do a thing to that. It is simply an amendment affording employee groups the right to choose specifically, and this is how the amendment would work: Prior to the effective date of S. 135, the employees of each Government agency, of the department, would pull a referendum pursuant to which employees would vote whether they want their particular agency or department to be governed by the stricter limitations on political activity as currently embodied in the Hatch Act—in other words, under the present law or under the much looser standards set forth in S. 135.

If more than 50 percent of the employees who vote cast ballots in favor of S. 135, then their political activities will be judged on the basis of S. 135. That is it. If not, they are judged under current law. We direct the Office of Personnel Management to promulgate regulations governing the procedures and other matters with respect to the conduct of such referendum and also to undertake the task of informing and educating the employees of the standards for political activities that apply to each agency or department.

Finally, the Office of Personnel Management would be directed to issue regulations with respect to the holding of subsequent referendums on partisan political standards which referendums would occur no more frequently than every 5 years. The work force changes that there ought to be another referendum in 5 years, because those opposed might be in favor of participating under S. 135.

The purpose is simple. You would have referendums at regular intervals. You could look down the road. It also ensures the initial vote of the employee, agency, or department will not bind the agency forever. One obvious reason for this is the turnover of employee staffs, and one group of employees should not bind a different group of employees 5, 10, 15 years down the road.

Mr. President, we heard repeatedly from proponents of this legislation saying that this is something the workers want. I must say, if they want it, they are being very quiet about it. My phone is not ringing off the wall. It probably will be because I said that, because somebody can generate phone calls. I learned that fast.

I have been advised one Senator who has his office in a Federal building has not been contacted by a single Federal employee. This is another one of these things put together by the labor leaders saying it is something their members want, when surveys indicate that over half the members do not want this, and 70 percent of the SES employees do not want this.

So it seems to me the Senator from Ohio and others would consider this, and consider the survey of the Senior Executive Service, which indicated that 70 percent of such workers prefer current law. So if we really believe that this is something the workers want, why not give them a chance to vote? We do that in agriculture programs. We say, oh, this is what the farmers want.

We started having referendums and we started finding out farmers did not want what Congress thought they wanted, or what some leader of a farm organization thought they wanted. So what the workers may want will probably be left alone in most cases, not having to be dragged into partisan political activity or not having to make contributions to some political campaign under the fear of intimidation by some superior.

My amendment just lets the workers within each agency vote and decide for themselves.

I cannot think of any more democratic way, anything more fair. If the workers want to keep politics out of the office and they discover it, because they will know before we know—let us say they have a referendum; 51 percent of the people say we want to go to S. 135, the looser bill. Let us say 5 years later the employees, whoever they may be, Democrats, Republicans, Independents, notice a lot of this political activity going on that is never going to be reported. We know it is never going to be reported—a lot of intimidation, maybe some coercion, maybe at least some perception of that. Then you had another referendum. It would give the employees a right to protect themselves without having their jobs threatened, without having to go through some complaint procedure. All they would do is simply vote in a referendum, a secret vote.

So it seems to me this is a good way to sort of police whatever happens, either for or against S. 135. This would be a self-policing mechanism, because I have to believe that if the good Federal employees—and they are good Federal employees—are going to make decisions, they do not want to make some that might cost them a job, a promotion, a transfer. So they are going to be very cautious, if S. 135 passes without some safeguard like this.

So, if the primary purpose of this act is to get rid of the rules and regulations that they claim are inconsistent, this ought to be a way to clarify it. I cannot believe this is an amendment that will not be agreed to. It probably will not be agreed to, but I hope it will be adopted on a broad bipartisan basis.

I am told that some of the labor leaders say they do not care; they are going to win every election anyway. Let us find out. I do not think they are going to win the election within the FBI or the IRS or the Federal Election Commission or the DIA or the CIA. All these sensitive agencies are now going to be involved in partisan political activity. They may not win the election of the postal workers or whatever.

But in any event, it is a commonsense amendment, something we think we have in the Midwest. We would like to share it with our friends around the country. We believe in fairness; we believe in democracy. We believe Federal workers ought to have a right to vote whether or not they want to engage in more political activity, and it just adds a new section to the bill that provides that referendums will be held and the time they are going to be held.

I cannot say much else about it. It seems to me it is a great idea, even though I may have thought of it. So I hope it might be well received by my colleagues on the other side and this side of the aisle. I am prepared to vote as soon as the Senator from Ohio has made his argument either for or against the amendment.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, we have just received a copy of this as we came on the floor, so we once again need a little time to make sure what we are doing. My first look at it is that I will, indeed, oppose it. I regret that is the case, but if the Senator will give us a few more minutes, we will be prepared to make a statement and then move on it.

I also hope that any other people who have amendments will bring them over, so we have a chance to look at them in advance, so we do not have to sit with staff and try to go through these things word by word, line by line, and consider them right here on the floor. We appreciate having them in advance so we can really get them through in a more expeditious manner.

I will speak on this in a few moments.

Mr. DOLE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLENN. Yes.

Mr. DOLE. Let me indicate I share that view. I have managed bills. It is pretty hard to manage the bills if you do not know what the amendments are. You do not need a surprise party every 30 seconds around here, so I have advised my staff as soon as they are drafted to make them available.

Mr. GLENN. There has been some late drafting going on around here.

Mr. DOLE. I agree. I think the Senator should have them in advance.

Mr. GLENN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum having been suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, the proposal by the distinguished minority leader, if applied across the board, would mean that we would have, not just Federal employees but in other areas of Government or our society, groups getting together to decide a referendum on what laws would apply to them and what laws would not apply to them. I do not believe that when the Hatch Act was passed originally there was a vote to say whether it would be or would not be. There was abuse that was seen and action was taken to correct that abuse, and that was the Hatch Act. It corrected a lot of these abuses, but it would create confusion in what is going to be administered, what is going to be done with it, how it is interpreted, and that is what we are trying to correct.

As my distinguished friend from Kansas says, this is not a looser law in any way, shape, or form. It is not a repeal of the Hatch Act. In some respects, in fact as far as what people can do in the workplace, it is a tighter law. It tightens up the law and gives the people better protection in their agencies or wherever they work for the Federal Government. Better protection is tighter job restrictions, which they probably like.

As far as the comments about intimidation or coercion, those are already prohibited by law, so we are not talking about that. As to the farmers, the Senator talked about, when we pass a national agriculture bill, it applies in California as well as Kansas, as well as Louisiana, as well as my home State of Ohio, and every other State, and we do not say whether you opt in or opt out, depending on what the biggest advantage is for you when we pass whatever law it is we are passing. We make it as fair as we possibly can, and then we apply it to everyone. That is what this does.

To let each agency have a choice of which laws they will prefer to be governed under just balkanizes this thing, makes it even more confusing because at that point we would have employees who in one agency would vote one way and employees in another would perhaps vote another and we have not simplified things, which is the objective of S. 135. We would have, indeed, complicated them much more than they are right now.

So, for those reasons, Mr. President, at the appropriate time, whenever debate is finished, I will move to table the amendment by the Senator from Kansas. I do not know who else wishes to speak on this or if he wishes to respond, but at the appropriate time I will move to table.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the Senator from Ohio. I just wanted to point out what we have done. We have a couple of charts which show what you can do under current law and what you can do under S. 135. There is no doubt about which is the looser law.

Under S. 135, you can solicit contributions to the PAC of a Federal employee's organization to which both the employees and the donor belong. You can campaign for or against a candidate or slate of candidates in partisan elections. You can make campaign speeches or engage in other partisan activities to elect partisan candidates. You can distribute campaign material in partisan elections. You can register voters for one party only. You can organize or manage political rallies or meetings. You may hold office in political clubs or parties, and you may circulate nominating petitions.

That is what we have as opposed to what we have today, current law, which is much less limited. Under current law, you can contribute money to political organizations or attend political fund raising functions. You may participate in campaigns where none of the candidates represent a political party. You may assist in nonpartisan registration drives. You may display political badges, buttons, or stickers. You may attend political rallies or meetings. You may join political clubs or parties.

You may sign nominating petitions, you may campaign for or against referendum questions, constitutional amendments, municipal ordinances, and, or course, you can register and vote as you choose.

That is a much tighter provision than contributing to the PAC, or a Federal employees organization, to which both the employee and the donor belong, and you can campaign for or against a candidate or slate of candidates in partisan elections. It is a whole rewrite to repeal what we have now and a whole substitute to broaden the political partisan activity or Federal employees who belong to different unions.

Some do not want to do it. If we are going to take the democratic way and mandate that this law passes, you are going to be subject to all of this stuff, you are going to be asked to give money, and you are going to be frightened if you are a Federal employee somewhere. It may be somebody asking you who might have some influence on whether or not you are going to have your job or be promoted or whatever.

What I have done is try to come up with an amendment that at least you have a majority of the Federal employees in an agency say yes or no. It seems to me it makes a great deal of sense. Referendums are being used all over Eastern Europe now. People are getting their freedom and are having referendums. They are deciding what kind of government they are going to have. Somebody is not mandating what kind of government they are going to have. It is precisely when it gets into an area like this, in my view, that a referendum is a good idea.

I am sorry to hear that the Senator from Ohio, after reflection by a narrow margin, is opposed to the amendment. Maybe it is not a narrow margin. But I am prepared to vote, in any event.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Ohio to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Kansas. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] would vote "nay."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

Wilson

So the motion to lay on the table amendment No. 1607 was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. ROTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I and others who may wish to join may proceed as if in morning business for 20 minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, we return to a period for morning business.

The Senator from New York is recognized for a period up to 5 minutes.

THE BUDGET

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to call the attention of the Senate to what appears to this Senator, and I believe to some others, a hugely unfortunate statement which was made yesterday by the House Republican whip, Representative NEWT GINGRICH of Georgia, in the context of the upcoming meetings of the President, the majority leader, and Republican leader here in the Senate, the Speaker and the Republican leader in the House, having to do with the budget for the coming fiscal year in the context of new numbers, if I may put it that way, that the Office of Management and Budget has issued which show the deficit to be much greater than ever it was said to be in the President's original budget which was even then not accepted and even now seems to me to have a very serious credibility problem.

Mr. President, it is well established, as clear as anything will ever be in our city, that the President asked for these meetings. The President approached Members of the House side, I believe, first and then the Senate side. On Thursday, in a policy meeting of the Democratic Policy Committee, the majority leader spoke with us about this matter and asked the counsel of his colleagues. We said, "By all means, go to that meeting on Sunday and see what the President has in mind."

And now in subsequent meetings it has been agreed that these discussions, this summit as the term is, will go forward—a clear initiative from the administration and followed up by a statement by the White House Press Secretary that everything would be on the table—to that effect, I do not quote Mr. Fitzwater—followed by information coming from the Office of Management and Budget to say that the deficit is much larger than was first projected. No news to anyone in this body, I should not think, and I do not think it is much news to anybody in the administration, even in the Office of Management and Budget. That has become an annual ritual, as the distinguished Senator from Tennessee, the chairman of the Budget Committee, has said, a budget to arrive from the administration filled with the familiar rosy scenario only to have them then disprove it before it is even voted upon.

In the House of Representatives, the opportunity was available to offer the President's budget. It was declined. We now hear of increased outlays for the savings and loan disaster, increased interest rates, the budget deficit is up and up again. And that deficit includes as its general revenues the surplus of the Social Security trust funds, a matter about which I have spoken before and others have done.

Well, the Government has to go forward and there is nothing in the least the matter with the negotiations between the congressional leadership and the President.

However, what is one to think, with this record as clear as it can be, to read in this morning's New York Times, for which I express my appreciation as a New Yorker, Mr. GINGRICH saying that, and I will read the full paragraph.

Despite White House efforts to reassure the opposition, Representative Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the House Republican whip, sought to stigmatize the Democrats as the true authors of the current thinking about a tax increase.

And then this:

I don't think there's any question in this country which party is addicted to tax increases and which party is reluctantly willing to negotiate.

"Reluctantly willing to negotiate" is the way the Republican whip in the other body characterizes the President's request that the congressional leadership come to the White House to talk with him at the summit, as that term is now used.

This raises anxiety. I want to make clear in no sense do I question the good faith of the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Director of OMB. But this fact is here in front of us. The meetings have not even begun when a member of the Republican leadership on the other side—not this body—clearly distorts the process by which the meetings got underway and already seeks to characterize any outcome that might involve taxes as the work of the parties invited to talk as against those who did the inviting.

That raises questions of good faith, good faith in the large political sense of will we come together in these matters or will they be used as a setting for the character assassination of the Democratic Party?

We, sir, have been in this body for 4 months now, raising the question of how can Social Security trust funds be used as general revenue, without ever charging bad faith; saying this activity, in which both the Congress and the executive branch are now involved, does raise the question of good faith with the American people, with the 132 million people who pay a Federal Insurance Contributions Act payment. It is not an income tax. On the payroll it says FICA; it is a contribution to insurance. It was never remotely conceived by the authors, President Roosevelt, Members of the House and Senate in the 1930's, to be Federal revenue for general purposes.

In a specific document in the Roosevelt papers talking about this matter, for example, Luther Gulick, of Columbia University, who was working in the Government in 1941, specifically suggested to the President it might be time to merge these revenue streams.

"No," said Franklin D. Roosevelt, "that is a separate source of money that goes to an insurance fund. Credits are made to individual accounts." There is a number on every dollar in the trust fund. It is yours, or mine, or our wives' or our brothers', our cousins'. Every dollar in that trust fund has somebody's name on it. These are not general revenues.

Yet already in the presentations by Mr. Darman, we include the surpluses, running at about $75 billion this year, as if they were part of the revenue base of the Treasury. They are not. Or at least in the judgment of this Senator they are not.

That enormity apart, as if that were not enough that we are being asked to begin our discussions by conceding the not-conceded point that insurance contributions are revenue to be used for everything from battleships to paperclips, what you will, as against revenue to be used only for benefits and the very small administrative costs of running the program—now, for it to be said that on top of this the discussions begin by, I will say again, "the party addicted to tax increases," to wit this party, on this side, and "reluctantly" entered into on the other side, is to at the very least cause apprehension and concern.

Mr. CRANSTON. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I will be happy to yield to the majority whip.

Mr. CRANSTON. May I see that quotation?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Certainly. The New York Times, the newspaper of record.

Mr. CRANSTON. I am delighted the Senator from New York has called this to the attention of the Senate and to the public. This is an absolutely outrageous statement by the number two leader of the Republican Party in the House, and I want to repeat the quote that the Senator from New York just read.

Representative NEWT GINGRICH of Georgia, the House Republican whip, quoted in the New York Times as seeking "to stigmatize the Democrats as the true authors of the current thinking about a tax increase. 'I don't think there's any question in this country which party is addicted to tax increases and which party is reluctantly willing to negotiate.' "

To come from a man who is in the leadership, who is presumably involved in the negotiations, and knows perfectly well who asked for the negotiations, the President of the United States, to state that the Republican Party is the reluctant one, since they have initated the negotiations, is obviously a falsehood.

I do not know how negotiation can be carried on in good faith with people who resort to such statements. The actual fact is that the Democrats have been somewhat reluctant to enter into these negotiations. We believe the President and his Mr. Darman are driven by economic facts to wonder about the necessity of a tax increase. What they hope to do is to blur who is responsible for that by having any such proposal come out of a meeting where Democrats are participants, That is obviously the plan that is involved in these negotiations being proposed.

The Republicans are embarrassed by the President's statement, "Read my lips, no new taxes," since the economic facts of life may well be driving him to a decision that new taxes are in order.

It seems to me to have honest negotiations, or straightforward negotiations, the President should state the facts as he sees them about a tax increase, about any other aspect of the budget process that must be considered, and then we can have a meeting where the cards are plainly on the table.

I want also to applaud the Senator from New York for his leadership on the issue of Social Security. This administration, like its predecessor, seeks to use Social Security funds to balance the budget. The Senator is leading the battle to see to it that process is brought to a halt. I am delighted to be one who is working with him in that effort.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I thank, so very much, the distinguished senior Senator from California.

I would say to the Presiding Officer that we would hope to have some respect. It is not out of order to have us say on the floor today: Could we not hear from the executive branch that they do not share this view, that they do not endorse the statement of Mr. GINGRICH? For, if no comment is made, with what measure of trust will these negotiations go forward? What is likely to be the outcome if it is said in advance how the outcome will be characterized; if any mutual agreement will be characterized as a position imposed by one party on the other reluctant party? Well, there is not likely to be an agreement, or if one emerges, it is not likely to be well received when it returns to this body or to the other body, I would think.

On this matter of Social Security; no new taxes? On the first of January, the last of the rate increases for Social Security contributions, OASDI, the old-age and survivors and disability insurance program put in place in 1977 in anticipation of a very rapid changed demographic situation in our country beginning the third decade of the next century—that increase took place. It was treated immediately as if it were just another tax increase. Revenue is now available for general purposes, as against social insurance.

That statement reported in the New York Times, that is the equivalent of your 30-second attack commercial. Wham, out of nowhere; bop, disappeared.

At least it had a name attached to it. I will concede that. But it is that attack mode, that accusatory mode that is poisoning and paralyzing our political governmental processes. If we cannot trust in the essential attachment to fact on the other parties, we cannot trust to make any opening proposal or respond to opening proposals, in turn.

Bryce Harlow, a great adviser to Dwight D. Eisenhower, one of the finest public men ever to serve Presidents in this city in the second half of the 20th century, said it very well. He said, "Trust is the coin of the realm." And he meant the trust among the elected Representatives.

And where that leaches away, the realm is accordingly deprived of the vigor and directed capacity that makes political choice possible. John F. Kennedy used to say, and I have heard him say it—nothing put in a speech, but at a meeting—to govern is to choose.

We have to make some choices here. We have avoided them for the better part of a decade. To seriously impair that effort even before it has begun is scarcely, it seems to me, a service to the President, much less to the Congress.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. I thank the Chair.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the Senator yield for a quick question?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I am happy to yield.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I appreciate my colleague's comments. I say, as one who sits on the Budget Committee and happened to sit in on the leadership meeting yesterday with the White House, I expressed to the President that I thought the revenues were growing quite well.

As a matter of fact, under the Senate Budget Committee approach that is approved by the Budget Committee, revenues are anticipated to grow by $112 billion, or 11 percent. That is a big increase already budgeted, already anticipated. Some of that has new revenues, about $15 billion.

I will just ask my colleague a question. We talk about making tough choices. The Senator from New York made an interesting proposal for cutting Social Security taxes, stating the Social Security bill in 1983 raised taxes too dramatically. I agree with the statement, or at least that is my statement that the 1983 so-called bipartisan Social Security solution had dramatic tax increases, and possibly too much. I voted against it in 1983 for that reason.

But there are enormous surpluses. The Senator from New York said make it pay as you go, so we have a big tax cut. But I have not heard the Senator's position on how we would make up for the deficit. I heard him talk about making tough decisions. I have not heard the second part of that. I would like to support his effort, but I do not want a similar increase in the deficit.

If we are going to have a massive cut in Social Security taxes, I am not really interested in having a massive increase in the deficit. I am not really interested in raising taxes in other areas in like amount. I would be happy to hear the Senator if he has made some of those tough decisions. If he has made the decision, I would like to know about it, and maybe others would like to sponsor it.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. May I say I see the distinguished Senator from Delaware has returned, and I believe they would like to return shortly to this measure.

To my friend from Oklahoma, first of all, in my view, these are not taxes. They are insurance premiums paid into a trust fund.

Second, I say to my colleague, those increases were not put in place in 1983; they were put in place in 1977. I was here. I voted for them.

Third, with respect to the proposal I made, the Senator will have a chance to vote on it, I assure him.

I see the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Will my colleague yield? I want to commend my colleague from New York, as a member of the Budget Committee. Like most of us here, when the President suggested there be a summit meeting on this matter, my first reaction was, of course, I presume the President will be submitting a revised budget proposal.

I do not know how we conduct a negotiation unless both sides place on the table their respective positions. That would be the first order of business.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. The Senate committee has reported a budget resolution.

Mr. DODD. That is correct; as well as the House committee. Both committees have reported budget proposals. The Senate proposal was bipartisan in that one Member of the minority supported that particular effort. But, nonetheless, a budget proposal. There are critics of it, I am sure, but, nonetheless, a position the committee had taken. The House has done the same.

I presume that the President and the administration would lay down their revised proposal. I found it somewhat disingenuous that they would not even allow a vote in the House on the President's budget proposal. They did not even want a vote on that. My first point would be I hope that is the case.

But secondly, I must say, and I commend my colleague from New York for raising this point, you cannot begin a process like this with one of the leaders of the minority, in this case in the House, taking the position that this is once again an effort to raise taxes, or this summit proposal was initiated by the Democrats, and expect the kind of atmosphere to prevail which would allow for an intelligent discussion about what needs to be done to put this house in order. If we are going to begin on that note, then I suggest we are not going to get very far.

Certainly, I hope we will not pursue negotiations or pursue a summit when the President's party and those who are leading it take the position that this is an effort by the Democrats to raise taxes. Nothing could be further from the truth, and it is not the kind of environment which is conducive to negotiations.

So I hope the President will submit that proposal. I will be shocked if we enter negotiations with only one proposal on the table, and that is from the legislative branch.

I thank my colleague for raising the issue.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. The Chair has been very patient. I thank the President and the Senator from Delaware, who graciously gave us this interval.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for morning business under the unanimous consent order has expired.

The Chair recognizes the Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH].

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, S. 135 would prohibit any Federal employee from knowingly soliciting, accepting, or receiving a political contribution from any person, with one exception. That exception is for the solicitation of any other person who is a member of the same Federal employee organization, and of a contribution that is solicited for a PAC of such organization.

This language makes clear the overt partisan nature of this legislation. Today, Federal employees may not solicit political contributions at all, and that is the way it should be. The bill accepts this principle, but makes one glaring exception for Federal employee PAC's.

Last week, a front-page story on "PAC-man" George Gould, which I have referred to earlier in this debate, reveals what this provision is all about. Make no mistake regarding this provision. It creates an additional political power for Federal employees organizations, an awesome power. Like many of the key operative words in the bill, the term "Federal employee organization" is not defined in the bill or, as far as I am aware, in law.

Thus, there is no legal requirement the Federal employee organization be limited to membership to only Federal employees. Title 5, Definition of Labor Organization for Civil Servants, refers to an organization composed in whole or in part of employees. In whole or in part; that means that employees and nonemployees alike can both be members of the organization.

What this means is that this exception to the ban on soliciting political contributions is not as narrow as many believe. In addition, while many assume that the impact of this exception is limited because Federal employee membership is fragmented among several organizations, the bill does not codify this assumption.

There is nothing in the bill that prevents the formation of a single nationwide network consisting of Federal employees and others who might wish to join. There is nothing that prevents Federal employees from forming one giant network with members of, for example, the AFL-CIO. Or it could be some entirely newly constituted organization.

Under the scenario, any member of the network can solicit contributions, pledges, payments for services, or services themselves from any member of the network, whether or not they are members or Federal employees.

By law, Congress will have created a major political force: Postal employees, Federal employees, and other union employees.

On the basis of the Washington Post article last Wednesday, contributions were made on the basis of 90 percent to the Democratic Party, 10 percent to the Republicans, so it would appear that a new political force would devote its efforts, on the basis of this information, to electing Democratic Party candidates. This bill is overly political. The adoption of the amendment that I will offer would eliminate the most outrageous aspect of this legislation. The amendment does not cure the coercion problem; only preservation of the Hatch Act can do that. But this amendment and its disposition will show the public what has brought the bill to the Senate floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 1608

(Purpose: To prohibit Federal employees from soliciting, accepting, or receiving a political contribution from any person)

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH] proposes an amendment numbered 1608:

On page 4, line 11, beginning with the comma strike out all through line 19 and insert in lieu thereof "; or".

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, my amendment would strike from the bill the ability of Federal employees to solicit political contributions from other Federal employees who belong to the same employee organization. This is not current law. Federal employees cannot solicit from other Federal employees today. This amendment would conform S. 135 to current law. I believe, if this amendment fails and the current provisions are retained in S. 135, we are setting a very dangerous precedent permitting political contribution solicitation by Federal employees.

More than 100 years ago, the Supreme Court upheld a prohibition against Federal employees contributing to or soliciting other Federal employees for political purposes. This legislation would repeal a similar provision in current law.

In 1882, the Supreme Court considered a case, Ex parte Curtis, which arose before the major civil service reforms of both the Pendleton Act and the employee protections of the Lloyd-LaFollette Act and the Hatch Act itself. In this case, the Supreme Court upheld a prohibition against Federal officials or employees contributing to or soliciting other Federal employees for political purposes. The Court held that:

If contributions from those in public employment may be solicited by others in official authority, it is easy to see that what begins as a request may end as a demand, and that a failure to meet the demand may be treated by those having the power of removal as a breach of some supposed duty, growing out of the political relations of the parties. Contributions secured under such circumstances will quite as likely be made to avoid the consequences of personal displeasure of a superior, as to promote the political views of the contributor . . . the law contemplates no restrictions upon either giving or receiving, except so far as may be necessary to protect, in some degree, those in the public service against exactions through fear of personal loss. No one can for a moment doubt that in * * * these statutes the object was to protect the classes of officials and employees provided for from being compelled to make contributions for such purposes through fear of dismissal if they refused.

Mr. President, I have been more interested in what has not been said by those who are advocating S. 135 than by what has been said, and well they might remain silent, because I think when it becomes clear as to what the real thrust of this legislation is, the American people will, indeed, be concerned.

Let me point out that essentially what this basic legislation would do would be to create the potential for national Federal and postal PAC's. It would create the situation where far more money could be collected than is currently possible, and I would just like to point out that these organizations already do pretty well, as we have already pointed out from the recent Washington Post article; something like a total of $769,000 was passed out to political candidates by one group—$769,000. That is, indeed, a lot of money. And that, I might point out, is only one of the union PAC's. As I have said before, it is ironical to me that we have legislation before us at this stage to expand PAC's to make it possible for Federal employees to dun other employees if they are members of the same employee organization at the very time it has been announced that the next, or at least in the next few days we will be considering legislation to reform campaigns. And central to that campaign reform is to eliminate, or at least to reduce, PAC's. And yet here we have a legislative proposal to expand PAC's.

I might point out, if you look at this chart, what we are really talking about is a number of postal and Federal unions that have contributed very substantially in recent elections. For example, take the case of the American Federation of Government Employees. In the last election, it donated $195,000 to Democrats, $15,000 to Republicans. Or, to break it down by percentage points, 92.5 to Democrats, 7.5 to Republicans; the American Postal Workers Union, 93 percent Democrat, 7 percent Republican; National Association of Letter Carriers, 90 percent Democrats, 10 percent Republicans; National Rural Letter Carriers, 81 percent Democrats, 18.8 percent Republicans; National Treasury Union employees, 94.2 percent Democrats, 5.8 percent Republican; National Association of Postal Supervisors, 85.8 percent Democrats, 14.2 percent Republicans; National Association of Postmasters, 72.7 Democrats, 27.3 Republicans; and National League of Postmasters, 67.5 Democrats, 32.5 Republicans.

I just would point out according to this chart, that means of the total money given in 1987, 1988, 88 percent went to Democrats, 11.9 to Republicans; in 1985-86 92.2 percent was given to Democrats, 7.8 percent by Republicans.

I might say, Mr. President, these PAC's, like other PAC's have done very well in collecting funds. Of course, they certainly have the right to donate or contribute to whoever they want. But what concerns us here is twofold: First, there is a growing consensus that something ought to be done to limit PAC's; not to expand but to limit, if not to limit them outright. But instead of reducing, instead of limiting, S. 135 expands. I think this chart shows very well why that is the goal and the objective.

I might also point out that it would mean at least these numbers are probably not as large as they could be, because there are 680,000 postal employees, in the unions, and 300,000 Federal employes in the unions.

So it is entirely probable, at least possible, that considerable funds, more funds will be collected as a result of this legislation if it were to become law. As I said, it is ironic that this is at the very time when we are considering legislation to reduce, if not outright eliminate PAC's.

A second matter on which the advocates of this legislation are very silent—and I can understand why—is what could occur under S. 135 is the creation of a potential for a national network of Federal and postal employees. This legislation provides that Federal employees can campaign—I might say not only can, but it encourages them to campaign—and get involved in partisan politics off duty. And what a network.

Let me just point out we could take the postal employees alone. They reach into every district, into every State, and through their mail delivery service you would have one of the greatest networks available to any political organization.

We all know, those of us who have campaigned, that one of the most difficult things is to deliver your campaign literature to every household in your State or your district. Under this law, all that would have to be done is to get your postal employees on Sunday, an off-duty day, and have them distribute on that day all your literature. What a beautiful natural political organization would be available. Why not? Why not move in that direction?

Mr. President, the purpose of the Federal Government, the purpose of the Federal laws, is to serve the American people—not the Democrats, not the Republicans, but the American people. The purpose of the Hatch Act has been to assure the American people that the laws of the Federal Government will be administered fairly, and squarely, and in a nonpartisan way.

Presidents, going way back to George Washington, have been concerned, deeply concerned that Federal employees might use the position to influence in a partisan way. They recognize that it was wrong, under our form of Government, to permit that kind of Federal influence.

It was not until 1939 that it was corrected. It was corrected by the passage of the Hatch Act, that very carefully worked out a balance between the interests of the Federal employees to exercise their right to vote as American citizens, and at the same time to ensure the American people that their laws were going to be administered in a fair and nonpartisan manner.

As I have said in a number of cases, you know, how would you feel trying to get a Government contract, where the individual responsible for awarding the contract has been, in off-duty hours, very involved in either Democratic or Republican politics? Assuming that you are of the opposite party, and that is a well-known fact, are you going to have much confidence in the administration of the laws when the person responsible for determining who will be awarded the contract is an active participant in the opposite political party? The answer is no.

So that S. 135 just opens a whole door to a return of spoils politics.

Let me say the enactment of the Hatch Act was a great triumph. That law, I might say again, was enacted under a Democratic President, and a Democratic Congress. It has served the American people well, and it has served the Federal employees well for the 50 years it has been in effect. No wonder we have so many employees who do not want to change. Roughly 70 percent of the Federal employees either oppose or are neutral about any change, so that it becomes very clear that there is no mass movement among the Federal employees for enactment of S. 135.

As I said earlier, the idea of a neutral nonpartisan Federal bureaucracy is something that has been seen as important from the days of George Washington. I think it is interesting to see that Thomas Jefferson, the Nation's third President, was among the first to express concern about the issue of political activity on the part of Government employees. In response to Jefferson's concerns, the heads of the executive department issued an order which stated that while it is the right of any officer, that is Federal employee, to give his vote in elections as a qualified citizen, it is expected that he will not attempt to influence the vote of others nor take part in the business of electioneering, that being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the Constitution.

It was deemed inconsistent with the Constitution at the beginning of our Republic. There is nothing that really has changed the situation today.

Our distinguished chairman of Governmental Affairs said last week, that the legislation before us, S. 135, does not significantly expand the ability to collect funds for PAC's. To be specific he said:

> Mr. President, I would respond by saying that the intention was right now only the elected union leaders could do this, and for a large organization, to let them delegate that to some of the other people. I think it only makes common sense that that is what would be done under any other PAC's, I believe.
> I see no reason they should be prohibited here. I do not think you are going to see under this any great flood of people, where everybody is dunning everybody else within a particular union or employee organization for money. That was not the intent. Nor would it actually operate that way.

So this was not meant to open any floodgates, nor do I see how it would. I read the specifics here a moment ago as to exactly who can and who cannot solicit money now, and who would and would not be able to solicit funds after S. 135 is passed. And it hardly varies at all. So I do not see the difference here.

Well, Mr. President, I have to respectfully, but strongly, disagree with that statement. This legislation would open the floodgates.

Just let me, once again, emphasize and underscore that under current law, no Federal employee can solicit contributions from a fellow employee on duty or off duty, whether they are a member of the same union or employee organization or not. The prohibition is clear. What S. 135 provides is that the Federal employee can, so-called off duty, dun his fellow employee for voluntary contributions, whether it be in the form of money or services, or whatever.

Let me point out, I cited in the figures a few minutes ago that you have in the postal unions 680,000 employees. That means that they would be eligible under S. 135 to solicit off duty contributions from their fellow employees, whether it is a request to make a financial contribution, to buy a ticket to a campaign dinner, or whether it is for some kind of services. Maybe it is just filling envelopes or, as I said, it could be on Sunday to deliver the campaign mail of a candidate. You also have 300,000 employees in Federal employee unions. So you have roughly a million employees who under this legislation would, for the first time in modern times, be able to be solicited from.

So this is a very, very significant change. I can understand why the members of the other great party would be favorably disposed, but I think it is a mistake at this juncture, at this moment of history, when we will be addressing the problem of campaign reform, to make these major changes in who could collect PAC's.

I want to point out that my amendment does not abolish or limit PAC's. We are hoping that is going to be done in the next week or two when it becomes part of the campaign reform legislation. What my amendment does, it eliminates from this bill the provision which expands the role and significance of Federal employee organization PAC's. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation. I yield the floor.

Mr. GLENN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator GLENN is recognized.

Mr. GLENN. No matter how many times it is said from the other side that this expands or loosens the Hatch Act, it just does not do that. My distinguished colleague from Delaware has made a big thing out of the fact that we have PAC contributions here from some of the Government employee unions, and it shows very decidedly, I admit—I give that going in—that these people feel that their interests have been best served by the Democratic Party, obviously, or they would not give that kind of money.

I think it would be far more fair if we trotted out all the different PAC's. When labor came up with PAC's years ago, it was followed immediately by business PAC's. I did not bring with me today a listing of all the PAC's and who they have given to, but I submit I can trot out charts like this all day and all night that show different organizations of business and other interests to whom the lopsided contributions are just as much in favor of the Republicans as this is in favor of the Democrats.

So to pick out one particular item here—I do not think it is one particular group of unions like this, although they are involved with the Hatch Act and are Government employees; but to think that we are trying to somehow set up a situation where they are going to be benefited enough and this is the reason for this, as was charged here on the floor the other day, that we are trying to set this up because it is an election year, and this is somehow supposed to tremendously benefit the Democrats is just ludicrous.

How about NCPAC, Chamber of Commerce, NAM, AMA, and a bunch more. I do not have a complete listing. To whom do they give the bulk of their funds? At least some of those organizations are very heavy contributors to Republicans, and much lighter contributors to Democrats. So this business of playing games with which PAC contributes to whom is something that I think we ought to be careful with.

I was handed a list here, and I have not read it myself. But I am told that among the top 50 money raisers in 1987 and 1988 were the National Security PAC; they did the Willie Horton ad. Remember that one? The American Medical Association, NRA, Political Victory Fund, National Congressional Club—that, one of our distinguished Senators has—Campaign America, National Auto Dealers Association, National Conservative PAC, NCPAC, RUFF PAC, National Right To Life PAC, Congressional Victory '88, Citizens for the Republic. All of these are ones I believe that would show close to the same benefit to the Republicans that you show for Democrats on this particular chart here in front of me. We could get information on the rest of them.

Mr. President, just as an aside, it would be my intention however to talk for about another 7 or 8 minutes and be prepared to move to table the amendment at an appropriate time. I do not wish to cut off debate, but perhaps we can agree on an approximate time that will occur. Can the distinguished floor manager on the Republican side give me an estimate of how much time he may need to speak yet on this before we vote?

Mr. ROTH. I say to the distinguished chairman, I am not in a position to say how much longer. I share his interest and concern in trying to bring a vote as rapidly as possible.

Mr. GLENN. I understand that. It would be my intention, unless there is serious objection, to move to table at, say, 5:45. And people who want to speak on this can come to the floor, and they can be advised that is probably what we will do, unless there is serious objection. I do not want to force a vote, if we are really exchanging views and are going to illuminate the subject more. I hope we can move to table this by 5:45.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, if that is in the form of a request, I am compelled to object, and I do object. But as I said, it is my intent and hope to expedite action on this amendment, as the chairman desires.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, S. 135 does retain restrictions on political fundraising activities by Federal workers. All these boogeymen we seem to trot out here on the floor in debate just are not realistic. Some think, to use the words of my distinguished colleague, that this is going to result in a giant network across the country of fundraising capability never before seen, a national network he referred to even after that, and I submit whatever networking can be done can be done right now. That is not prohibitive for these particular organizations now, I do not believe, if there is to be any great networking, because what we permit within this bill is not something like that at all, beyond anything that they could do right at this moment. S. 135 does not expand the capability in any way.

To the extent to which Federal employees would be able to engage in any political fundraising activity it would be strictly limited under this legislation. Federal workers would not be able to solicit political contributions from anyone except other members of their employee organizations.

Furthermore, solicitations could only be made on behalf of their organization's political committee. And under S. 135 Federal employees cannot solicit funds on behalf of individual candidates nor can they solicit funds for other PAC's or political parties. Fundraising cannot be conducted while the employee is on duty, while in uniform, or while using a Government vehicle.

What does this mean? It means that Federal employees cannot solicit general contributions from the general public. It means that a Federal worker will not be able to solicit contributions on behalf of the candidate of their choice from anyone. You are still limited. It means that no partisan political activity can occur during working hours even if it involves two members of the same Federal employee organization. What more protection can there be than that? So this does not open things up.

There has been considerable rhetoric from the other side, the big scare, if you will, concerning just what S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill, provides in the solicitation of campaign contributions and the operation of political action committees.

Let us just set the record straight on both current law and on S. 135. Under current law, the Hatch Act does not mention political action committees at all. The reason for this is that PAC's as such did not exist when the law was enacted in 1939. The rules governing the establishment and operations of PAC's are the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971. That governs PAC's, not the Hatch Act.

As we all know, under the 1971 act, any group of individuals, management or union employees of a private company, Federal employees, any group of individuals with a common interest—for example, the conservatively leaning individuals who joined together to form what was called NCPAC, a group I am sure my colleagues on the other side of the aisle remember—any group could band together to form a PAC.

Once again the rules for establishing and operating a PAC are not in the Hatch Act. They are in the Federal election laws. Among the authorities vested in a PAC under the Federal elections laws is the authority for each PAC to decide on its own rules concerning which of its members may solicit contributions for the PAC. This is covered under the FEC now, under the Federal election laws, not under the Hatch Act. They set their own rules. That is provided in law.

However, when it comes to the involvement in PAC operations by a Federal employee, be it a PAC operated by a Federal employee group or a PAC such as NCPAC to which a Federal employee belongs, a provision of the Hatch Act does come into play because the Hatch Act prohibits Federal employees from active—active—participation in partisan political activities.

Somewhere among all those 3,000 rules that we have talked about is one that concludes that soliciting for a PAC or rather soliciting others to become members of a PAC which is different and constitutes active participation.

Let me read that again. There is a rule that concludes that soliciting for a PAC or rather soliciting others to become members of a PAC constitutes active participation.

So what we have now is a set of laws. One allows any group of individuals including Federal employees to band together to form a PAC and another which says that while Federal employees can join or band together among themselves or with others, they cannot play an active role in the PAC.

That Federal employees currently participate in or have PAC's has been well established by my colleagues who have been waving around certain articles from the Washington Post. But, of course, they did not need a newspaper to tell them about those Federal employee PAC's. A good many of them have, including several of my very worthy opponents on the matter before us have, in fact, received money from those PAC's. But we will not discuss that here today nor is it really that pertinent as I see it.

But what does S. 135 do? What does it change? Well, it is very simple. S. 135 simply allows current Federal employees to play an active role in the operation of any PAC to which they may belong—only the operation of the PAC to which they may belong—so long as that PAC is comprised solely of Federal employees.

Further, S. 135 simply provides that a Federal employee PAC will no longer have to go through the charade of seeking out a retired member or hiring someone to operate their PAC. S. 135 simply puts the Federal employee PAC on an equal footing and allows them to operate under the same rules as any other PAC which is determined by the Federal Election Commission. S. 135 does not allow Federal employees to participate actively in PAC's having other than Federal employees and retirees as members. In other words, you cannot use this to go off and raise money and do things in other PAC's someplace. It does not allow Federal employees to participate actively in PAC's having other than Federal employees—it could not be outside, for instance—and retirees as members.

A Federal employee who belongs to NCPAC still will not be able to actively participate in that PAC because it has members who are not Federal employees. The bill does not allow employees to solicit private citizens. It does not increase the money pool for Federal employee PAC's. And it does not usurp from the election laws the rules governing who may or may not establish PAC's. That is determined by the FEC and this has nothing to do with that.

Federal and postal employees have PAC's right now. S. 135 simply allows them to operate the way other PAC's operate in accordance with Federal law. If we vote to change current law, then these Federal and postal employee PAC's would operate in accordance with those changes. And if we voted to change Federal law to ban all PAC's, then these PAC's would also cease to exist.

Mr. President, I obviously rise in opposition to this amendment. What we do in S. 135 in no way opens up all these floodgates of giant networks and national networks and things beyond what people have been capable of doing up to now under existing law.

So this is not any great opening up at all. It is, as I have said many times on the floor here, basically a clarification of very confusing Hatch Act interpretations. This will sort all that out by saying that there are still restrictions on Federal employees. They cannot go outside on their off-duty time when they are not on the job. They cannot run for public office. They cannot solicit for contributions outside by the general public. And on the job then they cannot do anything politically. Now that clarifies it.

We do not need that hotline for people. We do not need a law on the books and interpretations on the books so confusing. As my colleague indicated a while ago, there is a hotline that Government employees can call to find out what they are permitted to do and not do. Now, what a law. What a law. It has been interpreted so many different ways we have to establish a Government hotline and pay for it with taxpayer dollars. I do not know how much that costs, but we now have a national network where people can call in and find out: "Can I hold a poster at a political campaign? Can I contribute something or can I not? May I stuff envelopes? Or am I prohibited?"

Well, that and a thousand other questions will be asked on the hotline.

What we try to do with S. 135 is very simply set this whole thing up with a way where it will be simple, it will be very straightforward, it will be understandable and people will not need that hotline to find out whether they are breaking the law or not. That is the purpose of S. 135.

Mr. President, I do not know whether other speakers are available. I know there are none on our side of the aisle. I would be prepared to vote on this as soon as the distinguished author of the amendment is prepared to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH].

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, first let me point out that what we seek to do by my amendment is very simple. What we are seeking to do is eliminate any reference to PAC's. As I said earlier, the next major piece of legislation presumably to come before the Senate is the question of campaign reform. If we are going to either expand or reduce or modify—or eliminate them, as I hope we will—then I think any reference to PAC's ought to be eliminated in the legislation before us.

We all know one of the major thrusts of campaign reform is to make major changes in PAC contributions. Those reforms should apply to all PAC's. I agree they should apply to PAC's that substantially give to Republicans just as much as they apply to those that give substantially to Democrats. What we are trying to do is create, in campaign reform, an approach that will have the support and confidence of the American people.

So it seems ironic to me, as I said earlier, that as we get ready to address the problem of campaign reform, PAC reform, that we have legislation before us that would expand PAC activity—admittedly for Federal employees—but of PAC's that are also, obviously, seen to benefit the Democratic Party.

Ninety percent of the contributions of the PAC's that would be affected by the legislation under discussion today goes to Democrats; 10 percent to Republicans. So from the partisan political point of view I can well understand why they are seeking to expand the opportunity of these PAC's to increase their contributions. Perhaps that should be done. I think not. I think the American consensus is that we ought to at least restrict, if not outright prohibit, PAC's. But in any event we ought to consider the whole ball of wax when campaign reform comes up and not as part of the Hatch Act.

My distinguished chairman says in his opinion the legislation before us does not change the treatment of these PAC's. It takes me back to a statement I made several days ago: Read the legislation. Read the legislation, because this proposed law will very substantially change the method of operation of PAC's sponsored by Federal union employees.

Under the current law it is very clearly said that an employee may not seek a political contribution from a fellow employee. In section 7323 the Hatch Act currently provides that a Federal employee, except when appointed by the President by and with the advice of the Senate, "may not request or receive from or give to an employee, a Member of Congress, or an officer of a uniformed service, a thing of value for political purposes."

It goes on to say that "An employee who violates this section shall be removed from the service."

So we have an outright, total prohibition against a Federal employee soliciting funds from another employee. And that is exactly what this proposed law, S. 135, proposes to change. It would permit a Federal employee to solicit a fellow employee who is off duty and a member of the same employee organization.

Let me point out the term "employee organization" is nowhere defined. The distinguished chairman says that a Federal employee would not be permitted, if I understood him correctly, to solicit funds from any non-Federal employee when, in fact, under the vague and ambiguous language of S. 135, it would be possible.

What S. 135 provides is that a Federal employee can solicit funds from other members of employee organizations. It does not say all the members of the organization have to be employees. They can be nonemployees. Under this specific language of this S. 135, the Federal employee could solicit from those nonemployee members of the organization.

But more important is the fact that we have at least 1 million individuals who are members of these employee organizations who cannot, today, solicit from each other. And I agree with the distinguished chairman, these PAC organizations have done very well, and well they might. They are operating perfectly legally and according to their goals and desires.

But what we are trying to prevent is Federal employees from soliciting each other. And that is exactly what S. 135 would permit to be done.

So, again, S. 135 represents a very major change in the treatment of PAC's of Federal employee organizations. It is not just a slight little modification but one that would enable them to not only, let me point out, solicit from their fellow employee contributions, cash contributions, but services as well.

Again, I repeat, it will make a wonderful political organization because under this proposal, under S. 135, on Sunday it would be permissible for the postal carrier to deliver campaign mail to every house in the United States, something I think either political party would love to have at their beck and call.

Let me address one additional point. It is not true that employees can network today. Because under the Hatch Act, it forbids an employee from taking part in political management or political campaigns, and that, of course, would include networking. Under S. 135, the contrary is true.

But again I would like to point out to my distinguished colleague, the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, and to my colleagues in the Senate, that what we seek to do by my amendment is very simple.

We would strike all reference to PAC's. We would ensure that it remains neutral on that score so that next week or whenever we take up campaign reform, PAC's could be treated in its entirety, whether they are Government PAC's or private industry PAC's or public service PAC's.

I urge my colleagues adopt my amendment.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, there have been many misrepresentations made about S. 135 since the beginning of this debate. But no misrepresentation is greater, I believe, than the one uttered by my distinguished colleague from Delaware when he said S. 135 would expand the PAC's currently operating.

Let us examine this claim. I could ask a series of questions. I could ask: Does S. 135 require any Federal or postal employee to contribute to a PAC? The answer is no. Current law does not require it. In fact, S. 135 creates additional stiff penalties for attempted coercion in this area.

The word "coercion" has been brought up many times in this debate. We have applied stiffer penalties for coercion. We have that written into S. 135. The Robb amendment did that the other day. It is now included as part of S. 135. So it is tougher than the Hatch Act in that regard.

Another question: Does S. 135 make it easier to form another Federal employee PAC? The answer is no. The rules for forming employee organizations or PAC's are not addressed by S. 135 at all. In fact, it is not even in the Hatch Act. That is covered by the Federal Elections Commission.

Another question: Does S. 135 allow solicitation of PAC contributions at times that are currently prohibited under the Hatch Act? The answer is no. S. 135 allows no political activity, including solicitation. No political activity, no political contributions, no nothing by Federal employees while they are on the job. That is tougher.

Mr. President, I submit that there is no merit to the claim that S. 135 expands existing PAC's in any way. I believe the amendment is based on a false claim. I believe it stems from general opposition to any political activity by Federal employees. For that reason, I feel it should be defeated.

So, Mr. President, I do not plan to prolong this. I am prepared, as I indicated earlier, to move to table the amendment at 5:45. It is now 5:45. I would like to know if there is any further discussion on the other side before I move to table the amendment.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, let me just underscore one more time what I have been saying, because the distinguished chairman, in my judgment, sets up certain straw men and then knocks them down.

For example, he says, No. 1, it does not change the rules or laws on how PAC's can be formed. On that, we agree. I never argued that this particular legislation changed the process for creating PAC's.

No. 2, the distinguished chairman says that that sets up the straw man that I apparently said that employees can solicit campaign contributions on duty. I never made that charge. It is true that S. 135 specifically provides that you may not solicit campaign contributions while on duty.

What I have said is that it makes a very significant difference in the fact that today Federal employees cannot solicit voluntary contributions either on duty or off duty. But what S. 135 permits is for Federal employees to solicit contributions from each other, as well as other members of employee organizations, off duty. That is a very significant change. What its impact exactly will be, no one will know until it becomes law and, hopefully, that will not happen.

But what I seek to do here is to neutralize S. 135 with respect to PAC's, to strike the language that would expand the ability or enable the employees to solicit each other so that when we take up campaign reform next week, or whenever, we can deal with the problem of PAC's in its entirety, and not piecemeal, as would be provided under the current version of S. 135.

Mr. President, I am ready for a vote.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the motion to table the amendment of the Senator from Delaware.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORE). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 63, nays 35, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

Wilson

So the motion to lay on the table amendment No. 1608 was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GLENN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, there will be futher rollcall votes today.

Under the current schedule, a cloture vote on the bill will occur 1 hour after the Senate convenes tomorrow morning.

I have been discussing with the distinguished Republican leader and the managers of the bill an agreement which would permit us to withdraw the cloture motion and proceed to a vote on final passage of the bill sometime tomorrow during the day which agreement would also include limitation and identification of the remaining amendments to the bill so that any Senators who have an interest in this matter should be alert to that fact, and we are going to attempt to get that agreement shortly. Any Senator who has an interest should make his interest known or be present on the floor.

Mr. President, I suggest the absense of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanmous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the cloture vote scheduled for tomorrow, Thursday, be vitiated and that no later than 4 p.m. on tomorrow, Thursday, May 10, the Senate proceed to third reading of S. 135; that the Governmental Affairs Committee then be discharged of H.R. 20; that all after the enacting clause be stricken and the text of S. 135, as amended, be substituted in lieu thereof and the Senate then proceed without any intervening action or debate to third reading and final passage of H.R. 20; that no motions to recommit be in order; and that the following be the only first-degree amendments remaining in order to S. 135 and that they be subject to relevant second-degree amendments. Those amendments are: An amendment by Senator DOLE regarding agency exceptions, NSA; an amendment by Senator DOLE, regarding agency exceptions, IRS, No. 1595; an amendment by Senator DOLE regarding agency exceptions, FEC, No. 1596; an amendment by Senator DOLE regarding agency exceptions; Department of Justice, No. 1597; an amendment by Senator DOLE regarding agency exceptions, CIA, No. 1598; an amendment by Senator DOLE regarding agency exceptions, DIA, No. 1599. Senator DOLE reserves the right to offer these amendments either separately as listed or combined in some form.

An amendment by Senator DOMENICI regarding return to current law re:PAC's and eliminate certain agencies; an amendment by Senator DOMENICI regarding intelligence and law enforcement agencies; an amendment by Senator SIMPSON regarding the striking of Federal employee organizations and insertion of Federal labor organization, No. 1606; an amendment by Senator GLENN regarding restrictions on activities and/or certain employees.

If by 4 p.m. on tomorrow any of the above listed amendments have not been disposed of, the Senator offering the amendment be recognized to offer the amendment which would then be debated for 10 minutes equally divided and in the usual form; and that, if a second-degree amendment is offered to any such amendment, the second-degree amendment be subject also to a 10-minute time limitation on debate equally divided and in the usual form.

I further ask unanimous consent that the majority leader, after consultation with the Republican leader, may at any time proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 485, S. 137, the campaign finance reform bill; that prior to the close of business on Friday, May 11, the majority leader be recognized to move to proceed to Calendar item No. 523, S. 2240, the AIDS, CARE bill, and at that point, a cloture motion will be filed on the motion to proceed; that following the period for morning business on Monday, May 14, the Senate resume consideration of the motion to proceed to S. 2240 for debate only; that the cloture vote on the motion to proceed to S. 2240 occur at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, May 15, and that the live quorum under rule XXII be wavied.

Mr. President, I am authorized to state that this agreement has been cleared by and approved by the distinguished Republican leader who had to leave the floor because of another engagement and that this has been cleared by the Republican leader, I am advised by his staff at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The text of the agreement is as follows:

Ordered, That on Thursday, May 10, 1990, when the Senate resumes consideration of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform amendments, the following amendments be the only amendments in order, that they be first degree amendments only, and that they be subject to relevant second degree amendments:

Dole—Agency exceptions,NSA;

Dole—Agency exceptions,IRS No. 1595;

Dole—Agency exceptions,FEC No. 1596;

Dole—Agency exceptions,Dept. of Justice No. 1597;

Dole—Agency exceptions,CIA No. 1598;

Dole—Agency exceptions,DIA No. 1599;

Domenici—Return to current law re: PAC's and eliminate certain agencies;

Domenici—Intelligence and law enforcement agenices;

Simpson—Strike Federal employee organization and insert Federal labor organization No. 1606; and Glenn—Restriction on activities and/or certain employees.

Ordered further, That the Senator from Kansas (Mr. Dole) reserves the right to offer his above listed amendments separately or in any combination thereof.

Ordered further, That no later than 4 p.m. on Thursday, May 10, 1990, the Senate proceed to third reading of S. 135, that the Governmental Affairs Committee be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 20, the House companion bill, that all after the enacting clause be stricken, that the text of S. 135, as amended, be substituted in lieu thereof, and the Senate, without any intervening action or debate, proceed to third reading and final passage of H.R. 20.

Ordered further, That if by 4 p.m. on Thursday, any of the identified amendments have not yet been offered, then the Senator may be recognized to offer the amendment on which there will be 10 minutes debate, to be equally divided and controlled in the usual form, with 10 minutes debate on any second degree amendment.

Ordered further, That no motions to recommit be in order. (May 9, 1990)

Ordered further, That the majorty leader, after consultation with the Republican leader, be authorized to proceed to the consideration of S. 137, the Campaign Financing Reform Act. (May 9, 1990)

Ordered further, That prior to the close of business on Friday, May 11, 1990, the majority leader be recognized to move to proceed to S. 2240, the AIDS C.A.R.E bill, and at that point a cloture motion will be filed on the motion. (May 9, 1990)

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

USAF COL. CHARLES E. SHELTON, OWENSBORO, KY

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, today many Americans assume that the Vietnam conflict is over and that it officially ended in May 1975, some 15 years ago. However, this is not totally true. There are approximately 2,000 American men unaccounted for, of which all but one have been declared officially dead in accordance with the Missing Persons Act, title 37, United States Code.

This American's name is Col. Charles Ervin Shelton, Serial No. 401384899FV, from Owensboro, KY, who served admirably in the U.S. Air Force.

Mr. President, on April 29, 1965, Colonel Shelton's 33d birthday, he was piloting a RF101C during a routine reconnaissance mission over the Sam Neau Province of Laos. At 11:58 a.m. on that date, Shelton was shot from the sky by hostile fire. Another American pilot witnessed Shelton parachuting to the ground, but Shelton informed the pilot by radio contact that he was safe. Shelton waited at this spot for 3 days to be rescued, as the weather was too severe for the Army helicopters. However, the rescue did not occur, and according to a village witness, Shelton was captured by Pathet Lao Forces. This capture was later confirmed by U.S. rallier reports.

Three years after his capture, according to a CIA report, Shelton was escorted to a North Vietnamese Army Office by three Communist soldiers. The soldiers were attempting to chain Shelton to a desk when he managed to obtain the chain and killed them in self-defense.

In 1971, Colonel Shelton and another American were briefly rescued, but were later recaptured by the Vietnamese. Later that year, Shelton's wife Marian and Louisville Courier-Journal newspaper reporter entered Laos in search of Shelton. However, their search was unsuccessful.

No, Mr. President, the Vietnam war will not be truely behind us until we can account for the nearly 2,000 missing Americans. Their families, and the entire American public, deserve to know the exact disposition of these Americans who honorably served their country in an unfavorable situation at home. They did their part, and we owe them the same in return.

There are those in our Government who say that Colonel Shelton has been allowed to remain the sole American POW for symbolic reasons. However, there are others who indicate there is a possibility that he may be alive. The U.S. Treasury continues to issue monthly checks to Shelton's wife, made payable to Charles E. Shelton. Shelton was a captain in the Air Force when he was shot down. Today, after numerous promotions, he holds the rank of colonel. Because it is uncustomary to promote or pay deceased soldiers, many believe Shelton may be alive.

Mr. President, today I urge President Bush to issue a directive that all appropriate steps will be taken to account for those missing in Southeast Asia. May 24, 1990, will mark the 25th anniversary of Shelton's capture.

Furthermore, I would urge that the President proclaim May 24, 1990 as Col. Charles E. Shelton Day, in memory of Shelton and all other missing American servicemen who served in Vietnam. It would serve as a reminder that we have not forgotten them and the honorable service they gave to this country.

Col. Charles E. Shelton, you are not forgotten.

Thank you, Mr. President.

SMALL BUSINESS: LEADING AMERICA INTO THE 21ST CENTURY

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. President, I rise today in recognition of the outstanding achievements and contributions the small businesses of America have brought to our society. The zealous and innovative spirit which led out pioneers across this uncharted continent leads our small business owners today in a business climate that offers new challenges and practices in this new global marketplace.

The theme for this week is "Small Business: Leading America Into the 21st Century", I believe it is appropriately named as the small businesses are demonstrating their creative and inventive talents in adapting to global markets and new product designs. In the wake of the political changes in Eastern Europe are new economic freedoms. The changing Eastern European countries are turning to the small business community in the United States to study how the free enterprise system works in a democratic society.

I am very proud of the accomplishments of small business in the United States. With over 20 million small businesses in America today, small businesses employ 6 out of every 10 working people. Small businesses also "account for the majority of new jobs and are more immediately responsive to changing demographics, economic patterns, and shifting markets than larger firms."

The pioneers and the entrepreneurs of small business should be commended this week, and should be remembered as we draft and pass legislation which affects the business community. In speaking with business leaders in North Carolina I have come to understand how our spending priorities affect our small businesses. I have heard complaints from small business owners that there is a lack of adequately skilled and literate workers. I have heard complaints from small business owners that there is insufficient roadway systems for consumer and manufacturer accessibility. I have also heard complaints from business leaders about the increasing costs of capital.

I would hope that we in Congress adopt the spirit of the small business person and strive to be creative and innovative in providing funding for our human resource and education programs to ensure that our public is literate and employable. And I also hope we possess the courage of the pioneers as we work to deal with the increasing Federal deficit and growing budget problems.

Lastly, Mr. President, I would like to congratulate every small business person in America, and express my appreciation to them for their determination and their many achievements. I especially would like to extend my congratulations to Mr. Tony A. Pope, president of Catawba Transportation Group, Inc., of Claremont, NC, the State small business winner from North Carolina. Mr. Pope, through his family business, exhibits the dedication and drive that is so characteristic of small business leaders. I hope that we continue to recognize the many benefits brought to our society through the small businesses of America, and try our best in Congress to emulate their courage and conviction to purpose.

MUST SIGNAL SUPPORT OF COLOMBIAN DEMOCRACY

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the recent foiled plan by the Medellin drug cartel to purchase sophisticated stinger antiaircraft missiles and other advanced United States weapons demonstrates the degree to which the drug cartels will go to undermine and destabilize democracy in Colombia.

According to reports, the suspects involved in the scheme expressed an urgent need to have the weapons delivered before the May 27 Presidential elections; and by their own admission, these stingers were to be used "to shoot down Colombian Government helicopters" and "to send a message because the Government was getting too close to Pablo Escobar." It is clear the drug cartels will do whatever is necessary to build a public consensus against the Colombian Government's antinarcotic efforts, even if it means bringing down the Government.

Three Presidential candidates already have been assassinated by the drug cartels. How many more must be murdered? Hundreds of police officials, judges, and innocent men, women, and children have been murdered by the drug traffickers. How many more must be victimized by this callous disregard for democratic rule, disrespect for the rule of law, and indifference to human rights?

Mr. President, it should be clear by now that the drug cartels will go to any extreme to satisfy their ambitions.

Despite these actions and threats, the government of President Virgilio Barco and the Colombian people refuse to be intimidated. Their courage to fight the drug cartels demonstrates their commitment to democracy and respect for human rights. The U.S. commitment to assist these efforts should be no less. We have an obligation to give the Colombian people the best possible assets to fight the drug cartels. Moreover, we have an obligation to protect our own law enforcement personnel and equipment already helping in this effort. To further this endeavor, the Senate unanimously passed one of my amendments last week to H.R. 4404, the emergency supplemental appropriations bill. My amendment directs the President to use his authority to lease Cobra gunship helicopters to the Colombian National Police to fly cover and protect government aircraft and antinarcotic operations. These helicopters are desperately needed to meet this threat. In a letter supporting my amendment, Colombian Ambassador Victor Mosquera Chaux wrote:

Your proposal is very timely. The drug trafficking organizations are continuing to wage a campaign of terror and violence against Colombian society, and the government must press harder in its attempts to dismantle these groups. The Cobra gunships would provide much needed firecover to our transport helicopters when flying missions into dangerous territory. Unarmed transport helicopters can become easy targets for automatic weapon or missile fire and have a higher inherent risk of loss of equipment and human lives. The Cobra escort helicopters would decrease the dangers involved in drug interdiction operations conducted by our security forces.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues in the Senate and House who are conferees to the supplemental appropriations bill to make my proposal part of the conference report. This timely action will send the signal to the drug cartels that the United States is committed to supporting the Government of Colombia's efforts to maintain democracy, rule of law, and respect for human rights.

TERRY ANDERSON

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to inform my colleagues that today marks the 1,880th day that Terry Anderson has been held in captivity in Beirut.

I would also like to bring tothe attention of the Senate a most unfortunate statement issued yesterday by the leader of the Islamic Amal, a faction of Lebanon's Hezbollah movement. Reconfirming our worst fears of the hostage-takers' Hussein Mussawi, siad that the release of three Israeli soliders thought to be held captive was "impossible" and that prospects for the release of the remaining foreign hostages did not look good.

I ask unanimous consent that the Washington Post article containing the report of Mr. Mussawi's remarks be printed at this point in the Record.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

[Los Angeles Times]

HEZBOLLAH AIDE REJECTS FREEING ISRAELI SOLDIERS

NICOSIA, Cyprus, May 8—A top official of lebanon's pro-Iranian Hezbollah militants declared today that freedom for three captive Israeli servicemen is "impossible" and expressed doubt that the ordeal of the remaining foreign lostags in Beirut will end soon.

Hussein Mussawi, instrumental in the release of two American hostages last month, told the Voice of Lebanon, the Communist Part radio station, that the issue of the hostages has "turned into a very complicated case because of the negative American stand. . . . This year may not witness a solution."

Iranian demands that the United States make a tangible response to the release of the two hostages have focused on Lebanese Shiite prisoners held by Israel.

Israel has reaffirmed its policy against unconditional releases but has said it is prepared to deal on exchanges of prisoners and hostages. It demands the return of the three servicement believed held by Hezbollah in Lebanon.

Mussawi, who heads the Islamic Amal faction, said that American pressure on the Israelis would "have positive effects" but that a swap of the israeli servicement of Shiite and Palestinian prisioners in "impossible." He did not explain his statement, according to Beirut press reports.●

ANNUAL REPORT ON OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 117

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with accompanying reports; which was referred to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources:

To the Congress of the United States:

In accordance with section 26 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (Public Law 91-596; 29 U.S.C. 675), I transmit herewith the 1988 annual reports on activities of the Department of Labor, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission.

GEORGE BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 9, 1990.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 2:46 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, without amendment:

WEED CONTROL ACT

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, today, I am introducing legislation that will improve the control of noxious weeds and reduce their spread. The primary purpose of this bill is to improve the Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974, which aimed to prevent the further spread and introduction of noxious weeds into the United States. As currently written and interpreted, this law provides only partial protection from the invasion and spread of designated species, and new noxious weeds continue to enter the United States at an alarming rate.

Many people may not realize the serious nature of weed problems in our country. Greater emphasis is often placed on controlling insect and disease outbreaks because farmers and landowners see the immediate impact that these organisms have on crops and their land. However, weeds can cause serious long-term economic damage to cropland and natural ecosystems. Many landowners in the Great Plains have been forced to abandon land because it is so seriously infested with noxious weeds. Natural ecosystems are threatened by the introduction and rapid spread of noxious weeds. When these natural areas are infested they no longer benefit wildlife or man.

Conservation Reserve Program [CRP] acreage is also becoming infested with noxious weeds. Many landowners have inadequately controlled weeds on their CRP land. Uncontrolled weeds on CRP are causing aggravation for neighboring landowners and are adding to long-term weed problems. The legislation that I am introducing addresses the failure to control weeds on CRP. Controlling these weeds will require landowner cooperation with Federal, State, and local officials.

Senators BAUCUS and CONRAD have also recognized the serious nature of the noxious weed problem and have introduced legislation to improve control of noxious weeds. I hope to create a package of noxious weed legislation that can improve current law and be part of the new farm bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text and a summary of the bill be printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2596

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Weed Control Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) noxious weeds are not being adequately controlled on Federal, State or private lands;

(2) noxious weeds and other weeds and pests are proliferating on land that is enrolled in the conservation reserve program established under subtitle D of title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985;

(3) weeds are responsible for control costs and losses to agricultural production of over $18,000,000,000 annually;

(4) Federal noxious weed control programs have been under funded; and

(5) noxious weeds are entering and being spread in the United States through methods that cannot be managed under the present scope of the Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974.

(b) PURPOSES.—It is the purpose of this Act—

(1) to amend the Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974 to improve its scope and control authority; and

(2) to improve the management options for weeds and other pests that are found on land enrolled in the conservation reserve established under subtitle D of title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985.

TITLE I—FEDERAL NOXIOUS WEED ACT OF 1974

SEC. 101. DEFINITION OF NOXIOUS WEED.

Section 3(c) of the Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974 (7 U.S.C. 2802(c)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "or not widely prevalent in"; and

(2) by inserting "natural ecosystem" after "fish or wildlife resources".

SEC. 102. NOXIOUS WEED TECHNICAL ADVISORY GROUP.

The Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974 (7 U.S.C. 2801 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 17. NOXIOUS WEED TECHNICAL ADVISORY GROUP.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish within the Department of Agriculture a Noxious Weed Technical Advisory Group (hereinafter referred to in this section as the 'Group') to make recommendations to the Secretary concerning actions taken under this Act.

"(2) COMPOSITION.—The Group shall be made up of representatives of Federal, State, and local agencies and private sector organizations that are involved in the control of noxious weeds.

"(3) DUTIES.—The Group shall—

"(A) develop noxious weed classification criteria and make recommendations concerning which noxious weed species should be included or excluded from such classifications;

"(B) make recommendations to the Secretary concerning methods for improving noxious weed control strategies;

"(C) make recommendations to the Secretary concerning actions to be implemented under this Act; and

"(D) annually prepare and submit, to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate, reports concerning the implementation of this section and the Act.

"(4) DESIGNATION AS NOXIOUS WEEDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, acting through the Group, shall approve plant species recommended by the Group for designation as Federal Noxious Weeds.

"(B) PUBLICATION.—Proposed species that are recommended for designation as a Federal Noxious Weed under subparagraph (A) shall be listed in the Federal Register for a period of 90 days for public comment, and the Secretary shall provide the opportunity for a public hearing on such recommendation if such is necessary.

"(b) FOREIGN WEED NOT LISTED AS A FEDERAL NOXIOUS WEED.—

"(1) EMERGENCY AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall have the authority to prohibit the importation of a noxious weed even though such weed is not included on the Federal Noxious Weed List.

"(2) NOTICE.—The Secretary shall provide public notice of the prohibition on the importation of a weed under paragraph (1), and shall include the reasons for such prohibition in such notice.

"(3) REQUEST BY AGENCIES OR INDIVIDUALS.—State agencies, or members of the general public, who are aware of the importation of a noxious weed that is not included on the Federal Noxious Weed List may request that the Secretary take emergency action under paragraph (1) to prohibit the importation of such weed.

"(4) REVIEW.—The Group shall review all decisions to prohibit the importation of any weed under paragraph (1) during the previous year, to determine whether any weed that is subject to such a prohibition should be placed on Federal Noxious Weeds List.

"(c) CLASSIFICATION OF NOXIOUS WEEDS.—

"(1) DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary shall develop a list of noxious weeds that will allow for an understanding of the status and level of action being taken against specific noxious weeds that shall be based on the following classification system.

"(A) CATEGORY I.—Federal Noxious Weeds identified as such in the United States for which Federal funding for the control or eradication of such through Federal or State cooperative projects has been appropriated prior to the date of enactment of this section.

"(B) CATEGORY II.—Federal Noxious Weeds identified as such in the United States for which Federal funding for the control or eradication of such has not been appropriated prior to the date of enactment of this Act.

"(C) CATEGORY III.—Federal Noxious Weeds that are not known to occur in the United States.

"(D) CATEGORY IV.—Weeds designated on a State noxious weed list that are not classified under subparagraphs (A), (B), or (C).

"(E) CATEGORY V.—Weeds that appear to meet the criteria for designation as Federal Noxious Weeds but that have not yet been designated as such.

"(2) FEDERAL STATE COOPERATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, or any other Federal agency involved with noxious weeds and their control, shall cooperate with State agencies in carrying out noxious weeds programs.

"(B) NOTICE.—If the Secretary intercepts a noxious weed designated as category IV under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall notify the appropriate State agencies affected.

"(3) EMERGENCY ORDER.—Action shall not be taken against weeds designated as category V under paragraph (1) except under an emergency order under section 4(d).".

SEC. 103. INTERSTATE MOVEMENT OF NOXIOUS WEEDS.

Section 4 of the Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974 (7 U.S.C. 2803) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Prohibitions on the movement of a noxious weed under this section shall include movement by any means, including by vehicles, air transportation, through the mails, and human movement, unless a special permit for such movement is issued by the Secretary.".

SEC. 104. REGULATION OF IMPORTED AGRICULTURAL AND VEGETABLE SEEDS.

Section 12 of the Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974 (7 U.S.C. 2811) is amended by striking out "not apply to shipments" and all that follows through "Seed Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "be applied independently of the provisions of the Federal Seed Act concerning noxious weeds".

TITLE II—LAND ENROLLED IN THE CONSERVATION RESERVE PROGRAM

SEC. 201. PROGRAMS TO CONTROL THE SPREAD OF WEEDS AND PESTS.

Subtitle E of title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985 (16 U.S.C. 3841 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 1246. TECHNICAL GUIDES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with State experiment stations, the Administrator of the Extension Service, the Chief of the Soil Conservation Service, and State pest and weed control boards, shall make available to owners and operators of land that is subject to a contract under subtitle D, weed and pest control technical guides that address common weed and pest problems and programs to control weeds and pests found on acreage enrolled in the conservation reserve program.

"(b) EFFECTIVE CONTROL ON NEW CONTRACTS.—If the Secretary determines that effective control of weeds is not achieved, as a result of not following the recommendations in the weed control technical guides provided under subsection (a), on acreage enrolled in the conservation reserve program under subtitle D, and following review by the Administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, local committees, State and local weed and pest control boards, or other agencies responsible for carrying out the conservation reserve program or local weed and pest laws the owner or operator of the acreage that is subject to the contract under such subtitle shall—

"(1) be subject to fines assessed by the Secretary for failing to control weeds on land enrolled in such program that shall be based on the entire acreage that such owner or operator has enrolled in such program.

"(c) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this section, all owners and operators of land that is subject to a contract under subtitle D shall be provided with notice and information concerning the availability of technical guides under subsection (a) and any new regulations that apply to such.".

SUMMARY—WEED CONTROL ACT OF 1990

(Senator Tom Daschle, South Dakota, Chairman, Agriculture Subcommittee on Research and General Legislation)

This legislation is designed to improve the scope and purpose of the Federal Noxious Weed Act of 1974. The intent of the 1974 law was the spread and entry of noxious weeds into the United States. However, as currently written and interpreted, this law provides only partial protection from the invasion and spread of designated species, and new noxious weeds are still entering the U.S. at an alarming rate.

Title 1. The current definition of noxious weed is modified to include natural ecosystems. Natural areas often have some of the most serious noxious weed problems. The present definition is also modified to allow for control activities to be conducted on noxious weeds that are already in this country.

A noxious weed technical advisory group is established. The technical advisory group would have the responsibility of recommending noxious weed control management strategies and developing noxious weed classification criteria. The group would have responsibility for approving plant species for designation as Federal Noxious Weeds. Emergency authority would also be granted to the Secretary to prohibit the importation of a noxious weed that is not included on the Federal Noxious Week List.

A new classification system for noxious weeds is established. The new classification system outlines categories for control based on the extent of control activities that are being conducted by USDA. The new system allows for coordination with States, which may have their own noxious weed lists that may be considerably different than the Federal listing.

Interstate movement of noxious weeds would be prohibited by any means including, vehicles, air transportation, and by mail, unless a special permit is issued by the Secretary. Many noxious weeds are currently being sold in aquatic magazines and at nurseries.

The Federal Noxious Weed Act is modified so that the regulation of imported agricultural and vegetable seeds would fall under the jurisdiction of the Act. Noxious weeds are entering the United States through seed shipments from foreign countries. The bill requires foreign seed shipments to meet noxious weed regulations.

Title 2. This title establishes a program to improve the control of weeds and pests on acreage that is enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). The Secretary is instructed to work with the Extension Service, Soil Conservation Service and State and Local authorities to develop weed and pest control guides for CRP contract holders. New CRP contracts would have a penalty system for failing to control weeds or pests, based on the entire acreage in contract.

By Mr. DOMENICI (for himself and Mr. BINGAMAN):

S. 2597. A bill to amend the act of June 20, 1910, to clarify in the State of New Mexico authority to exchange lands granted by the United States in trust, and to validate prior land exchanges; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

NEW MEXICO ENABLING ACT AMENDMENTS

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to grant the consent of Congress to an amendment to the New Mexico Enabling Act. The amendment would permit the State of New Mexico to exchange for beneficial purposes lands granted or confirmed to it by the United States when New Mexico was admitted to the Union.

In 1910, Congress passed the Enabling Act that led to statehood for New Mexico. Subsequently, the people of New Mexico consented to the Enabling Act, and it became a part of New Mexico's fundamental law as if it had been incorporated directly into the New Mexico Constitution.

Pursuant to the Enabling Act and other acts, the Federal Government transferred approximately 13 million acres of land to the State of New Mexico to be held in trust for certain specific purposes. These lands are managed and administered by the State Land Commissioner.

Congress placed very strict limits on the disposal of the trust lands granted under the Enabling Act to New Mexico and Arizona—stricter limits than it had placed on any other States. Under the Enabling Act, the State Land Commissioner can only dispose of trust lands by sale or lease to the highest bidder at a public auction, which must be advertised for 10 weeks. Prior to the auction, the lands must be appraised, and no sale or lease can be made for less than the appraised fair market value of the land. Any sale or lease of trust lands that does not conform with the requirements of the Enabling Act is null and void.

New Mexico has not amended its Enabling Act to permit such exchanges, except for the limited purposes of exchanging trust lands for National Forest lands.

The New Mexico Attorney General has issued a written opinion that the State Land Commissioner lacks the authority to exchange trust lands for other lands—except for National Forest lands—because of the Enabling Act's requirements of appraisal and public auction.

The State Land Commissioner seeks to conduct land exchanges with the Anthony, Los Lunas, and Moriarity School Districts for school sites, with the city of Roswell for an airport expansion, with the Bureau of Land Management for wilderness areas, and with other Federal and State agencies, cities, Indian tribes, and other groups for a multitude of beneficial purposes.

The New Mexico Attorney General and the State Land Commissioner have determined that the only way to permit such exchanges is to amend the Enabling Act.

Amendment of the New Mexico Enabling Act requires the consent of the Congress and a State constitutional amendment.

The bill I am introducing today would grant the consent of Congress to the amendment of the Enabling Act. It would permit the State of New Mexico to exchange State trust lands with the Federal Government, State agencies, city governments, Indian tribes, institutions for whom the lands are held in trust, and private entities.

Exchanges would be permitted only where: First, the land that the State is to receive is of equal or greater value than the land that the State is to convey; and second, the exchange is beneficial to the interests of the institution from whom the land is held in trust.

In order to assure that exchanges that have been conducted in good faith since 1910 are not invalidated, the bill makes the Enabling Act amendment retroactive to 1910.

The New Mexico State Legislature has already approved the constitutional amendment necessary to amend the Enabling Act. The constitutional amendment will be submitted to the voters for their ratification in November.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a joint memorial of the legislature of the State of New Mexico regarding the amendment of the Enabling Act be inserted in the RECORD at the end of my remarks.

Mr. President, this amendment to the New Mexico Enabling Act is long-overdue. I hope that the U.S. Congress will grant its consent expeditiously.

I am pleased to be joined in introducing this legislation by my colleague from New Mexico, Mr. BINGAMAN, and the senior Member of the House of Representatives from New Mexico, Mr. SKEEN.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2597

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. AUTHORITY TO EXCHANGE LAND.

Section 10 of the Act of June 20, 1910 (36 Stat. 563), is amended by inserting after the ninth paragraph thereof the following new paragraph:

"The State commissioner of public lands may exchange any land granted or confirmed by this Act for any land of the United States or an agency thereof, a State agency or political subdivision, a beneficiary of lands granted or confirmed by this Act, an Indian tribe or pueblo, or a private entity when the commissioner finds, after consultation with the chief administrative officer of the affected beneficiary of lands granted or confirmed by this Act, that—

"(1) based upon appraisals of the true value thereof, the value of the land to be received by the State is equal to or greater than the land to be conveyed by the State; and

"(2) the proposed exchange is beneficial to the interests of the affected beneficiary.".

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) FINDING.—The Congress finds that the retroactive application of the amendment made in section 1 to approve, validate, and ratify land exchanges made prior to the effective date of the amendment will not prejudice the interests of any person and will benefit the interests of the parties to such exchanges, the beneficiaries of land granted or confirmed under the Act of June 20, 1910, and the public.

(b) RETROACTIVE APPLICATION.—On the date that the Secretary of State of the State of New Mexico certifies that the people of the State of New Mexico have consented to this Act by amendment of article XXI of the constitution of the State of New Mexico, the amendment made in section 1 shall be effective as of June 20, 1910, so as to approve, validate, and ratify all exchanges made after that date of lands granted or confirmed to the State of New Mexico after that date.

SEC. 3. CONSENT TO CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

The consent of Congress is given to amendments to article XXI of the Constitution of the State of New Mexico to consent to the amendment made in section 1, to become effective as of June 20, 1910, as provided in section 2.

JOINT MEMORIAL—STATE OF NEW MEXICO

Whereas, in the Federal Land Exchange Facilitation Act of 1988, Congress found that land exchanges are a very important tool for State land managers to consolidate land holdings for more efficient management and to secure important State objectives; and

Whereas, the Enabling Act for New Mexico, of June 20, 1910, ch. 310, 36 stat. 557, provides guidelines for exchange of lands granted to New Mexico by Congress in that case of reclamation projects or national forests but does not expressly address the State's exchange authority in other situations; and

Whereas, although the State has completed, in good faith, thousands of acres of exchanges for purposes other than reclamation and national forests pursuant to its interpretation of the Enabling Act for New Mexico and general trust principles, reasonable minds may differ as to the authority of the State to make such exchanges; and

Whereas, clarification of the status of such prior exchanges could avoid potential hardship and harm both to the State and the other parties to the exchanges; and

Whereas, the increased interest in exchanges manifested by the Federal Land Exchange Facilitation Act of 1988 demands that the State's power to exchange lands granted to it by Congress be clarified so that the purposes of the land grant are secured; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the legislature of the State of New Mexico, that the Congress of the United States be respectfully petitioned to amend section 10 of the Enabling Act for New Mexico, as amended, to limit the exchanges of lands granted to the State by Congress, whether such exchanges be with the United States or an agency thereof, with a State agency or political subdivision, with a land grant beneficiary, with an Indian tribe or pueblo or with a private entity, to those exchanges where the commissioner of public lands after consulting with the chief administrative officer of the affected land grant beneficiary, funds, based upon an appraisal of the true value thereof, that the value of the land to be received is equal to or greater than the value of the land to be conveyed by the State and that the proposed exchange is beneficial to the interests of the affected beneficiary; and

Be it further resolved, that the Congress of the United States be respectfully petitioned to consent to an amendment of article 21 of the constitution of New Mexico as amended November 1, 1911, to effectuate the clarification of exchanges as provided herein and to clarify the status of prior exchanges of lands granted or confirmed by the Enabling Act for New Mexico and made by the State prior to January 1, 1990, by validating, ratifying and confirming such exchanges as being in substantial compliance with the provisions of section 10 of the Enabling Act for New Mexico; and

Be it further resolved, that copies of this memorial be sent to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives and the New Mexico Congressional Delegation.●

S. 2600. A bill to combat homelessness through the establishment of housing-based family support centers, through the provision of housing-based services to elderly individuals and individuals with chronic and debilitating illnesses and conditions, through the provision of residence-based outpatient mental health services, and through the use of grants for the improvement of community development corporations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

HOMELESSNESS PREVENTION AND COMMUNITY REVITALIZATION ACT

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today I join with 20 of my colleagues in the Senate and Congressmen JOE KENNEDY and DALE KILDEE in the House of Representatives to introduce the Homelessness Prevention and Community Revitalization Act of 1990. This legislation is intended to lay the foundation for a long-term policy to deal with the worsening tragedy of homelessness in America.

Our policy toward the homeless is at a crossroad. Three years ago Congress enacted the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, which has provided worthwhile emergency assistance to homeless men, women, and children across the Nation. But now, it is time to do more.

According to the best estimates, as many as 2 million Americans are homeless today. But the overall statistics do not begin to describe the dimensions of the tragedy.

The number of homeless families doubled over the last decade.

The fastest growing group among the homeless today consists of families with children.

As many as one in four homeless persons is a child.

Homeless women are often victims of sexual assault and rape.

Homeless people are at higher risk of traumatic injuries, such as contusions, fractures, and lacerations. They are also at a higher risk of tuberculosis and other respiratory diseases, skin diseases and infestations, and medical problems related to exposure, such as frostbite and hypothermia.

Mental illness and emotional disorders, alcoholism, and drug abuse, well-known as causes of homelessness, are also exacerbated by homelessness.

Poverty, the root cause of homelessness, afflicts 32 million Americans, 13 million of whom are children.

Meanwhile, the gap between rich and poor in our society is larger than at any time since the census Bureau first began collecting this information.

This bill is intended to address the need for support services and social service networks in our attempts to assist today's homeless and prevent homelessness tomorrow. This measure will provide $215 million a year in Federal grants to public and private nonprofit agencies for vitally needed services to people in low-income housing and communities. It will also provide $50 million in grants to Community Development Corporations to enable them to contribute to the construction and operation of low-income housing.

The bill has three major goals. The first is to encourage low-income housing to provide a safer and more positive environment for the families and individuals who live there. Low-income communities are often plagued by drugs, violence, and hopelessness. This proposal is intended to provide resources to help revitalize low-income housing developments and communities.

The second goal is to reduce the number of families and individuals who are currently homeless and are living on our city streets and in shelters. The bill accomplishes this goal by providing family support services, health and mental health services onsite in low-income housing so that troubled families and those suffering from health problems and mental illnesses can leave the shelters without leaving the supportive services they need.

The third goal is to prevent poor or precariously housed families from sinking into homelessness. These families also need support services to ensure that they do not join the ranks of the homeless. This legislation will provide the health, job training, counseling, and case management services that at-risk families and individuals need before a crisis occurs.

The causes of homelessness are numerous, and the homeless population itself is diverse. Many of the homeless are victims of poverty. Some are single heads of households struggling to support their families. Others have lost their jobs and even their homes due to layoffs, illness, economic changes or disability. Often faced with such a crisis in their lives, they have nowhere to go for help.

The problem is especially acute for families with children, who suddenly find themselves without any source of support. Title I of this bill provides funds for family support centers to provide the services and helping hand that these poorest and most vulnerable families need. These services will include drug and alcohol abuse treatment and counseling, parenting classes, family and community violence counseling, child care and health care. These are precisely the services needed to move homeless families off the streets—and keep poor families from becoming homeless.

Other Americans are homeless or at risk of long-term institutionalization in a nursing home or hospital because of a serious health condition. This group, which includes the frail elderly, people with AIDS, and those with disabilities, need special assistance with housing if they are to lead independent lives. Title II provides the key services that can make the difference such as transportation, meals, and ready access to health care including emergency health services.

Finally, perhaps the best known cause of homelessness is mental illness. In this case the road into the present crisis has been paved with good intentions. In recent years, large numbers of the mentally ill have been released from State mental hospitals, in an attempt to reduce the unnecessary and often cruel consequences of institutionalization. Part of the promise of that reform, however, was not kept. Needed outpatient health clinics, half-way houses, and support networks were never established.

Many of those released from institutions were capable of living independently in the community, with a little extra help. They found the doors of the institutions open—but the doors of the community closed. Countless number of these citizens now call the streets their home. Title III of this bill is a step toward promise by providing needed resources in the group home setting. Services to be provided under this title will include mental health care, drug and alcohol abuse treatment and counseling, job training, and case management.

The Homelessness Prevention Act does not stop at the provision of services. Over the past decade, Federal funding for low-income housing has declined by more than 75 percent and this decline has directly contributed to the rise of homelessness. It is imperative that Congress act this year to expand the Nation's supply of housing for our lowest income citizens. Both the Senate and House Banking Committees are working tirelessly to address the housing needs of low-income Americans. Title IV of this bill adds to that effort by providing $50 million in grants to Community Development Corporations for the planning, operation and construction of low-income housing. CDC's represent successful examples of public-private partnerships and can make a unique contribution to the goal of expanding housing opportunities for low-income communities.

We must expand the supply of low-income housing, but housing alone is not enough. We must provide support services to go with it. We must make low-income housing accessible to individuals with special needs. We must encourage housing that anticipates the need for health and mental health care, education, transportation, and family counseling.

This legislation is designed to address all of the underlying causes of this senseless tragedy. Homelessness must not become something that America accepts as a fact of life. By acting now, we can begin to deal with these problems more effectively. I urge my colleagues to support this measure, and I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2600

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 2. PURPOSE.

It is the purpose of this Act—

(1) help create safe, positive environments for families, children and individuals in low income housing and neighborhoods;

(2) reduce homelessness by making permanent housing accessible and hospitable to low income families and individuals of special needs; and

(3) prevent additional homelessness by providing on-site social services and case management to families and individuals who are at risk of homelessness due to income level, illness, mental illness or lack of social and economic support networks.

TITLE I—FAMILY SUPPORT CENTERS

SEC. 101. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this title:

(1) ADVISORY COUNCIL.—The term "advisory council" means the advisory council established under section 102(d)(2)(K).

(2) ELIGIBLE AGENCY.—The term "eligible agency" means a Head Start agency, any community-based organization, public housing agencies as defined in section 3(b)(6) of the United State Housing Act of 1937, State Housing Finance Agencies, and in addition includes an institution of higher education, a public hospital, a community development corporation, a community health center, and any other public or private nonprofit agency or organization specializing in delivering social services.

(3) FAMILY CASE MANAGERS.—The term "family case managers" means advisers operating under the provisions of section 106.

(4) GOVERNMENTALLY SUBSIDIZED HOUSING.—The term "governmentally subsidized housing" means any rental housing that is assisted under any Federal, State or local program (including a tax credit or tax exempt financing program) and that serves a population that predominately consists of very low income families or individuals.

(5) HOMELESS.—The term "homeless" has the same meaning given such term in the subsections (a) and (c) of section 103 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11302(a) and (c)).

(6) INTENSIVE AND COMPREHENSIVE SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—The term "intensive and comprehensive supportive services" means—

(A) in the case of services provided to infants, children and youth, infant and child primary and health services designed to enhance the physical, social, emotional, educational and intellectual development of such infants and children and that shall include, where appropriate, screening and referral services, child care services, early childhood development programs, early intervention services for children with, or at-risk of developmental delays, drop-out prevention services, after-school activities, job readiness services, education and support services for youth, and nutritional services;

(B) in the case of services provided to parents and other family members, services designed to better enable parents and other family members to contribute to their child's healthy development and that shall include, where appropriate, substance abuse education, counseling and treatment or referral for treatment, employment counseling and training as appropriate, life-skills training, education, parenting classes, health care and mental health services, peer counseling and crisis intervention services; and

(C) in the case of services provided by family case managers, needs assessment and support in accessing social services, referral for substance abuse counseling and treatment or referral for treatment, family violence counseling services, violence intervention counseling and peer support services, and family advocacy services.

(7) LOW INCOME.—The term "low income" when applied to families or individuals means a family or individual income that does not exceed 80 percent of the median income for an individual or family in the area, as determined by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, except that such Secretary may establish income ceilings that are higher or lower than 80 percent of the median for the area on the basis of a finding by such Secretary that such variations are necessary because of prevailing levels of construction costs or unusually high or low individual or family incomes.

(8) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(9) VERY LOW INCOME.—The term "very low income" when applied to families or individuals means a family or individual income that does not exceed 50 percent of the median income for an individual or family in the area, as determined by the Secretary, except that the Secretary may establish income ceilings that are higher or lower than 50 percent of the median for the area on the basis of a finding by the Secretary that such variations are necessary because of unusually high or low individual or family incomes.

SEC. 102. GENERAL GRANTS FOR THE PROVISION OF SERVICES.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible agencies in rural and urban areas to pay the Federal share of the cost of programs designed to encourage the provision of intensive and comprehensive supportive services that will enhance the physical, social, emotional, educational, and intellectual development of low-income families, especially those very low income families who were previously homeless and who are currently residing in governmentally subsidized housing or who are at risk of becoming homeless.

(b) AGREEMENTS WITH ELIGIBLE AGENCIES.—The Secretary shall enter into contracts, agreements, or other arrangements with eligible agencies to carry out the provisions of this section.

(c) CONSIDERATIONS BY SECRETARY.—In carrying out the provisions of this section, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the capacity of the eligible agency to administer the comprehensive program for which assistance is sought;

(2) the proximity of the agencies and facilities associated with the program to the low-income families, especially those very low income families that were previously homeless or at risk of becoming homeless and are currently residing in governmentally subsidized housing, to be served by the program or the ability of the agency to provide offsite services;

(3) the ability of the eligible agency to coordinate its activities with State and local public agencies (such as agencies responsible for education, health and mental health services, substance abuse services, social services, child care, nutrition, income assistance, and other relevant services), and with appropriate nonprofit private organizations involved in the delivery of eligible support services;

(4) the management and accounting skills of the eligible agency;

(5) the ability of the eligible agency to use the appropriate Federal, State, and local programs in carrying out the program; and

(6) the involvement of project participants and community representatives in the planning and operation of the program.

(d) REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each eligible agency desiring to receive a grant under this section shall—

(A) if a planning grant application has been approved for such agency under section 103(b), have such application on file with the Secretary;

(B) have experience in providing services such as those required under this section; and

(C) submit an application at such time in such manner and containing or accompanied by such information, including the information required under paragraph (2), as the Secretary shall reasonably require.

(2) APPLICATION.—Each application submitted under paragraph (1)(C) shall—

(A) identify the population and geographic location to be served by the program;

(B) provide assurances that services are closely related to the identifiable needs of the target population;

(C) provide assurances that each program will provide directly or arrange for the provision of intensive and comprehensive supportive services;

(D) identify the referral providers, agencies, and organizations that the program will use;

(E) describe the method of furnishing services at offsite locations, if appropriate;

(F) describe the extent to which the eligible agency, through its program, will coordinate and expand existing services as well as provide services not available in the area to be served by the program;

(G) describe how the program will relate to the State and local agencies providing health, nutritional, job training, education, social, substance abuse, and income maintenance services;

(H) provide assurances that the eligible agency will pay the non-Federal share of the cost of the application for which assistance is sought from non-Federal sources;

(I) collect and provide data on groups of individuals and geographic areas served, including types of services to be furnished, estimated cost of providing comprehensive services on an average per user basis, types and nature of conditions and needs identified and treated, and such other information as the Secretary requires;

(J) describe the manner in which the applicant will implement the requirement of section 104;

(K) provide for the establishment of an advisory council that shall provide policy and programming guidance to the eligible agency, that shall consist of not more than 15 members that shall include—

(i) prospective participants in the program,

(ii) representatives of local private industry;

(iii) individuals with expertise in the services the program intends to offer;

(iv) representatives of the community in which the program will be located;

(v) representatives of local government social service providers;

(vi) representatives of local law enforcement agencies; and

(vii) representatives of the local public housing agency;

(L) describe plans for evaluating the impact of the program;

(M) include such additional assurances, including submitting necessary reports, as the Secretary may reasonably require;

(N) contain an assurance that if the applicant intends to assess fees for services provided with assistance under this section, such fees shall be nominal in relation to the financial situation of the recipient of such services; and

(O) contain an assurance that amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to supplement not supplant State and local funds currently utilized to provide services of the type described in this section.

(e) FAMILY SUPPORT CENTER.—Each program that receives assistance under this section shall establish at least one family support center that shall operate out, or in the immediate vicinity, of governmentally subsidized housing. Such centers shall be the primary location for the administration of the programs and the provision of services under this title.

SEC. 103. PLANNING GRANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to make planning grants to eligible agencies to enable such entities to develop and submit plans and applications for grants under section 102.

(b) APPLICATION.—Each eligible agency desiring to receive a planning grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary shall reasonably require. Each such application shall—

(1) describe the capacity of the eligible agency to provide or ensure the availability of the intensive and comprehensive supportive services pursuant to this title;

(2) describe the low-income families to be served by the program including the number to be served and information on the population and geographic location to be served;

(3) describe how the needs of individuals identified under paragraph (2) will be met by the program;

(4) describe the intensive and comprehensive supportive services that program planners intend to address in the development of the plan;

(5) describe the manner in which the program will be operated together with the involvement of other community groups and public agencies;

(6) specify the agencies that are intended to be contacted and the activities to be coordinated during the planning phase;

(7) contain assurances that the applicant will establish a planning phase advisory council, that may become the council required under section 102(d)(2)(K)), that shall include—

(A) prospective participants in the program,

(B) individuals with expertise in the services the program intends to offer;

(C) representatives of the community in which the program will be located;

(D) representatives of local government social service providers;

(E) representatives of local law enforcement agencies; and

(F) representatives of local public housing agencies;

(8) describe the capacity of the eligible agency to raise the non-Federal share of the costs of the program and such other information as the Secretary may reasonable require;

(9) contain an assurance that the agency will use funds received under this section to prepare a plan as described in this subsection and submit such plan in an application for a grant under section 102; and

(10) contain an assurance that amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to supplement not supplant State and local funds currently utilized to provide services of the type described in this section.

(c) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

(1) TERM OF GRANT.—No planning grant may be for a period longer than 1 year.

(2) MAXIMUM NUMBER OF GRANTS.—Not more than 20 planning grants may be made under this subsection.

(3) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to those applications that demonstrate that the applicant would not have the financial resources available to prepare a plan and application for a grant under section 102 unless such applicant receives a grant under this section.

(d) MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF GRANT.—No grant awarded under this section to a single eligible agency may exceed $50,000.

SEC. 104. TRAINING AND RETENTION.

The Secretary shall require that agencies that receive a grant under section 102 use not less than 5 percent of such grant to improve the retention and effectiveness of staff and volunteers through appropriate service delivery training programs.

SEC. 105. AMOUNTS OF GRANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall pay to an eligible agency having an application approved under section 102 the Federal share of the cost of the activities described in the application.

(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share shall be 80 percent for each fiscal year.

(c) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The non-Federal share of payments under this section may be in cash or in kind fairly evaluated, including equipment or services.

(2) PRIVATE CONTRIBUTIONS.—Of the non-Federal share, 25 percent of such amount shall be provided through contributions from private entities.

(d) PAYMENTS.—Payments under this title may be made in installments, and in advance or by way of reimbursement, with necessary adjustments on account of overpayments or underpayments, as the Secretary may determine.

SEC. 106. FAMILY CASE MANAGERS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—Each program that receives a grant under section 102 shall employ, subject to subsection (e), an appropriate number of individuals with expertise in family social service delivery, child development and welfare services, substance abuse services, and family crisis intervention matters to serve as family case managers for the program.

(b) NEEDS ASSESSMENT.—Each low-income family that desires to receive services from a program that receives assistance under this title shall be assessed by a family case manager on such families initial visit to such program as to their need for services.

(c) CONTINUING FUNCTIONS.—Family case managers shall formulate a plan based on the needs assessment for each family. Such case manager shall carry out such plan, and remain available to provide such family with counseling and services, including school advocacy services), to enable such family to become self-sufficient. In carrying out such plan the case manager shall conduct monitoring, tracking, and follow-up activities.

(d) SPECIAL SERVICES.—Case managers shall provide comprehensive services as required under the application submitted under section 102, that places special emphasis on services relating to substance abuse and domestic violence.

(e) LIMITATION.—No family crisis adviser shall carry a caseload of in excess of 20 families.

SEC. 107. EVALUATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall require that programs that receive assistance under this title are evaluated, by a third party with expertise in the types of services to be provided under this title, on an annual basis.

(b) INFORMATION.—Each eligible agency receiving a grant under this title shall furnish information requested by evaluators in order to carry out this section.

(c) RESULTS.—The results of such evaluations shall be provided to the eligible agencies conducting the programs to enable such agencies to improve such programs.

SEC. 108. REPORT.

Not later than October 1, of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall prepare and submit, to the Committees on Education and Labor, and Banking of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Labor and Human Resources, and Banking of the Senate, a report—

(1) concerning the evaluations required under section 107, together with such recommendations, as the Secretary considers appropriate; and

(2) describing any alternative sources of funding utilized or available for the provision of services of the type described in this title.

SEC. 109. CONSTRUCTION.

Nothing in this title shall be construed to modify the Federal selection preferences described in section 6 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437d) or the authorized policies and procedures of governmental housing authorities operating under annual assistance contracts pursuant to such Act with respect to admissions, tenant selection and evictions.

SEC. 110. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title, $100,000,000 for each of the fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.

TITLE II—PROVISION OF SERVICES TO ELDERLY INDIVIDUALS AND INDIVIDUALS WITH CHRONIC AND DEBILITATING ILLNESSES AND CONDITIONS

SEC. 201. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

Title III of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 241 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new part:

"PART L—PROVISION OF SERVICES TO ELDERLY INDIVIDUALS AND INDIVIDUALS WITH CHRONIC AND DEBILITATING ILLNESSES AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 399B. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part:

"(1) ADVISORY COUNCIL.—The term 'advisory council' means the advisory council established under section 399C(d)(2)(K).

"(2) ELIGIBLE AGENCY.—The term 'eligible agency' means any community-based organization, State or local agency, community health center, or other institution that will provide or arrange for the provision of nursing care, health care, meal services, visiting services, or other social services to elderly or seriously ill individuals.

"(3) GOVERNMENTALLY SUBSIDIZED HOUSING.—The term 'governmentally subsidized housing' means any rental housing that is assisted under any Federal, State or local program (including a tax credit or tax exempt financing program) and that serves a population that predominately consists of low income families or individuals.

"(4) HOMELESS.—The term 'homeless' has the same meaning given such term in subsection (a) and (c) of section 103 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11302(a) and (c)).

"(5) LOW INCOME.—The term 'low income' when applied to families or individuals means a family or individual income that does not exceed 80 percent of the median income for an individual or family in the area, as determined by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, except that such Secretary may establish income ceilings that are higher or lower than 80 percent of the median for the area on the basis of a finding by such Secretary that such variations are necessary because of prevailing levels of construction costs or unusually high or low individual or family incomes.

"(6) VERY LOW INCOME.—The term 'very low income' when applied to families or individuals means a family or individual income that does not exceed 50 percent of the median income for an individual or family in the area, as determined by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, except that such Secretary may establish income ceilings that are higher or lower than 50 percent of the median for the area on the basis of a finding by such Secretary that such variations are necessary because of unusually high or low individual or family incomes.

"SEC. 399C. GENERAL GRANTS FOR THE PROVISION OF SERVICES.

"(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible agencies to pay the Federal share of the cost of programs designed to encourage the provision of eligible services to low-income elderly or low-income seriously ill individuals, especially those very low income elderly or seriously ill individuals who were previously homeless or who are at risk of becoming homeless or at risk of institutionalization.

"(b) AGREEMENTS WITH ELIGIBLE AGENCIES.—The Secretary shall enter into contracts, agreements, or other arrangements with eligible agencies to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(c) CONSIDERATIONS BY SECRETARY.—In carrying out the provisions of this section, the Secretary shall consider—

"(1) the capacity of the eligible agency to administer the comprehensive program for which assistance is sought;

"(2) the proximity of the agencies and facilities associated with the program to the low-income individuals to be served by the program, or the ability of the agency to provide offsite services;

"(3) the ability of the eligible agency to coordinate its activities with State and local public agencies (such as agencies responsible for health and mental health services, social services, nutrition, and other relevant services), and with appropriate nonprofit private organizations involved in the delivery of eligible support services;

"(4) the management and accounting skills of the eligible agency;

"(5) the ability of the eligible agency to use the appropriate Federal, State, and local programs in carrying out the program;

"(6) the involvement of program participants and community representatives in the planning and operation of the program; and

"(7) the demonstrated or potential effectiveness of the eligible agency in serving the populations or subpopulations intended to be served under this section.

"(d) REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each eligible agency desiring to receive a grant under this section shall submit an application at such time in such manner and containing or accompanied by such information, including the information required under paragraph (2), as the Secretary shall reasonably require.

"(2) APPLICATION.—Each application submitted under paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) identify the population and geographic location to be served by the program;

"(B) provide assurances that services are closely related to the identifiable needs of the target population;

"(C) provide assurances that each program will provide directly or arrange for the provision of eligible services of the type described in section 399D;

"(D) identify the referral providers, agencies, and organizations that the program will use;

"(E) describe the method of furnishing services at offsite locations, if appropriate;

"(F) describe the extent to which the eligible agency, through its program, will coordinate and expand existing services as well as provide services not available in the area to be served by the program;

"(G) describe how the program will relate to the State and local agencies providing health, nutritional, social, and income maintenance services;

"(H) provide assurances that the eligible agency will pay the non-Federal share of the cost of the application for which assistance is sought from non-Federal sources;

"(I) collect and provide data on groups of individuals and geographic areas served, including types of services to be furnished, estimated cost of providing comprehensive services on an average per user basis, types and nature of conditions and needs identified and treated, and such other information as the Secretary requires;

"(J) describe the manner in which the applicant will implement the requirement of section 399F;

"(K) provide for the establishment of an advisory council that shall provide policy and programming guidance to the eligible agency, that shall include—

"(i) prospective participants in the program,

"(ii) individuals with expertise in the services the program intends to offer;

"(iii) representatives of the community in which the program will be located;

"(iv) representatives of local government social service providers;

"(v) community based organizations with a history of providing service to participants;

"(vi) representatives of local public housing agencies; and

"(vii) representatives of local health care professions;

"(L) describe plans for evaluating the impact of the program;

"(M) include such additional assurances, including submitting necessary reports, as the Secretary may reasonably require;

"(N) contain an assurance that if the applicant intends to assess fees for services provided with assistance under this section, such fees shall be nominal in relation to the financial situation of the recipient of such services; and

"(M) contain an assurance that amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to supplement not supplant State and local funds currently utilized to provide services of the type described in this section.

"(e) HOME HEALTH SERVICE PROGRAM.—Each recipient that receives assistance under this section shall establish at least one home health service program that shall operate out of, or in the immediate vicinity of, governmentally subsidized housing. Such programs shall be the primary location for the administration of the programs and the provision of services under this part. Such programs may operate out of existing family support centers.

"SEC. 399D. PLANNING GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to make planning grants to eligible agencies to enable such entities to develop and submit plans and applications for grants under section 399C.

"(b) APPLICATION.—Each eligible agency desiring to receive a planning grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary shall reasonably require, including—

"(1) a description of the capacity of the eligible agency to provide or ensure the availability of services pursuant to this part;

"(2) a description of the low-income elderly or low income seriously ill individuals to be served by the program including the number to be served and information on the population and geographic location to be served;

"(3) a description of the needs of individuals identified under paragraph (2) that will be met by the program;

"(4) a description of the services that program planners intend to address in the development of the plan;

"(5) a description of the manner in which the program will be operated together with the involvement of other community groups and public agencies;

"(6) a specification of the agencies that are intended to be contacted and the activities to be coordinated during the planning phase;

"(7) assurances that the applicant will establish a planning phase advisory council, that may become the council required under section 399C(d)(2)(K), that shall include—

"(A) prospective participants in the program,

"(B) individuals with expertise in the services the program intends to offer;

"(C) representatives of the community in which the program will be located;

"(D) representatives of local government social service providers;

"(E) representatives of local housing agencies, if appropriate;

"(8) a description of the capacity of the eligible agency to raise the non-Federal share of the costs of the program and such other information as the Secretary may reasonably require;

"(9) an assurance that the agency will use funds received under this section to prepare a plan as described in this subsection and submit such plan in an application for a grant under section 399C; and

"(10) an assurance that amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to supplement not supplant State and local funds currently utilized to provide services of the type described in this section.

"(c) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

"(1) TERM OF GRANT.—No planning grant may be for a period longer than 1 year.

"(2) MAXIMUM NUMBER OF GRANTS.—Not more than 20 planning grants may be made under this section.

"(3) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to those applications that demonstrate that the applicant would not have the financial resources available to prepare a plan and application for a grant under section 399C unless such applicant receives a grant under this section.

"(d) MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF GRANT.—No grant awarded under this section to a single eligible agency may exceed $50,000.

"SEC. 399E. ELIGIBLE SERVICES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Grants awarded under this part shall be used to provide services of the type described in subsection (b) to low-income elderly or low income seriously ill individuals, especially those very low income elderly or seriously ill individuals who were previously homeless, or who are at risk of becoming homeless or at risk of institutionalization.

"(b) SERVICES.—Agencies receiving grants under this part shall use such grants to provide comprehensive services, in accordance with the service plan, that shall include, where appropriate—

"(1) 24-hours nursing supervision services;

"(2) case management services;

"(3) home health care services;

"(4) homemaker services;

"(5) meal provision services;

"(6) attendant services;

"(7) volunteer visiting services;

"(8) adult day care service;

"(9) treatment for substance abuse;

"(10) hospice services;

"(11) post hospitalization respite care services;

"(12) transportation services;

"(13) mental health services; and

"(14) any other services determined appropriate by the Secretary.

"(c) COORDINATION.—Programs that receive assistance under this part shall be coordinated with a local hospital or community health center that regularly provides emergency medical care services.

"(d) SET-ASIDE FOR ELDERLY.—The Secretary shall require that at least 20 percent of the grants made under this part shall be setaside for the provision of subsidized housing-based services to elderly individuals, especially those very low income elderly individuals who were previously homeless or who are at risk of becoming homeless or at risk of institutionalization.

"SEC. 399F. TRAINING AND RETENTION.

"The Secretary shall require that agencies that receive a grant under section 399C use not less than 5 percent of such grant to improve the retention and effectiveness of staff and volunteers through appropriate service delivery training programs.

"SEC. 399G. AMOUNTS OF GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall pay to eligible agencies having applications approved under section 399C the Federal share of the cost of the activities described in the application.

"(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share shall be 80 percent for each fiscal year.

"(c) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The non-Federal share of payments under this section may be in cash or in kind fairly evaluated, including equipment or services.

"(2) CASH.—At least 25 percent of the non-Federal share under paragraph (1) shall be in the form of cash.

"(d) PAYMENTS.—Payments under this part may be made in installments, and in advance or by way of reimbursement, with necessary adjustments on account of overpayments or underpayments, as the Secretary may determine.

"SEC. 399H. EVALUATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall require that programs that receive assistance under this part are evaluated, by a third party with expertise in the types of services to be provided under this part, on an annual basis.

"(b) INFORMATION.—Each eligible agency receiving a grant under this part shall furnish information requested by evaluators in order to carry out this section.

"(c) RESULTS.—The results of such evaluations shall be provided to the eligible agencies conducting the programs to enable such agencies to improve such programs.

"SEC. 399I. REPORT.

"Not later than October 1, of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall prepare and submit, to the Committees on Education and Labor, and Banking of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Labor and Human Resources, and Banking of the Senate, a report—

"(1) concerning the evaluations required under section 399H, together with such recommendations, including recommendations for legislation, as the Secretary considers appropriate; and

"(2) describing any alternative sources of funding utilized or available for the provision of services of the type described in this part.

"SEC. 399J. CONSTRUCTION.

"Nothing in this part shall be construed to modify the Federal selection preferences described in section 6 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437d) or the authorized policies and procedures of governmental housing authorities operating under annual assistance contracts pursuant to such Act with respect to admissions, tenant selection and evictions.

"SEC. 399K. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part, $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.".

TITLE III—MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES GRANTS FOR GROUP HOMES FOR HOMELESS INDIVIDUALS.

SEC. 301. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

Title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new part:

"PART F—MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES GRANTS FOR GROUP HOMES FOR HOMELESS INDIVIDUALS

"SEC. 571. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part:

"(1) ADVISORY COUNCIL.—The term 'advisory council' means the advisory council established under section 572(d)(2)(K).

"(2) CHRONICALLY MENTALLY ILL INDIVIDUAL.—The term 'chronically mentally ill individual' means an individual who has been diagnosed as having a major mental illness that causes significant disability that occurs, or is expected to occur, over a period of at least several months.

"(3) ELIGIBLE AGENCY.—The term 'eligible agency' means any community-based organization, or public or private agency that specializes in providing mental health care, or services relating to substance abuse to low income chronically mentally ill individuals.

"(4) GROUP HOME.—The term 'group home' means any small service supported residential facility designed to house individuals with special needs, such as chronic mental illnesses.

"(5) HOMELESS.—The term 'homeless' has the same meaning given such term in subsection (a) and (c) of section 103 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11302 (a) and (c)).

"(6) LOW INCOME.—The term 'low income' when applied to families or individuals means a family or individual income that does not exceed 80 percent of the median income for an individual or family in the area, as determined by the Secretary, except that the Secretary may establish income ceilings that are higher or lower than 80 percent of the median for the area on the basis of a finding by the Secretary that such variations are necessary because of prevailing levels of construction costs or unusually high or low individual or family incomes.

"SEC. 572. GENERAL GRANTS FOR THE PROVISION OF SERVICES.

"(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall establish a demonstration program to make grants to eligible agencies to pay the Federal share of the cost of programs designed to encourage the provision of housing based services to low-income chronically mentally ill individuals who were previously homeless who will reside in a group home.

"(b) AGREEMENTS WITH ELIGIBLE AGENCIES.—The Secretary shall enter into contracts, agreements, or other arrangements with eligible agencies to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(c) CONSIDERATIONS BY SECRETARY.—In carrying out the provisions of this section, the Secretary shall consider—

"(1) the capacity of the eligible agency to administer the comprehensive program for which assistance is sought;

"(2) the proximity of the agencies and facilities associated with the program to the low-income individuals to be served by the program, or the ability of the agency to provide offsite services;

"(3) the ability of the eligible agency to coordinate its activities with State and local public agencies (such as agencies responsible for health and mental health services, and other relevant services), with appropriate nonprofit private organizations involved in the delivery of eligible support services;

"(4) the management and accounting skills of the eligible agency;

"(5) the ability of the eligible agency to use the appropriate Federal, State, and local programs in carrying out the program; and

"(6) the involvement of program participants and community representatives in the planning and operation of the program.

"(d) REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each eligible agency desiring to receive a grant under this section shall submit an application at such time in such manner and containing or accompanied by such information, including the information required under paragraph (2), as the Secretary shall reasonably require.

"(2) APPLICATION.—Each application submitted under paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) identify the population and geographic location to be served by the program;

"(B) provide assurances that services are closely related to the identifiable needs of the target population;

"(C) provide assurances that each program will provide directly or arrange for the provision of eligible services of the type described in section 574;

"(D) identify the referral providers, agencies, and organizations that the program will use;

"(E) describe the method of furnishing services at offsite locations, if appropriate;

"(F) describe the extent to which the eligible agency, through its program, will coordinate and expand existing services as well as provide services not available in the area to be served by the program;

"(G) describe how the program will relate to the State and local agencies providing health and mental health services, including substance abuse services;

"(H) provide assurances that the eligible agency will pay the non-Federal share of the cost of the application for which assistance is sought from non-Federal sources;

"(I) collect and provide data on groups of individuals and geographic areas served, including types of services to be furnished, estimated cost of providing comprehensive services on an average per user basis, types and nature of conditions and needs identified and treated, and such other information as the Secretary requires;

"(J) describe the manner in which the applicant will implement the requirement of section 575;

"(K) provide for the establishment of an advisory council that shall provide policy and programming guidelines to the eligible agency, that shall consist of—

"(i) prospective participants in the program;

"(ii) individuals with expertise in the services the program intends to offer;

"(iii) representatives of the community in which the program will be located;

"(iv) representatives of local government social service providers and mental health professions; and

"(v) representatives of local law enforcement agencies;

"(L) describe plans for evaluating the impact of the program;

"(M) provide an assurance that the applicant has access to appropriate facilities to use as a group home to provide services under this part for the term of the grant;

"(N) include such additional assurances, including submitting necessary reports, as the Secretary may reasonably require;

"(O) contain an assurance that if the applicant intends to assess fees for services provided with assistance under this section, such fees shall be nominal in relation to the financial situation of the recipient of such services; and

"(P) contain an assurance that amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to supplement not supplant State and local funds currently utilized to provide services of the type described in this section.

"(e) HOME-BASED MENTAL HEALTH CARE.—Each program that receives assistance under this section shall establish a mental health services program that shall operate out of, or in the immediate vicinity of, a group home. Such group home shall be the primary location for the administration of the programs and the provision of services under this part.

"SEC. 573. PLANNING GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to make planning grants to eligible agencies to enable such entities to develop and submit plans and applications for grants under section 572.

"(b) APPLICATION.—Each eligible agency desiring to receive a planning grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary shall reasonably require, including—

"(1) a description of the capacity of the eligible agency to provide or ensure the availability of the services pursuant to this part;

"(2) a description of the low-income chronically mentally ill individuals that were previously homeless and are to be served by the program, including the number to be served and information on the population and geographic location to be served;

"(3) a description how the needs of individuals identified under paragraph (2) will be met by the program;

"(4) a description of the services that program planners intend to address in the development of the plan;

"(5) a description of the manner in which the program will be operated together with the involvement of other community groups and public agencies;

"(6) a specification of the agencies that are intended to be contacted and the activities to be coordinated during the planning phase;

"(7) assurances that the applicant will establish a planning phase advisory council, that may become the council required under section 572(d)(2)(K), that shall include—

"(A) prospective participants in the program,

"(B) individuals with expertise in the services the program intends to offer;

"(C) representatives of the community in which the program will be located;

"(D) representatives of local government social service providers;

"(E) representatives of local law enforcement agencies; and

"(F) representatives of local housing agencies;

"(8) a description of the capacity of the eligible agency to raise the non-Federal share of the costs of the program and such other information as the Secretary may reasonable require;

"(9) an assurance that the agency will use funds received under this section to prepare a plan as described in this subsection and submit such plan in an application for a grant under section 572; and

"(10) an assurance that amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to supplement not supplant State and local funds currently utilized to provide services of the type described in this section.

"(c) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

"(1) TERM OF GRANT.—No planning grant may be for a period longer than 1 year.

"(2) MAXIMUM NUMBER OF GRANTS.—Not more than 15 planning grants may be made under this section.

"(3) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to those applications that demonstrate that the applicant would not have the financial resources available to prepare a plan and application for a grant under section 572 unless such applicant receives a grant under this section.

"(d) MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF GRANT.—No grant awarded under this section to a single eligible agency may exceed $50,000.

"SEC. 574. ELIGIBLE SERVICES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Grants awarded under this part shall be used to provide mental health services in group homes for low income chronically mentally ill individuals who were previously homeless who will reside in such group home.

"(b) SERVICES.—Services provided under subsection (a) shall include, where appropriate—

"(1) health care services offered by providers that operate from regular office hours from the home-based mental health center established with the grants provided under this part;

"(2) emergency mental health services;

"(3) substance abuse counseling and treatment;

"(4) outpatient drug therapy conducted under the oversight of a staff psychiatrist;

"(5) job training and life skills counseling for individuals who are determined to be in need of such services as a prerequisite for reentering the workforce;

"(6) intensive case management services provided by case managers that have a caseload of not more than 15 individual; and

"(7) any other services determined appropriate by the Secretary.

"(c) DUAL DIAGNOSIS.—Agencies that receive grants under this part shall provide services with an emphasis on treatment for individuals suffering from both substance abuse and a chronic mental illness.

"SEC. 575. TRAINING AND RETENTION.

"The Secretary shall require that agencies that receive a grant under section 572 use not less than 5 percent of such grant to improve the retention and effectiveness of staff and volunteers through appropriate service delivery training programs.

"SEC. 576. AMOUNTS OF GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall pay to eligible agencies having applications approved under sections 572 the Federal share of the cost of the activities described in the application.

"(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share shall be 80 percent for each fiscal year.

"(c) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The non-Federal share of payments under this section may be in cash or in kind fairly evaluated, including equipment or services.

"(2) CASH.—At least 50 percent of the payments required under paragraph (1) shall be in the form of cash. The value of any residence or other housing facility provided under this subsection shall be included in meeting such 50 percent requirement.

"(d) PAYMENTS.—Payments under this part may be made in installments, and in advance or by way of reimbursement, with necessary adjustments on account of overpayments or underpayments, as the Secretary may determine.

"SEC. 577. EVALUATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall require that programs that receive assistance under this part are evaluated, by a third party with expertise in the types of services to be provided under this part, on an annual basis.

"(b) INFORMATION.—Each eligible agency receiving a grant under this part shall furnish information requested by evaluators in order to carry out this section.

"(c) RESULTS.—The results of such evaluations shall be provided to the eligible agencies conducting the programs to enable such agencies to improve such programs.

"SEC. 578. REPORT.

"Not later than October 1, of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall prepare and submit, to the Committees on Education and Labor, and Banking of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Labor and Human Resources, and Banking of the Senate, a report—

"(1) concerning the evaluations required under section 578, together with such recommendations, including recommendations for legislation, as the Secretary considers appropriate; and

"(2) describing any alternative sources of funding utilized or available for the provision of services of the type described in this part.

"SEC. 579. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.".

TITLE IV—COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION IMPROVEMENT GRANTS

SEC. 401. COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION IMPROVEMENT GRANTS.

Part 4 of subchapter A of the Community Economic Development Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 9814 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 634. COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION IMPROVEMENT GRANTS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to provide assistance to community development corporations to upgrade the management and operating capacity of such corporations and to enhance the resources available to enable such corporations to increase their community economic development activities.

"(b) SKILL ENHANCEMENT GRANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make grants to community development corporations to enable such corporations to attain or enhance the business management and development skills of the individuals that manage such corporations to enable such corporations to seek the public and private resources necessary to develop low-income housing and to develop community economic development projects.

"(2) USE OF FUNDS.—Grantees may use funds obtained under this section—

"(A) to purchase training and technical assistance from agencies or institutions that have experience in the construction, development and management of low-income housing or experience in community economic development; or

"(B) to purchase such assistance from other highly successful community development corporations.

"(c) OPERATING GRANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make grants to community development corporations to enable such corporations to support an administrative capability for planning, developing, constructing and managing low-income housing, and for other community economic development projects.

"(2) USE OF FUNDS.—Of amounts made available in any fiscal year for operating grants under this subsection, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall use—

"(A) 40 percent of such amounts to assist in starting up community development corporations; and

"(B) 60 percent of such amounts to assist established community development corporations.

"(3) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—Assistance provided through operating grants under this subsection shall be of sufficient size and duration, including multiyear grants where appropriate, to enable a community development corporation receiving such assistance to have an appreciable impact on the area or areas to be served.

"(d) GRANTS FOR COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION EQUITY ACCOUNTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make grants to any nongovernmental, nonprofit entity that is principally involved with the development, construction or management of low-income housing, or to community development corporations, to enable such entities to establish and maintain equity accounts with which such corporations may plan, develop, construct and manage low-income housing.

"(2) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—Assistance provided through equity account grants under this subsection shall be of sufficient size and duration, including multiyear grants where appropriate, to enable a community development corporation receiving such assistance to have an appreciable impact on the area or areas to be served.

"(e) APPLICATIONS.—Community development corporations that desire to receive assistance under this section shall prepare and submit, to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, an application at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretary shall reasonably require. Such Secretary shall not require project-specific information for applications for assistance under subsections (b), (c) and (d).

"(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995.

"(2) USE.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall use—

"(A) 20 percent of the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) in each fiscal year to make grants under subsection (b);

"(B) 30 percent of the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) in each fiscal year to make grants under subsection (c); and

"(C) 50 percent of the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) in each fiscal year to make grants under subsection (d).

"(3) AVAILABILITY.—Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.

"(g) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term 'community development corporation' means a nonprofit entity of the type described in this section and that meets the resident control and governing body requirements of 42 U.S.C. 9807(a)(1).".

TITLE V—PLAN FOR COOPERATION

SEC. 501. PLAN FOR COOPERATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than the date on which regulations necessary to carry out title I of this Act, part L of title III of the Public Health Service Act (as added by title II), part F of title V of the Public Health Service Act (as added by title III), or section 634 of the Community Economic Development Act of 1981 (as added under title IV) are issued, the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall prepare and submit, to the Committees on Education and Labor, and Banking of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Labor and Human Resources, and Banking of the Senate, a plan concerning the programs to be carried out under such title, parts, and section.

(b) CONTENTS.—The plan prepared under subsection (a) shall—

(1) describe the method in which the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall consult with one another in implementing and administering the programs described in subsection (a) and coordinate the implementation of such programs with other relevant programs and Acts (including the programs established under the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, or the amendments made by such Act, and under Federal housing Acts);

(2) contain an assurance that such Secretaries will consult with one another on an ongoing and continuous basis in such implementation; and

(3) contain procedures, developed by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, for granting priority in the provision of rehabilitation or renovation assistance by such Secretary, to applicants that receive grants under the title, parts, and section referred to in subsection (a).

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I am very pleased to speak this afternoon to lend enthusiastic support to the Homelessness Prevention Community Revitalization Act of 1990. This important legislation is an innovative and cost-effective approach to prevent homelessness. The prevention of homelessness, Mr. President, may well be the best means of remedying it.

We are all familiar with the scope of the problem as well as its rate of growth. The Urban Institute estimated that the homeless in March 1987 numbered between 500,000 and 600,000—about double the figure reported by the Department of Housing and Urban Development in 1983. Estimates from the National Coalition for the Homeless are far higher.

What we sometimes don't appreciate, however, is that the homeless are not a distinct, defined, nor fixed segment, of our population. The overtly homeless are in frequent flux—merging in and out of a far larger group of hidden or borderline homeless. These "hidden homeless" are composed of individuals and families living on the edge. They may be doubled, or even tripled up, with relatives or friends. They are technically domiciled for the moment, but they may have been homeless last year. And they have a good chance of becoming frankly homeless in the next few months.

While the stereotypical homeless individual remains a single adult man, families and children have become the fastest growing segment among the homeless. Families with children account for 40 percent or more of the homeless population in Chicago, Kansas City, Louisville, and Philadelphia. For children, the insecurity, instability, and disruptions often result in irreparable harm to growth, development, and maturation.

This legislation, Mr. President, recognizes that the problem of homelessness goes beyond simple lack of shelter. Homelessness is the end result of varied and complex social ills. Poor education, inadequate or outdated vocational skills, mental health problems, lack of community and support systems, personal instability or disorganization, single parenting with poor parenting skills—these are the substrate that give rise to homelessness. The provision of shelter alone is not the answer. Finding housing for the homneless and calling it a solution is like finding a hospital bed for a cancer patient and calling it a cure.

This bill would strike at the root causes of homelessness. It would assist the homeless, but—as importantly—also serve the hidden or prehomeless. First, this legislation would establish "family support centers" in or near low-income housing. These centers would provide comprehensive and continuous services including: health and mental health services, nutritional services, drug and alcohol counseling, family crisis and domestic violence counseling, child development programs, child care, job training, and parenting classes. The family support centers are designed to help their beneficiaries cope. They would provide the very skills needed to forestall and prevent homelessness.

Second, this act would establish home health services in low income neighborhoods. Individuals with chronic and debilitating diseases would receive support services in coordination with a local hospital or Community Health Center. These would include home health care, homemakers and meals, mental health and substance abuse services, and nursing supervision.

A third important provision would be directed toward individuals who are chronically mentally ill and who were previously homeless. This would include substance abuse counseling, outpatient drug therapy, job and life-skills training, and mental health care provided by a health care provider in a group home setting.

Implicit throughout is the recognition of the need to reach out and intervene in the low income neighborhoods. Many of those who are or will be homeless are unfortunately dysfunctional. Entire families and segments of our society are becoming dysfunctional. They don't have the means or wherewithal to act in their own, nor their childrens, best interests. The worrisome and dramatic fall in children's immunizations is but one striking example of this fact. Services that are passive, that require considerable initiative on the part of the beneficiary, are not succeeding.

This legislation constitutes an important step toward restoring function. It is as, and perhaps even more, important than providing a bed and a room. This bill addresses the need to bring the disenfranchised and incapable back into the mainstream of those who are able and self-sufficient. I am pleased to support this act and strongly urge its passage.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleagues as a cosponsor of the Homelessness Prevention and Community Revitalization Act of 1990. This legislation is an excellent complement to the initiatives contained in the McKinney Act.

Too often in this body we fail to address the root causes of the myriad problems we face. This legislation, however, is different. It is designed to prevent homelessness. Shelters, of course, are a necessary component of the solution to homelessness, but shelters do little to actually confront the root causes of homelessness.

The solution to homelessness is complicated and involves many needs that have to be met. This legislation authorizes discretionary grant money to provide social services to three specific populations: Families with young children; persons with debilitating health problems; and the chronically mentally ill. Grants are also authorized to promote Community Development Corporation involvement in the provision of low income housing.

I am particularly excited about the family support center concept contained in this legislation. Various housing authorities around the country have begun to develop such centers, including the Housing Authority of Portland, and I am pleased to join in this effort to encourage further development of such centers. These centers would be established in or near low-income housing. They are designed to provide an array of social services to very low income families, particularly those families that have been homeless or are likely to become so.

Services to be provided would include health and mental health services, nutritional services, drug and alcohol counseling, family crisis and domestic violence counseling, child development programs, child care, job training, and parenting classes. By encouraging the provision of such services to low income families, we go a long way toward preventing such families from losing their homes. We are adopting clear measures that address the root causes of homelessness.

This legislation also begins to address the needs of those low income persons with chronic or debilitating health conditions who have been or are at risk of becoming homeless. Specifically, grants would be authorized to provide health services to low-income elderly, those who are HIV infected, and the chronically mentally ill. Services would include home health care, case managemnt, meal services, substance abuse counseling and other care.

The Homelessness Prevention and Community Revitalization Act of 1990 will not solve this country's homeless problem. It will, however, assist in providing the infrastructure necessary to prevent people from becoming homeless. An individual or family on the brink of losing their home needs to know that services are available to bring them back from the brink. This legislation, I believe, will begin to provide the reassurance and stability that the homeless so badly need.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I am proud to join Senator KENNEDY, Senator DODD and other colleagues in supporting the Homelessness Prevention and Community Revitalization Act of 1990. This bill is a compassionate measure designed to extend support and assistance to families and individuals who are hovering on the brink and at grave risk of becoming homeless.

Homelessness is a national tragedy. No State, no community is immune. Repeatedly, we see in the national news the tragic picture of families and individuals living on the streets of New York and Washington. We read about families struggling to raise children in temporary shelters. The Affordable Housing Institute estimates that between 4 to 14 million families live "on the knife edge of homelessness." Unfortunately, West Virginia has its own stories of homeless people. We also have too many families struggling in substandard housing, on the brink of homelessness.

Americans recognize the tradegy of homelessness. National surveys show that people want to do something about this problem. For example, a recent Washington Post-ABC News poll indicated that 2 out of 3 Americans believe homelessness is a major national problem, and 7 out of 10 said that they would even pay more taxes to build shelters for the homeless in their areas.

This legislation is an important step toward combating homelessness. It follows the old saying, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. The bill seeks to prevent homelessness by offering support and assistance to those most vulnerable—families living in public housing, individuals suffering from chronic or debilitating illness, and others in need.

This measure seeks to establish family support centers in or near low-income housing. The centers would provide a wide variety of services to individuals and families to prevent vulnerable people from slipping into homelessness. The centers would offer health and nutritional services, drug and alcohol counseling, family crisis and domestic violence counseling, child development programs, job training, education and parenting classes. These are basic needs that should be met.

The bill also includes home health services targeted to low-income housing and neighborhoods to provide support services necessary to give people the option of living at home rather than entering a nursing home or institutional care facility. I am a strong proponent of home health care. With some help—a visiting nurse, periodic visits by a homemaker, or respite care relief for the primary caregiver—many Americans would be able to stay in their own homes rather than enter a nursing home or some type of institutional care. People want to stay in their own homes. It is more comforting. It is more compassionate. It is an important health care option that should be expanded.

This bill is an important, positive step toward preventing homelessness. I am pleased to support this measure which is aimed at helping low-income families and individuals stay off the streets, and I believe it is a wise investment.

I also recognize that our Nation must invest in more affordable housing to meet the needs of families, seniors and others struggling to keep a roof over their heads. There is much to be done to prevent homelessness and revitalize our communities and neighborhoods. The Homelessness Prevention and Community Revitalization Act is a solid step forward.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today I join my distinguished colleagues, Senator KENNEDY, chairman of Labor and Human Resources Committee, and Senator DODD, chairman of the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs and Alcoholism, in introducing the Homelessness Prevention and Community Revitalization Act of 1990. This important legislation will offer much needed assistance to the growing number of Americans who are homeless.

Mr. President, the problem of homelessness is growing in my State of Iowa. A study by researchers at Drake University for the State of Iowa which was released this past December, identified a much larger homeless and near homeless population in Iowa than in previous studies. The study found that 15,713 Iowans are homeless. And what is the largest group within the homeless population? Tragically, it's children. 8,405, or well over half of all homeless Iowans are children. This study also found that the number of people who are near homeless—those who would be homeless without entitlements such as fuel or rent assistance—has reached over 68,000. Of these near homeless, over 25,000 are children.

Homelessness is a very complex problem with many interwined causes. Another recent study indicates that homelessness in my State is largely rooted in economics. A 1986 report by the Des Moines Coalition for the Homeless cited five root causes of homelessness in Iowa:

First, general economic pressure forced by the farm crisis;

Second, lack of low-income housing;

Third, rising utility costs;

Fourth, low levels of support for social and economic aid programs; and Fifth, deinstitutionalization of State mental health population.

Mr. President, the legislation being introduced today will take important strides toward preventing homelessness by providing critical social services to three target populations: Families with young children, individuals with debilitating health conditions, and the chronically mentally ill. These services can mean the difference between being able to remain in one's home or apartment and being out on the street or in a shelter.

For many older people and others with disabilities, often living alone, getting some help in their homes can keep them out of nursing homes. For this reason, I was very pleased to work with Chairman KENNEDY on provisions in this bill which will establish grants to provide home health services. Services to be provided include: Home health care services, case management, meal services, 24-hour nursing supervision, services for HIV infected individuals, respite care services, mental health services and substance abuse treatment.

Mr. President, although homelessness is not often thought of as a rural problem, smaller towns and communities in Iowa and across the Nation have significant and growing homeless populations. I want to thank Chairman KENNEDY for agreeing to specifically address the problem of homelessness in rural areas and assuring that an equitable number and amount of grants established by the legislation are awarded to eligible agencies serving rural areas.

I was very pleased that we were able to win approval of two important provisions addressing the growing homelessness problem in the supplemental appropriations bill. Health care for homeless Americans is woefully inadequate. As chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, I was able to gain approval of a provision providing $2.3 million for projects to provide critical health care services to homeless individuals, including funds to maintain the People's Community Health Clinic's homeless health care program in Waterloo, IA. In addition, we won passage of an emergency appropriation of $50 million to help people in States like Iowa who faced unexpectedly high home heating bills last winter. Assistance like this, added to the kind of help offered by the legislation we are introducing today, should bring meaningful help to many thousands of Americans in need.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, the great number of homeless demonstrates that we have failed as a nation to provide the very basic human needs that allow individuals to live in dignity, and in true freedom. No one is free who does not know where they will find the next meal for their children, or a doctor to treat their illness, or decent shelter they can afford. The multiple social problems we face—a lack of affordable housing, affordable health care, and decent jobs, have manifested themselves in the condition of so many homeless.

Homelessness has had a long-term cause, and therefore requires a long-term solution. Homelessness is not just a singular condition. It is a series of pre-existing conditions that have contributed to an individual becoming homeless. It is compounded when a homeless person then does not have access to the kind of care that will alleviate his or her situation.

The bill we are introducing today authorizes $215 million in grant money to provide needed social services for three target groups: families with young children, individuals with debilitating health conditions, and the chronically mentally ill. In order to get communities more involved in the construction of low-cost housing, an additional $5 million will be authorized in grants to Community Development Corporations. We have formulated this legislation with existing State and local services in mind. The problems of the homeless are universal, but only individual communities know where the real gaps are in their services. The needs of communities in my rural State of Vermont will be very different from those, for example, in the greater Los Angeles area.

Our bill, in five parts, creates a comprehensive prevention program to attack the root causes of homelessness:

Family support centers, to provide services to families who are at risk of becoming homeless or who have already been homeless. Health and mental health services, nutrition, drug and alcohol counseling, family counseling, job training, and education would be provided. Programs established through grants to eligible State and local agencies.

Home health services programs, via grants to eligible agencies, to establish home health services to low-income housing and neighborhoods. $100 million in 1991, through 1995, with 20 percent matching from recipient agencies.

Group home services for the chronically mentally ill. Discretionary grants to agencies to target those at risk of becoming homeless, or previously homeless individuals. Would provide mental health and substance abuse counseling, job and life skills training, extensive case management. $15 million in 1991, through 1995, with 20 percent matching from recipient agencies.

Community Development Corporation improvement grants provides $50 million in 1991, through 1995, in discretionary grants to Community Development Corporations, for operation, enhanced business training for individuals operating CDC's, and equity grants to those involved in low-income housing.

Federal cooperation—requires the Secretaries of Health and Human Services and Housing and Urban Development to coordinate on administering the programs outlined in the bill. Plans submitted to Congress by the agencies must include a proposal for grants to recipients under the bill for renovation and rehabilitation grants available through HUD.

There are already existing a great many agencies and organizations in every State that have worked hard to help prevent homelessness. But the need has become so great that an extra helping hand is needed. Our hope is that this bill, as a prevention program, will help meet the needs of potentially homeless persons before they hit the streets. Great credit is due to those who work and volunteer at the soup kitchens and the shelters. But I look forward to the day when at least some of these can close their doors, for lack of homeless people to serve. That will be our measure of success.

By Mr. INOUYE (for himself and Mr. KASTEN):

S. 2601. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow individuals who do not itemize deductions a deduction for charitable contributions to the extent in excess of $100 per year; to the Committee on Finance.

DIRECT CHARITABLE DEDUCTIONS

● Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, today Senator KASTEN and I offer a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code to allow a tax deduction for charitable contributions to taxpayers who do not itemize their deductions. This allowance would apply to contributions in excess of $100. Passage of this bill will increase fairness, promote a worthwhile social policy, and allow charitable organizations to recoup losses incurred due to a decrease in governmental aid.

From fiscal year 1982 to fiscal year 1988, Federal spending in the six budget functions of greatest concern to nonprofit organizations, exclusive of Medicare and Medicaid, declined. A cumulative total of $100.1 billion was foregone, compared to what would have been spent had earlier spending levels been maintained. This in turn reduced Federal support to private, nonprofit organizations by an estimated total of $26.7 billion over the same period. I feel that it is important to support charitable and nonprofit organizations at a time in which Federal support is diminishing. President Bush speaks highly of our Nation's charitable organizations, referring to them as the thousand points of light. We must at least support charitable organizations by not hindering their efforts to raise funds privately. Without such support, these thousand points of light will go out.

America's most generous contributors to charity are low-income individuals. Studies have shown that taxpayers with incomes under $10,000 a year gave 2.8 percent of their household income while taxpayers with incomes of $75,000–$100,000 gave 1.5 percent of their household income. In fact, two-thirds of all charitable contributions come from families with annual incomes under $40,000. Many of these families cannot deduct their charitable contributions because they do not itemize their tax. Seven out of ten taxpayers, about 77 million people, do not itemize their income tax. The majority of nonitemizers are lower- and middle-income taxpayers. Ninety-one percent of all nonitemizers have incomes under $30,000 a year. Ninety-seven percent have incomes under $40,000 a year.

The Tax Code has allowed charitable deductions to itemizers since 1917. As the number of taxpayers who itemize their deductions declined in the late 1970's, the charitable contributions deduction was extended to nonitemizers to maintain a broad base of support for charitable organizations. The 1986 Tax Reform Act ended all deductions for charitable contributions by people who do not itemize their tax forms. Mr. President, the bill Senator KASTEN and I introduce for consideration today would allow both nonitemizers and itemizers to take a charitable contributions deduction. It is only fair to treat itemizers and nonitemizes alike.

Permitting low- and modest-income taxpayers to take a deduction for their charitable contributions serves important social needs. Nonitemizers give to causes which serve low- and middle-income taxpayers such as food programs for the homeless; drug prevention programs; aid to the elderly, the disabled, and victims of crime. They give to schools, churches and synagogues, and the Boy Scouts.

Mr. President, these worthy causes and others deserve more encouragement and consideration than the present tax policy allows. I urge my colleagues to support our measure.●

By Mr. METZENBAUM (for himself, Mr. PRESSLER, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. HATFIELD, and Mr. GRAHAM):

S. 2602. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide assistance for biomedical and health services research education, treatment programs and for other purposes relating to Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

COMPREHENSIVE ALZHEIMER'S ASSISTANCE, RESEARCH, AND EDUCATION ACT

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation that launches a decisive attack on Alzheimer's disease, one of our gravest public health problems.

That legislation is the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research and Education Act—the Alzheimer's care bill.

I am proud to join today with my very distinguished colleagues in introducing this bill: Senator CHARLES GRASSLEY, of Iowa, Senator LARRY PRESSLER, of South Dakota, and Senator MARK HATFIELD, of Oregon. Senator GRASSLEY and I have worked closely on previous Alzheimer's bills, including the one we introduced together last year that is the basis of our new bill. Senators PRESSLER and HATFIELD have helped deepen our understanding of this issue not just with their own legislation, but with personal and profound experience with Alzheimer's disease.

I am also pleased to have the support of Senator BOB GRAHAM, of Florida, as an original cosponsor.

You do not see the five of us together often. I have yet to hear anyone complain that the Metzenbaum-Grassley-Pressler-Hatfield-Graham gang is at it again, scheming up another plan. Our committee assignments, our political philosophies, our States, and our specialties vary widely.

But on the question of Alzheimer's disease, we are absolutely united.

And I know I speak for all of us when I say that we intend to do everything we can to pass this bill and have a fighting chance against a disease that seemed to come out of nowhere and now feels like it is everywhere.

Our legislation attacks this cruel disease on many fronts: stepping up research including testing of drugs to treat Alzheimer's reaching out to the families of Alzheimer's victims, and spurring States to take their own initiatives on this disease.

I am hopeful that this sweeping approach will yield significant and measurable results for America's 4 million Alzheimer's victims and their loving and exhausted families.

And I speak with a great sense of urgency. Because if we do not make progress soon, some 14 million Americans will be stricken with this dread disease in the next century.

Mr. President, if we do not act now on this most urgent problem, our already strapped health care system may crumble under the pressure.

Alzheimer's is costing us some $90 billion a year in Medicare nursing home payments and family resources. Just last week, a study in the Journal of the American Medical Association projected that increases in the number of elderly Americans with Alzheimer's and other diseases will cause Medicare payments for the aged to soar to $212 billion by the year 2040.

Our legislation costs less than half a billion dollars in its first year. With that, we might identify safe drugs to alleviate Alzheimer's devastating symptoms. We could help families learn to cope with the heavy burden of caregiving. Our research could one day cure Alzheimer's disease. Mr. President, even if this bill resulted in just one scientific breakthrough in the near term—an accurate and inexpensive tool to diagnose Alzheimer's—we'd save $1 billion a year in Medicare costs.

Few investments hold so much promise to stem so much suffering.

At an Alzheimer's hearing that Representative EDWARD ROYBAL and I chaired last month, I said that we could double our Federal spending on Alzheimer's research and spend about as much as the wings and wheels of just one B–2 stealth bomber. I hope our leaders in Congress and the President keep this in mind as they work out the broad parameters of our Federal budget.

Mr. President, the choice is clear. We can—and we must—move forward on Alzheimer's disease.

Representatives ROYBAL, OLYMPIA SNOWE, and others are introducing companion legislation in the House of Representatives. I am grateful to them for their cooperation and leadership. And I am most grateful to my colleagues here in the Senate, who have worked so diligently in developing this bipartisan consensus legislation.

With the distinguished Senators at my side today, I urge our colleagues to take action now and support this critical Alzheimer's legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2602

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Education Act of 1990 (CARE)".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) best estimates indicate that between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 Americans presently have Alzheimer's disease or related dementias and that 14,000,000 Americans will have

Alzheimer's by the middle of the 21st century;

(2) estimates of the number of individuals afflicted with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias are unreliable because current diagnostic procedures lack accuracy and sensitivity and because there is a need for epidemiological data on incidence and prevalence of such disease and dementias;

(3) studies estimate that between one-half and two-thirds of patients in nursing homes meet the clinical and mental status criteria for dementia;

(4) the care for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias falls primarily on their families, and such care is very often financially and emotionally devastating;

(5) the cost of caring for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias is great, and conservative estimates range between $80,000,000,000 and $90,000,000,000 per year solely for direct costs;

(6) although substantial progress has been made in recent years in identifying possible leads to the causes of Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and more progress can be expected in the near future, given adequate research funding, the research community may find itself on the verge of a breakthrough in the foreseeable future which would eliminate or substantially reduce the number of individuals with such disease and dementias or the difficulties of caring for such individuals;

(7) attempts to reduce the emotional and financial burden of caring for dementia patients is impeded by a lack of knowledge about such patients, how to care for such patients, the costs associated with such care, the effectiveness of various modes of care, the quality and type of care necessary at various stages of the disease, and other appropriate services that are needed to provide quality care;

(8) the results of the research that has been undertaken concerning dementia has been inadequate or the results have not been widely disseminated;

(9) more knowledge is needed concerning—

(A) the epidemiology of, and the identification of risk factors for, Alzheimer's disease and related dementias;

(B) the development of methods for early diagnosis, functional assessment, and psychological evaluation of individuals with Alzheimer's disease for the purpose of monitoring the course of the disease and developing strategies for improving the quality of life for such individuals and their families or caregivers;

(C) the understanding of the optimal range and cost-effectiveness of community and institutional services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and their families, particularly with respect to the design, delivery, staffing, and mix of such services and the coordination of such services with other services, and with respect to the relationship of formal to informal support services;

(D) the understanding of optimal methods to combine formal support services provided by health care professionals with informal support services provided by family, friends, and neighbors of individuals with Alzheimer's disease, and the identification of ways family caregivers can be sustained through interventions to reduce psychological and social problems and physical problems induced by stress;

(E) existing data that are relevant to Alzheimer's disease and related dementias; and

(F) the costs incurred in caring for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias;

(10) it is imperative to provide appropriate coordination of the efforts of the Federal Government in the provision of services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias;

(11) it is important to increase the understanding of Alzheimer's disease and related dementias by the diverse range of personnel involved in the care of individuals with such disease and dementias; and

(12) it is critical that the Federal Government provide leadership and support public education regarding, and promote the awareness of, Alzheimer's disease and related disorders.

TITLE I—AMENDMENTS TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT

SEC. 101. BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH.

Section 445, which applies to the National Institute on Aging, of the Public Health Service Act (hereafter in this title referred to as the "Act") is amended to read as follows:

"(a) ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE RESEARCH CENTERS.—(1) The Director of the Institute shall award grants to and enter into cooperative agreements with public and private nonprofit entities to pay all or part of the cost of planning, establishing or strengthening not less than 15 Alzheimer's Disease Research Centers (hereinafter referred to as the "Centers") which shall support any part of the full range of research and development from very basic to clinical. Such research and development may involve—

"(A) biomedical and behavioral studies;

"(B) ancillary supportive activities necessary to the primary research or the research and development effort, such as protracted patient care; or

"(C) a multidisciplinary attack on a specific disease entity or biomedical problem area.

"(2) The Centers may also serve as regional or national resources for special research purposes.

"(3) Funds available pursuant to this subsection may be used for construction to expand or renovate Centers which the Director of the Institute determines inadequate to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

"(4) Support of a Center may be for a period of not to exceed five years. Such period may be extended by the Director of the Institute for additional periods of not more than five years each if the operations of such Center have been reviewed by an appropriate technical and scientific peer review group established by the Director of the Institute and if such group has recommended to the Director of the Institute that such period should be extended.

"(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Grants awarded under subsection (a) shall be used—

"(1) to conduct basic and clinical research, education, and training, including longitudinal and consortium-type multidisciplinary studies and clinical trials;

"(2) to operate tissue banks and patient registries;

"(3) to demonstrate advanced diagnostic, prevention, treatment, and management methods;

"(4) to conduct programs in community education; and

"(5) for staffing and other basic operating costs, including such patient care costs as may be required for research.

"(c) CENTER CORE GRANTS.—The Director of the Institute shall award center core grants or enter into cooperative agreements to support shared resources for categorical research by a number of investigators from—

"(1) different disciplines who provide a multidisciplinary approach to a joint research effort; or

"(2) the same discipline who focus on a common research problem.

"(d) SATELLITE DIAGNOSTIC AND TREATMENT LOCATIONS.—The Director of the Institute shall award grants to or enter into cooperative agreements with entities receiving financial assistance under subsections (a) and (c) to assist such entities in providing high-quality research and services in the diagnosis and treatment of Alzheimer's disease and related disorders at locations other than Centers established pursuant to subsection (a).

"(e) INVESTIGATORS AND TRAINING.—The Director of the Institute shall award grants to or enter into cooperative agreements with public and private nonprofit entities to—

"(1) attract new or young investigators to careers in fields involving research on the biomedical, behavioral, and social aspects of Alzheimer's disease; and

"(2) develop institutional training programs within the general guidelines of the National Research Service Awards program which shall emphasize—

"(A) training of individuals at the postdoctorate level; and

"(B) training of women and groups underrepresented in such research.

"(f) APPLICATION.—Each entity desiring to receive a grant or enter into a cooperative agreement under this section shall submit an application to the Director of the Institute at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(g) CONSULTATION AND COORDINATION.—(1) The Secretary and the Director of the National Institute shall consult with the Director of the National Institute on Neurological Disorders and Stroke and the Director of the National Institute of Mental Health in carrying out the provisions of this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall coordinate research efforts assisted under this section with the Alzheimer's Disease Coordinating Committee of the National Institutes of Health and the Council on Alzheimer's Disease.

"(3) The Director of the Institute shall coordinate the research activities of the Centers described in subsection (a) with the activities of the satellite locations described in subsection (d).

"(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (a).

"(2) There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (c).

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (d).

"(4) There are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $4,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $6,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (e).".

SEC. 102. AWARDS AUTHORIZED.

Section 445B of the Act is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1991 through 1993 to carry out the provisions of this section.".

SEC. 103. AWARDS FOR LEADERSHIP AND EXCELLENCE.

Section 445C of the Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) of subsection (b) by—

(A) striking "Within 6 months after the date of enactment of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act of 1986, the" and inserting "The"; and

"(B) inserting "annually" before "prepare";

(2) in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) by—

(A) striking "Within one year after transmitting the plan required under paragraph (1), and annually thereafter, the" and inserting "The"; and

(B) inserting "annually" before "prepare"; and

(3) by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1991 through 1993 to carry out the provisions of this section and section 445D.".

SEC. 104. CLEARINGHOUSE AND DISSEMINATION PROJECT.

Section 445E of the Act is amended by inserting the following new subsection at the end thereof:

"(d) There are authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1991 through 1993 to carry out the provisions of this section and section 445F.".

SEC. 105. FAMILY SUPPORT AND STATE SERVICES.

Subpart 5 of part E of title V of the Act is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new sections:

"SEC. 445G. FAMILY SUPPORT RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS, AND BASIC CLINICAL RESEARCH.

"(a) DEMONSTRATION.—The Secretary, through the Commissioner on Aging, is authorized to make grants to, and enter into contracts with, public and private nonprofit entities to enable such entities to—

"(1) conduct demonstration projects which help educate the families of individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders regarding methods for providing appropriate care to such individuals; and

"(2) assist such families in managing the stress associated with caring for family members with such disease or related disorders.

"(b) LONG-TERM CARE.—The Director of the Institute is authorized to award grants to, and enter into contracts with, public and private nonprofit entities to enable such entities to conduct long-term care research, including the evaluation of best practices for the development of appropriate standards, with respect to Alzheimer's disease and related disorders and with respect to the coordination of such long-term care services.

"(c) SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—The Secretary, through the Director of the National Institute of Mental Health, the Administration on Aging, and the National Center for Nursing Research, is authorized to make grants to, and enter into contracts with, public and private nonprofit entities to enable such entities to conduct research with respect to developing methods for improving the delivery of supportive services to individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders, including the delivery of such services by the families of such individuals. Such research shall include determining the methods of delivery most appropriate to various ethnic and cultural groups, and rural and innercity populations.

"(d) APPLICATIONS.—(1) Each public or private nonprofit entity desiring a grant or entering into a contract pursuant to subsection (a) or (c) shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) Each public or private nonprofit entity desiring a grant or entering into a contract pursuant to subsection (b) shall submit an application to the Director of the Institute at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Director of the Institute may reasonably require.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $12,500,000 for fiscal year 1992 and $13,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (a).

"(2) There are authorized to be appropriated $12,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $12,500,000 for fiscal year 1992 and $13,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (b).

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $6,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and $7,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (c).

"SEC. 445H. STATE ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE PROGRAM.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary shall make grants to States to enable such States to—

"(A) coordinate the development and operation, with public and private organizations, of services including diagnosis, treatment, care management, respite care, legal counseling, and education to individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders and to the families and care providers of such individuals;

"(B) provide home health care, personal care, day care, companion services, short-term care in health facilities, and other respite care to individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders;

"(C) provide to health care providers, individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders, the families of such individuals, organizations established to serve such individuals and such families, and the general public, information regarding diagnostic services, treatment services, and related services available to such individuals, sources of assistance in obtaining such services (including assistance under entitlement programs), and the legal rights of such individuals and such families;

"(D) coordinate the development and operation of training programs and continuing education programs for health care providers on the diagnosis, treatment, and care management of Alzheimer's disease and related disorders;

"(E) review State policies on the financing of and reimbursement of the costs of health care, including long-term care, for individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders;

"(F) review State regulations that apply to the care of such individuals, and identify policy changes that can improve the care provided to such individuals; and

"(G) coordinate with any Federal programs relating to Alzheimer's disease or related conditions.

"(2) The public and private organization described in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) the Institute;

"(B) the Veterans' Administration;

"(C) the Centers described in section 445(a); and

"(D) organizations representing individuals and families of individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders.

"(b) AWARD BASIS.—Grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis.

"(c) APPLICATIONS.—Each State desiring a grant under subsection (a) shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(d) RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF FUNDS.—(1) Amounts provided pursuant to a grant under subsection (a) may not be used to—

"(A) make cash payments to individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders or to the families of such individuals; or

"(B) purchase or improve real property (other than minor remodeling of existing improvements to real property) or to purchase major medical equipment.

"(2) Not less than 25 percent, and not more than 50 percent, of a grant under subsection (a) may be used in any fiscal year to provide respite care.

"(e) DURATION OF GRANT.—A grant made under subsection (a) shall be made for 3 years, subject to annual evaluation by the Secretary.

"(f) AMOUNT OF GRANT.—The amount of a grant under subsection (a) may not—

"(1) be less than $250,000; and

"(2) exceed one-half of the costs of the research for which the grant is made.

"(g) REQUIREMENT OF APPLICATION.—The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) unless—

"(1) an application for the grant is submitted to the Secretary;

"(2) with respect to carrying out the purpose for which a grant is to be made, the application provides assurances of compliance satisfactory to the Secretary; and

"(3) the application otherwise is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out such subsection.

"(h) EVALUATIONS BY SECRETARY.—(1) The Secretary shall annually evaluate the activities and services conducted pursuant to each grant awarded under subsection (a).

"(2) The Secretary may enter into a contract with a private entity to conduct each evaluation described in paragraph (1).

"(3) If the Secretary enters into a contract to conduct an evaluation described in paragraph (1), the cost of such evaluation for the first year a grant is awarded under subsection (a) shall not exceed 2 percent of the amount of such grant.

"(i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of this section.

"SEC. 445I. BASIC AND CLINICAL RESEARCH.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health and the Director of the National Institute of Mental Health, may award grants to and enter into contracts with, public and private nonprofit entities for the purpose of enabling such entities to conduct basic and clinical research with respect to Alzheimer's disease and related disorders.

"(b) REQUIREMENT OF CERTAIN CONSULTATIONS IN ADMINISTRATION OF PROGRAM.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall consult with the Director of the Institute, the Director of the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke, and the Director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

"(c) ALLOCATION OF CERTAIN APPROPRIATIONS AMONG AGENCIES.—For purposes of carrying out subsection (a), the Secretary shall, as appropriate in the determination of the Secretary, allocate between the Director of the National Institutes of Health and the Director of the National Institute of Mental Health any amounts appropriated pursuant to the authority of subsection (d)(3).

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) For the purposes of carrying out this section there are authorized to be appropriated to the Director of the National Institutes of Health $187,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $244,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $303,000,000 for fiscal year 1993.

"(2) For the purposes of carrying out this section there are authorized to be appropriated to the Director of the National Institute of Mental Health $23,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $31,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $38,000,000 for fiscal year 1993.

"(3) For the purposes of allocations under subsection (c), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary $23,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $31,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $38,000,000 for fiscal year 1993.".

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO THE ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DEMENTIAS SERVICES RESEARCH ACT OF 1986

SEC. 201. FUNCTIONS OF COUNCIL ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE.

Section 912 of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act of 1986 (hereafter in this title referred to as the "Act") is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) of subsection (b) by striking "Not later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Council shall" and inserting "The Council shall annually";

(2) in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) of subsection (b) by striking "1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, and 1991" and inserting "1991, 1992, and 1993"; and

(3) in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) by striking "Within 1 year after the date on which the report required by paragraph (1) is transmitted to the Congress, and annually thereafter, the Council shall" and inserting "The Council shall annually".

SEC. 202. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE ADVISORY PANEL ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE.

Subsection (b) of section 921 of the Act is amended by striking "within 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act".

SEC. 203. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 923 of the Act is amended by—

(1) striking "100,000" and inserting "150,000"; and

(2) by striking "1988 through 1991" and inserting "1991 through 1993".

SEC. 204. NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF MENTAL HEALTH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 931 of the Act is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by inserting "and specialized care" after "services";

(2) in paragraph (1) of subsection (b) by—

(A) striking "Within six months after the date of enactment of this Act, the" and inserting "The"; and

(B) inserting "annually" before "prepare";

(3) by amending clause (iii) of subsection (b)(1)(A) to read as follows:

"(iii) the optimal range, types and cost-effectiveness of community, residential and institutional services and specialized care, particularly with respect to the design of such services and care, appropriate staffing for the provision of such services and care, the timing of such services and care during the progression of such disease or dementias, and the appropriate mix and coordination of such services and specialized care;";

(4) in clause (iv) of subsection (b)(1)(A) by inserting "the evaluation of best practices for the development of" before "appropriate";

(5) in clause (v) of subsection (b)(1)(A) by striking "and nursing home services" and inserting "nursing home services and other residential services and care"; and

(6) in clause (vii) of subsection (b)(1)(A) by striking "and nursing home services" and inserting "nursing home services, and other residential services and care".

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 933 of the Act is amended by striking "$2,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1988 through 1991" and inserting "$25,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $26,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and $28,000,000 for fiscal year 1993".

SEC. 205. AGENCY FOR HEALTH CARE POLICY AND RESEARCH.

(a) AMENDMENT TO TITLE.—The heading to subpart 2 of part D of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"Subpart 2—Agency for Health Care Policy and Research".

(b) AMENDMENTS TO TEXT.—Section 934 of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "Director of the National Center for Health Services Research on Health Care Technology Assessment" each place such term appears and inserting "Administrator of the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research";

(2) in paragraph (1) of subsection (b) by striking subparagraphs (A) through (E) and inserting the following:

"(A) provide for research on improving the organization, delivery, and financing of services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and their families, including research on the design, staffing, and operation of special care units for Alzheimer patients in institutional settings;

"(B) provide for research concerning the costs incurred by individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and their families in obtaining services, particularly services which are essential to such individuals and which are not generally required by other patients under long-term care; and

"(C) provide for research on the costs, cost-effectiveness and effectiveness of various interventions to provide services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and their families."; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (2) of subsection (b) the following new paragraph:

"(3) Within six months after the date of enactment of the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Educational (CARE) Act of 1990, and annually thereafter, the Administrator of the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research shall prepare and transmit to the appropriate committees of Congress a plan for the research to be conducted pursuant to subparagraphs (A) through (C) of paragraph (1).".

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 936 of the Act is amended by striking "$2,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1988 through 1991" and inserting "$5,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $6,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $7,000,000 for fiscal year 1993".

SEC. 206. TRAINING AND EDUCATION OF HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS.

(a) AMENDMENT TO TITLE.—The title of section 962 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"TRAINING OF HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS".

(b) AMENDMENT TO TEXT.—Section 962 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Director of the National Institute on Aging (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Director") in consultation with the Administrator of the Bureau of Health Professions is authorized to award grants to eligible entities to enable such eligible entities to provide training programs and continuing education programs with respect to health care for individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders.

"(2) The Director shall award grants under this section on the basis of merit.

"(b) ELIGIBLE ENTITY.—For the purpose of this section, the term 'eligible entity' means—

"(1) an educational institution providing training and education in medicine, psychology, nursing, social work, gerontology, or health care administration;

"(2) an educational institution providing prepatory training and education of personnel for nursing homes, hospitals, and home or community settings; or

"(3) an Alzheimer's Disease Research Center described in section 445(a) of the Public Health Service Act.

"(c) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION OF GRANTS.—The Director shall ensure that grants awarded under this section are distributed among the principal geographic regions of the United States.

"(d) APPLICATION.—Each eligible entity desiring a grant under subsection (a) shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require. Each such application shall—

"(1) contain assurances that the eligible entity will make the training programs and continuing education programs described in this section available to health care professionals, health care paraprofessionals, and family caregivers; and

"(2) contain assurances that the eligible entity will coordinate such training programs and continuing education programs with the Alzheimer's Disease Research Centers described in section 445(a) of the Public Health Service Act.

"(e) CURRICULA.—(1) The Director is authorized to award grants to eligible entities to assist such eligible entities in developing curricula for the training programs and continuing education programs described in subsection (a) including obtaining the most recent relevant research data available.

"(2) Each eligible entity desiring a grant under this subsection shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(f) NATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM.—The Director, in consultation with the Council on Alzheimer's Disease and the Alzheimer's

Disease Education and Referral (ADEAR) Center, shall establish the National Alzheimer's Education Program to—

"(1) provide coordination and leadership, working with public and private organizations, in the federal education and promotion effort for the general public, individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related disorders and the families of such individuals, health and long-term care providers, and other public agencies, including Federal, State and local public agencies regarding Alzheimer's disease and related disorders;

"(2) develop and distribute educational materials on Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, including print and electronic materials, for the general public, individuals with such diseases and disorders and the families of such individuals, and health and long-term care providers;

"(3) encourage and work with the print and electronic media to provide information on Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, sources of assistance to individuals with such diseases and disorders and the families of such individuals, progress in research, and the availability of preventive, diagnostic, treatment and supportive services;

"(4) encourage and work with public and private efforts to develop models for education, training and assistance programs for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related disorders; and

"(5) provide technical assistance, using model programs and services, to public and private organizations, including agencies and organizations providing services to individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related disorders and the families of such individuals, and agencies and organizations representing such individuals and the families of such individuals, to help in the development of programs and services to—

"(A) educate the general public, individuals with Alzheimer's disease and the families of such individuals, and health and long-term care providers;

"(B) train and educate health and long-term care providers; and

"(C) assist individuals with such diseases and disorders and the families of such individuals in the areas of preventive, diagnostic, treatment and supportive services as such services become available.

"(g) EDUCATION.—(1) The Director is authorized to make grants to public and nonprofit private entities to assist such entities in establishing programs to educate health care providers and the families of individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders on caring for individuals with such diseases or disorders, and on the availability in the community of public and private sources of assistance, including financial assistance, for caring for such individuals.

"(2) Each public or private nonprofit entity desiring a grant under this subsection shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require.".

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 964 of such Act is amended by—

(1) inserting "(a)" after "964."; and

(2) inserting the following new subsections at the end thereof:

"(b) There are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $10,500,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $11,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (a) of section 962.

"(c) There are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (e) of section 962.

"(d) There are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $2,500,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (f) of section 962.

"(e) There are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, $10,500,000 for fiscal year 1992, and $11,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 to carry out the provisions of subsection (g) of section 962.".

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleagues, Senators METZENBAUM, HATFIELD, and GRASSLEY in introducing the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Disease Assistance, Research and Education Act of 1990 [CARE]. This bill is introduced at a critical moment in history when scientists are on the verge of unlocking the secret that affects millions of people. How vitally important that the Federal Government support a comprehensive policy on Alzheimer's research and education. Alzheimer's disease has skyrocketed. More than 4 million people are affected by it. The cost of caring for the victims alone is $90 billion. That translates into an annual average cost of $22,500 per person. Yet, only $32 per person, with Alzheimer's disease, is expensed on research.

Biomedical and health services research must be increased substantially if we are to unlock the mystery that victimizes people with this disease. More funds for Alzheimer's research should be a higher priority. In research lies the solution to reducing the societal costs of Alzheimer's and improving the quality of life for patients and caregivers.

Recently, a lady whose husband has had Alzheimer's disease for 5 years wrote to me:

We had early intervention and availed ourselves of the means of learning to manage this devastation that has come to us. I feel sure that our lives, after 5 years of living with the insidious disease, are far better than I ever could have expected they would be at the outset of Alzheimer's disease. We entered research for medication and are part of a psychotherapy group for early Alzheimer's patients. Federal grants have given us these opportunities.

A comprehensive approach to conquering Alzheimer's would include training, education, and support for health care providers and caregivers. The compassionate efforts by families and friends of Alzheimer's patients are costly. Our entire society is affected as victims and their families are removed from the mainstream of society. Much human productivity is channeled into caring for those with Alzheimer's. Caregivers and health providers would benefit from educational programs that provide them with a better understanding of the disease, methods of treatment, and psychosocial means of coping with the behavior or Alzheimer's victims.

I have been working on legislation in this area for nearly 12 years. Progress has been made in the field of biomedical research. But a much more concerted effort is required to control the devastation of Alzheimer's disease. I support that effort and will work with my colleagues in the Senate and House to develop a comprehensive national program on Alzheimer's disease.

In conclusion, I would ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD an article from the Wall Street Journal, May 2, 1990, titled "Life With Alzheimer's Is Often the Hardest on Families of the Sick." This article is excellent testimony in support of CARE.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SLOW DEATH: LIFE WITH ALZHEIMER'S IS OFTEN THE HARDEST ON FAMILIES OF THE SICK

(By Brent Bowers)

PISCATAWAY, NJ.—Florence Jordan sits, bewildered, as her three children talk about how her Alzheimer's disease has made a hell of their lives.

Chris, the middle child and a recent college graduate, moved back in with her 54-year-old mother in Old Bridge, N.J., after seeing her pull a flaming dishrag from the oven, drop it onto the living-room rug and leave it there to burn.

"You find yourself thinking about [Alzheimer's] every hour," says Jimmy, 22, who is still in college." It takes over your mind."

Alzheimer's disease insidiously corrodes its victim's brains. Over a period of years, it progressively destroys their memories, their ability to reason and their hold on reality. Before it kills them, it robs them of speech and makes them incontinent. Some four million Americans are afflicted; about that many people are said to suffer other forms of dementia.

As the illness progresses, most victims cease to grasp fully what is happening to them. And that, mercifully, tempers their suffering. But it doesn't temper the suffering of the relatives and friends who feed, bathe and nurse them, who watch over them day and night, and who mourn their slow deaths. The families often suffer more than the victims do.

In Piscataway, the state-financed Copsa Institute for Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders is bringing relief both to dementia victims and to the husbands, wives and children who care for them. For the patients, it offers a day-hospital program that allows them to socialize, exercise, play games and practice simple mental tasks. It has a diagnostic clinic and, for relatives, it provides counseling, information and a desperately needed six-hour reprieve—several times a week—from exhaustion and despair.

A look at the Copsa Institute's experience shows a way of life that may well await tens of millions of Americans.

At 9:45 one Friday morning, about a dozen patients troop into a room and take their places at an oblong table. (The institute requested that only first names of most patients be used in this story.) A majority of them meet clinical criteria for "probable Alzheimer's disease," officials say, while the rest suffer dementias from vascular or other causes. A definite diagnosis of Alzheimer's, a degenerative illness of the brain and nervous system with no known cause or cure, is made only in a post-mortem examination of brain tissue.

GETTING REACQUAINTED

Today, participants have spent half an hour outside in the lobby getting reacquainted, exchanging pictures of themselves and pinning on name tags. Decorative paper snowflakes dangle from the ceiling.

Staff nurse Sandy Egan opens the daily orientation period with questions about time and place. "What day is this?" she asks. "Friday," several voices pipe up. "Good!" Ms. Egan writes the word "Friday" in large letters on a board. On a calendar, she crosses out yesterday's date. "What day of the month is today?" she asks. This time, there is a pause, and only two or three hesitant replies.

After questions about famous movie actors, patients' birthdays, this and that, the group moves to a smaller room to have their thought-processes jogged. They are shown colorful pictures of improbable scenes—a worker drilling a hole in a library floor, a man walking upside down on a ceiling, an outsize telephone plunked onto a small table.

"What do you think of this one?" asks Lisa Berbig, the program's coordinator.

"It's a good picture," a man named Bill replies.

Esther says: "I think the little girl is going to the library, and he is doing some drilling."

Nobody mentions the giant phone.

FILLING IN THE BLANK

The group has better luck with aphorisms. Asked to complete the phrase, "Absence makes the . . .", several voices cry out happily, ". . . heart grow fonder."

Next comes a 15-minute walk, followed by group psychotherapy. Pauline describes her favorite photo, in which she is sitting in her grandmother's lap. Rinalda remembers how she used to crack the whip with her own daughter and seven—or was it eight?—sons. "I'd call their names in Italian," she says, her face crinkling into a grin. "They'd say, 'C'mon, let's get outta here. Mom's mad.' "

Lunch is chicken soup, rolls, manicotti and green beans, with peaches for dessert. To avoid confusion, patients each get just one utensil to eat with. Some patients sing along to tapes of old favorite songs.

After a rest period, health specialist Florence Meyers, the mother of seven and the widow of an Alzheimer's victim, leads an exercise period. Next comes dance time, and Ana, who has seemed quite reserved, seizes two bright scarves provided for the occasion and sashays about, swiveling her hips. Bill asks Ms. Egan, the staff nurse, to dance.

The Copsa Institute's day-hospital program was the first in New Jersey when it opened in 1982, and it has been a model and training ground for many of the 32 such facilities that have since sprung up in the state. While day-care facilities remain relatively rare in the U.S., people in the field predict they will be commonplace in the next century as the ranks of the elderly swell, to 68 million people over 65 in the year 2040, from 30 million now.

As this session comes to a close, the blinds are drawn to prevent pandemonium at the sight of arriving relatives. Ms. Berbig leads the group in imitating chickens—pressing hands to nose to form a beak, flapping elbows like wings and squawking. There's more singing and dancing, then "wrap-up" time, a review of the day's activities.

As people pick up the patients for the night, Florence Jordan—the woman who lives with her 23-year-old daughter Chris—struggles to get into her coat. Though her left arm is in one sleeve and Ms. Berbig is holding the other for her, she gropes around the back of her neck, searching in vain for the opening. After several seconds, Ms. Berbig guides her hand.

One of the biggest blows to Florence's son and daughters, they say, has been the abandonment of the family by some of their close relatives. Once, desperate for assistance, "we went begging" to them for a few hours of their time, says Florence's 26-year-old daughter Kathy Ciacciarelli, "but they didn't want to get involved." She, like her brother and sister, is active in her mother's care.

There have been some pleasant surprises, too. Florence Jordan's former husband, now remarried, helps out with money. The Jordans' children are closer to one another now because of their 54-year-old mother's situation. And while they no longer can have sensible conversations with her, they try to make sure she enjoys herself. She likes going to movies, taking walks and eating Chinese food.

As a guest is about to leave Mrs. Jordan's apartment, Jimmy, a thick-chested former football player, walks over to his mother and gives her a squeeze. "Hey, Ma, how you feeling?" he asks, grinning. She beams.

Florence Jordan's own parents are still living. After spending a day at their apartment in a high-rise for the elderly in Sayreville, she is eager to go home. Once she has left, her father, 84-year-old Joe Colombo, shakes his head. "As soon as she got here this morning, she wanted to leave," he says.

Mr. Colombo used to take his daughter for walks, but he recently had heart surgery and he has arthritis. When he and his 86-year-old wife, Vera, discuss their daughter, one question keeps coming up: Why? "Sometimes I ask God why he did this," Mr. Colombo says, adding quickly that he doesn't blame God. Vera rejects any suggestion that the disease was inherited. Joe seems to disagree: "It could be a little gene that snuck in," he says.

Mrs. Colombo brightens when she remembers Florence as a little girl. "She had eyelashes that turned way up," she says. "She was always running."

It is late afternoon, and Jule Sloane, a jaunty grandmother in plaid slacks, heavy silver earrings and wire-rimmed glasses, pours glasses of chilled white wine for herself and a guest at her home in Summit.

As her 72-year-old husband, John, a grandson of Thomas Edison, mutters on a couch nearby, she speaks about the happy years of her marriage. Mr. Sloane, a Yale graduate, went to war after they were married in 1942. When he returned from his service in England, Italy and North Africa, he took a job as a writer for a house organ at Westinghouse Electric Corp., translating scientific jargon "into plain English," she says.

"He was a quiet guy," she says. "He never looked rushed. But everything always got done. He was very funny in a dry way, always punning."

She talks about her husband's deteriorating mental state and the loss of his personality. His condition has been described as "senile dementia of the Alzheimer's type," but Mrs. Sloane believes his illness has been complicated by strokes. He began to show signs of disorientation in the early 1980s, forgetting what errands had brought him to town, for example. Recently, she has had to withdraw him from a day-care program because his behavior was becoming disruptive; he was always trying to leave the place.

Mrs. Sloane observes: "I don't say, 'Why me?' I say, 'Why him?' " He peers at his wife, frowning, searching for words. He is a handsome man—tall, slim, and nattily dressed in a plaid shirt and blue suspenders. His wife goes to him, gives him a hug. "Its OK, honey, now you just don't be upset," she says, and kisses his cheek.

At a spouse-support group meeting at the Piscataway center, a dozen men and women ranging in age from mid-50s to late 70s sit in a circle and talk about their anguish.

Once, they had dreamed of retirement as a reward for lives of hard work. Now, instead of traveling and spending time with friends, they stay at home and feed and dress their husbands and wives. The fatigue is evident in their faces. The ailments of old age plague them. They are angry at what they see as government favoritism for the poor over the middle class; they feel Alzheimer's disease, the nation's No. 4 killer (after heart disease, cancer and stroke) gets short shrift from the media. They wonder if they will ever enjoy life again.

One husband gets nods of understanding when he says he has fantasies about asphyxiating himself and his wife by "going into the garage and turning on the key" to the ignition of his car. A wife says she has devised "three ways" to kill herself.

A man named Gus says, "I'm at the end of my rope." His wife is 60 years old but is "going back to her childhood, when she was seven or eight," he says. "Sometimes, she gets violent." Roger says his wife can get "kinda tough." He goes on: "She might strike me, or throw water." Tears well up. Though seated, he is panting, nearly out of breath. "I get a little emotional," he says. "I myself have emphysema. So it's extremely difficult."

Other participants murmur their support. Here, people have empathy.

They also offer practical, tough-minded advice. There is a lively discussion about the best locks to use for foiling Alzheimer's patients' midnight wanderlust. Larry Benjamin, who was an advertising-makeup man for the New York Times Magazine before he retired, has been caring for his wife for about 15 years. He continues to feed her twice a day, though she has been in a nursing home since 1988. Mr. Benjamin, who is 74, gently urges younger participants in the group not to get their hopes up about the possibilities of new drugs, and not to look askance at restraining-devices for agitated dementia victims. "Restraint isn't cruel," he says. "It's [just] a bit of netting. You have to modify your thinking on this."

Several participants chastise Gus for letting his wife get him into arguments he can't win. Gus says he keeps telling her she will never find things she has "lost" because they don't exist.

"You're already in trouble," scolds Milton. "You can never win by reasoning with an Alzheimer's patient." Several people urge Gus to bring his wife to the Piscataway day-care center, and they suggest ways of overcoming her resistance to the idea. One says he tricked his wife into such a move by telling her they were going to church. By the time they arrived, she had forgotten the purpose of the trip.

Everyone laughs. The horror stories have their comic side. The laughter is easy because families see their own experience in the stories others tell. They laugh when

Ana, who married her husband 11 years ago, in late middle age, describes how he poured Coke into a jar of grated cheese and started drinking it. They laugh when Gus says he has read all the handbooks on coping with Alzheimer's patients but, unfortunately, "the books say one thing, and my wife does another."

Legal-services attorney Janice Chapin tells a crowded room of dementia victims' families how to cope with Medicaid rules that can gobble up all of one's savings in return for a place in a nursing home. One recommendation: Set up a big burial account free from the state's grasp, bequeath the unused portion to yourself or your children, and order a cheap funeral when the time comes.

No, she tells a gnarled old man, the eligibility information he got from a Medicaid office was wrong. A bureaucrat's mistake might have cost him thousands of dollars.

The questions at the lecture organized by the Copsa Institute go into the nuts and bolts of nursing-home placement and reimbursement. Standing chalk in hand next to a blackboard, Ms. Chapin explains that the assets, but not the earnings, of a healthy spouse can disqualify a patient from Medicaid. But, she says, some assets, like a home in which the healthy spouse is living, can't be touched.

"So what am I going to do?" asks one exasperated member of the audience. "Bury the money in the cellar?"

Ms. Chapin replies: "Basically, you've got to spend it all." Instead of putting it in the bank, she suggests, why not "buy a new roof for your house?"

William E. Reichman, the youthful, bearded medical director of the Copsa Institute, sits at his cluttered desk and talks about Alzheimer's. Dr. Reichman describes it as a "familial disorder." As a researcher, he seeks more-effective drugs to treat the disease, especially the hallucinations and psychotic behavior relatives find even more upsetting than the memory loss (Sample: the impostor syndrome, in which a spouse becomes a feared intruder.) As a psychiatrist, Dr. Reichman tries to guide families "through a grieving process" as Alzheimer's eats away at a loved one's very identity.

The day center, he says, gives participants "their peer relationships back." The elaborate structure of the activities is crucial; long after Alzheimer's patients have lost reasoning power, they still seem to know how to act in familiar situations.

Most Friday afternoons, Dr. Reichman examines dementia victims in nursing homes where few other psychiatrists venture. Consultations are difficult, and the state is stingy about paying doctors.

"As soon as I show my face in a nursing home to see Mrs. X, the nurses start grabbing me, begging me to look at patients Y and Z," Dr. Reichman says.

He tries to maintain a physician's professional detachment from the suffering he sees, but it isn't always possible. "Some families are remarkably powerful at pulling you in," he says. In California, where he got his early training at UCLA's Neuropsychiatric Institute, the teen-age son of an Alzheimer's patient interviewed him for a school report. Dr. Reichman got a copy of the essay in the mail as a gift, and he keeps it in his office. He reads excerpts:

"My father was a very bright man. He worked on developing the space shuttle. . . . What was once a sweet, kind, caring personality is now almost completely gone. . . . There isn't a moment of any day that he isn't on my mind. . . . From writing this paper, I also learned to deal with my own feelings. . . . I thought I was going to have a nervous breakdown."

In a nursing home a few miles' drive from Piscataway, Mary lies sedated and stretched out on a special restraining "geri-chair" in her room, a towel wrapped around a swollen left leg. Mary, who is about 80, suffers from Alzheimer's and from an injury to her head sustained in a car accident. She habitually becomes agitated at about this time—5:30 in the afternoon—but today she is still asleep. A nurse's aide bends over her, shouting, "Mary, wake up, the doctor's here." Mary, wake up, the doctor's here." Mary stirs. 'Oh, God," she moans.

This is Alzheimer's in its last, worst stages. Typically, the disease strikes people in their 70s and 80s—though the middle-aged aren't immune—and it results in death, often from pneumonia or other infections, five to 20 years after its onset.

Dr. Reichman examines Mary. He asks her to look at him, then loudly repeats the request. She stares vacantly. A nurse, Merlene, smoothes Mary's hair and gives her a hug. "How are you today, honey?" she coos.

Leaving the room, the doctor explains that the trick is to hit the "exact balance" of all the drugs Mary is taking. Then, she would be able to sleep well yet stay composed in her waking hours. But administering proper dosages is tricky: Sloppy record-keeping, often by poorly trained or overburdened nurses with little or no guidance from psychiatrists, is a big problem in nursing homes.

In a tiny alcove, Dr. Reichman pores over log books and barks questions at nervous personnel about patients' reactions to medications.

There are some slivers of light in the Alzheimer's nightmare.

There is Florence Meyers. Nursing her husband in the late 1970s and early '80s while raising seven children was so physically strenuous, she says that when she finally checked her husband into a clinic and got a few days' respite, "it hit me like a truck. My entire body ached from all that release." Today, as a health specialist at the Piscataway facility, she lights up the faces of the patients with her joshing, her hugs and an occasional tickle.

There is Tom Johnson, Copsa's clinical coordinator, whose uncle and aunt had Alzheimer's and who acknowledges that he is "obsessed" about his own prospects of getting the disease. Many of the sons and daughters of patients, he says, wonder if they are condemned by their genes to their parents' fate. Researchers say only about one in six patients suffer the variety of Alzheimer's that runs in families. Mr. Johnson feels that counseling gives people hope. "I see that life goes on, the world doesn't cave in," he says. "In the narcissism of being well, we say, 'Oh God, I'd kill myself.' But in the thick of the disease, people cope. They suffer—but they cope." What strikes him is the stubborn love families show victims even in the final states of Alzheimer's disease.

There is Carmine Cascella, a retired factory production-department superintendent who does volunteer work at the institute two afternoons a week for the satisfaction of thinking "maybe I've made [patients] a little happier." He says that "after a while, they sort of recognize you. You dance with them. You sing with them," Before he came to Copsa 2½ years ago, he had no idea what Alzheimer's was. Giving a helping hand, he says, "is like I'm giving something back" to society.

There is Mildren Potenza, who organized a grass-roots organization in the late 1970s to lobby the state to set up the Copsa program. Her duties as the institute's resource-center coordinator include fielding questions from all over New Jersey on an 800 line. She often talks to worried relatives "for half an hour or more. Even if I can't offer anything concrete, they feel much better."

Finally, there are all the exhausted husbands, wives and children whose love shines through. The wife of a former schoolteacher, married to him for nearly 60 years, and herself once a professional musician, struggles to remember how many children she has. Finally, she stammers, "Three, no two boys * * * and a girl." He gently corrects her: "No honey, it's two girls and a boy. You're doing just fine."

THE PATHS OF ALZHEIMER'S RESEARCH AND INQUIRY

Etiology: Possible causes of disease

Heredity is considered the cause of about 10 percent of Alzheimer's cases. Disease is thought to be linked to chromosome 21, the same one responsbile for Down's syndrome.

Environment studies show that certain toxins produce the same brain changes as are present in Alzheimer's patients.

Virus research has failed to show a direct viral relationhip to the disease, though scientists still regard it as possible.

Pathogenesis: How the disease manifests itself in the body

Cholinergic deficiency is evident in some people who have Alzheimer's. They lose the nerve cells in the basal nucleus, which makes acetylcholine. This may be a chemical basis for the loss of memory.

Amyloid accumulation in the center of plaques and in the walls of blood vessels of the brain is present in some victims of the disease. Research shows that the gene for amyloid sits on that same chromosome 21.

Nerve growth deficiency occurs in some Alzheimer's victims who lack other chemicals in the hippocampus and the cerebral cortex, which help the nerve cells make new connections. This deficit affects the temporal lobes, causing memory loss.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I am tremendously pleased to join my colleagues today in introducing the second version of the CARE bill—the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Educational Act of 1990.

Senators METZENBAUM, PRESSLER, GRASSLEY, and I have combined our various proposals for increased Federal support of Alzheimer's disease into this bipartisan piece of authorization legislation. We join forces on the Senate floor today to send a clear signal to those Americans currently wrestling with this devastating illness—we at the Federal level recognize the immediate need to elevate the war on Alzheimer's disease.

Alzheimer's disease is truly one of the most devastating diseases of our century. More than 100,000 individuals die of Alzheimer's disease annually, which makes it the fourth leading cause of death in adults, after heart disease, cancer and stroke. It is a progressive, degenerative disease that attacks the brain and results in impaired memory, thinking, and behavior, in over 4 million American adults. Most of those who have it die within a decade.

It is no coincidence that the acronym of the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Education Act is CARE. From the homes of Alzheimer's victims and their families to the research laboratories at the National Institutes of Health, millions of men and women across this country share a commitment to treating this disease and caring for its victims.

Alzheimer's disease already has touched 1 of every 3 American homes, and threatens to touch many more if an effective treatment is not found. Alzheimer's most often affects the Nation's elderly population. In only 50 years, the number of Americans 65 and older will more than double from 30 million today to an estimated 64 million in 2040.

Although millions of families have been coping with the disease and its effects for many years, Government efforts to develop a treatment to Alzheimer's and respond to the needs of its victims and their families are relatively recent. When I became chairman of the Appropriations Committee in the Senate, only $13 million was being spent for Alzheimer's research. Today, $148 million has been appropriated by this Congress for research and treatment of Alzheimer's disease.

That dramatic increase is an important first step, but annual Federal research spending still amounts to $1 for every $500 in the cost society pays for this debilitating disease. And funding for heart disease, AIDS, and cancer research each total between $600 million and $1.45 billion annually, continuing to outpace our research efforts in Alzheimer's disease. Much more can and should be done.

It was nearly 1 year ago that Senator PRESSLER and I introduced the original CARE bill in the Senate [S. 1321] and our colleagues, Congressmen ROYBAL, WAXMAN, STARK, and DOWNEY introduced companion legislation in the House [H.R. 1490]. Our intent was to quadruple Federal Alzheimer's research funding by 1992. Since that time we have been working with our Senate and House colleagues and the National Alzheimer's Association to refine the legislation. Today we are united in our efforts and our commitment to increase Federal support of research and assistance for Alzheimer's disease

Our legislation proposes to triple Federal biomedical and services research funding for Alzheimer's and related disorders to $571 million by 1993. In support of this effort, the bill reauthorizes the Council on Alzheimer's disease and the Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's disease and authorizes the Alzheimer's disease research centers, center core grants, and satellite diagnostic/treatment locations.

This will allow us to deploy our brightest research minds and our best facilities, with the support of Federal, State, and private funds, to fight Alzheimer's disease today before it paralyzes our country tomorrow.

Perhaps the most important part of the legislation, however, is its focus on the unsung heroes of our national battle against Alzheimer's: the caregivers. In addition to authorizing a number of family support and service delivery research and demonstration projects, the CARE bill would make matching grants available to every State in the country for Alzheimer's diagnostic, treatment, care management, legal counseling, and educational services.

Of course the various provisions of the CARE bill complement initiatives currently underway across the country. Of the Nation's 4 million Alzheimer's victims, at least 50,000 are in my State. Thanks to the leadership of a number of committed individuals and organizations, one of the most innovative programs in the country already is responding to the needs of Oregon's Alzheimer's victims and their families.

In 1987, the Alzheimer's Disease Center of Oregon [ADCO] was created as a joint project of the Columbia-Willamette chapter of the Alzheimer's and Related Disorders Association, the Veterans' Administration Hospital, Good Samaritan Hospital and Medical Center, and the Oregon Health Sciences University. This center is not a building, but a coalition. ADCO focuses on coordinating and interrelating the research, clinical care and educational activities in place, and developing needed programs that do not currently exist.

The desire of all four participating organizations is to foster collaboration throughout the region to benefit the overall campaign against Alzheimer's Disease. In so doing, ADCO provides the opportunity for: First, the development of enhanced research programs throughout Oregon; second, involvement statewide of scientists and clinicians in research and medical care related to Alzheimer's disease; third, expanded and more accessible clinical services throughout the State; and fourth, expanded educational activities for professionals and for the community and more importantly, better family support.

The Oregon Legislature immediately understood the potential benefits of the center, and provided funding for a brain bank to store and research brain tissue as well as for the development of a research data base. The legislature also agreed to put a check-off box on the Oregon income tax form, allowing 29,000 Oregonians to contribute $140,000 in tax returns to the center last year.

Only in Oregon will a Federal, a State and a private medical center and a nonprofit support group be working together to attack Alzheimer's disease on all fronts. But this is a model that can and should be replicated.

The shared goal of the Alzheimer's Disease Center of Oregon and other efforts across the country is the development of a treatment for Alzheimer's disease. As we work toward that goal, however, the fact remains that the disease continues to take a very large toll on millions of people across this country.

As we work toward a treatment tomorrow, CARE is what we can do today.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am very pleased to be a part of this very comprehensive initiative today with my colleagues Senators METZENBAUM, PRESSLER, and HATFIELD.

This bill, the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Education Act of 1990 [CARE], contrasts markedly with the first small steps that we were taking in 1983 when we began in the Subcommittee on Aging of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources to hold hearings on the Alzheimer's disease problem. In May 1983, I held what I believe was the second hearing by an authorizing committee in the U.S. Senate devoted exclusively to Alzheimer's disease. I believe that the first hearing on Alzheimer's disease by an authorizing committee was also held by the Subcommittee on Aging in July 1980 under the chairmanship of Tom Eagleton. We held a second hearing on research on Alzheimer's in October 1984. Senator METZENBAUM held a field hearing of the subcommittee in Ohio in November 1984. And also in 1984, Senator METZENBAUM, with a floor amendment to a Labor/HHS appropriations bill, secured funds for three Alzheimer's disease research centers.

The bill we are introducing today represents the merger of two major legislative initiatives with respect to Alzheimer's disease, and shows, I believe, that we have come a long way in developing a substantial Federal effort on Alzheimer's disease and are in a good position to build on that effort.

One of these legislative initiatives was S. 1255, a bill introduced earlier in this session by Senator METZENBAUM and myself, which was based primarily on recommendations of the national advisory panel on Alzheimer's disease. That advisory panel was created by the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act of 1986, title IX of Public Law 99-660, which was authored by myself and Senator METZENBAUM during the 99th Congress. Serving on the advisory panel is Dr. Kathleen Buckwalter, who is a faculty member in the college of nursing at the University of Iowa, and who is an authority on how services can be provided to those with Alzheimer's disease.

S. 1255 called for increases in funding for biomedical research on Alzheimer's disease, including expansion of the National Institute on Aging's Alzheimer's Research Centers Program, increases in funding for research on services and how they are financed, and a reauthorization of the provisions of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act of 1986.

The other legislative initiative contributing to the bill we are introducing today was S. 1321, the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Education Act, introduced by Senators PRESSLER and HATFIELD.

The bill we are introducing today:

Authorizes a substantial increase in effort for basic and clinical research on Alzheimer's disease and related disorders.

Contains a number of innovative additions to the Alzheimer's Disease Research Centers Program. The National Institute on Aging, the agency which has managed in an outstanding manner the development from three centers to the current group of 15 centers, is to create satellite diagnostic facilities and is to award research center core grants. The satellite centers and the core grants will work in a coordinated fashion with the 15 research centers and should thus greatly speed advances in knowledge about Alzheimer's disease.

Authorizes a substantial new research effort, by several Federal agencies, devoted to learning how families can be better assisted in their efforts to take care of family members with Alzheimer's disease.

Authorizes a State Alzheimer's disease program which would help States develop services which could help those with the disease and their families. In my own State of Iowa, a Governor's task force on Alzheimer's disease has recently made recommendations to the Governor. There are around 40,000 people in Iowa currently suffering from this disease. Iowa has the largest and fastest growing group of those 80 years of age and older of any State. Clearly, we in Iowa will have increasing numbers of people suffering from this disease. I believe that the State grant program called for in our bill would go a long way to helping States like Iowa implement improved services for Alzheimer's disease victims and their families.

Finally, I am particularly pleased that the bill reauthorizes the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act of 1986, an act for which I, with Senator METZENBAUM, was primarily responsible. I believe that this act has been successful. I have already noted the work of the advisory panel. I understand that the National Institute on Aging has developed diagnostic protocols, called for by the act, which are widely used in the United States, and in which considerable interest has been shown in Europe. The resource center called for in the act is up and running.

Mr. President, I believe that we are introducing a piece of legislation with many exciting provisions. If enacted, and if those who appropriate funds can find the money for it, it should bring us closer to the day when we can prevent people from getting this disease, or can cure it.

By Mr. HOLLINGS:

S. 2603. A bill to establish a National Trade Council within the Executive Office of the President, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

NATIONAL TRADE COUNCIL ACT OF 1990

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, no problem we face—and we face many—holds more peril to our future than the growing noncompetitiveness of the U.S. Government in the global economic contest. In calendar year 1989, we suffered a trade deficit of $108.6 billion, and this year that will rise easily, unless we sober up and straighten out our Government's twisted sense of priorities. Just as surely as $200 billion budget deficits have busted the Federal Government, our gigantic trade deficits are breaking the ecomony. Indeed, this Nation of once huge trade surpluses—this country of Yankee traders, hard bargaining, and world commerce—has come a cropper. We are now, believe it or not, the largest debtor in the world, in hock to everyone else. Worse, at the whim of the world, for if these other investing countries decide to pull the plug on America and take the billions they have invested here home, we would be washed right down the money drain.

There is no mystery as to the cause of our trade malady. Oh, some will tell you that it's because other peoples have surpassed the American worker in productivity. That is profoundly false. The Bureau of Labor Statistics and the chamber of commerce both agree that the American worker is still the most productive worker in the world. While the rates of increase here the past few years have lagged behind increases elsewhere, in absolute terms we are still measurably ahead in the productivity index. Others will argue that we lack the research and technology and this is wherein America fails. While it is true we have exported much of our expertise, America still has the lead in creativity, research, know-how, and industrial innovation. Nor is our problem any lack of competitive zeal among our business leaders and their employees. The captains of American industry have been retooling, modernizing, finding new ways to compete. Unfortunately, for want of encouragement to produce here at home, many have taken this know-how—and the jobs it produces—offshore. Not because they are unpatriotic, but because they are denied the help of their Government in the international trade competition.

This is the nub of the problem. All around this world of ours, countries are throwing their resources into taking over America's markets and picking off America's jobs. Governments everywhere work with business people to give them the advantage. They erect every sort of barrier imaginable—structural, legal, institutional—to keep our products out of their markets and they confer on their producers every advantage imaginable to corner our markets. Tax rebates on exported goods, complicated licensing requirements, lengthy inspection practices at the foreign dock, remote port facilities overseas, direct and indirect subsidies, government research and planning, government-backed loans, government procurement, government financing, government monetary and trade policies—you name it and it's being used against us even as we speak.

While other nations are down on the field competing for jobs, dollars, and markets, America sits up in the stands with our leaders caterwauling free trade, protectionism, free trade, protectionism as if the world hadn't moved on since the turn of the century. Their debate is as remote from the realities of today's world competition as the clipper ship is to the world of modern commerce. For in truth, what is at issue here is simple and stark. At issue are our jobs, our standard of living, our national security.

JOBS

Every billion dollars in America's trade imbalance is 25,000 lost jobs. Figure it out. Last year's trade deficit translates into 2,715,000 job opportunities lost to the United States.

STANDARD OF LIVING

The shirt I am wearing can be produced in Shanghai for 24 cents an hour. Would the free traders reduce America's standard of living to 24 cents an hour? Public policy exacts of America's industry certain costs of doing business. We require a minimum wage, a safe working place, product liability for defects, unemployment compensation, Social Security, clean air, clear water—together they constitute the American standard of living. Impose these standards on others and their costs rise too. But others don't require that standard. Safeguarding it is not undercutting any overseas comparative advantage. In this modern world, any product can be produced anywhere. The point is, we produce in a society where production must meet certain high standards vital to us all.

NATIONAL SECURITY

The United States is the leader of the free world. Upon the success of our economy rests the future of enterprise, the future of freedom. The world's leader cannot denude itself of the capacity to produce and still expect to lead. As a world power, we must have the capacity to produce steel, rubber, glass, textiles, machine tools, automobiles, rolling stock. You cannot deliver your wheat on an optic fiber. You cannot go to war in foreign uniforms. We cannot sustain without basic industry. We must disenthrall ourselves. What has been visited on basic industry is now experienced by every sector of American enterprise, including the electronics, computers, and high technology which were supposed to be our salvation.

Mr. President, Congress over the years has responded to our growing trade vulnerability. It has enacted statutes to protect against dumping, foreign subsidization, and other unfair and illegal trade practices being deployed against America. We have on the books a host of remedies which, if enforced, would level the field of play and give America's business and America's workers the chance to compete and show their stuff. We have countervailing duties, antidumping duties, section 301 actions, Super 301 actions, and section 337 actions. We have had escape clauses, peril points, and trigger prices put on the books. We have establishing agencies and tribunals to monitor America's trade condition. We have armed ourselves to compete.

Unfortunately, Presidents come to town and refuse to use the weapons provided. They get caught up in the State Department mentality of turning the other cheek whenever somebody infringes our markets. Because, after all, if we aren't nice to everyone, we won't have any friends left. This sounds nonsensical and is nonsensical, but that's been standard operating procedure down in Foggy Bottom and standard operating procedure in the Oval Office, too. And nowadays, that mentality is further entrenched by an overlay of free trade ideology making this administration and the Reagan administration even blinder than most of their dim-eyed predecessors.

Mr. President, after World War II, with communism on the march and America's well-being threatened, we instituted in the President's office the National Security Council. It was formed to coordinate the bureaucracies of the State and Defense Departments, to evaluate and distill the conflicting advice and competing constituencies of all the agencies of the Government involved in our national security. The object: to give the President the unvarnished facts and unbiased perspective from which to act quickly and effectively in the national interest. That procedure has served America well.

Now it is time to be equally serious about our dismal performance in the global economic contest. For on the outcome of this contest hinges perpetuation of our jobs, our standard of living, our very national security.

Today I introduce legislation to establish a Trade Council in the White House, analogous to the National Security Council. My legislation is patterned directly on the legislation which authorized the National Security Council. The Trade Council would coordinate all those departments and agencies of Government, and they are legion, who dip into trade policy. It would coordinate the Departments of State, Treasury, Commerce, Defense, Labor, Agriculture, and the U.S. Trade Representative into a coherent and competitive trade policy. Just as there is an assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, so would there be an assistant to the President for Trade Policy. The Council would be charged with advising the President on the totality of our competitive position and mandated to consider the standard of living and national security ramifications of America's trade policy.

The Trade Council would call on America's best and brightest in its deliberations. This legislation would provide an advisory board from science and education to counsel on research and technology. There would be an advisory council of business and labor to understand that in the enforcement of our laws, investments should go for jobs and increased productivity, and to ensure consideration of America's standard of living in all trade deliberations. There would be a food and fiber board advising the Trade Council so that once again we can become a reliable supplier of foodstuffs the world around.

A Trade Council brings a focus to trade decisions and provides the President with the unvarnished facts and the unbiased advice that only a council within the White House can provide. It makes no sense to continue down the road we have been traveling, with one agency deciding on relief only to have a bureaucrat in another agency or a Cabinet head in another department reverse the decision. A Trade Council confers on trade the high priority it demands. Don't come with suggestions simply to move the deck chairs around on the Titanic. That may improve the appearance of the ship on the surface, but the ship is sinking. America is sinking, and unless trade is given the focus and the priority attention which only a Trade Council can provide—unless there is a Trade Council above the bureaucratic fray to give the President what he needs to act—then we continue to sink until we are out of sight and out of breath.

S.J. Res. 311. Joint resolution to designate the month of November 1990, as "National American Indian and Alaska Native Heritage Month"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL AMERICAN INDIAN AND ALASKA NATIVE HERITAGE MONTH

● Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I am pleased today to introduce a Senate joint resolution designating the month of November, 1990, as the "National American Indian and Alaska Native Heritage Month."

As we near the 500th anniversary of the discovery by Columbus of American Indians, the time has come for American Indians and Alaska Natives, the original peoples of this land, to be honored and recognized by our country with the designation of a National American Indian and Alaska Native Heritage Month.

For the past 4 years, Congress has enacted legislation designating American Indian Heritage Week, thus ensuring eligibility for the establishment of a month of celebration. Our first Americans deserve a special month to honor their contributions as much as other Americans are recognized with a commemorative month every year.

One of the most important themes now being addressed by contemporary American Indians focuses on "the future of our children seven generations to come." This traditional approach to future planning brings to light historical and cultural approaches to protecting our environment, reinforcing our families, and preserving our rich, cultural heritage.

One goal is to bring elders together with the children so our senior citizens can benefit by teaching, while the children can benefit by learning traditional knowledge and the principles of respect. Together—young and old—we can go hand in hand, to ensure a brighter future for the coming generations.

A full month of celebration of the contributions of native Americans is necessary to assist educators, Indian and Alaska Native communities, and certain Federal agencies with their regular annual scheduling of cultural events. There exists a growing need to help coordinate a united effort between schools, native American communities, and society as a whole in this celebration. Activities are planned that will focus on native American contributions, culture, religion, history, language, and art.

At schools across the country, native American speakers, artists, dancers, crafts people, story tellers, and Indian elders share their skills and knowledge with younger generations of Indians and non-Indians. For the Indian and Alaskan Native students, the positive benefits are increased pride and self-awareness. For the non-Indian students, the benefits are renewed appreciation of the culture and heritage of their first American friends and a better understanding of our shared history.

The month designated is during a time when fall harvest ceremonies are conducted by native Americans to give thanks for a good year's crop. National American Indian and Alaska Native Heritage Month will mark a time in which we as a nation can express our gratitude and appreciation for the contributions of the first Americans, the native Americans.●

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 682

At the request of Mr. SIMON, the name of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS] was added as a cosponsor of S. 682, a bill to amend chapter 33 of title 18, United States Code, to prohibit the unauthorized use of the names "Visiting Nurse Association," "Visiting Nurse Service," "VNA," "VNS," or "VNAA," or the unauthorized use of the name or insignia of the Visiting Nurse Association of America.

S. 798

At the request of Mr. DOMENICI, the name of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BRADLEY] was added as a cosponsor of S. 798, a bill to amend title V of the Act of December 19, 1980, designating the Chaco Culture Archaeological Protection Sites, and for other purposes.

S. 814

At the request of Mr. DOMENICI, the names of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. COATS] were added as cosponsors of S. 814, a bill to provide for the minting and circulation of one dollar coins, and for other purposes.

S. 1214

At the request of Mr. DECONCINI, the name of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1214, a bill to provide that ZIP code boundaries may be redrawn so that they do not cross the boundaries of any unit of general local government.

S. 1349

At the request of Mr. PRYOR, the name of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SYMMS] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1349, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude small transactions and to make certain clarifications relating to broker reporting requirements.

S. 1628

At the request of Mr. BENTSEN, the name of the Senator from Washington [Mr. GORTON] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1628, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to authorize a deduction for the expenses of adopting a special needs child and to amend title 5, United States Code, to establish a program providing assistance to Federal employees adopting a special needs child.

S. 1629

At the request of Mr. SPECTER, the name of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. BOSCHWITZ] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1629, a bill to establish clearly a Federal right of action by aliens and United States citizens against persons engaging in torture or extrajudicial killings, and for other purposes.

S. 1925

At the request of Mr. SPECTER, the name of the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1925, a bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to require colleges and universities to establish and disclose campus security policies and to inform students and employees of campus crime statistics, and for other purposes.

S. 1981

At the request of Mr. HOLLINGS, the name of the Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1981, a bill to permit the Bell Telephone Companies to conduct research on, design, and manufacture telecommunications equipment and for other purposes.

S. 2003

At the request of Mr. HOLLINGS, the names of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SYMMS], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SANFORD], and the Senator from Maine [Mr. COHEN] were added as a cosponsors of S. 2003, a bill to establish a commission to advise the President on proposals for national commemorative events.

S. 2013

At the request of Mr. BRYAN, the names of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. FOWLER], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. BAUCUS] were added as a cosponsors of S. 2013, a bill to require that the surplus in the Highway Trust Fund be expended for the Federal-Aid Highway System.

S. 2017

At the request of Mr. DOLE, the name of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2017, a bill to provide a permanent endowment for the Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship Program.

S. 2058

At the request of Mr. BRYAN, the name of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2058, a bill to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to regulate certain marketing activities engaged in on the premises of deposit-taking facilities of insured depository institutions.

S. 2111

At the request of Mr. MATSUNAGA, the names of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY] and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBB] were added as cosponsors of S. 2111, a bill designating the month of May as "Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month."

S. 2158

At the request of Mr. PRYOR, the name of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2158, a bill to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to promulgate regulations to require that an individual telephoning the Social Security Administration has the option of accessing a Social Security Administration representative in a field office in the geographical area of such individual, and for other purposes.

S. 2187

At the request of Mr. COCHRAN, the name of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2187, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to make grants to encourage States to establish Offices of Rural Health to improve health care in rural areas.

S. 2240

At the request of Mr. KENNEDY, the name of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2240, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide grants to improve the quality and availability of care for individuals and families with HIV disease, and for other purposes.

S. 2356

At the request of Mr. SYMMS, the name of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2356, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow tax-exempt organizations to establish cash and deferred pension arrangements for their employees.

S. 2545

At the request of Mr. BIDEN, the name of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DANFORTH] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2545, a bill to amend title 18 of the United States Code, to increase the term of imprisonment for offenses involving driving while intoxicated when a minor is present in the vehicle.

S. 2579

At the request of Mr. D'AMATO, the name of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2579, a bill to amend the Export Administration Act of 1979.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 240

At the request of Mr. SYMMS, the names of the Senator from Texas [Mr. GRAMM], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. FOWLER], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE], and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 240, a joint resolution designating the week of June 10, 1990, through June 16, 1990, as "Multiple-Use Sustained-Yield Week."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 276

At the request of Mr. LIEBERMAN, the names of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], and the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 276, a joint resolution designating the week beginning July 22, 1990, as "Lyme Disease Awareness Week."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 278

At the request of Mr. ROCKEFELLER, the names of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 278, a joint resolution designating July 19, 1990 as "Flight Attendant Safety Professionals' Day."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 281

At the request of Mr. DECONCINI, the names of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Florida [Mr. MACK], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. HEINZ], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. LAUTENBERG], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. BRYAN] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 281, a joint resolution to designate September 13, 1990, as "National D.A.R.E. Day."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 286

At the request of Mr. KERRY, his name was added as cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 286, a joint resolution to designate the week beginning May 6, 1990, as "National Correctional Officers Week."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 290

SENATE RESOLUTION 281—DIRECTING AN APPEARANCE BY THE SENATE LEGAL COUNSEL

Mr. MITCHELL (for himself and Mr. DOLE) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 281

Whereas in In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings and Loan Securities Litigation, MDL—834, pending in the United States District Court for the District of Arizona, the ability of the Select Committee on Ethics to preserve the confidentiality of a preliminary inquiry into unsworn allegations of misconduct of Members of the Senate has been placed in issue;

Whereas pursuant to sections 703(c), 706(a), and 713(a) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, 2 U.S.C. §§ 288b(c), 288e(a), and 288*l*(a) (1988), the Senate may direct its Counsel to appear as amicus curiae in the name of a committee of the Senate in any legal action in which the powers and responsibilities of Congress under the Constitution are placed in issue: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate Legal Counsel is directed to appear as amicus curiae in the name of the Select Committee on Ethics in In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings and Loan Securities Litigation, in support of the interest of the Senate in preserving the confidentiality of preliminary inquiries of the Select Committee on Ethics.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS

McCONNELL AMENDMENTS NO. 1591

Mr. McCONNELL proposed an amendment which was subsequently modified, to the bill (S. 135) to amend title 5, United States Code, to restore to Federal civilian employees their right to participate voluntarily, as private citizens, in the political processes of the Nation, to protect such employees from improper political solicitations, and for other purposes, as follows:

On page 4, after line 2 strike through line 21 and insert the following:

"§ 7323. Political activity authorized; prohibitions

"(a) An employee may take an active part in political management or in political campaigns, except an employee may not—

"(1) use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with or affecting the result of an election;

"(2) knowingly solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution from any person, unless such person is—

"(A) a member of the same Federal employee organization;

"(B) not a subordinate employee; and

"(C) the solicitation is for a contribution to the multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4))) of such Federal employee organization; or

"(3) run for the nomination or as a candidate for * * *

"(b) No employee may knowingly solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution from any person for a contribution to the multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4))) of the employee's Federal employee organization, unless that organization—

"(1) provides, at least once annually, to all employees within the labor organization's bargaining unit or units (and to new employees within 30 days after commencement of their employment) written notification presented in a manner to inform any such employee—

"(A) that an employee cannot be obligated to pay, through union dues or any other payment to a labor organization, for the political activities of the labor organization, including, but not limited to, the maintenance and operation of, or solicitation of contributions to, a political committee, political communications to members, and voter registration and get-out-the-vote campaigns;

"(B) that no employee may be required actually to join any labor organization;

"(C) that an employee who elects to be a full member of the labor organization and pay membership dues is entitled to a reduction of those dues by the employee's pro rata share of the total spending by the labor organization for political activities;

"(D) that the cost of the labor organization's exclusive representation services, and the amount of spending by such organization for political activities, shall be computed on the basis of such cost and spending for the immediately preceding fiscal year of such organization; and

"(E) of the amount of the labor organization's full membership dues, initiation fees, and assessments for the current year; the amount of the reduced membership dues, subtracting the employee's pro rata share of the organization's spending for political activities, for the current year; and the amount of the agency fee for the current year.

"(2) the labor organization provides (for purposes of verifying the cost of such labor organization's exclusive representation services) to all represented employees an annual examination by an independent certified public accountant of financial statements supplied by such organization which verify the cost of such services, except that such examination shall, at a minimum, constitute a special report as interpreted by the Association of Independent Certified Public Accountants.

"(3) the labor organization maintains procedures to promptly determine the costs that may properly be charged to agency fee payors as costs of exclusive representation, and explains such procedures in the written notification required under subparagraph (1).

"(4)(A) a labor organization that does not satisfy the requirements of subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3) shall finance any expenditures specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (2) of 316(b) of the Federal Election Campaign Act only with funds legally collected under this Act for its separate segregated fund.

"(B) for the purposes of this paragraph, subparagraph (A) or paragraph (2) shall apply only with respect to communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of any clearly identified candidate for elective public office."

SEC. 7323A. PROTECTION OF EMPLOYEES FROM POLITICAL COERCION BY LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) AMENDMENT OF TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE.—Chapter 29 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sections:

"SEC. 611. POLITICAL COERCION BY LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

"(a) It shall be unlawful for an officer, employee, or agent of a Federal employee labor organization to intimidate, threaten, coerce, or address an order to, or to cause to be expended any dues, fees, or assessments levied on the membership of the labor organization for the purpose of intimidating, threatening, coercing, or addressing an order to—

"(1) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit for the purpose of interfering with the right of an employee to vote as the employee may choose;

"(2) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit for the purpose of causing an employee to vote or to refrain from voting for any candidate or any measure in an election;

"(3) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit to make or refrain from making a contribution to a candidate, political party, or committee, or political cause of any kind; or

"(4) an employee within the labor organization's bargaining unit to engage in or refrain from engaging in any legal form of political activity."

"(b) A person who violates subsection (a) shall be fined not more than $5,000, imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 29 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"611. Political coercion by labor organizations."

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

A TEST-TUBE TOAST TO ROGER BRANDT

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I would like to bring to your attention a unique individual who is working to excite Illinois youth about education. Mr. Roger Brandt is a resident of St. Charles, IL, and a volunteer at the Wild Rose Elementary School. He is a senior citizen and the adopted grandfather of a fourth grade class at the Wild Rose School. Twice a month he supplements their regular science class with new concepts and experiments that he ties into the curriculum.

Mr. Brandt integrates his working knowledge of science with a sense of responsibility to inspire the students in this area. He feels that students need to be carefully introduced to science so that they will be excited rather than intimidated by it. Mr. Brandt gives to his community in a way that few individuals do, he shares his time, energy, and knowledge in order to stimulate an interest in science among his adoptive fourth grade class.

The dedication of one man has enhanced the educational experience of a whole class of students. I urge my colleagues to recognize the outstanding achievement of Mr. Brandt and to note the success that can be gained through human commitment. I ask that a letter from the fourth grade class be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The letter follows:

WILD ROSE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL,
St. Charles, IL, April 2, 1990.

Senator PAUL SIMON,
230 South Dearborn,
Chicago, IL

DEAR SENATOR SIMON: We are fourth grade students at Wild Rose School in St. Charles, Illinois. Mrs. Janice Rey is our science teacher.

A man named Roger Brandt comes to our science class twice a month to teach us concepts in science. He is a senior citizen who lives in St. Charles and is our adopted grandfather. He is a great man. He gives us his time and has inspired us to strive forward in science.

We are writing to you to request a letter of recognition for Mr. Roger Brandt, who volunteers his time so that we might know more about our world.

We appreciate your taking the time to read our letter. We hope that you will respond with a letter of appreciation for Mr. Brandt.

Sincerely,

4R WILD ROSE SCHOOL.●

HONORING THE 100TH BIRTHDAY OF MAY DAY PAGE

● Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I want to call the Senate's attention to a momentous event which occurred on Tuesday, May 1, 1990. On that day, May Day Page, widow of former Oregon Supreme Court Justice E.M. "Max" Page, celebrated her 100th birthday.

The Supreme Court of the State of Oregon has issued an order honoring Mrs. Page and has requested that this order be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It is indeed an honor to comply with this request.

Mrs. Page currently resides in Salem, OR, a few blocks from the Supreme Court Building where her late husband served as an Associate Supreme Court Justice from July 1949, through January 18, 1950, when ill health forced him to resign. From January 1941, until his appointment to the Supreme Court, Justice Page served as a circuit court judge in the Third Judicial District (Marion County) of Oregon. He served with great distinction in each of these positions.

May Day Tate married Everill Maxwell Page on December 31, 1922. They had one son, Richard Max Page and one granddaughter, Martha Ann Page. It is with great joy that I extend congratulations and best wishes to Mrs. Page and her family on the occasion of her 100th birthday.

I ask that the order of the Oregon Supreme Court offering their congratulations to Mrs. Page on her 100th birthday be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

The order follows:

THE 100TH BIRTHDAY OF MAY DAY PAGE, WIDOW OF FORMER SUPREME COURT JUSTICE E.M. "MAX" PAGE

The Court joins the family and friends of May Day Page in recognizing the occasion of her 100th birthday on Tuesday, May 1, 1990. Mrs. Page currently resides in Salem, Oregon, a few blocks from the Supreme Court Building where her late husband, E. M. "Max" Page served as an Associate Supreme Court Justice from July, 1949, through January 18, 1950, when ill health forced him to resign. From January, 1941, until his appointment to the Supreme Court, Justice Page served as a circuit court judge in the Third Judicial District (Marion County) of Oregon.

May Day Tate married Everill Maxwell Page on December 31, 1922. They had one son, Richard Max Page and one granddaughter, Martha Ann Page: It is Ordered, That this order be published in the Oregon Reports and copies forwarded to May Day Page and her son, Richard Max Page: It is further Ordered, That a copy of this order be forwarded to the Honorable Mark O. Hatfield, United States Senator for the State of Oregon, for inclusion in the Congressional Record.

Dated this 27th day of April, 1990.

EDWIN J. PETERSON,
Chief Justice.●

BUDGET SCOREKEEPING REPORT

● Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I hereby submit to the Senate the latest budget scorekeeping report for fiscal year 1990, prepared by the Congressional Budget Office in response to section 308(b) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended. This report was prepared consistent with standard scorekeeping conventions. This report also serves as the scorekeeping report for the purposes of section 311 of the Budget Act.

This report shows that current level spending is under the budget resolution by $3.5 billion in budget authority, and over the budget resolution by $4 billion in outlays. Current level is under the revenue floor by $5.2 billion.

The current estimate of the deficit for purposes of calculating the maximum deficit amount under section 311(a) of the Budget Act is $114.6 billion, $14.6 billion above the maximum deficit amount for 1990 of $100 billion.

The report follows:

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC., May 7, 1990.

Hon. JIM SASSER,
Chairman, Committee on the Budget, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The attached report shows the effects of congressional action on the budget for fiscal year 1990 and is current through May 4, 1990. The estimates of budget authority, outlays, and revenues are consistent with the technical and economic assumptions of the 1990 concurrent resolution on the budget (H. Con. Res. 106). This report is submitted under section 308(b) and in aid of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, as amended, and meets the requirements for Senate scorekeeping of section 5 of Senate Concurrent Resolution 32, the 1986 first concurrent resolution on the budget.

Since my last report, dated April 30, 1990, there has been no action that affects the current level of spending or revenues.

Sincerely,

ROBERT D. REISCHAUER.

THE CURRENT LEVEL REPORT FOR THE U.S. SENATE, 101ST CONG., 2D SESS., AS OF MAY 4, 1990

[In billions of dollars]

	Current level [1]	Budget resolution H. Con. Res. 106	Current level +/− resolution

FORMER SENATOR HIRAM L. FONG ENDORSES CONGRESSIONAL TERM LIMITATION

● Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I would like to share with all Senators a letter I have recently received from former Senator Hiram L. Fong of Hawaii, in support of congressional term limitation. His tenure of 18 years proves again that there is nothing inconsistent in supporting term limitation and staying in Congress. No Senator should bind him or herself to a rule that does not apply to all others, and no State should be disadvantaged in that way.

The most recent cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 235 is Senator THURMOND, who is running for his seventh term. I ask that former Senator Fong's letter appear in the RECORD immediately following my remarks, and I urge all Senators to join in this urgent reform.

The letter follows:

APRIL 9, 1990.

Hon. GORDON J. HUMPHREY,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HUMPHREY: I have your letter of March 29, 1990.

I do support Senate Joint Resolution 235 limiting Senators to two six-year terms and Representatives to six 2-year terms.

With warmest aloha,

Sincerely,

HIRAM L. FONG,
U.S. Senator, Retired,
Hawaii 1959-77.●

EL SALVADOR PEACE, SECURITY, JUSTICE, AND DEMOCRACY ACT OF 1990

● Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I ask that the text of my bill, S. 2592, to implement United States policy toward El Salvador and to provide for conditions on assistance to El Salvador be printed in the RECORD.

The text of S. 2592 follows:

S. 2592

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "El Salvador Peace, Security, Justice, and Democracy Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. STATEMENT OF POLICY.

It shall be the policy of the United States—

(1) to strengthen democratic institutions and practices, encourage economic growth, and promote a lasting negotiated settlement to the armed conflict in El Salvador;

(2) to support the Declaration of San Isidro and the Central American presidents' call to the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Movement (FMLN) to cease all hostilities, restart the peace dialogue, and to renouce all violence affecting the civilian population;

(3) to promote greater respect for human rights by both sides in the armed conflict and to condition United States assistance on the determination by both sides to investigate thoroughly, and cooperate in the prosecution of those responsible for, the murders of Salvadorans, including those murdered at the University of Central America and San Sebastian and the murders of officials in the Government of El Salvador;

(4) to support the separation of all police functions from the command and control of the Armed Forces of El Salvador and to reconstitute the police force as a civilian force directly responsible to, and under the control of, civilian authority;

(5) to support the call of the Central American Presidents for a regional reduction in the military balance upon completion of successful negotiations to terminate the armed conflict in El Salvador;

(6) to promote reform of the judicial system in El Salvador leading to the establishment of a strong, independent justice system; and

(7) to condition and redirect United States assistance to further these goals, to strengthen the role of civilian authority, and to ensure that all United States assistance is administered effectively and efficiently for the purposes for which it was intended.

SEC. 3. CONDITIONS ON MILITARY ASSISTANCE FOR EL SALVADOR.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Military assistance provided for El Salvador for fiscal year 1991 shall be subject to the limitations and restrictions made by this section.

(b) LIMITATION.—No more than $85,000,000 in United States military assistance may be provided to El Salvador in fiscal year 1991.

(c) RESTRICTIONS.—No military assistance shall be provided to the Government of El Salvador if that Government—

(1) declines to participate in good faith negotiations with the FMLN to terminate the hostilities;

(2) fails to support an active role of the Secretary General of the United Nations in these negotiations;

(3) fails to conduct a thorough and professional investigation into, and prosecution of those responsible for, the murders of Salvadorans, including the eight murders at the University of Central America;

(4) has not taken concrete steps to separate law enforcement forces from the Armed Forces of El Salvador; or

(5) has not taken appropriate measures to protect the constitutionally guaranteed activities of all groups in El Salvador.

(d) OBLIGATION OF FUNDS.—Of the military assistance funds made available for fiscal year 1991, no more than $50,000,000 may be obligated to the Government of El Salvador after October 1, 1990, and before April 1, 1991, and no more than an additional $35,000,000 may be obligated after April 1, 1991.

(e) ESTABLISHMENT OF ESCROW ACCOUNT.—(1) Twenty percent of the funds allocated to the Government of El Salvador on or after October 1, 1990, and before April 1, 1991, and forty percent of those funds allocated to the Government of El Salvador after April 1, 1990, pursuant to subsection (d), shall be withheld from obligation or expenditure and shall be covered into a separate escrow account to be established in the Treasury of the United States and to be used only in accordance with paragraph (2).

(2) Whenever the President determines that negotiations to terminate the armed conflict in El Salvador and to reintegrate FMLN forces into Salvadoran society have been successfully completed, the President is authorized to use the funds described in paragraph (1) for the purpose of assisting the process of reconciliation, cease-fire monitoring, and the repatriation, retraining, and reemployment of former members of the Armed Forces of El Salvador and the FMLN.

(f) WAIVER OF LIMITATIONS AND RESTRICTIONS.—Military assistance may be provided to El Salvador without regard to any limitation contained in subsection (b), (c), or (d), and any funds covered into the escrow account established by subsection (e) shall be available for military assistance to El Salvador without regard to subsection (e), if the FMLN—

(1) declines to participate in good faith negotiations with the Government of El Salvador to end the armed conflict in El Salvador;

(2) fails to support an active role for the Secretary General of the United Nations in these negotiations;

(3) conducts a sustained military offensive which increases the risk to noncombatants in El Salvador;

(4) fails to cooperate in investigating and prosecuting those members of the FMLN responsible for human rights abuses, including politically-motivated murders of Salvadorans; or

(5) is continuing to acquire or receive significant quantities of lethal military equipment from outside El Salvador, as determined from evidence obtained by the United States Government, and this evidence is shared with the Congress.

(g) SUPPORT FOR THE CIVILIAN GOVERNMENT OF EL SALVADOR.—No United States military assistance funds provided in fiscal year 1991 (including available appropriations from a previous fiscal year) shall be obligated or expended by the Armed Forces of El Salvador without the prior approval of the democratically-elected President of El Salvador or his civilian designee.

SEC. 4. PRESIDENTIAL REPORTS.

(a) CONTENT OF REPORTS.—Not later than November 1, 1990, and not later than May 1, 1991, the President shall submit a detailed report to the Congress describing the extent to which the Government of El Salvador and the FMLN are each contributing to United States policy goals set forth in section 2 and meeting the conditions described in section 3. These reports shall also describe actions of the government of El Salvador, including the Armed Forces of El Salvador, and of the FMLN that are having significantly positive or negative impact on the basic human rights of the Salvadoran people.

(b) CONSULTATION WITH PRIVATE ORGANIZATIONS.—To the extent practicable, the President should consult with informed, private organizations in the United States and Central America in preparing reports under this section.

SEC. 5. SUPPORT FOR DEMOCRACY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State, through an agreement with the National Endowment for Democracy or other qualified organizations, shall establish and carry out a program of education, training, and dialogue for the purpose of strengthening democratic political and legal institutions in El Salvador. The program shall be designed—

(1) to assist and involve all prodemocratic sectors of El Salvador in efforts to strengthen civilian control over the armed forces;

(2) to establish an effective independent judicial system;

(3) to facilitate the free, fair, and open exchange of political views;

(4) to provide for monitoring of elections; and

(5) to increase respect for basic civil and human rights.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the President $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 to carry out this section consistent with the authorities of chapter 4 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2346 and following; relating to the economic support fund).

(2) Funds appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1) are authorized to remain available until expended.

SEC. 6. DEFINITION.

For purposes of this Act, the term "military assistance" means—

(1) assistance under chapter 2 (relating to military assistance) or chapter 5 (relating to international military education and training) of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961; and

(2) sales, credits, or guarantees under the Arms Export Control Act.●

PEACE AND DEMOCRACY IN EL SALVADOR ACT

● Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, on February 21, Czechoslovakia's President Vaclav Havel, in a historic address before Congress, described to us these "historic times * * * which leave us no time to be astonished."

The wave of freedom that has swept over Eastern Europe the past year is now rushing toward the shores of El Salvador.

The most significant development of the past several years in El Salvador occurred on April 4 when the Salvadoran Government and Farabundi Marti Liberation Front [FMLN] announced they had agreed to negotiations mediated by the United Nations. At those negotiations, the warring parties will discuss an end to the 10-year civil war and the creation of conditions under which the rebels will lay down their arms and participate in national elections scheduled for next March.

Equally important—in terms of our domestic politics—United States Secretary of State James Baker has begun discussions with congressional leaders to reach a bipartisan approach to El Salvador. However, in their zeal to achieve consensus on United States policy, key negotiators, from both Congress and the State Department, must not lose sight of the harsh realities of El Salvador.

Specifically, negotiations between President Cristiani and the rebels should not be used as a ploy to continue current United States policy of writing blank checks to the Salvadoran military.

We must not forget that the Salvadoran security forces, which 10 years of United States assistance has helped transform into the most powerful political and economic force in El Salvador, poses one of the most significant threats to peace, stability and democracy in that country. Ironically, the Salvadoran military, which we funded in order to save El Salvador from communism, has become one of the biggest obstacles to the creation of democracy in that country.

The State Department and Congress may not face the consequences of their amnesia. But the Salvadoran people—who have endured the deaths of 70,000 of their brothers and sisters, most at the hands of the Salvadoran Army—will suffer because of their ignorance.

Just 5 months ago, while Nicolae Ceausescu and his hated security forces were being hounded from power in Romania, members of the Salvadoran Army assassinated six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her daughter.

Several weeks following the November 16 murders, President Cristiani, in an act which surprised but pleased many of his critics in Congress, arrested and indicted three officers, five enlisted men, and a colonel for their role in the crime.

But Cristiani's power to buck the Salvador military appears shortlived. Colonel Benavides, who allegedly ordered the massacre, has not been stripped of his rank, still draws full pay, is held at a comfortable apartment at National Police Headquarters, and has even been seen sunning himself at the beach.

To make matters worse, Cristiani has publicly expressed his doubts that Colonel Benavides will be convicted.

The New York Times of May 7 reports that the Salvadoran military has created more obstacles to the investigation of the Jesuits' murder by transferring abroad four soldiers who may have evidence linking Colonel Benavides and other high officers to the murders. Also missing are Benavides' diaries.

Should we be surprised? Are we shocked that the Salvadoran military would flaunt its power, embarrass President Cristiani, and, despite international attention and outrage, press for the release of the highest ranking officer in the Jesuits' case?

We should not be. For 10 years, the United States Government has tolerated equally horrific behavior by the Salvadoran security forces, as well as the Salvadoran Government.

After 10 years, 70,000 deaths, United States aid still flows, totaling more than $4.5 billion. Simply, when it comes to United States administrations' concerns over human rights, the Salvadoran military has learned not to read United States officials' lips but to count their checks.

Despite United States officials' public statements, the Salvadoran military knows it can count on United States dollars, which continue to pour into its pockets, Salvadoran banks, as well as its Miami bank accounts.

Mr. President, how is that $1 billion in aid to the Salvadoran military being used? On this point, the Interim Report of the [House] Speaker's task force on El Salvador, also known as the Moakley task force, found that seven of the nine soldiers charged in the Jesuits case were trained just 3 days before the murders by a United States Special Forces Detachment.

The seven, all of whom were members of a special commando unit of the Atlacatl Battalion, received instruction from November 11 to 13 in "techniques of fire and maneuver, rapid fire techniques, M16 zero fire, and preparation of arms and equipment for a patrol."

U.S. training may have succeeded in making these men better killers, but we should not be in the business of training death squads.

After 10 years and $4.5 billion, the United States has helped transform a 14,000 strong security force, which served to protect the Salvadoran oligarchy, into a 52,000 army which is now an economic rival to the business sector.

It is an armed force that equals Ceausescu's hated police forces in terms of brutality.

And an army which rivals Noriega's defense forces in terms of corruption.

Yet, the Reagan and now the Bush administration has protected these security forces from scrutiny and from conditions.

Serious questions can be raised concerning the administration's efforts to uncover those who ordered, not just carried out, the Jesuits' murder.

We know that the Salvadoran high command, including Army Chief of Staff Ponce, former Air Force Commander General Bustillo, as well as Colonel Benavides, held a meeting on the evening of November 15, several hours before the Jesuits were murdered in the early morning hours of the 16th.

At that meeting, several issues were discussed, and several conclusions were reached concerning the military's response to the rebel offensive that had begun several days earlier. The army command, according to several sources, decided to make greater use of air power to thwart rebel advances in San Salvador, and, according to sources, issued a blanket order to wipe out those who sympathized and gave succor to the FMLN.

On February 8, I questioned Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Bernard Aronson about what we know of the November 15 meeting, and asked for the list of those officers who attended that meeting, and whether any of those have taken a lie detector test. To this date, I have not received a response. But to my knowledge, none of the members of the high command who attended that meeting has received such a test.

Yet Lucia Cerna, the first witness to the massacre, has not only been given several lie detector tests but has been forced to endure 4 days of severe questioning by United States officials and a Salvadoran officer, without benefit of counsel.

Furthermore, Maj. Eric Buckland, who was told in December by a Salvadoran colonel that Colonel Benavides was responsible for the Jesuits' slaying, has been given lie detector tests.

United States officials, pointing to the results of Mrs. Cerna's tests, spread the word in El Salvador that her testimony was worthless. They have also tried to discredit Buckland by painting him as emotionally unstable.

Yet, the United States has not compelled the Salvadoran high command to similar tests, and the highest ranking officer in the Jesuits case suns himself on the beach.

Is it no wonder that the Salvadoran military thinks that Benavides can walk without suffering the consequences?

United States unwillingness to tame Salvadoran security forces and compel them to accept the rule of law is not new.

Remember the kidnap-for-profit ring?

Early in 1986, the Salvadoran Government broke a multimillion dollar kidnap ring, arrested several members of the Salvadoran security forces, and detained then Lt. Col. Roberto Mauricio Staben.

As the State Department is well aware, Staben, an associate of retired Maj. Roberto D'Aubuisson, was an active participant in right wing death squad operations carried out during the early years of this decade. In April 1986, he was described in a sworn statement by fellow conspirator Rodolfo Lopez Sibrian, as the intellectual chief of the kidnap-for-profit ring.

Despite this allegation, and despite his past crimes, no disciplinary or legal action of any kind has ever been taken against Colonel Staben. Recently, Staben has been reassigned to the Salvadoran Embassy in Honduras.

Staben never took a lie detector test.

Staben is still a full colonel in the Salvadoran Army.

Another case which Secretary Baker should not forget is that of Col. Elmer Gonzalez Araujo.

According to the Justice Department prosecutor in the Nordac case, involving the purchase by the Salvadoran Army of defective ammunition from the Nordac Manufacturing Co., in Virginia, Colonel Araujo received bribes in connection with the ammunition sale as a result of his position as chief of the Salvadoran buying commission.

Previously, Araujo had served as military commander of Sonsonate Department where, in February 1983, he ordered officers under his command to murder dozens of unarmed compesinos involved in a land dispute—the Los Hojas massacre.

Despite his involvement in the Los Hojas and Nordac cases, no legal or disciplinary action against Araujo has been taken.

Araujo and Staben are not the only participants in this network of corruption and murder infesting the Salvadoran military. Tragically, the U.S. aid program has contributed to the problem.

Instead of fostering reform, the American money has been absorbed into a network of corruption and patronage that has grown up over half a century, and has made the Salvadoran military an empire unto itself.

This is one of the conclusions of Joe Melman in his December 1989 New York Times Magazine piece.

Melman presents a picture of the Salvadoran military as a powerful institution grown untouchable on the spoils of a lucrative war.

It is a military that has grown so wealthy that it owns its own bank, with $100 million in reserves. It owns an oceanside resort, and is developing a 500-lot housing development.

It even has investments in the funeral business.

With United States aid, the Salvadoran military has transformed itself into the most powerful economic and political force in El Salvador. But it has fallen far short of U.S. planners' expectations when it comes to performance on the battlefield.

United States policymakers contribute to a conspiracy of silence about the real situation in El Salvador. They spout bright shining lies about democracy and about a military under civilian control.

But these lies carry little weight in El Salvador, where people must endure the tragic truths stemming from the bankruptcy of United States policy.

I consider it more critical now, as talks among Salvadorans are underway, for some in Congress to expose the deception underlying United States policy and not once again be seduced into silence by the prospect of bipartisan policy toward El Salvador.

For this reason, I have decided today to become a cosponsor of Senator KERRY's Peace and Democracy Act, S. 2083. This bill would cut off all United States military aid and most economic aid to El Salvador unless and until that country undertakes long overdue reforms and takes seriously negotiations to end the civil war.

This legislation is directed not at President Cristiani but at the Salvadoran military which holds the ultimate veto over Cristiani and his efforts to bring peace to El Salvador. The Kerry bill signals the Salvadoran military that it's time that it adopt the rule of the civilized world and accept the establishment of a civil society in El Salvador.

Vaclav Havel spoke of democracy and how democratic ideals stirred the imagination and the actions of his fellow Czechs and Slovaks to abandon communism and return to their humanistic traditions.

In El Salvador, the United States has betrayed those democratic values. And our policymakers have undermined their professed concern for democracy, human rights and the rule of law by consistently tolerating the violation of those principles by the Salvadoran military.

The reason for this inconsistency is simple.

For 10 years, the United States has sacrificed our democratic ideals to our fear of communism. Now, the cold war is over. And the winds of freedom sweeping Communists from power in Eastern Europe are destroying the last defense of the Salvadoran military and its excesses.

For the sake of peace, for the safety of the real democrats in El Salvador, that cord linking the Salvadoran military to the United States must soon be cut.

This legislation sends a signal that the Salvadoran military must enter the civilized world and accept the creation of a civil and democratic society in El Salvador.

I ask that certain articles be printed in the RECORD.

The articles follow:

[From the Des Moines Register, Apr. 21, 1990]

CUT OFF THE COLONELS

President Bush is asking Congress to provide another $66 million in military assistance to El Salvador, along with $229 million in economic aid. How much should Congress approve? Perhaps a substantial chunk of the economic assistance, but not a penny of military aid until the San Salvador government can demonstrate that it is committed to negotiating an end to the country's civil war, and to bringing to justice the persons who are responsible for killing six Jesuit priests last November.

The collapse of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua has opened new opportunities for peace throughout Central America, including El Salvador. But so far there's been too little indication that El Salvador's civilian government is fully in control of its military and its justice system.

Rebel leaders and government officials have agreed to enter United Nations-sponsored talks early next month. But demands made by the rebels—the prosecution of officers accused of civil-rights violations, and a separation of the military from the country's internal security forces—in return for peace concessions haven't been accepted by the military. Perhaps when the officers realize that such short-sightedness will cost them U.S. assistance, they'll be a little more willing to come to terms.

Similarly, even El Salvador's president, Alfredo Cristiani, says it is unlikely that the colonel accused of masterminding the slaughter of the Jesuits will be convicted. Again, the military is so powerful that it may prevent the justice system from considering the case against the colonel.

Congress, which soon will take up the El Salvadoran question, has before it proposals to reduce if not eliminate the Bush military-aid proposal. Supporters of military aid say it is necessary to keep the rebels from prevailing. But that's what they've been saying for years. Now, 70,000 deaths and $4.5 billion U.S. dollars later, the two sides have battled to a draw. The government still has been unable to reduce sufficient reforms to gain the support it needs from the Salvadoran people.

Clearly, pouring money into a corrupt military structure has served only to prolong the agony. Ending U.S. military support will send a strong message to Cristiani's government and the country's military leaders that Washington is serious about the cause of justice and human rights throughout Central America.

COLONEL CHARGED IN JESUIT KILLING LIVES IN LUXURY

(By Douglas Farah)

SAN SALVADOR.—Col. Guillermo Alfredo Benavides, accused of ordering the killing last November of six Jesuit priests, is being held in a luxury apartment in the National Police headquarters, rather than a prison cell, and receives regular visits from fellow officers helping to plan his defense, according to U.S. and Salvadoran officials.

Senior military officials also say Benavides has been seen in recent days in a luxury hotel owned by the military on the Pacific Coast, indicating that he is not confined to the National Police headquarters as officially reported.

The special treatment accorded Benavides has angered not only the U.S. Embassy and government officials, the sources said, but younger officers, because the three lieutenants also charged in the case are not receiving the same treatment, although they have not been jailed, either.

Benavides is a member of the large and influential military academy class, or tanda, of 1966, known as the Tandona. His classmates hold most of the top command positions in the military.

"I understand Benavides is not suffering in captivity, that he has all the comforts," said a senior U.S. Embassy official here. "He is visited regularly by his Tandona mates, who give him comfort. I find that kind of shocking. The Tandona certainly must recognize how it appears to be gathering around and protecting at all costs a member who may have committed such a heinous crime. It is not to the Tandona's credit that they are doing that."

Six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her daughter were killed Nov. 16, and nine members of the army, including Benavides and the three lieutenants, have been charged in the case.

"If Colonel Benavides gave that order, he should be punished," said U.S. Ambassador William Walker. "If his fraternity of officers does not understand that, they should all go on to second careers."

The United States gives El Salvador $438 million a year in direct economic aid, credits and military aid to support the government against a Marxist-led insurgency.

Benavides "has a private apartment. He receives private visits and special food," a senior government official said, "He is very comfortable."

He said the lieutenants were being held in much smaller quarters and accorded far fewer privileges, following the letter of military law. He said this has angered their classmates, who fear that Benavides will be freed because of Tandona pressure and that the junior officers will be punished for murders they say they were ordered to carry out.

The official said President Alfredo Cristiani is not happy with the comfort afforded Benavides but that Cristiani feels the situation is tolerable as long as Benavides remains confined.

This latest clash comes as the high command, mostly members of the Tandona, is under great institutional pressure. There is a growing feeling among senior officers that the U.S. Embassy and younger officers are conspiring to get rid of them.

The internal conflict is not just a result of the handling of Benavides and the investigation into the Jesuit killing but goes to the heart of the traditional military system, which is based on the tanda structure.

"I am more and more convinced the great impediment to the greater professionalization of the armed forces is the tanda system, where the tanda is the first loyalty, not the institution or the country," the senior U.S. official said. "That is what the Tandona support for Benavides shows." Younger officers, who have been clamoring for a greater say in running the war, were stunned at the end of January with the announcement of long-awaited military changes that were supposed to open the way for them.

Instead of moving out Tandona members who are viewed as corrupt or incompetent, members of the Tandona were reshuffled among different commands, and no commands were given up.

"Those changes were a direct slap in the face to the rest of the army," said one top military officer.

The officer under the most pressure is Col. Rene Emilio Ponce, military chief of staff and Tandona leader, who has promised to move up younger officers but is having difficulty doing so because of his loyalty to his classmates. Ponce is well-liked by the United States and respected by other officers, but he has antagonized many of his classmates in the latest infighting, military sources said.

The tension inside the military could turn into a major political problem for Cristiani.

Senior government officials said Ponce, who was to become minister of defense in January, has been told by Cristiani that the colonel will not be promoted until he moves out his Tandona mates who have not performed well or have heen involved in human rights abuses or corruption.

The officials said that, for the moment, younger officers were giving Cristiani the benefit of the doubt on his ability to restructure the military, and that Cristiani believes Ponce could pull it off.

"But they could lose confidence in the president," said one source close to Cristiani. "That could provoke an institutional coup d'etat, and that would be crisis."

The crisis already has almost reached the boiling point, according to senior military officials. In early February, older officers, angry at being pushed aside by the Tandona, tried to ally with younger officers to throw out members of the Tandona, but the move was blocked. At the same time, the air force, considered essential to the war against Marxist-led insurgents, is publicly feuding and split into two factions, each pushing its leader as the next commander.

EL SALVADOR'S ARMY: A FORCE UNTO ITSELF

(By Joel Millman)

It was a scene Salvadorans had hoped they would never see again. On Nov. 16, while a full-scale battle raged between the Salvadoran Army and leftist rebels in the streets of the capital, the bodies of six Jesuit priests murdered in the night lay strewn across a university campus. A witness said the killers had been soldiers in uniform.

Overnight, El Salvador had been pulled back to its awful past. For a decade, American military advisers, diplomats and reporters had been proclaiming that the Army had improved, that it was growing better able by the day to fight a difficult war. The Salvadoran armed forces, which during the early 1980's had been blamed for the murders of four American churchwomen and scores of Salvadoran civilians, were now described as mature, democratic and reformed.

After 10 days of fierce fighting in the capital, the Army managed to turn back the guerrilla offensive—but at a tremendous cost in resources and its own prestige. Once again, it had misjudged the strength of the rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front and ignored its own intelligence reports suggesting the guerrillas were moving their forces into the city. Despite the $1 billion in military aid the United States had given during the last decade, Washington could no longer claim that the Salvadoran military would be able to end the war soon.

But though the Army's reputation as a "mature" military force had been shattered, its political power remained undiminished. Throughout the offensive, the civilian President, Alfredo Cristiani, promised his people repeatedly that the soldiers would respect the lives of noncombatants—promises that were belied by the Army's tactics.

The Army bombed and strafed the neighborhoods of the capital, killing and wounding hundreds of civilians. These casualties, together with Cristiani's reluctance to even acknowledge the possibility of Army involvement in the Jesuits' murders—he suggested, against all evidence, that the rebels were responsible—convinced many Salvadorans of what they had suspected all along: Despite claims of "reform" and "progress," in El Salvador no civilian government controls the military.

"I love that word, 'progress,'" said Col. Robert M. Herrick, until 1987 the head of an American Army think tank monitoring the war. "We've had 'progress' every year since the war began. The war should have been over a long time ago."

One billion dollars in American military aid seems to have bought an army big enough to survive its own mistakes, and powerful enough to resist any effort to reform it—to end pervasive corruption or weed out corrupt officers. Instead of fostering reform, the American money has been absorbed into a network of corruption and patronage that has grown up over half a century, and has made the Salvadoran military an empire unto itself.

Officially, the Salvadoran military denies charges of systemic corruption. After more than a year spent studying the empire, however, including interviews with many senior Salvadoran officers—most of whom would speak only on condition that they not be named—a picture emerges of an already powerful institution grown virtually untouchable on the spoils of a lucrative war.

At first glance, El Salvador's military academy, the Escuela Militar Capitán General Gerado Barrios, could be the athletic complex of a large Midwestern university. Instead of trophies, there are polished brass shells and the seals of Army units. Along one wall, the framed face of each academy comandante stares implacably from behind his pane of glass: Prussian and Chilean officers dominated during the early years, then came Americans, and finally Salvadorans.

A plaque recalls the 50th anniversary of the school's 1936 class—the men who fought with Maximilliano Hernández Martinez to suppress a peasant revolt, leaving 20,000 campesinos dead and General Hernández in power for more than a decade. In 1944, rival officers overthrew him, and so began the 35-year coup-begets-coup cycle that until this decade defined Salvadoran politics, and gave Escuela Militar its nickname: "School of the Presidents."

It is a tough school. Many more cadets are accepted than can ever rise to positions of power, so attrition begins the first day. There are forced marches, beatings, all-night calesthenics—ordeals designed to reduce each class to a hardened core of officers. The soft boys from the good families go first, followed by the scholars—those most equipped for success outside the military. The survivors are cloistered in the academy, isolated from a civilian world they are taught to view as decadent, amoral and corrupt.

Absolute obedience to authority and loyalty to one's own tanda—or academy class—are the foundations of the cadet's training. By graduation, the entering class has been reduced to perhaps one-fourth its size, and unbreakable alliances have formed among the survivors.

In a country of great scarcity, a military career is a poor boy's only sure path to the middle class. "Their goals are largely materialistic," Armando Interiano, a retired officer, says of the recruits. "It comes from growing up poor." Immediately after graduation, the cadet receives his first payoff: the right to import a car duty-free, a privilege he oftens sells to civilians. To insure their futures, cadets try to attach themselves to prosperous mentors, military or civilian.

Throughout the 1970's, military officers not only controlled the Presidency, but exercised, through the military's own political party—the Party of National Conciliation—a virtual monopoly on the country's political discourse. Officers fighting for promotions saw command positions as the equivalents of elected office.

An officer taking command of one of the three regional brigades had at his disposal a vast system of patronage and graft, with countless opportunities for enrichment. Colonels leased troops as guards or laborers to local businessmen, or even, in some cases, as hired killers to insure labor peace. And there was always money to be siphoned off from the base's payroll and food budgets.

The top commanders distributed the take among their allies. A captain or major waited patiently for his share. With coups almost always determining succession, every tanda pushed its most capable officers toward brigade commands, where they generated wealth to spread among the allied tandas, and guaranteed each clique enough firepower to survive changes at the top. "When I left in 1977," says one senior American diplomat now serving a second tour in El Salvador, "corruption was so prevalent, it was just about inconceivable that an officer would rise to a senior level wihout being corrupt."

During the early 1980's, as El Salvador's rebel insurgency grew and the American aid program expanded, American advisers arrived, bent on reform. The Americans encouraged rapid expansion of the officer corps, hoping to dilute institutional corruption by weakening the power of individual cliques. During the 1970's, 600 Salvadoran officers had ruled 15,000 troops. To these were now added more than 1,000 new officers drawn from the ranks of enlisted men and trained by Americans in the United States or Panama. Graduates of these "quickie officer candidate schools," it was hoped, would flood the Salvadoran Army with new leaders and begin eliminating the corrupt standards of the past.

It didn't work out that way. As the officer corps grew, so did the number of commands and the pool of enlisted men. The Army is now 57,000 strong. Instead of three brigades for the tandas to jockey for, there are now seven, and seven provincial commands, called detachments, with some 2,000 men in each. Each of the brigade and detachment commanders of El Salvador's 14 regional departments—the "Fourteen Warlords"—now commands as many men as the top three brigade commanders did during the 1970's.

"You're seeing second lieutenants with BMWs," says Capt. Joaquin Ventura, now retired from the Army. "Once you had to be a colonel to get rich, now even the lower ranks steal." The patronage system remains intact; indeed, the Tammany Hall-style rituals have become even more refined.

A visit with a partrol in the eastern garrison of San Miguel reveals the system at work. Of 12 soldiers interviewed, 11 were local compesinos who had been picked up by Army controls and forced into uniform. Only one was a veteran, a man who had re-enlisted voluntarily. Though many soldiers might choose to re-enlist—jobs are scarce in Salvador—and the salary of a re-enlistee is nearly double that of a conscript—few commanders seem to care about retaining experienced soldiers.

In fact, many commanders do fill these re-enlistment slots—with plazas ficticias, or "ghost soldiers." These are nonexistent soldiers, names added to the brigade's roster that draw salaries divertable into the brigade slush fund. Since the Salvadoran Army has no central roster, every year the 14 commanders divide 20,000 pay slots among them, to be assigned at the commander's discretion.

"Just about every brigade lists at least one 50-man company that isn't there," says one major. "Each of those 50 pay slots brings 500 colones"—equivalent to about $100—each month. Times 12 months that's $60,000."

It's more cost-effective to create imaginary re-enlistees than poorly paid recruits. Thus, the Army does little to encourage re-enlistment, and some commanders actively discourage it; battlefield experience is sacrificed for graft. Meanwhile, every time a soldier deserts, or dies in action, the commander can add to his list of ghost soldiers, earning himself yet another salary.

The rapid growth of the officer corps, far from eliminating such abuses, has actually worsened them. With more and more eager young officers pushing for promotions, commands are changed more frequently. Senior brigade officers seldom command for more than 12 months, a fact that encourages them to enrich themselves quickly. The large cash flow from the ghost soldiers allows top commanders to amass a "retirement fund" quickly.

After being forced to enlist, a recruit is often further abused by descuentos obligatorios—mandatory deductions—that are siphoned from his salary. A soldier in San Miguel, for example, pays $20 a month for food, and another $5 for boot polish, toothpaste and oil to clean his rifle. Several times a year, he has to buy uniform accessories—a $10 black beret, for example.

In other commands, soldiers are made to pay for sneakers, soccer uniforms, blue jeans—even the barracks television, which remains the property of the brigade. "These are like a commission for the lower officers," explains one officer. "Like on Independence Day, a captain or major will decide everyone must wear a brigade T-shirt in the parade. You can say, 'Sir, I only want one T-shirt,' but they sell you three. And that's an order. In a brigade of 3,000 men, someone is making real money."

Commander Miguel Antonio Méndez's deduction of $1 from each of his troops to build a wall around his Third Brigade base is one of the legends of the 1980's. "Seeing that, the way the men had to pay for their own defense," says one American colonel based in El Salvador, "It made our stomachs churn."

Colonels still rent our soldiers—so-called supernumerarios—to guard coffee plantations, factories and bus lines, charging from $200 to $300 per man per month. Eventually, the various schemes merge into a seamless web, as a Salvadoran lieutenant colonel now serving abroad explained "You go to headquarters and say you need a money order for food for a two-week operation. The supply officer signs for the order, but you only put your men out for one week. Or maybe only half the men guard a coffee farm, where the owner is already paying, and providing food for the troops. What they don't eat you sell to the men on base."

The money flows into the brigade slush fund; cash raised for legitimate expenses like food commingles with funds pocketed, or passed on to other officers to forge a reform-proof unit. Some commanders even tap the fund to "buy" officers from other brigades, building their personal following while furthering their clique's rise to a more lucrative command.

The Americans' goal was to eliminate all this, of course, but the effort has been undermined by the command structure, and the fierce loyalty within the tandas. "Peer pressure is too great," says one American Army officer, who was based in the eastern war zone during the mid-1980's. "When they try to execute good leadership principles they get slam-dunked unmercifully." Powerful tandas shove the American-trained upstarts aside, and reform, meant to rise from below, is suppresed.

In August, two teams of junior Salvadoran officers began researching the problem of mismanagement. They produced a report, "Considering the Conduct of the War," that detailed many of these abuses. When asked about the report, Army Chief of Staff Col. René Emilio Ponce, appearing more interested in who had leaked it than in its contents, said that the researchers overemphasized "isolated" abuses, particularly the padded rosters. Colonel Ponce's powerful tanda, called the Tandona (or "Big Class"), is considered among the most corrupt of the military cliques.

American officials in El Salvador and Washington acknowledge the endemic corruption, but argue that improving battlefield performance has necessarily been a higher priority. Some American diplomats and military advisers even speak hopefully of following the "Argentine Model"; first defeat the insurgency, then concentrate on building democracy.

But in Argentina—or Panama, a better comparison—the armed forces have also resisted change, responding to each crisis with a grab for even greater power. In El Salvador, the military's power is abetted by civilian politicians who match the corruption of the old military regimes. Even before the guerrillas' recent offensive, the failure of civilian leadership and the rebels' propensity to attack civilian as well as military targets had produced a climate of insecurity for the Army to exploit, making businessmen eager to hire the Army's troops.

"As soon as I got a brigade command," says retired Col. Sigfredo Ochoa, now a top man in the ruling ARENA party, "businessmen would approach me, offering to put me on their board of directors, or sell me shares in their company. I would say, 'But I have no money.' They would say, 'Don't worry about that.'"

Ochoa—who many say was not immune to corruption while in uniform—points to El Salvador's fishing industry as an example of the officer-businessman alliance. Shrimpers on the Pacific coast always enjoyed friendly relations with the armed forces; they routinely gave Navy officers a "tax," a few hundred pounds from each catch. Occasionally, fleet owners would pay an additional fee to the port captain for guarding the coastline.

That was when shrimping was a $100-million-a-year industry. Now, battered by capital flight and labor strife, and hurt by the fact that two of the country's important ports—El Triunfo and La Unión—lie in the eastern war zone, the fishing industry has dwindled to a fraction of its former size. And the Navy has become the industry's silent partner.

According to dock workers, fishermen and local politicians, active and retired officers hold controlling shares in many of the big export firms. In El Triunfo, where a three-year strike has idled 40 boats of one large consortium, a rival company, Atarraya, is thriving, reportedly under military protection.

Up the coast, the port of Acajutla has been purged of unions, and revitalized by the influx of new, military-controlled fleets. Navy chief Col. Humberto Villalta berths four of his own shrimpers in Acajutla, under the banner of the Promarisal fishing company. According to port officials, the military fishing companies—"the pirates," the locals call them—don't pay municipal taxes, or Social Security taxes for their sailors. In both Acajutla and El Triunfo, according to local fishermen, Colonel Villalta's control of navigation licenses gives him final say over who can fish.

Colonel Villalta refuses to discuss his fishing business; when I asked him about it, he hung up the telephone. But the company itself is not so shy. "The military man is the true Salvadoran," Mauro Granados, Promarisal's business manager, told me, "Why should I invest with a doctor or an engineer, someone who is going to leave El Salvador? The military man cares about the development of the country."

Other businessmen are not so sanguine. Many have complained for years about competition from the Cooperative de la Fuerza Armada in San Salvador, the Salvadoran Army's post exchange. In 10 years, it has grown from a small shop to a shopping mall, complete with a supermarket and a three-story department store, and, according to veteran officers, it acts as a conduit for contraband goods brought into the country duty free.

All this is small change when set against the Army's main cash reserve, a Social Security fund called the Social Provision Institute of the Armed Forces (IPSFA). With the war business booming in El Salvador, the fund has become one of Latin America's financial success stories. It deducts a percentage from every subscriber's salary; every soldier who finishes his two-year hitch pays $150 into an IPSFA account, but only the disabled, or families of the dead, receive any payments.

Enriched by the 20,000 new recruits that pass into the brigades each year, the fund has become a money tree, growing from less than $2 million in reserves in 1980, to more than $100 million by the end of 1988.

"They're the biggest source of liquid capital in the country," says one Salvadoran businessman. "They've got so much money they don't know where to put it."

So the military has been buying property; estates once belonging to the Duefias and de Sola families, pillars of the old oligarchy; prime real estate in San Salvador's suburbs. Here, the question of corruption is practically irrelevant. With credit tight and long-range financial planning almost impossible, only the Army has the cash to develop such properties, or convert the oligarchy's land wealth into liquid assets.

This year, the military paid $2 million for an oceanside resort, the Pacific Paradise, and is developing a 500-lot housing development in the suburbs. A second parcel will become its new corporate headquarters, and, at one famous old estate, it is building a combination veterans community and rehabilitation center.

Projects like this let the Army build new alliances with construction firms, suppliers and builders' unions. It is already invading the financial markets; IPSFA makes mortgage and car loans to members and their families and now co-signs small-business loans issued by two civilian banks. There is also a military funeral home, and military farms that market produce at low prices for members.

For the past two years, IPSFA has been negotiating with the government for permission to allow it to invest in joint ventures with multinational corporations. There are plans for an IPSFA insurance company and land bank. IPSFA has even purchased—for $5 million—a 13-story office tower for the new Bank of the Armed Forces, which it expects to open next year.

If the armed forces do open their new bank, the profits from fishing and duty-free television sets will be pocket change, and the balance of power between soldiers and civilians will be permanently altered. "The day an officer can go to his own bank for a loan," says Luigi Einaudi, United States Ambassador to the Organization of American States, "he escapes the landowner. Instead of being a tool of one class, he becomes his own master. And, potentially, the master of the state."

In El Salvador, the "Fourteen Warlords" have replaced the "Fourteen Families." The country's president may no longer be an officer, but more power than ever rests with the military, One of Alfredo Cristiani's first acts after becoming President was to order that all institutional funds, including IPSFA's, be deposited in the country's central bank. When the military balked, he backed down.

Despite his appeal to rightwingers and his ARENA party's recruitment of many former officers, Cristiani is discovering that he is a fringe player when it comes to Army affairs. "He's like our George Bush," says one officer. "Army officers like to be ordered. He consults."

Cristiani may well find that the pattern set in the early years of the war—civilian control of the government together with American-sponsored autonomy for the military—marginalizes his efforts, especially now that the war is heating up again.

Under José Napoleón Duarte, President until June of this year, "the military and the government were like a married couple," says another former President, Alvaro Magaña. "They didn't love each other, and they rarely talked. Sometimes they would sit and watch the same television show, but they mainly went separate ways. I'm afraid the Army has learned it likes that relationship, and doesn't want to change."

Indeed, Cristiani's difficulties with the military began even before he took office, almost provoking a coup in May. Air Force officers, hoping their commander would be chosen as Defense Minister, grounded aircraft at Ilopango Air Force Base for two days, threatening to boycott the war. A few days later, during Soldier's Day celebrations, Air Force jets buzzed the reviewing stand of the outgoing Defense Minister, Gen. Vides Casanova, drowning out his speech and embarrassing officers and diplomats alike.

President Cristiani vacillated publicly over the nomination of a successor, settling finally on a compromise choice—Gen. Rafael Larios—who, because of his lack of support within the institution, was virtually a lame duck the moment he assumed office.

Determined not to permit November's "Battle of San Salvador" to become this war's Tet Offensive, the United States will no doubt move swiftly to shore up the military. In the showdown over the Defense Minister appointment, the United States encouraged Cristiani to bow to Army pressure, avoiding a challenge to powerful officers and thus reaffirming the military's role as an untouchable institution.

But a militarized El Salvador will not yield easily to civilian initiatives.

"It's the same mistake we made in Vietnam," says Colonel Herrick. "Military aid is easy; all you have to do is give the bucks, and all they have to do is take them. But we got ourselves into a position where we have no leverage, so we have been acquiescing for years in corruption and methods of operations we don't believe in, all because of the Realpolitik of winning the war."

"The U.S. equated a professional armed forces with democracy," says opposition political leader Rubén Zamora. "They're not synonymous. What the U.S. has done is teach the Army it's better to be owner of the country than a landlord of a building. Instead of their own party, they control the whole political system."

LAWYERS COMMITTEE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS,
New York, NY, April 12, 1990.

Re Status of the investigation of the Jesuit Murders in El Salvador.

To: U.S. Jesuit Conference, Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities, Jesuit Secondary Education Association.

From: Martha Doggett, Scott Greathead.

This memorandum is based on research conducted by Martha Doggett in El Salvador from November 2-22, 1989 and most recently from February 9 to March 28, 1990, and by Scott Greathead, who visited El Salvador from February 12-15, 1990 and again from March 16-24, 1990. It is also based on the fact-finding of Margaret Popkin, Assistant Director of the Human Rights Institute of the Central American University (IDHUCA), who serves as a consultant to the Lawyers Committee.

This memo updates the status of the case and poses questions which, in our judgment, warrant further examination. The memo is divided into three parts. Part I contains a narrative summary of the crime based on the investigative record and other sources. Part II describes the status of the official investigation. Part III discusses several unresolved issues, including the weakness of the case against Col. Benavides and the failure to investigate higher authorities.

I. SUMMARY OF THE CRIME

At 8 p.m. on Saturday, November 11, 1989 forces of the Farabundo Marti Front for National Liberation (FMLN) launched their strongest urban offensive of the 10-year-old civil war. While military intelligence ultimately detected the rebels' planned attack, the Armed Forces were clearly unprepared for the strength of FMLN forces and the guerrillas' ability to hold large sections of the capital for days. A number of military and diplomatic analysts contend that the Salvadoran Armed Forces performed poorly and were in essence caught off guard. Salvadoran military sources as well as civilians with knowledge of the inner workings of the military describe it as an institution in disarray during the first days of the FMLN offensive. Col. Ponce, the head of the High Command, and other ranking officers were reported to have said that the military seriously considered the possibility that they could lose power, or that San Salvador could become a divided capital, much like Beirut.

Over the next few weeks, a pattern of harassment emerged against Salvadoran humanitarian and church workers attempting to attend to the needs of civilian victims of the fighting. This campaign began with attacks on church clinics and shelters providing refuge to civilians fleeing the fighting; it entered a second phase with the arrests and deportations of foreign church workers; next targeted were Salvadoran Christians and church employees, some of whom remain jailed. Some parishes and church clinics were machinegunned or hit by grenades. Then early on Thursday morning of the first week of the offensive, November 16, the attack on the church culminated with the killings of the Jesuits and two women at the Central American University (UCA).

Earlier that week, several threats against the Jesuits were broadcast over the nationwide radio network. Father Ignacio Ellacuria, the UCA rector, was threatened in particular, and it was suggested that the Jesuits be thrown out of the country. These threats were in keeping with a history of attacks, abuse, and violence directed against the members of the Society of Jesus in El Salvador since the late 1970s. On March 12, 1977 Father Rutilio Grande, S.J. was murdered along with two laymen in Aguilares. In 1977, the entire community was threatened with death if they failed to leave the country within a month. Flyers distributed throughout the country read "Be a patriot. Kill a priest." Jesuit residences and the campus of the Central American University (UCA), where the November assassination took place, have been bombed fourteen times since 1977. The UCA printing press was bombed twice during 1989; one attack caused $70,000 in material damages. On July 3, 1989, a rightist organization linked to ARENA issued an open letter to President Cristiani calling for arrest and "summary justice" for Segundo Montes and Ignacio Ellacuria, two of those Jesuits murdered on November 16.

On Monday November 13, Father Ellacuria returned from Spain where he had been given a human rights award. He entered the campus by the main gate and, before proceeding up the hill, was questioned by soldiers. Since the FMLN offensive began, the campus had been encircled by troops; UCA staff arriving on Tuesday morning for an emergency meeting were denied access to the campus.

Shortly after curfew on November 13, 35 members of the Atlacatl Battalion entered the campus and searched the priests' residence. The men were led—as they would be on the night of the killings—by Lt. Ricardo Espinoza Guerra and Sub. Lt. Gonzalo Guevara Cerritos. When Father Ellacuria challenged the soldiers' right to conduct the search, a lieutenant answered that state of emergency provisions allowed them to do anything they wanted. According to the testimony of military personnel, "informers" had told the Armed Forces that "an undetermined number of D/T [1] had penetrated the installations of the UCA and had been seen firing on a unit of the Armed forces of El Salvador which passed by the UCA. . . ."

The troops scaled the walls surrounding the university and banged on the doors of the Pastoral Center, where the men had been living for the last few months. Father Juan Ramón Moreno, whom these soldiers would kill some 48 hours later, offered to open the doors for them. Witnesses described the search as "correct," observing that unlike earlier searches of Jesuit quarters the military was not interested in books and papers, only in the building and the people. Atlacatl commander Col. Oscar Alberto Leon Linares reported that "no D/Ts whom the source said had fired on the Army patrol were found in said place, and our personnel headed back to the Gerardo Barrios Military Academy." Father Ellacuria is known to have felt more secure following the search because the Army, according to his analysis, had seen for themselves that they were hiding nothing "subversive." [2]

On Wednesday, November 15, the military continued to patrol the area surrounding the UCA. That morning an officer told one of the Jesuits that in the afternoon or evening there would be "a lot of movement."

According to court records in San Salvador, the Jesuits were killed by members of a special commando unit of the Atlacatl Battalion, itself an elite rapid reaction battalion. This commando unit spent most of the first 24 hours of the guerrilla offensive at their barracks in La Libertad because they were receiving a Special training course. According to a member of the Atlacatl commando unit who has not been detained in connection with the case but whose testimony as a witness was taken by the SIU, the Atlacatl commandos were being trained by "some Americans." They arrived in San Salvador at about 4 p.m. on Monday November 13. The enlisted men went to the Military Academy while the lieutenants reported directly to the High Command headquarters, where they were given the order to search the Jesuit residence. Later that morning after the killings, the men rejoined their unit, which was fighting in Zacamil.

Accounts in the U.S. press have focussed on two gatherings of top military officers held on November 15 and 16, 1989. The first, on the evening of Wednesday November 15, convened some 20 members of the High Command, the heads of each branch of the Armed Forces, plus "Zone Commanders," officers given special authority for a certain area of the city during the rebel offensive.

Col. Ponce told a group of visting U.S. Jesuits in February that their analysis of the situation lead them to conclude that stronger measures had to be taken to beat back the FMLN offensive. Col. Ponce and Major Chávez Caceres, who sat in on the meeting, told the visiting Jesuits that at the end of the meeting the officers joined hands and prayed. Major Chávez Caceres said: "If I believed that the decision to kill the Jesuits had been taken at that meeting, I wouldn't be here today. We are not so cynical that we would pray to God and then go out and kill priests."

One decision taken at that meeting was to step up the air war and President Cristiani, who often slept at the High Command during those days, was awakened at 10:30 p.m. to sign a bombing order. Over the next few days use was made of bombs, as well as rockets and strafing from machine guns which had been in use from November 11.

The second key gathering was the daily meeting of the National Intelligence Directorate (DNI), an intelligence body, which was reportedly interrupted early on the morning of November 16 by a junior officer who announced that Father Ellacuria had been killed resisting arrest. According to accounts in the U.S. press, the men cheered and clapped.[3] Captain Luis A. Parada, assistant defense attaché at the Salvadoran Embassy in Washington, told a congressional group in late March that he attended the meeting in which the killings were announced but that there was no reaction from the officers in attendance. Accounts of the meeting suggest that officers knew the Armed Forces were responsible within hours of the priests' deaths. U.S. Embassy officials in San Salvador confirm that the Central Intelligence Agency has office space at DNI headquarters and that CIA agents generally attend these meetings. When asked if the CIA was represented at the November 16 meeting, Amb. Walker told a group of U.S. Jesuits: "I have asked the question and they tell me no."

II. THE INVESTIGATION

Members of the Special Investigative Unit (SIU), a U.S.-funded and trained investigative body, arrived on the murder scene between 9:30 and 10:00 a.m. on November 16, some three hours after the bodies were found. The State Department reported that the SIU sealed the crime scene as soon as the agents arrived that morning.[4] In fact, the crime scene was not sealed off until some time during a memorial service on Saturday morning.

[1] The military refers to members of the FMLN as "D/T," which stands for "delinquent terrorists."

All SIU agents are drawn from the Security Forces (National Police, Treasury Police, National Guard), which in El Salvador form part of the Armed Forces. The unit was designed to investigate sensitive human rights crimes in which the military and Security Forces are implicated. Created in 1984, the unit's track record in investigating acts of political violence by the Armed Forces is poor.

It has in fact concentrated on common crime and corruption. The SIU has an inherent conflict of interest in investigating human rights crimes in that members of the armed Forces are assigned to investigate their fellow soldiers.

In the Jesuit case, the SIU's major contribution to the investigation was successful completion of ballistics tests and fingerprint analysis. The SIU also took initial declarations in which the suspects confused aspects of what happened on the night of the November 13 search of the Jesuit quarters with what happened on the night of the killings. For example, there was electricity in the neighborhood on the night of November 13, but it was blacked-out on November 15-16. Some suspects said there was no light on the night of the search, leading investigators to conclude that those who conducted the search had also been involved in the killings.

On Janury 7, the UIS turned over its findings to a Military Honor Commission made up of ranking officers and some civilians, whose identities have not been made public. At that point SIU questioning had focussed on 47 of the Atlacatl troops billeted at the Military Academy. The Military Honor Commission interviewed the 47 men in the Atlacatl Battalion identified by the SIU and narrowed the suspects to the nine men now facing prosecution. Others participated in the attack on the Pastoral Center and the killings who have not been named.

Judge Ricardo A. Zamora, on San Salvador's Fourth Penal bench, was assigned the case virtually from the beginning. According to the State Department,[5] Dr. Zamora and the prosecutors began to review the evidence on January 3. On January 19, he found that the evidence was sufficient to order the provisional detention of the nine defendants.

One defendant, Jorge Alberto Sierra Ascencio, reportedly fled his unit in late December and will be tried in absentia. Rumors have circulated in El Salvador as well as the United States that Sierra overheard one of the lieutenants communicating by walkie talkie with Col. Juan Orlando Zepeda, the Deputy Minister of Defense. According to these unconfirmed accounts, the lieutenant is alleged to have reported to Col. Zepeda that two women had also been found and asked what they should do. The answer came back to kill them. While it would have been a breach of security to use names in such radio communication, it is credible that the men would have been surprised to find the cook and her daughter. The women did not normally sleep in the Jesuit residence and were not there on the night of the Monday search.

Those arrested include six members of the Atlacatl, a lieutenant assigned to the Military Academy and Col. Benavides. The eight remain on active duty and presumably continue to receive a military paycheck. The suspects are reportedly in police custody and the military is not obligated to cashier them until the case reaches the trial stage.

Based on information circulating in San Salvador, we believe that members of the tandona, the large 1966 graduating class from the Military Academy which today dominates the military, are still taking an active interest in protecting their classmate, Col. Benavides. He is said to be receiving regular visits and calls from fellow officers, who according to The Washington Post are "helping to plan is defense. . . ."[6] The Washington Post also reported in late February that Col. Benavides had been spending time at a luxury beach resort on the Pacific Coast owned by the military. Unlike his codefendants, Col. Benavides has consistently denied his participation in the killings.

The Instruction Phase

The case is now in the period known as the instruction or investigation phase, which is scheduled to end in mid to late May 1990.[7] According to Article 123 of the Criminal Procedure Code, this phase should last 90 days but may be extended when necessary to 120 days. The judge, having already established sufficient evidence to order the preliminary detention of the defendants, presides over the evidence-gathering process and can request technical assistance of the Special Investigative Unit (SIU). It is during this period that the judge would typically attempt to build a solid case against the eight[8] detainees. It is particularly important during this period for the judge to gather further evidence against Col. Benavides. It is also within his authority during this stage to add defendants or additional charges to the case.

The judge's work consists largely of interviews of witnesses called to give their "declarations." Also present at these sessions are attorneys for the defense and prosecutors representing the Attorney General's (Fiscal General) office.

Challenges from the Defense

The investigation phase in the Jesuit case has already been extended beyond the 90-120 days in response to appeals, known as recursos, filed by the defense attorneys. Under the Salvadoran system, the defense has the prerogative of making interim appeals which put the investigation period on hold while the appeal is under consideration. Criminal investigations in El Salvador regularly exceed the 120-day deadline. While the Salvadoran Criminal Procedure Code, the statute regulating how criminal cases are handled, provides for a nominal fine if the judge exceeds the established timetable, these fines are rarely if ever levied.[9]

A case as complicated and sensitive as the Jesuit murders can be expected to go well beyond the established timeline, subject to political constraints. It is not unusual for an investigation to last as long as a year or more. To cite a few other examples: the case of the killing of four U.S. churchwomen in December 1980 entered the investigation phase in February 1982 and reached the plenary or trial stage in May 1984. The San Francisco murder case in which 10 peasants were killed by the Army in September 1988, has to date not entered the trial stage. Other cases, such as the killing of Archbishop Romero in 1980, never reached the trial stage.

The first set of recursos filed by the defense on January 22 challenged the judge's ability to order the provisional detention of the defendants arguing that he had violated the 72-hour deadline for completing this initial stage of the process. The defense also challenged the order to detain Col. Benavides on the grounds that the only evidence against him was in fact inadmissible. These challenges were dismissed by Judge Zamora on January 26.

Defense attorneys have also filed to transfer the case to Santa Tecla, arguing that the murders, committed in Antiguo Cuscatlan where the campus lies, should be tried in the First Instance Court in Santa Tecla. Observers believe that the defense attorneys are "judge shopping," presumably feeling that they will get a more sympathetic hearing from a presiding judge in Santa Tecla.

On April 6, the Attorney General's office ruled that while crimes committed around the UCA do fall within the jurisdiction of Santa Tecla, the judge himself should rule on the defense attorneys' petition to transfer the case.[10] The Attorney General's ruling came in response to a request from Judge Ricardo A. Zamora, who is expected to rule shortly on the jurisdiction question.

III. UNRESOLVED ISSUES

1. Weakness of the case against Col. Benavides

In El Salvador the possibility that the colonel—the highest ranking officer ever detained in connection with a human rights crime—will ever even be tried is considered remote. In mid-February, both the nation's Attorney General (Fiscal General de la Nación), Mauricio Eduardo Colorado, and the legal advisor (Dr. Hugo Banos Sanchez) to the Special Investigative Unit, which investigated the killings, told a delegation of the Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities that based on current evidence, Col. Benavides is unlikely to be convicted. The only evidence on the public record against Col. Benavides is contained in the extrajudicial confessions made by the lieutenants held in connection with the case. Yet under Salvadoran law, the testimony of a participant in a crime is not admissible as evidence against another participant.

One option to overcome the inadmissibility of this evidence is to drop charges against one of the accused lieutenants so that his testimony could be used against Col. Benavides. Although this option has been discussed widely by U.S. legislators and [7] The Storrs document prepared for a congressional seminar offers two different dates for the termination of the instruction phase, May 12 and May 19. See P. 20 and 21. An Embassy official in San Salvador told the Lawyers Committee the phase should end on May 22, 1990. In any case, the phase is sure to extend well beyond any of those dates.

[8] As noted above, charges were brought against seven members of the Atlacatl Battalion, one lieutenant assigned to the Military Academy, and Col. Benavides. One suspect, Jorge Alberto Sierra Ascencio, fled his unit in late December and his whereabouts are unknown.

officials, it is not considered a strong option by Salvadoran lawyers or observers of the legal system. We have not been able to identify any clear precedent for this type of action in any previous cases in El Salvador.

It should also be noted that countries which adhere to the Civil Law system, such as El Salvador, often do not allow plea bargaining or similar agreements where charges are reduced or dropped in exchange for testimony. Further, any such arrangement may be inconsistent with the principles underlying El Salvador's Criminal Procedure Code which regards co-defendant testimony as unworthy of belief.

There are, however, two provisions in the Criminal Code which allow for a defendant to mitigate his criminal responsibility by confessing and cooperating with the authorities.[11] These provisions could be considered by investigators as a means to encourage the lieutenants to amplify their existing testimony which could lead to evidence which may be admissible against Col. Benavides or other more senior officials.

2. The Buckland-Avilés Story

One possible thread of evidence which might help convict Col. Benavides as well as shed light on the investigation conducted by the military-dominated Special Investigative Unit and the role of the U.S. Embassy concerns the testimony of a U.S. Army major attached to the U.S. Embassy. Major Eric Buckland, a member of the U.S. military group at the Embassy, has stated that he was told by Salvadoran Colonel Carlos Armando Avilés in late December that Col. Benavides was responsible for the Jesuit assassinations. As has been reported in the U.S. press,[12] Buckland subsequently told his superior, who then confronted Salvadoran military officials with the information.

According to Aviles, Col. Benavides first confessed his role in the crime to Col. Rivas, the head of the U.S.-funded Special Investigative Unit, and asked him for assistance. His words to Rivas reportedly were, "I did it. What can you do to help me?" Col. Rivas appears to have failed to act on this key piece of information. If these reports are accurate, Col. Rivas' testimony of Col. Benavides' confession would be admissible as evidence against Benavides under Salvadoran law since Col. Rivas did not participate in the crime.

Equally important are the implications of Col. Rivas' reported failure to act on Benavides' confession. If Col. Rivas in fact is withholding this information, he is involved in a cover-up which seriously calls into question the integrity of the investigation.

In response to questions about whether this allegation is being investigated, the State Department has noted that:[13]

"The U.S. MilGroup major learned from Col. Aviles that Col. Benavides had approached Rivas; Aviles heard the story from Col. Lopez y Lopez. At best, we had uncorroborated third-hand information. The U.S. officer and Col. Aviles both failed polygraphs trying to establish this point."

3. Failure to pursue information suggesting the involvement of higher ranking officers, and the existence of a cover-up.

At present it appears information neither Salvadoran nor U.S. officials are pursuing an investigation designed to explore the question of a broader conspiracy, namely, whether Col. Benavides was acting on higher orders. Col. Rivas told the Lawyers Committee in late March that the SIU is no longer actively working on the case, except in response to specific requests from the judge. U.S. Embassy officials insist that Col. Benavides was acting on his own, perhaps having misunderstood orders, and that the military as an institution is in no way implicated. In late March, one U.S. church group was told by U.S. officials—in stark contrast to the testimony of hundreds of eyewitnesses—that the UCA campus was actually not surrounded by troops the night the eight were killed, and that Col. Benavides' men could actually have slipped through military lines. One explanation suggested by U.S. as well as Salvadoran officials is that Benavides, known as a measured, thoughtful man, simply lost control, perhaps in response to the guerrilla offensive and because of the illness of his son.

There appears to be no serious effort to pursue a number of troubling issues, including the following:

1. According to the State Department, Col. Benavides would have reported to Col. Zepeda, Vice Minister of Defense, or to Chief of Operations Col. Joaquin Arnoldo Cerna Flores on the night of November 15-16. In April 1989 Col. Zepeda charged in the Salvadoran press that the UCA "is a refuge for terrorist leaders, where strategies are mapped out for attacks against Salvadorans."[14] Despite this statement, and his link to Col. Benavides in the command structure, Col. Zepeda has apparently not been questioned in connection with this case. When we have asked U.S. and Salvadoran officials why Col. Zepeda has never been questioned, we are told simply that there is no reason to regard him as a suspect.

Why has Zepeda not been questioned? Are steps now being taken to question him about what he knows and what he was doing during the period of the crime? Are efforts being made to question Col. Cerna Flores, who, to our knowledge, has never been questioned.

2. No one at the First Brigade was ever questioned about its sound truck which passed the Archdiocese on the afternoon the priests were killed, November 16, announcing: "Ellacuria and Martin-Baró have fallen. We are going to continue killing Communists."

3. Col. Benavides is said to have given the order to kill the Jesuits directly to three lieutenants. What about other officers (lieutenant colonels, majors, captains) who are in the normal chain of command? Who would have been in the chain of command on November 15-16? Where were each of them that night? Have any of these people now been questioned?

4. Col. Benavides made an entry in his November 16 book of operations concerning a 12:30 a.m. attack by the FMLN on the Pastoral Center where the Jesuits were killed. No such attack ever occurred. There is no indication that the military responded, and the question remains how Col. Benavides even knew of the alleged attack. This entry appears to be an early attempt at a cover-up. The Jesuit killings happened two hours later. What has the military done to investigate this fraudulent report? Did Benavides act alone in filing a false report?

5. Under whose authority were the Atlacatl troops operating in the days surrounding the murders? The lieutenants who commanded the Monday search and the assassination were given orders to conduct the search directly from the High Command. In the soldier's testimony mention is made of a captain attached to the Military Academy who is said to have been in charge that night at the Academy. Col. Ponce and others have repeatedly stated that Col. Benavides was responsible for these members of the Atlacatl from Monday November 13. What role did Atlacatl commander Col. Oscar Alberto León Linares play?

6. The court record indicates that on November 17 the SIU interviewed members of the Monserrat Battalion of the National Police who were stationed at the Democracy Tower, at the edge of the UCA campus, on the night of November 15-16. These soldiers testified that at about midnight they saw tanks and personnel of the Atlacatl Battalion pass by on the highway known as Autopista Sur, which forms one parameter of the campus. Why did the SIU not follow up immediately on this important lead?●

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I have a number of matters which require unanimous consent, and I am authorized to state that each of these has been cleared by the distinguished Republican leader, who of necessity had to leave the floor for another matter.

REPRESENTATION BY SENATE LEGAL COUNSEL

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and the distinguished Republican leader, Mr. DOLE, I send to the desk a resolution to direct the Senate legal counsel to appear as amicus curiae in the name of the Select Committee on Ethics in a proceeding in the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution, (S. Res. 281) to direct the Senate legal counsel to appear as amicus curiae in the name of the Select Committee on Ethics, in In Re American Continental Corporation v. Lincoln Savings and Loan Securities Litigation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, under its rules of procedure, the Select Committee on Ethics may undertake a preliminary inquiry into unsworn allegations of misconduct on the part of Members of the Senate. A preliminary inquiry may consist of interviews, depositions, and other investigatory steps which the chairman and vice chairman of the committee believe are necessary to determine whether further proceedings are warranted. Although the committee may determine at any stage of its investigative process to hold public hearings, preliminary inquiries have been conducted on a confidential basis.

On December 22, 1989, the committee announced that it would undertake a preliminary inquiry into allegations relating to Senators CRANSTON, DECONCINI, GLENN, MCCAIN, and RIEGLE. The committee has retained a special outside counsel, Robert S. Bennett, to assist in the inquiry.

The collapse of various enterprises related to Charles H. Keating, Jr., has resulted in a considerable amount of civil litigation which has been consolidated for pretrial proceedings in the District of Arizona. One of these lawsuits is a class action brought by purchasers of unsecured securities of the American Corp. which the purchasers allege were sold by techniques that made them appear to be insured certificates of deposit.

The question has arisen in that litigation whether one of the defendants may use civil discovery to compel government officials, who have provided statements to investigators for the Select Committee on Ethics, to describe over the objections of those officials the questions that have been asked of them by committee investigators. The witnesses are free, of course, to answer relevant questions about their personal knowledge of the facts at issue in the litigation. The purpose of this resolution is only to safeguard the committee's separate investigation. It would authorize the Senate Legal Counsel to appear as amicus curiae in the name of the committee to protect the Senate's interest in maintaining the confidentiality of this preliminary phase of the committee's inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 281) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution and its presumable are as follows:

S. RES. 281

Whereas, in In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings and Loan Securities Litigation, MDL-823, pending in the United States District Court for the District of Arizona, the ability of the Select Committee on Ethics to preserve the confidentiality of a preliminary inquiry into unsworn allegations of misconduct of Members of the Senate has been placed in issue;

Whereas, pursuant to sections 703(c), 706(a), and 713(a) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, 2 U.S.C. 288b(c), 288e(a), and 288l(a) (1988), the Senate may direct its Counsel to appear as amicus curiae in the name of a committee of the Senate in any legal action in which the powers and responsibilities of Congress under the Constitution are placed in issue: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate Legal Counsel is directed to appear as amicus curiae in the name of the Select Committee on Ethics in In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings and Loan Securities Litigation, in support of the interest of the Senate in preserving the confidentiality of preliminary inquiries of the Select Committee on Ethics.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

LEGISLATIVE CALENDAR

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar Orders No. 534, 535 en bloc; that the committee amendments, where appropriate, be agreed to; that the bills, as amended, where amended, be deemed read a third time and passed; that the motion to reconsider the passage of these bills be laid upon the table; and that the title amendment, where appropriate, be agreed to.

I further ask unanimous consent that any statements relating to these calendar items appear at the appropriate place in the RECORD, and that the consideration of these items appear individually in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ROBERT SMITH VANCE UNITED STATES COURTHOUSE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2068) to designate the U.S. courthouse located at 1800 Fifth Avenue North in Birmingham, AL, as the "Robert Smith Vance United States Courthouse," which had been reported from the Committee on Environment and Public Works, with amendments; as follows:

(The parts of the bill intended to be stricken are shown in boldface brackets and the parts of the bill intended to be inserted are shown in italics.)

S. 2068

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the United States courthouse located at 1800 Fifth Avenue North in Birmingham, Alabama, shall hereafter be designated as the "Robert Smith Vance Federal Office Building and United States Courthouse". Any reference in a law, regulation, map, document, paper or other record[, or other paper] of the United States to that building shall be deemed to be a reference to the Robert Smith Vance Federal Office Building and United States Courthouse.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to designate the United States courthouse located at 1800 Fifth Avenue North in Birmingham, Alabama, as the 'Robert Smith Vance Federal Office Building and United States Courthouse' ".

M.P. DANIEL AND THOMAS F. CALHOON, SENIOR POST OFFICE BUILDING

The bill (H.R. 922) to designate the building located at 1515 Sam Houston Street in Liberty, TX, as the "M.P. Daniel and Thomas F. Calhoon, Senior, Post Office Building," was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MELVIN PRICE FEDERAL BUILDING AND UNITED STATES COURTHOUSE

The bill (H.R. 2890) to designate the Federal Building and United States Courthouse located at 750 Missouri Avenue in East St. Louis, at the "Melvin Price Federal Building and United States Courthouse," was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL CORRECTIONAL OFFICERS WEEK

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 286 designating the week of May 6, 1990, as "National Correctional Officers Week," and that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res. 286) to designate the week of May 6, 1990, as "National Correctional Officers Week."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The joint resolution (S.J. Res. 286) and its preamble are as follows:

S.J. RES. 286

Whereas American correctional officers who work in our jails and prisons are currently responsible for containment and control of over 600,000 prisoners;

Whereas correctional officers must protect inmates from violence while encouraging them to develop skills and attitudes that can help them become productive members of society following their release;

Whereas the morale of correctional officers is affected by many factors, and the public perception of the role of correctional officers is more often based upon dramatization rather than factual review;

Whereas good job performance requires correctional officers to absorb the adverse attitudes present in confinement while maintaining themselves as professionals in order to have their actions appreciated and accepted by the public at large;

Whereas correctional officers had been similarly honored by many States and localities;

Whereas correctional officers had been similarly honored by a joint resolution in the State and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled in 1984, 1985, 1987, and 1989; and

Whereas the attitude and morale of correctional officers is a matter worthy of serious congressional attention: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning May 6, 1990, is hereby designated "National Correctional Officers Week", and the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed and move to table that motion.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

NATIONAL DIGESTIVE DISEASE AWARENESS MONTH

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 453 designating May 1990 as "National Digestive Disease Awareness Month" just received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (H.J. Res. 453) designating May 1990 as "National Digestive Disease Awareness Month."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the third reading and passage of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (H.J. Res. 453) was ordered to a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution having been read the third time, the question is, shall it pass?

The joint resolution (H.J. Res. 453) was passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 254, the Senate companion, and that the joint resolution then be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SCHEDULE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I would like now, for the information of Senators, to review the situation we are in and the schedule for the next several days and the reasons for proceeding as we will under this agreement.

First, as Senators now should be aware, a cloture vote on S. 135, previously scheduled for tomorrow, Thursday, 1 hour after the Senate convenes, has been vitiated. Instead, there will be a vote on final passage of the bill not later than 4 p.m. tomorrow.

In the agreement which has just been agreed to, there are 10 amendments remaining for consideration in connection with the bill. It is my expectation and the expectation of the managers and the distinguished Republican leader, that those amendments will be debated and voted on during the day tomorrow prior to 4 p.m. If, however, we get to 4 p.m. and not all of the amendments have yet been offered and disposed of, the Senator offering the amendment will have the opportunity, if he so chooses, to offer the amendment at that time subject to a 10-minute time limitation on debate and, if a second-degree amendment is offered, also a 10-minute time limitation on debate.

So it is conceivable that we could go beyond 4 p.m. if there are some of these amendments that have not yet been disposed of, although I do not anticipate that will occur. I believe it is the expectation of the managers and the hope of myself and the distinguished Republican leader that we will complete action on this bill by 4, if at all possible, and possibly earlier.

Mr. President, it is then my intention, using the authority granted me under this agreement, to call up the campaign finance bill on Friday. That will be for debate only. There will be no amendments offered, no votes. It is understood, in discussion between the parties, that this being an important matter, each party now having prepared and presented a bill, that it would be appropriate for the benefit of the Senate and the public that there be a full exposition of both bills and debate on them. That will occur throughout the day on Friday.

Then before the close of business on Friday, I will move to proceed to the emergency AIDS legislation. It had been my hope that we could proceed directly to consideration of that bill, but I regret that objection to that has been made by a Republican Senator, which makes it impossible for us to proceed to that bill at that time. As a consequence, I will then file a cloture motion to terminate debate on the motion to proceed. That will be debated on Monday, and the cloture motion will be voted on Tuesday morning at 10 a.m. Senators should understand that will merely get us to the AIDS bill. We will then have to proceed with discussion of the AIDS bill. I hope it will not be necessary to have a cloture vote on the AIDS bill itself, particularly as it is my hope that there will be a strong and even overwhelming vote in favor of proceeding to the bill.

During the time that the Senate is considering the AIDS bill, it is my hope and expectation that there will be discussions among our colleagues, both Democrats and Republicans, on the campaign finance matter with a view toward reaching what I hope will be a bipartisan agreement on that important subject.

This enables us to get that bill up; in the meantime, while we are discussing that, to proceed to take action on the very important emergency AIDS bill, and then hopefully be in a position to get back to and dispose of the campaign finance reform bill next week, hopefully, with a bipartisan agreement, which we will seek to obtain during that time that the AIDS bill is being considered.

So I hope my colleagues now have a clear picture of the schedule for the days ahead. These are important measures, and we have organized them in a manner that is the most advantageous to the schedule of various Senators. Accordingly, there will be no votes on Friday or Monday, but we will still be in a position to proceed with respect to two very important matters.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR TOMORROW

RECESS UNTIL 9:30 A.M.; MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in recess until 9:30 a.m., tomorrow, Thursday, May 10; that, following the time for the two leaders, there be a period for morning business not to extend beyond 10 a.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. MITCHELL. On tomorrow, the Senate will resume consideration of the Hatch Act reform bill at 10 a.m. The unanimous-consent agreement just ordered provides that action will be completed on this measure no later than 4 p.m. on tomorrow with rollcall votes anticipated throughout tomorrow's session.

RECESS UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, if no other Senator is seeking recognition, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess under the previous order until 9:30 a.m. tomorrow, Thursday, May 10.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:08 p.m., recessed until Thursday, May 10, 1990, at 9:30 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, May 9, 1990

The House met at 2 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. GEPHARDT].

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
May 9, 1990.

I hereby designate the Honorable RICHARD A. GEPHARDT to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Reverend Dr. James W. Hackney, First Baptist Church, Gulf Breeze, FL, offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, our Father, we thank You for the privilege of service in this great period of history. We thank You, Father, at this time and place, we may serve our God, our country, and our fellow man.

Give us wisdom to discern the future; give us spiritual courage to do what is right; and give us compassion to see beyond our own selfish interests.

In the beauty and vitality of this day, help us to accept the reality of a fallen universe, yet to grasp the hope of a better tomorrow. Help us to dedicate ourselves to the finding of the best possible solutions through our governmental process. We pray to keep always the individual person, God's creation, in the heart of our interest and concerns.

In the name of Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. PAXON. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the Chair's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. PAXON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 298, nays 108, not voting 27, as follows:

Mr. COSTELLO and Ms. KAPTUR changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the Journal was approved.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The Chair will ask the gentleman from Washington [Mr. CHANDLER] if he would kindly come forward and lead the membership in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. CHANDLER led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S.J. Res. 267. Joint Resolution to authorize and request the President to designate May 1990 as "National Physical Fitness and Sports Month."

WELCOME TO REV. DR. JAMES W. HACKNEY

(Mr. HUTTO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I take this opportunity to welcome Dr. James Hackney who delivered the opening prayer for today's session of the House of Representatives. Dr. Hackney is pastor of the First Baptist Church in Gulf Breeze, FL, which is in my congressional district. He has served in that position for 12 years. Before coming to Gulf Breeze, he pastored several churches in Missouri which is his home State. Dr. Hackney attended the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, Southwest Baptist University in Bolliver, MO, and Union University in Jackson, TN. His distinguished career includes service on the Southern Baptist Convention's foreign mission board and has conducted preaching missions in Africa and Australia. Dr. Hackney also served as the director of evangelism for the Missouri Baptist Convention. He and his wife, Marjorie, are the parents of three children, and they have four grandchildren. Mr. Speaker, it is truly a pleasure having them here in Washington today.

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION TO EXPAND TAX DEDUCTION FOR CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS

(Mr. CHANDLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, today, the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], and I are introducing legislation to expand to all taxpayers the Federal tax deduction for charitable contributions. Under current law, only those taxpayers who itemize are given incentives to make donations to charities. This is out of line with Congress' efforts to establish a fair and equitable Tax Code.

Seven out of ten taxpayers do not itemize their deductions. These 72 million people are generally in low- and middle-income families earning under $40,000. Yet, these individuals donate a higher percentage of their income to charities. I think it is wrong that the Tax Code treats these people unfairly on the mere basis that they do not itemize their tax returns.

Congress recognized in 1981 that taxpayers who did not itemize were not receiving a full tax benefit for their contributions to charity. It was also noted that allowing nonitemizers to deduct their contributions would stimulate broader based charitable giving to nonprofit organizations, many of which provide human services that otherwise might have to be provided by the Federal Government. After enactment of this change, nonprofit gifts surged.

In 1986, however, this policy was abruptly repealed. Nonitemizers experienced a sharp increase in the cost of giving. I do not believe this was fair to the taxpayers who are essentially penalized for making charitable contributions unless they are able to itemize.

The changes made in 1986 were also unfair to nonprofit organizations which had come to depend on the increased gifts resulting from the changes made to the Tax Code in 1981. These organizations are now experiencing a sharp decline in the rate of increase in giving at the same time the Federal Government has reduced spending on human services. However, the real victims in this case are the people served by the organizations to which taxpayers contribute.

I strongly encourage my colleagues to join Mr. DORGAN and I in our effort to reinstate fairness in the Tax Code.

WHAT HAS CHANGED?

(Mr. SCHUMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, read our lips: Democrats will not initiate any new taxes. And, Mr. President, we have a question for you: What has changed?

In the State of the Union, a mere few months ago, you said everything was on track, the economy was moving, there was prosperity, everything was good. Your Budget director, Mr. Darman, has come before us time and time again and said that things are on the right track; we should just proceed ahead. And all of a sudden, Mr. President, you summon our leadership to the White House and you ask——

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman should address the Chair and not address the President in the second person.

Mr. SCHUMER. All of a sudden, the President summons our leadership to the White House and says that things are changed and all of a sudden major leaders of the Republican Party start talking about value-added taxes and sales taxes and beer taxes and wine taxes and lotteries.

What has changed?

LET US BE KINDER AND GENTLER ON SMALL BUSINESSES

(Mr. COMBEST asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to discuss another well-intentioned but severely misguided Federal mandate on the small business owner.

The parental and medical leave legislation has sputtered and backfired its way back onto the floor for another try. This bill reminds me of an old used car that nobody will buy, so the owner repaints it, throws on new tires and hopes to find a sucker to buy it.

The fact is even with the new paint job this bill is still a real lemon.

Proponents of parental leave will proudly state that this new model has broad bipartisan support. The facts are that 12 out of 13 Republicans on the Education and Labor Committee voted against the medical and parental leave bill. The administration is strongly opposed to mandating parental leave but most importantly, 84 percent of small business owners are opposed to Federal mandates for parental leave.

I am opposed to it too. I urge my colleagues to vote no on mandated parental and medical leave legislation.

WHERE DID ALL THE MONEY GO?

(Mr. GLICKMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, where did all the money go? The savings and loan debacle is becoming our worst nightmare—a financial black hole of galactic proportion. There is no more pressing need for swift, resolute justice in our country than prosecuting the fraud that may cost each of us thousands of dollars and rob us of the opportunity to meet the challenges of the 21st century.

This enormous bailout is driving the President to seek a budget summit and to seek spending cuts and new taxes to, probably focused on working Americans, to get us out of the fix we are in. Reports say the ultimate cost of the S&L bailout may be upward of $500 billion—half a trillion dollars—and that the Federal deficit may exceed $200 billion largely as a result of the S&L bailout.

It could be a half a trillion dollars, Mr. Speaker. Where did all the money go? It is one of the single most expensive undertakings ever of this Government, and the cost seems to be growing geometrically each day. $2,500 from each and every U.S. citizen chasing sour loans, shoring up shaky deals, paying for self-dealing and fraud instead of being invested in our children's education, improving our health care system, meeting the needs of rural America, and keeping U.S. industry the most competitive in the world.

The S&L calamity, not prudent fiscal policy, is forcing the White House to seek a budget summit to slash spending and raise taxes. The S&L tiger we are riding has got to be brought under control; those responsible must be brought to justice.

"FREEDOM TO WORK" RALLY

(Mr. HASTERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, May 16, at 10 a.m., I will be hosting a "Freedom To Work" rally on the grounds of the Capitol.

The purpose of this rally will be to demonstrate support for repealing the Social Security earnings test. As many of you know, the earnings test is a limit placed on the amount of income seniors who collect Social Security benefits can earn. For 1990, that limit is $9,360.

Currently, seniors are penalized $1 in benefits for every $3 over the limit they earn. When combined with other taxes seniors must pay, the earnings test puts seniors at an effective marginal tax rate of 56 percent, twice what we tax our Nation's millionaires.

The earnings limit penalty is one of the most insidious and counterproductive taxes the Government places on seniors. It's ridiculous to have a tax policy determining whether people will be productive.

I encourage all my colleagues to attend the rally on May 16. I know many of our Nation's seniors will be.

CUT NATO AND FOREIGN AID, NOT RAISE TAXES

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, first we had a bailout. Now we have a sellout: $17 billion of seized savings and loan assets are going to go on the block. That is right, we will have clearance sales, garage sales, bake sales, flea markets. But do you honestly believe that is going to do anything? Taxpayers will spend $500 billion before it is over, and we all know it.

But here is what is bothering me today. Democrats are actually considering taking the President off the hook with this "read my lips" tax fiasco. I say Democrats should stand for no new taxes, no more taxes, no hidden taxes, and let the President come through with a program.

Ladies and gentlemen, this is not a nation of bankers, for bankers, and by bankers. We are not a discount house. We are Congress. Let us cut NATO and foreign aid, let us not raise taxes.

THE OLDER AMERICANS' FREEDOM TO WORK ACT

(Mr. RHODES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, the White House and congressional leaders now finally appear willing to work together to tackle the widening Federal budget deficit. A simple beginning is to repeal the Social Security earnings test. Eliminating the penalty on seniors' earnings would actually generate Federal revenue by encouraging older Americans to continue working and paying more income taxes.

My Arizona constituents are asking me why Congress does not understand the implications of this antiquated law. The following excerpts from retirees' letters demonstrate that seniors know what is best for themselves, as well as the national economy.

From Mr. George Ashle of Mesa, AZ:

Removal of the limit on earnings for retirees would be a boon to the nation's economy since Social Security tax income would be increased as a result and a greater windfall to the government through increased income taxes.

From Mr. R. Kelly Hocker of Tempe, AZ:

Workers should not be penalized for drawing their Social Security * * * there are many retirees who really must supplement their Social Security in order to have a decent standard of living. The benefit to the country * * * is a wealth of knowledge and expertise in older workers that we may need in order to compete with foreign countries.

Let's make this a priority. Please join the 214 of us who have already cosponsored this legislation, and join us for the "Freedom To Work" rally here on May 16.

IF CONGRESS IS WALKING, THE PRESIDENT MUST START TALKING

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, what happened? The President has called a budget summit. But while talking starts with the Congress, how about some answers for the public? Particularly when taxpayers will pay the tab for this meeting.

For the first question, what happened, Mr. President? For months the Budget Committee relied upon the President's economic estimates. No White House alarms ever rang. Now we hear the economic tidal wave that is coming.

Second question, what happened, Mr. President? Is it the savings and loan crisis that is getting worse? Every American taxpayer already pays $1,000 for this foulup. Is the President now hinting that the taxpayers should pay more?

The third question, what happened, Mr. President? He gave Congress a budget in January, said nothing for 4 months, offered no changes, and finally offered no budget. Either he knew and did not tell, or did not know that he did not know.

If to the White House summit Congress is walking, then to the American people the President should be talking.

MAKE BUDGET SUMMIT A SUMMIT ABOUT ECONOMIC GROWTH

(Mr. KYL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KYL. Mr. Speaker, a couple of Members have just asked what changed? Why is the President now seemingly for taxes?

The President has not said he is for taxes. This is the hope of liberal Democrats. It is not President George Bush.

As a matter of fact, I think the President feels about taxes a lot like he feels about broccoli. You can put it on the table in front of him, but he is not going to eat it.

Mr. Speaker, this budget summit should be a summit about economic growth. How can we get economic growth? Not by raising taxes. As a matter of fact, if we are heading for a recession, the worst thing we can do is increase taxes.

It is like the old medical practice of leeching, leeching the blood, sucking the blood from the victim. Sucking more taxpayer dollars from our businesses and our people is not the way to strong economic growth in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I believe President Bush when he says that he is not going to support new taxes. He understands economic growth. If somebody is going to propose new taxes, it is going to have to be somebody other than President George Bush.

SUPPORT THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

(Mr. WOLPE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The issue we will be asked to decide later today is very simple: Are we going to recognize the reality that American families today are under increasing strain—with parents finding it more and more difficult to meet both their work and their family responsibilities?

Why should working parents be forced to choose between caring for the loved ones—be it their children or their aging parents—and keeping their jobs? That is all this legislation is about: Guaranteeing a very minimum amount of leave—unpaid leave—for compelling family need.

Mr. Speaker, it is incomprehensible that, in this day and age, this legislation should be considered controversial; 95 percent of all employers will not even be touched by this bill.

Mr. Speaker, the United States is one of only two industrialized countries in the world that do not provide for a national family leave standard. It is my hope that today the Congress will approve this long-overdue legislation, and that the President will take back his ill-considered veto threat and reaffirm his commitment to the American family.

THE PRESIDENT WILL STAND FIRM IN COMMITMENT NOT TO RAISE TAXES

(Mr. DELAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, you ought to see the excitement on the floor this morning. It is absolutely amazing. The big spenders on the Democrats' side of the aisle are all just slobbering and drooling all over themselves thinking they have got George Bush right where they want him, that he is going to raise taxes so they can continue to spend. But they did not read the President's lips. He has not said anything about raising taxes.

I remember in my hometown, Houston, TX, on October 12, 1987, Mr. Bush said:

> There are those who say we must balance the budget on the backs of the workers and raise taxes again. But they are wrong. I am not going to raise your taxes, period.

□ 1440

Do not forget what he said at the Republican convention in August 1988:

> I'm the one who won't raise taxes. My opponent now says he'll raise them as a last resort, or a third resort. When a politician talks like that, you know that's one resort he'll be checking into. My opponent won't rule out raising taxes. But I will. The Congress will push me to raise taxes, and I'll say no, and they'll push, and I'll say no, and they'll push again, and I'll say to them, "Read my lips: no new taxes."

I believed the President. The American people believed the President. Do not get out your checkbooks and credit cards too soon. My President is not going to raise new taxes.

PRESIDENT BUSH SHOULD SIGN THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

(Mr. BRENNAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BRENNAN. Mr. Speaker, workers have a responsibility to their families as well as to their employers. When a child is sick, when an elderly parent is ill, when a baby comes home from the hospital, they need care and attention. But when someone—and it is usually a woman—cares for them; we tell her boss—it is OK if you fire her. That is not right. It is long past time this Nation pass a Family and Medical Leave Act to protect working people who need to care for their families. My State of Maine has such a law—and it works.

The reality today is that both parents need to work—and neither men nor women should be forced to choose between their jobs and families. If we truly care about the family in this country, If we truly care about children—and it is not just a lot of sentimental rhetoric—we will pass the Family and Medical Leave Act and President Bush will sign it.

LIMITATION OF POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

(Mr. WALSH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, in 1988, political action committees accounted for 28 percent of an incumbent's contributions, with just 14 percent for challengers. Individual contributions have declined from 73 percent to 46 percent. In 1974, PAC money as the principal source of campaign funding stood at 17 percent; by 1988 it rose to 40 percent.

PAC money is up 300 percent since 1980. The problem with congressional elections is that too many special interest groups have flooded our elections with money.

It would seem that PAC's have become the personification of an old adage, "He who has the gold, makes the rules," and we have received a lot of gold from a lot of PAC's. It is no wonder that Americans look at Congress through jaundiced eyes.

The Republican prescription to the present ills of the campaign finance system are straightforward: first, reduce PAC contributions; second, prohibit the practice of bundling; third, prohibit PAC fund transfers; fourth, the elimination of leadership PAC's.

We must choose, the special interests or the American people.

THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

(Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, one of the most significant changes in our society over the past 30 years has been the increasing participation of women in the work force. Despite this revolution, the United States remains, along with Iran and South Africa, without a national family leave policy. As a result, many workers are forced to make a decision between financial security and caring for family members. That's a choice families should not have to make in the United States of America in the 20th century.

The State of Oregon, which has more small businesses per capita than any other State in the Union, has already implemented parental leave legislation. Oregon law requires businesses with 25 or more employees to provide 12 weeks of parental leave in the first year following the birth or adoption of a child.

Given the State's dependence on small businesses, there was considerable debate and concern regarding the potential impact on small businesses, prior to passage of the law. A strong bill was passed in Oregon which covers almost 70 percent of the private work force in the State. This is a much higher percentage than H.R. 770 will cover.

The Oregon law has been in effect for more than 2 years. The Oregon Department of Labor and the Ford Foundation have found, through data collected from employers, that businesses are not having trouble complying with the law. And they aren't going out of business or leaving the State as a result of the law.

The medical leave coverage under H.R. 770 will complement the Oregon parental leave law and other laws that are already on the books in other States. The bill will also guarantee the ability of family members to care for one another during illness in States that don't have any parental leave or medical leave laws in effect. I urge my colleagues to support American families by supporting the bipartisan compromise bill.

RADIO AND TV ADVERTISING OF CASINO GAMBLING

(Mr. WOLF asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, legislation has been introduced in the other body that would permit casinos—like the Trump Taj Majal or Bally's or the Tropicana—to advertise gambling in any State in the country, even if gambling is illegal in that State.

When this issue last came before Congress in 1988, an agreement was reached with those interested in lifting restrictions on gambling advertising that longstanding Federal restrictions on interstate gambling advertisements by private for-profit groups, such as casinos, would remain in place.

Advertising by radio or television of casino gambling was to be prohibited.

The legislation pending in the other body is inconsistent with that agreement and its intent is bad public policy.

Under the proposed legislation, for the first time in this century, casinos—Merv Griffin's Resorts International, Trumps Marina, the Golden Nugget, Ceasars Palace, Harrah's—will be able to hire slick Madison Avenue advertising agencies to develop gambling ad campaigns to attract business from around the country—even from areas where gambling is illegal.

This is simply bad public policy. The attorney general of the State of Louisiana in a letter to me—dated July 2, 1984—stated:

> I cannot support legislation which recruits gambling customers from within States where gambling is illegal.

Similar views were stated by attorneys general from many other States.

I will close, Mr. Speaker, with comments from the attorney general of the State of Arizona when this issue first came before Congress in 1984. He said:

> If Nevada and New Jersey wish to allow casino gambling in their States, that is their right to do so, but for these two States to be allowed to advertise * * * their type of gambling into states that have laws prohibiting such type of gambling would be wrong.

Mr. Speaker, the new Senate legislation should be rejected.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON OVERSIGHT'S INVESTIGATION OF TAX UNDERPAYMENTS BY U.S. SUBSIDIARIES OF FOREIGN COMPANIES

(Mr. PICKLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, on February 22, 1990, I announced that the Ways and Means Committee's Subcommittee on Oversight, which I chair, was examining noncompliance with Federal tax laws by U.S. subsidiaries of foreign-owned companies and other related compliance issues. Given the great interest in this matter, I would like to take a minute to share with my colleagues the subcommittee's progress to date and our plans for the future.

It is my plan that the Oversight Subcommittee hold a hearing in June 1990, to disclose the findings of its investigation of noncompliance with section 482 of the Internal Revenue Code generally, as well as specific allegations of improprieties by foreign-owned companies in the automobile manufacturing and electronics industries. In addition, the subcommittee has been investigating related issues involving the U.S. Customs Service and the Department of Commerce.

At that hearing, the subcommittee will receive testimony from representatives of the Department of the Treasury, the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Customs Service, the Department of Commerce, the U.S. General Accounting Office, tax and economic experts in the field, and other invited witnesses.

During the last 9 months, the subcommittee has been investigating the extent to which foreign-owned U.S. subsidiaries are underpaying corporate income taxes in the United States, how it is being done, and the exent to which other Federal laws under the committee's jurisdiction are being violated. This investigation has included an extensive review and analyses of IRS records, and other information filed by foreign-owned subsidiaries in the United States.

At the hearing, I plan to lay out the facts and let them speak for themselves. While the tax issues involved can be very complex, I believe that the fundamentals at issue are relatively simple: Certain foreign-owned companies operating in the United States are gaming our system. The Congress and the American public should know how it is being done. While testimony at the hearing will need to be quite extensive and detailed, I think the facts about what has been going on should be comprehensively revealed.

THE IMPACT OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION ON SMALL BUSINESS

(Mr. HOLLOWAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOLLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to take note of the irony which Congress has created during this, Small Business Week. As Congress pays formal recognition to the small businesses which are the backbone of America's economy, we have also chosen to consider the Family Medical Leave Act, a measure which could add immeasurably to the burdens of individual businesses struggling to survive.

Mr. Speaker, the Congress is preparing to mandate that our businesses provide certain employee benefits—despite a recommendation by the recent White House Conference on Small Business that such mandated benefits be avoided.

Mr. Speaker, it is past time that we in Washington let American businesses do business, with a minimum of Government mandates, regulations, and interference. Government mandates are not a solution. They are already part of the problem.

Mr. Speaker, I rise here to state without reservation that Congress should not mandate, it should not require, it should not direct American businesses. Congress should mind its own business and let businesses do business.

THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1989

(Mrs. SCHROEDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to follow the last speaker into the well, because I think it is very important to point out that what the small business community asked us we dealt with, and in this new compromise proposal no one is covered unless they have over 50 employees. Small businesses have been removed.

We also put in key business proposals and all sorts of things.

So I think that Members should read the compromise before they attack it.

Let me also please ask the President to listen to groups who want family medical leave. So far he has only heard one group, the special interest business group.

As Members know, it was all the business lobbyists that were called to the White House. I have in my office a stack of letters at least this deep from every State in the Union of young couples who have had all sorts of problems with their employers when they had a child or adopted a child or had some chronic illness in the family.

I would hope that the President of the United States would also listen to these people. We are taking about balancing these interests, and he should listen to both sides.

THE EVILS OF PUBLIC FINANCING

(Mr. KOLBE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, public financing of Federal campaigns would be a big step, but it would be a step in the wrong direction. While nations all over the globe move toward less encumbered and freer elections, some within the Beltway want to impose more taxes, more regulations, more government control, and more costs for our Federal elections.

Of course, creating a new tax to pay for our campaigns appeals to some in Congress. Public financing is Congress' standard top-down, nonsolution to a grassroots issue. Taxpayers already finance the franking privilege, travel expenses, and professional staff which inevitably assist an incumbent's campaign. Public financing of campaigns is just another nail in the coffin of any challenger candidate.

Indeed, it is estimated that the cost of a campaign public financing program encompassing the House, the Senate, and the existing Presidential Campaign Fund would cost the taxpayers over a billion dollars for each 4-year cycle.

It is no accident that we have seen a dramatic decline in taxpayer participation in the Presidential Campaign Fund. We'll only be fooling ourselves or deliberately deceiving the public to follow this pied piper toward more Government spending, and more bureaucratic laws which will discourage grassroots participation in our representative process.

ANOTHER MULTIBILLION-DOLLAR MESS

(Mr. APPLEGATE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Speaker, Congress is being sucked into another situation which it will regret later. Then it will be called upon to bail out another multibillion-dollar mess.

The Department of Commerce estimates that Americans now pay $32 billion a year for the 1970's Clean Air Act. Hundreds of thousands of jobs lost. Add $50 billion more if the bill before us passes.

It will increase inflation by .2 percent.

America's trading partners today are laughing at us because we are so stupid, because we are doing ourselves out of many, many jobs. We are pricing ourselves out of the international market.

But they keep rooting for us and they keep lobbying for us. The Carnegie-Mellon University said that this bill would put 2 million jobs at risk and we will lose over 350,000 jobs if this bill passes.

The Senate's bill will double it by losing 750,000 jobs and 4 million jobs at risk.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot afford extremism; common sense must prevail.

H.R. 770, THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

(Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, today, we will be considering legislation which will order Government intervention into the internal affairs between employers and employees in this Nation's businesses. Instead of assisting businesses to expand current types of benefit programs to meet the different and constantly changing needs of employees, Congress has decided that one, and only one, uniform employee leave policy should exist nationwide and has assumed that all employees will benefit equally from the same benefit. We all know what happens when one assumes.

The Family and Medical Leave Act which will appear today for a vote will not only discriminate against employees in deciding what employer benefits best suit their needs, it will result in the discontinuation of benefits to other employees in order to provide for the specific mandates in this bill. I urge my colleagues to vote against this legislation.

ARE TAXES REALLY ON THE TABLE?

(Mr. LEVIN of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVIN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, this is really confusing. The President calls for a summit saying that all is on the table. Then some of my Republican colleagues come here on the floor and say it is not so; taxes really are not on the table.

It is time to end the doubletalk. On January 31, President Bush said in his State of the Union message that his budget proposal meets the Gramm-Rudman target, brings that deficit down further and balances the budget by 1993 with no new taxes.

In a few short months he has gone from an atmosphere of complacency to an air of crisis. The American people will respond to a crisis if they believe it is real and understand its nature.

The President owes it to the people to say what has happened. A summit cannot be a screen behind which the President hides from the press or the people. It is incumbent upon the President, whether in a joint session or at least a national press conference, to tell the American people what is the problem and what is his proposed answer.

TAX REVENUE HAS INCREASED 92 PERCENT IN THE LAST DECADE

(Mr. BROWN of Colorado asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, here we go again. Those advocates of higher and higher tax burdens on working Americans now are suggesting at a summit conference that we ought to have higher taxes and that ought to be the way to balance the budget.

Let us look at the facts, Mr. Speaker. The reality is in the last decade we have increased tax revenues 92 percent. The reason we have a deficit does not have anything to do with our failure to raise revenues. It is up an incredible 92 percent.

But, Mr. Speaker, spending is up 94 percent. We should not increase taxes to simply fund more and more Federal waste.

Mr. Speaker, before we even talk about taxes, let us eliminate some of the scandalous waste this House authorizes and appropriates every year.

DOES MR. FITZWATER THINK THAT 90 MILLION NONUNION WORKERS SHOULD FIND OTHER JOBS OR JOIN LABOR UNIONS?

(Mr. CLAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to cite an article that appeared in today's Washington Post. It says:

White House spokesperson Marlin Fitzwater, defending the Bush Administration's threat to veto parental leave legislation, was asked yesterday what workers should do if their employer refuses to provide leave or they are not protected by a union. Fitzwater: They should look for another job if they cannot negotiate an appropriate relationship with their company.

Question: I just want to make sure I understand, Mr. Fitzwater. Are you telling American women who are pregnant and find that they have no job when they want to come back, to go look for other jobs? Fitzwater: No, I am telling women they should have parental leave. We urge all companies to provide it for them, and they should urge their unions to negotiate it for them.

Mr. Speaker, unions only represent 15 percent of the work force and most of their members are already covered by adequate family and medical leave.

Mr. Speaker, does Mr. Fitzwater think that 90 million nonunion workers not covered by this kind of leave should find other jobs or join labor unions?

RULES COMMITTEE PLANS REGARDING H.R. 2273, AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT OF 1989

(Mr. MOAKLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, this is to notify members of the Rules Committee's plans regarding H.R. 2273, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1989. The committee is planning to meet on Tuesday, May 15, 1990, at 10:30 a.m. to take testimony on the bill. In order to assure timely consideration on the bill on the floor, the Rules Committee is considering a rule that may limit the offering of amendments.

Any Member who is contemplating an amendment to H.R. 2273 should submit, to the Rules Committee in H 312 in the Capitol, 35 copies of the amendment and a brief explanation of the amendment no later than 6:00 p.m. on Monday, May 14, 1990.

A base text substantially incorporating all prior committee considerations is being prepared. Members should instruct legislative counsel to draft their amendments to conform to the base text.

The committee appreciates the cooperation of all Members in this effort to be fair and orderly in granting a rule for H.R. 2273.

TAXES: THE ECONOMIC EQUIVALENT OF THROWING GASOLINE ON A FIRE

(Mr. DOUGLAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. Speaker, any time that this city starts talking about taxes, it is the economic equivalent of throwing gasoline on a fire. The last thing we need is to talk about taxes.

What we have got to do is start talking about balancing the budget. Two hundred and forty-five Members of this House have cosponsored the balanced budget amendment, but the taxers and the spenders, those who run this place, are they going to let us vote on it? No. They want to go to a summit and talk about what kind of new taxes they can extract from the American people.

If we are going to have a summit, there had better be on the table the line item veto and the balanced budget amendment to the Constitution or the taxpayers are going to get burned once again.

REPUBLICAN MEMBERS PREDICTING THE PRESIDENT WILL NEVER RAISE TAXES

(Mr. TORRICELLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, you heard it here today: Republican Member after Republican Member taking the floor, predicting that the President will never raise taxes.

I am here to predict that he will raise taxes. And, Mr. Speaker, we are both right because no doubt, for the President's friends, for those of privilege in America, he will never raise taxes.

□ 1500

But for you and for me and for the overwhelming majority of Americans, he is—he says that he is going to, and he is about doing it. It isn't, Mr. Speaker, that the President is intellectually dishonest * * *. It is about the fact that he has a $500 billion——

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The Clerk will report the words objected to by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

□ 1510

The Clerk read as follows:

It isn't, Mr. Speaker, that the President is intellectually dishonest * * *. It is about the fact that he has a $500 billion * * *.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion that to imply dishonesty on the part of the President is not in order.

While the Chair is not certain or clear that "intellectual dishonesty" necessarily suggests a charge of bad motives, the Chair believes that the statement of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORICELLI] transgresses proper debate. The precedents relating to references in debate to the President permit criticisms of official policy actions and opinions, but do not permit personal abuse, innuendo, or ridicule and require that proper rules of decorum must be followed during any debate relating to the President.

In referring to the President during debate a Member shall abstain from "terms of approbrium," such as calling the President a "liar"—V, 5094, VIII, 2498.

Without objection the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] may proceed in order.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does any Member move that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] may proceed in order?

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] at this point is not recognized, would it be in order for me to ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] wish to move that he proceed in order?

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I make that motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES].

The question was taken; and on a division—demanded by Mr. WALKER—there were—ayes 18, noes 13.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent members.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is not a quorum call. The Clerk is trying to change the computer so we can go to a vote. The quorum call is off the board.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 246, nays 167, answered "present" 1, not voting 19, as follows:

Messrs. BARTLETT, FAWELL, IRELAND, and RAVENEL, and Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the motion was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

CLARIFICATION OF RULING BY THE CHAIR

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). If the Chair could have order, let the Chair clarify his ruling.

The Chair would like to clarify his earlier ruling on the words of the gentleman from New Jersey.

The Chair does not believe that an allegation of intellectual inconsistency is necessarily unparliamentary.

However, to whatever extent the phrase "intellectual dishonesty" may connote an intent to deceive, the Chair believes that it does tend to be personally offensive and therefore unparliamentary.

The House has voted to allow the gentleman to proceed in order. The gentleman has 16 seconds remaining.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, let me be clear. I believe that the President has committed intellectually inconsistent acts. Before an election, he promised to never raise taxes. After an election, he clearly intends to raise taxes. It is not fair to the American voters.

I understand why the Republicans in this House do not like to hear the words. I would not want to hear them about my party either. But what I am saying is what every American is thinking.

□ 1540

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). The gentleman from Pennsylvania will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WALKER. If I understand correctly what just happened in the course of events, it was that the Chair did rule that the gentleman's words were inappropriate, is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did so rule.

Mr. WALKER. And the penalty for such a ruling would normally be that the gentleman would not be allowed to speak for the rest of the day in the House Chamber, is that not correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House permitted him to proceed in order.

Mr. WALKER. Under the rules, Mr. Speaker, the rules state that someone having had the Chair so rule is not permitted to speak in the House for the rest of the day, is that not correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WALKER. So by taking the action which the party did a few minutes ago, the majority party did, what they did was basically overrule the rules with regard to the penalty for having words taken down.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion to allow the gentleman to proceed is a proper parliamentary motion under the same rule.

Mr. WALKER. Yes. I understand. But the effect of the action, the effect of the motion, was to override the rules of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rules of the House the Chair cannot say that one part of the rule has precedence over the practice of the House paramount to that rule.

Mr. WALKER. Well, I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WALKER. If the motion had not been made, the gentleman would not have been permitted to speak for the rest of the day, is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WALKER. So the effect of the motion was to allow the gentleman to do something which the rules would otherwise not permit him.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House has followed the normal practice. There are two aspects to the rule. The House proceeded under the rules, and both procedures are proper. The House voted and the gentleman was allowed to proceed for 16 seconds.

Mr. WALKER. I have a further parliamentary inquiry. So in other words what the Chair is saying is that the will of the majority can prevail, even though it is over and above the rules that are adopted by the——

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES] is absolutely correct. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

BUDGET SUMMIT ESSENTIAL

(Mr. CONTE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, first of all I want to thank you all for coming over here to hear me.

Mr. Speaker, there are a lot of Members around here saying we should not go to a summit. They are saying we ought to play partisan games.

That is the worst of all possible worlds. If we do not go to a summit, you know what happens. Come October 1, we walk right into sequester, a sequester of gigantic proportions, $56 billion, cutting every program an estimated 25 percent across the board.

Do you want to know what will happen? I will tell you.

All of the education programs: Pell grants; chapter 1; handicapped education; impact aid; cut 25 percent.

The war on drugs: Coast Guard interdiction; Customs; FBI; DEA; grants to State and local law enforcement; cut 25 percent.

Air traffic controllers, none of you will want to fly home; food safety inspectors; mine safety; job safety; cut 25 percent.

Research on AIDS, cut 25 percent.

Space programs, cut 25 percent.

Agricultural payments, cut 25 percent.

Food donations to the poor, cut 25 percent.

Hot meals for the elderly.

Homeless programs.

Literacy programs.

Tax collections by the IRS.

Veterans' medical care.

Securities investigations.

Housing for the poor.

EPA.

Federal employment.

Job training.

The entire Defense Department, cut 25 percent.

Take these programs and many, many more and imagine what happens to them when they are cut 25 percent across the board. If you thought 1981 was tough, you ain't seen nothing yet.

That is why we need a summit. That is why we need leadership. And that is why we need to stop this partisan bickering and games on both sides of the aisle. Let us get together. Let us talk it over under the guidance of our joint leadership.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] be given an additional 16 seconds.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts may complete his statement.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I will end by saying, "Read my lips." Let us all get together here for the good of the country and for those programs that I talked about. Let us get to the summit and let us quit our bickering.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Kalbaugh, one of his secretaries.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 3736 AND H.R. 3737

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to remove the name of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. OLIN] as a cosponsor of H.R. 3736 and H.R. 3737.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT NOT GOOD FOR AMERICAN BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY

(Mr. VALENTINE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, my remarks will not have anything to do with the recent controversy. I hate to have to be here to follow that splendid act, but that is the way it happens.

Mr. Speaker, over the years the Federal Government has insinuated itself more and more into the everyday lives of the American people and American business. Contrary to what some say, Mr. Speaker, this is not a completely bad circumstance. Among the positive results are a Federal minimum wage, a requirement that overtime wages must be paid for overtime work, a safer workplace, and some protection from discrimination.

Up until now, Mr. Speaker, American business has not been required to pay people for work they did not perform. Up until now American business has not been required to pay people for idleness.

If the House passes H.R. 770, this will change, Mr. Speaker, and for the very first time Congress will have said to the American business and industry, "You must pay some of your people for work they do not perform."

It will be a historic occasion.

"EVERYTHING" ON THE BUDGET TABLE MEANS EVERYTHING

(Mr. GINGRICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, we are about to enter a budget summit that could be very, very important for this country. One of our colleagues on the Democratic side was talking about intellectual consistency. Let me just suggest to every Member of the House that if everything is on the table, then everything is on the table, every appropriation, every piece of pork, all the micromanagement, all of the various built-in, mandated waste that over the last 35 years have accrued in the way the Congress deals with the Government.

It seems to me we ought to start first by trying to clear out everything that is unnecessary waste and unnecessary expenditure and unnecessary redtape and unnecessary mandate, and then if we get around to the need for revenues, there may be a time to get to it. But we have a long number of sessions in that summit looking at everything before we start defining the word "everything" to mean only taxes.

So intellectual consistency is going to require that everybody on both sides mean by the word "everything" everything.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 3, EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION AND DEVELOPMENT ACT OF 1990

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 3) to authorize appropriations to expand Head Start programs and programs carried out under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to include child care services, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and request a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MURTHA). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES OFFERED BY MR. ARCHER

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ARCHER moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill H.R. 3 be instructed to reject the new "Act for Better Child Care" grant program proposed in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. HAWKINS] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER].

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House debate on day care has now continued for more than 2 years. We have argued about day care quality and regulations, about new bureaucracy, about supply shortages, about committee jurisdiction, and about money.

Even though the House passed a bill, significant differences of opinion exist within this body regarding most of those issues.

But I think the House did settle one issue emphatically. It does not support the ABC provisions of the Senate bill.

My motion simply instructs the House conferees on that particular issue to support the existing clear House position by rejecting those Senate provisions. It underscores the existing clear House position. No more. No less.

It's very troubling to hear now that the conferees being named today may not, in fact, constitute a working majority in support of the House position on this cornerstone issue. That's why this motion to instruct is so important.

The House rejected the ABC approach for good reason. The Federal Government already has 28 day care programs.

We do not need a 29th, in the form of a redundant new preschool program which has the potential to create an elaborate new bureaucracy at the Federal and State levels.

We already have a preschool grant mechanism that has been in existence for nearly 30 years. The title XX grant program—which is part of the Social Security Act—provides the States with $2.8 billion to spend on social programs of their choice. In practice, every State but one spends title XX money on day care.

Here's what title XX supports: A Federal mechanism to send the money to the States; a State mechanism to receive the Federal money and allocate it to day care providers or local governments; mechanisms at the local level to allocate the money to providers; an elaborate set of rules and procedures at the State and local levels governing who has the right to apply for the money, what they must do to apply, how it is decided who gets the money and how much, and what the money can be used for; and a mechanism to assure that day care financed by title XX dollars is in accord with State and local quality standards.

The point is, the House chose not to create a redundant, costly new preschool day care grant program when we already have one with the inherent flexibility of the title XX program.

I would have strongly preferred that the Speaker appoint conferees who will support the House position on the ABC Program.

Absent that commitment, it's vital that we remind our conferees through these instructions that we, as the Members of the House they're representing in conference, in fact, expect them to fulfill their responsibility to us.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor has no requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the motion to instruct conferees on a child care bill. As many of my colleagues know, I rarely support such motions. However, today is one of those extraordinary occasions where it is important—if not essential—that we support the motion to instruct. Prior to going to conference, the conferees need to know the position of the House on the ABC provisions contained in the Senate amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I have only one goal in the upcoming child care conference, and that is to produce a bill that will be enacted into law so that millions of children and their parents will receive much-needed child care assistance. To do this, the conferees must produce a bill that the President will sign. No one will benefit—not one child, not one family—if all we produce from conference is a political issue for the fall elections.

The President has repeatedly made clear his intention to veto a child care bill that contains the ABC provisions of the Senate amendment. I want to avoid a circumstance in which the House rejects, or the President vetoes, a child care conference report because of its inclusion of the Senate's ABC provisions. I have absolutely no interest in playing chicken with the President or jeopardizing approval of the conference report on the House floor. Better for the House to express its will clearly and emphatically on this motion to instruct, rather than reject the conference report later.

Mr. Speaker, the House bill was supported by 265 Members, and provides child care assistance through a significant expansion of the existing Title XX Program. It creates no new or duplicative bureaucracy as does the Senate amendment through its new ABC Program. The motion to instruct merely reaffirms the position of the House and directs its conferees to faithfully represent that position in opposition to the Senate's ABC provisions.

My colleagues, if you share my commitment to provide much-needed child care assistance to millions of children and their parents—if you share my commitment to action, rather than rhetoric—if you share my desire to enact a good child care bill, rather than merely create a campaign issue of empty promises—you'll vote in favor of this motion to instruct.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the House to support this motion to instruct and send a strong bipartisan message to our conferees that we all want a bill the President can sign—a bill that will deliver on all our promises and all our rhetoric; most importantly, a bill that will deliver essential child care assistance to millions of American families.

Vote aye on the motion to instruct.

Mr. MILLER of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the motion to instruct conferees on H.R. 3, the Early Childhood Education and Development Act. This motion would instruct conferees to reject the provisions in the Senate-passed bill which create a new Federal child care bureaucracy. The Senate-passed bill discriminates against poor families who deserve the right to choose church-based child care.

We must support the provisions in H.R. 3 which protect the rights of families and stay-at-home mothers. Families don't want a federally driven child care bureaucracy. It's important that we allow the use of vouchers for church-based child care, permit church members to work as child care employees, and expand tax credits for parents. The House bill is clearly superior to the Senate's. If the conference adopts major parts of the Senate bill or if responsible fiscal provisions are not contained in the final bill, I will oppose this bill when it comes back to the House for final passage. We need more and better day care in this country, but it must be based on sound principles. The issue here is choice. Choice will strengthen our families.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, as the House agrees to go to conference with the Senate, it is painfully clear that we're back to the exact place we reached a year ago. Ironically, the conflict is not over whether we should give States some money to expand and improve day care, but over how we should give them the money. The fundamental conflict within the House for 2 years now has been the desire of the Education and Labor Committee to use the ABC grant mechanism—as opposed to the desire of the Ways and Means Committee to use the title XX grant mechanism. If we had resolved this conflict last year, parents, States, and localities could be well on their way to implementing this bill by now.

Finally, the House decided to use the title XX mechanism when it passed H.R. 3 a month ago. Now the matter is about to become even more complicated, because the Senate appears to want the ABC bill. Moreover, the Democratic leadership in the House has arranged the conference so that it appears nearly inevitable that the conference will approve the ABC bill. As a result, the conference report would include both the ABC bill and title XX.

This is a ridiculous result. The point of the bipartisan motion to instruct conferees is simply to remind our conference managers that the House has already spoke on this matter. By passing H.R. 3 with an excellent new title XX program and without ABC, the House made a clear choice. Now we are simply instructing our conferees to stick by our choice.

We have already allowed this conflict to deprive the Nation of good social legislation for more than a year. The President has said repeatedly he will veto any day care bill that includes ABC. Let's send our conferees and the Senate conferees an overwhelming message by this vote today. We want to stick with the decision we already made to support title XX. We want a bill that will be signed into law. Vote "yes" on the motion to instruct.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from California [Mr. HAWKINS] intend to speak? We have the right to close debate, I believe.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I think there is much ado about nothing. The gentleman on this side intends to support the motion.

I have no requests for time, and in order to conserve time, I simply yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the motion to instruct.

The previous question was ordered.

□ 1600

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to instruct conferees offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device and there were—yeas 411, nays 0, answered "present" 1, not voting 21, as follows:

□ 1618

So the motion to instruct conferees was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise their remarks and include therein extraneous material on the motion to instruct conferees on H.R. 3.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, in light of the unanimous vote of the House in instructing the conferees on rejecting the provision known as the ABC portion, would it not be intellectually inconsistent for the Speaker to appoint conferees that are not in agreement with that position? My assumption is, since all Members are in agreement by virtue of the vote that no one would vote that way, and it certainly would be intellectually consistent to appoint conferees who would so vote.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will advise the gentleman that the motion to instruct will not bind Senate conferees. Second, that the position of the House, the Chair assumes, will be upheld in the course of the initial position of the House in the conference. Furthermore, the gentleman states that every Member of the House has voted, except for one voting "present," for the instruction; therefore, it would deem that no one would be disqualified by disagreement with the instruction.

□ 1620

Mr. THOMAS of California. I am inquiring further, Mr. Speaker, if, in fact, someone did, would they be intellectually consistent?

The SPEAKER. In the opinion of the Chair, the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS] is not now starting a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following conferees on H.R. 3, the Early Childhood Education and Development Act of 1989:

From the Committee on Education and Labor, for consideration of the House bill—except titles III and VI—and the Senate amendment—except for titles II and III—and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. HAWKINS, FORD of Michigan, CLAY, MILLER of California, KILDEE, WILLIAMS, MARTINEZ, OWENS of New York, HAYES of Illinois, PERKINS, SAWYER, and PAYNE of New Jersey, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mrs. UNSOELD, and Messrs. WASHINGTON, JONTZ, GOODLING, PETRI, GUNDERSON, BARTLETT, TAUKE, HENRY, GRANDY, BALLENGER, and FAWELL.

From the Committee on Ways and Means, for consideration of titles III and VI of the House bill, and title II of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. ROSTENKOWSKI, DOWNEY, FORD of Tennessee, PEASE, and MATSUI, Mrs. KENNELLY, and Messrs. ANDREWS, ARCHER, VANDER JAGT, CRANE, and SHAW.

From the Committee on Ways and Means, for consideration of title I—except section 125—of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. ROSTENKOWSKI, DOWNEY, and ARCHER.

From the Committee on Ways and Means, for consideration of title III of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. ROSTENKOWSKI, JACOBS, and BROWN of Colorado.

From the Committee on Energy and Commerce, for consideration of section 124 of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. DINGELL, WALGREN, and LENT.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Chair reserves the right to appoint additional conferees.

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, had I been present, I would have voted "yea" on rollcall No. 100, No. 101, and No. 102.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 7, APPLIED TECHNOLOGY EDUCATION AMENDMENTS OF 1989

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 7) to amend the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act to improve the provision of services under such act and to extend the authorities contained in such act through the fiscal year 1995, and for other purposes, with the Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. HAWKINS, FORD of Michigan, MILLER, of California, KILDEE, WILLIAMS, MARTINEZ, PERKINS, HAYES, of Illinois, SAWYER, OWENS of New York, and PAYNE of New Jersey, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mr. POSHARD, Mrs. UNSOELD, and Messrs. RAHALL, GOODLING, FAWELL, GRANDY, SMITH of Vermont, BARTLETT, GUNDERSON, and PETRI, Mrs. ROUKEMA, and Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Chair reserves the right to appoint additional conferees.

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING ADDITIONAL COSPONSOR OF H.R. 2273

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be granted authority to add a cosponsor to H.R. 2273, the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF NONDISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT TO PRODUCTS OF HUNGARY

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 1594) to extend nondiscriminatory treatment to the products of the Peoples' Republic of Hungary for 3 years, with Senate amendments thereto, concur in the Senate amendment to the test with an amendment, and concur in the Senate amendment to the title.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the House amendment to the Senate amendments, as follows:

Subtitle B—Customs User Fees

SEC. 111. CUSTOMS USER FEES FOR FORMAL ENTRIES MADE DURING FISCAL YEAR 1990.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 13031(a) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(a)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(except fiscal year 1990)" after "1987" in paragraph (10); and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(11) For the processing of any merchandise (other than an article described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (9)) that is formally entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, during fiscal year 1990, a fee (not exceeding $575) in an amount equal to—

"(A) 0.17 percent ad valorem, or

"(B) an ad valorem rate which the Secretary of the Treasury estimates will provide a total amount of revenue during fiscal year 1990, equal to—

"(i) the total amount authorized to be appropriated for such fiscal year to the United States Customs Service for salaries and expenses incurred in conducting commercial operations during such fiscal year, reduced by

"(ii) the excess, if any, of—

"(I) the total amount authorized to be appropriated for such salaries and expenses for such fiscal year, over

"(II) the total amount actually appropriated for such salaries and expenses for such fiscal year, except that if appropriations are not authorized for fiscal year 1990, the fee imposed under this paragraph with respect to that year shall be in an amount equal to 0.17 percent ad valorem or $575, whichever is less.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 13031 of such Act of 1985 is further amended as follows:

(1) Subsection (b) is amended—

(A) by striking out "(a) (9) or (10)" in paragraph (8)(A) and inserting "(a) (9), (10), or (11)";

(B) by amending paragraph (10) to read as follows:

"(10) The fee charged under subsection (a) (10) or (11) of this section with respect to goods of Canadian origin (as determined under section 202 of the United States-Canada Free-Trade Agreement Implementation Act of 1988) shall be in accordance with article 403 of the United States-Canada Free-Trade Agreement."; and

(C) by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"(11) No fee may be charged under subsection (a) (10) or (11) with respect to products of Israel if an exemption with respect to the fee is implemented under section 113 of the Customs and Trade Act of 1990.

"(12) For purposes of applying subsection (a)(11)(B), expenses incurred in conducting commercial operations do not include costs incurred in—

"(A) air passenger processing;

"(B) export control; and

"(C) international affairs.".

(2) Subsection (f)(2) is amended—

(A) by inserting "(A)" after "(2)",

(B) by striking out "(other than costs for which direct reimbursement under paragraph (3) is required)" and inserting "(other than costs described in subparagraph (B))", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(B) The following costs may not be funded with money contained in the Customs User Fee Account:

"(i) Costs for which direct reimbursement under paragraph (3) is required.

"(ii) Costs for any of the following services (other than a service for which direct reimbursement is made under paragraph (3)):

"(I) Any service for which a fee exemption is provided by reason of subsection (b)(10).

"(II) Any service for which a fee exemption is provided by reason of the determination referred to in section 113 of the Customs and Trade Act of 1990.

"(III) Any service provided in processing during fiscal year 1990 air passengers and articles described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of subsection (a)(9).".

SEC. 112. ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY.

Section 13031(g) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(g)) is amended—

(1) by amending the side heading to read as follows: "REGULATIONS AND ENFORCEMENT.—"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Except to the extent otherwise provided in regulations, all administrative and enforcement provisions of customs laws and regulations, other than those laws and regulations relating to drawback, shall apply with respect to any fee prescribed under subsection (a) of this section, and with respect to persons liable therefor, as if such fee is a customs duty. For purposes of the preceding sentence, any penalty expressed in terms of a relationship to the amount of the duty shall be treated as not less than the amount which bears a similar relationship to the amount of the fee assessed. For purposes of determining the jurisdiction of any court of the United States or any agency of the United States, any fee prescribed under subsection (a) of this section shall be treated as if such fee is a customs duty.".

SEC. 113. EXEMPTION OF ISRAELI PRODUCTS FROM USER FEES.

If the United States Trade Representative determines that the Government of Israel has provided reciprocal concessions in exchange for the exemption of the products of Israel from the fees imposed under section 13031(a) (10) and (11) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985, such fees may not be charged with respect to any product of Israel that is entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, on or after the 15th day (but not before October 1, 1989) after the date on which the determination is published in the Federal Register.

SEC. 114. GAO REPORT.

The Comptroller General of the United States, within 180 days after the effective date of this section, shall report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate on the costs incurred by the Customs Service in conducting commercial operations and on appropriate fees to be charged to the beneficiaries of such services.

TITLE II—CARIBBEAN BASIN ECONOMIC RECOVERY

Subtitle A—Short Title and Findings

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Expansion Act 1989".

SEC. 202. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) a stable political and economic climate in the Caribbean region is necessary for the development of the countries in that region and for the security and economic interests of the United States;

(2) the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act was enacted in 1983 to assist in the achievement of such a climate by stimulating the development of the export potential of the region; and

(3) the commitment of the United States to the successful development of the region, as evidenced by the enactment of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, should be reaffirmed, and further strengthened, by amending that Act to improve its operation.

Subtitle B—Amendments to the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act and Related Provisions

PART 1—AMENDMENTS TO CARIBBEAN BASIN ECONOMIC RECOVERY ACT

SEC. 211. REPEAL OF TERMINATION DATE ON DUTY-FREE TREATMENT UNDER THE ACT.

Section 218 of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2706(b)) is repealed.

SEC. 212. DUTY REDUCTION FOR CERTAIN LEATHER-RELATED PRODUCTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 213 of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2703) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h)(1) The rate of duty on any handbag, luggage, flat good, work glove, or leather wearing apparel that—

"(A) is a product of a beneficiary country; and

"(B) was not designated on August 5, 1983, as an eligible article for the purpose of the generalized system of preferences under title V of the Trade Act of 1974; is a rate equal to 50 percent of the general column 1 rate of duty under the HTS that would apply to such article but for this paragraph.

"(2) The President shall proclaim the rates of duty imposed under paragraph (1).

"(3) The duty applied under paragraph (1) to an article is in lieu of the duty provided for that article under general column 1 of the HTS.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 213(b) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out ", handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, and leather wearing apparel" in paragraph (2);

(2) by striking "or" at the end of paragraph (4);

(3) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "; or"; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) articles to which reduced rates of duty apply under subsection (h).".

SEC. 213. WORKER RIGHTS.

Section 212 of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2702) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" after the semicolon at the end of subsection (b)(5);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of subsection (b)(6) and inserting "; and";

(3) by adding at the end of subsection (b) the following new paragraph:

"(7) if such country has not or is not taking steps to afford internationally recognized worker rights (as defined in section 502(a)(4) of the Trade Act of 1974) to workers in the country (including any designated zone in that country).";

(4) by amending the last sentence in subsection (b) by striking out "and (5)" and inserting "(5), and (7)";

(5) by amending subsection (c)(8) to read as follows:

"(8) whether or not such country has taken or is taking steps to afford to workers in that country (including any designated zone in that country) internationally recognized worker rights."; and

(6) by adding the following new subparagraph at the end of subsection (e):

"(3) Not later than January 4, 1991 and biennially thereafter, the President shall conduct a general review of eligible countries based on the considerations described in subsections (b) and (c).".

SEC. 214. REPORTS.

Section 212 of the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2702) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) On or before October 1, 1992, and the close of each 3-year period thereafter, the President shall submit to the Congress a complete report regarding the operation of this title.".

SEC. 215. APPLICATION OF ACT IN EASTERN CARIBBEAN AREA.

It is the sense of the Congress that there should be undertaken special efforts in order to improve the ability of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States countries and Belize to benefit from the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act.

PART 2—AMENDMENTS TO THE HARMONIZED TARIFF SCHEDULE AND OTHER PROVISIONS AFFECTING CBI BENEFICIARY COUNTRIES

SEC. 221. SUGAR IMPORTS FROM BENEFICIARY COUNTRIES.

(a) ALLOCATIONS TO BENEFICIARY COUNTRIES.—Paragraph (c) of additional U.S. note 3 of chapter 17 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States is amended—

(1) by inserting after note 2 of subparagraph (i) the following:

"NOTE 3: The Secretary shall determine whether any country is not utilizing fully the base quota amount allocated to it for a quota year and any amount determined to be unused during such year shall be reallocated on a pro rata basis among the countries listed in general note 3(c)(v) (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as the 'CBI countries') receiving base quota allocations for such year. The unused quota amount reallocated to any CBI country under this note for any quota year is in addition to any reallocation made under subparagraph (iv) to that country for such year. No portion of any reallocation made to a CBI country for a quota year under this note or subparagraph (iv) that is unused at the close of such year is available for use in any other quota year";

(2) by amending subparagraph (iii) to read as follows:

"(iii) Notwithstanding any authority given to the United States Trade Representative under paragraphs (e) and (g) of this note, in allocating any limitation imposed under any paragraph of this note on the quantity of sugars, syrups, and molasses described in the subheadings cited under paragraph (a) of this note which may be entered—

"(A) the percentage allocation made to the Philippines under this paragraph may not be reduced,

"(B) no allocation may be made to the Republic of South Africa, and

"(C) the aggregate of the amounts of the base quota allocations to the CBI countries for any quota year beginning after December 31, 1988, may not be less than 371,449 metric tons, raw value."; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(iv) If under law authorizing such an action for purposes of dealing with a threat to the national security or foreign policy of the United States, the allocation under subparagraph (i) for any quota year is suspended or terminated with respect to any country, the amount of the suspended or terminated allocation shall be reallocated on a pro-rata basis among the CBI countries receiving allocations for that year. Any quota amount reallocated to any CBI country under this subparagraph for any quota year is in addition to any reallocation made under note 3 of subparagraph (i) to that country for such year.

"(v) The President may enter into trade agreements with foreign governments for purposes of granting appropriate compensation, and may proclaim such compensation, if any action taken by the United States under the authority of note 3 of subparagraph (i), subparagraph (iii)(C), or subparagraph (iv) is found to be inconsistent with the international obligations of the United States (including the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade). Before offering compensation under this subparagraph, the President shall consult with the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate regarding the reasons for taking the action concerned and the compensation proposed to be offered.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) apply with respect to the quota year in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and to quota years thereafter.

SEC. 222. INCREASE IN DUTY-FREE TOURIST ALLOWANCES.

(a) DUTY-FREE ALLOWANCE FOR RETURNING RESIDENTS.—Subchapter IV of chapter 98 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States is amended—

(1) by inserting the following new note at the end of the notes to such subchapter.

"4. As used in subheadings 9804.00.70 and 9804.00.72, the term 'beneficiary country' means a country listed in general note 3(c)(v)(A).";

(2) by striking out "subheading 9804.00.65 or 9804.00.70" and all that follows thereafter in the superior article description to subheadings 9804.00.65 and 9804.00.70 and inserting "subheadings 9804.00.65, 9804.00.70, and 9804.00.72 within 30 days preceding his arrival, and claims exemption under only one of such items on his arrival.";

(3) by striking out "$800" in subheading 9804.00.70 and inserting "$1,200";

(4) by inserting "or up to $600 of which have been acquired in one or more beneficiary countries" before the parenthetical matter in subheading 9804.00.70; and

(5) by inserting after subheading 9804.00.70 the following new subheading with the article description for the new subheading having the same degree of indentation as subheading 9804.00.70:

"9804.00.72	Articles whether or not accompanying a person, not over $600 in aggregate fair market value in the country of acquisition, including—. (a) but only in the case of an individual who has attained the age of 21, not more than 1 liter of alcoholic beverages or not more than 2 liters if at least one liter is the product of one or more beneficiary countries, and. (b) not more than 200 cigarettes, and not more than 100 cigars. If such person arrives directly from a beneficiary country, not more than $400 of which shall have been acquired elsewhere than in beneficiary countries (but this item does not permit the entry of articles not accompanying a person which were acquired elsewhere than in beneficiary countries)	Free	Free."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) apply with respect to residents of the United States who depart from the United States on or after the 15th day of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 223. DUTY-FREE TREATMENT FOR ARTICLES ASSEMBLED IN BENEFICIARY COUNTRIES FROM COMPONENTS PRODUCED IN THE UNITED STATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—U.S. Note 2 of subchapter II of chapter 98 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States is amended—

(1) by striking out "2. Any" and inserting "2. (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b), any"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(b) No article (except a textile or apparel article) may be treated for purposes of this Act as a foreign article, or as subject to duty, if—

"(i) the article is—

"(A) assembled in whole of fabricated components that are a product of the United States, or

"(B) processed in whole of ingredients (other than water) that are a product of the United States, in a beneficiary country; and

"(ii) neither the fabricated components or ingredients, after exportation from the United States, nor the article itself, before importation into the United States, enters the commerce of any foreign country other than a beneficiary country. As used in this paragraph, the term 'beneficiary country' means a country listed in general note 3(c)(V)(A).".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) applies with respect to goods assembled or processed abroad that are entered on or after the 15th day after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 224. RULES OF ORIGIN FOR BENEFICIARY COUNTRY PRODUCTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of administering the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act and subject to subsection (b), the President may proclaim new rules, to take effect on January 1, 1991, for determining whether articles originate in beneficiary countries.

(b) CONSULTATION AND LAY-OVER REQUIREMENTS.—Rules of origin may not be proclaimed under subsection (a) unless—

(1) the President has obtained advice regarding the proposed rules pursuant to consultation with—

(A) the appropriate advisory committees established under section 135 of the Trade Act of 1974,

(B) the governments of the beneficiary countries,

(C) the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate, and

(D) other interested parties;

(2) the President has submitted a report to such Committees that sets forth the rules proposed to be proclaimed and the reasons thereof;

(3) a period of at least 90 calendar days that begins on the first day on which the President has met the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) with respect to such action has expired; and

(4) the President has further consulted with such Committees regarding the proposed action during the period referred to in paragraph (3).

SEC. 225. CUMULATION INVOLVING BENEFICIARY COUNTRY PRODUCTS UNDER THE COUNTERVAILING AND ANTIDUMPING DUTY LAWS.

(a) MATERIAL INJURY.—Section 771(7)(C)(iv) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1677(7)(c)(iv)) is amended to read as follows:

"(iv) CUMULATION.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of clauses (i) and (ii) and subject to subclause (II), the Commission shall cumulatively assess the volume and effect of imports from two or more countries of like products subject to investigation if such imports compete with each other and with like products of the domestic industry in the United States market.

"(II) CBI EXCEPTION.—When the imports subject to investigation are products of a country designated as a beneficiary country under the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (19 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.), the volume and effect of imports from such country may only be cumulatively assessed with imports of like products from one or more other countries designated as beneficiary countries.".

(b) THREAT OF MATERIAL INJURY.—Section 771(7)(F)(iv) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1677(7)(F)(iv)) is amended by striking out "(C)(v)," and inserting "(C)(iv)(II)and (v),".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) and (b) apply with respect to investigations initiated under section 720 or 732 of the Tariff Act of 1930 on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 226. ETHYL ALCOHOL AND MIXTURES THEREOF FOR FUEL USE.

(a) DETERMINATION OF INDIGENOUS PRODUCTS.—Section 423(c) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (19 U.S.C. 2703 note) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) as paragraphs (4), (5), and (6), respectively; and

(2) by striking out paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) Ethyl alcohol or a mixture thereof that is produced by a process of full fermentation in an insular possession or beneficiary country shall be treated as being an indigenous product of that possession or country.

"(3)(A) Ethyl alcohol and mixtures thereof that are only dehydrated within an insular possession or beneficiary country (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as 'dehydrated alcohol and mixtures') shall be treated as being indigenous products of that possession or country only if the alcohol or mixture, when entered, meets the applicable local feedstock requirement.

"(B) The local feedstock requirement with respect to any calendar year is—

"(i) 0 percent with respect to the base quantity of dehydrated alcohol and mixtures that is entered;

"(ii) 30 percent with respect to the 35,000,000 gallons of dehydrated alcohol and mixtures next entered after the base quantity; and

"(iii) 50 percent with respect to all dehydrated alcohol and mixtures entered after the amount specified in clause (ii) is entered.

"(C) For purposes of this paragraph:

"(i) The term 'base quantity' means, with respect to dehydrated alcohol and mixtures entered during any calender year, the greater of—

"(I) 60,000,000 gallons; or

"(II) an amount (expressed in gallons) equal to 7 percent of the United States domestic market for ethyl alcohol, as determined by the United States International Trade Commission, during the 12-month period ending on the preceding September 30; that is first entered during the calendar year.

"(ii) The term 'local feedstock' means hydrous ethyl alcohol which is wholly produced or manufactured in any insular possession or beneficiary country.

"(iii) The term 'local feedstock requirement' means the minimum percent, by volume, of local feedstock that must be included in dehydrated alcohol and mixtures."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) apply with respect to calendar years after 1989.

SEC. 227. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

Section 503(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2463(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The duty free treatment provided under section 501 shall apply to any eligible article which is the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country if—

"(A) that article is imported directly from a beneficiary developing country into the customs territory of the United States; and

"(B) the sum of (i) the cost or value of the materials produced in the beneficiary developing country or any 2 or more countries which are members of the same association of countries which is treated as one country under section 502(a)(3), plus (ii) the direct costs of processing operations performed in such beneficiary developing country or such member countries is not less than 35 percent of the appraised value of such article at the time of its entry into the customs territory of the United States.

"(2) The Secretary of the Treasury, after consulting with the United States Trade Representative, shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this subsection, including, but not limited to, regulations providing that, in order to be eligible for duty-free treatment under this title, an article must be wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country, or must be a new or different article of commerce which has been grown, produced, or manufactured in the beneficiary developing country; but no article or material of a beneficiary developing country shall be eligible for such treatment by virtue of having merely undergone—

"(A) simple combining or packaging operations, or

"(B) mere dilution with water or mere dilution with another substance that does not materially alter the characteristics of the article.".

Subtitle C—Scholarship Assistance and Tourism Promotion

SEC. 231. CARIBBEAN-CENTRAL AMERICAN SCHOLARSHIP PARTNERSHIP.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM.—The Administrator of the Agency for International Development shall establish and administer a program of scholarship assistance, in cooperation with State governments, universities, community colleges, and businesses, to provide scholarships to enable students from eligible countries in the Caribbean and Central America to study in the United States.

(b) GRANTS TO STATES.—In carrying out this section, the Administrator may make grants to States to provide scholarship assistance for undergraduate degree programs and for training programs of one year or longer in study areas related to the critical development needs of the students' respective countries.

(c) CONSULTATION WITH STATES.—The Administrator shall consult with the participating States with regard to the educational opportunities available within each State and on the assignment of scholarship recipients.

(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share for each year for which a State receives payments under this section shall be not less than 50 percent.

(e) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of payments under this section may be in cash, including the waiver of tuition or the offering of in-State tuition or housing waivers or subsidies, or in-kind fairly evaluated, including the provision of books or supplies.

(f) FORGIVENESS OF SCHOLARSHIP ASSISTANCE.—The obligation of any recipient to reimburse any entity for any or all scholarship assistance provided under this section shall be forgiven upon the recipient's prompt return to his or her country of domicile for a period which is at least one year longer than the period spent studying in the United States with scholarship assistance.

(g) PRIVATE SECTOR PARTICIPATION.—To the maximum extent practicable, each participating State shall enlist the assistance of the private sector to enable the State to meet the non-Federal share of payments under this section. Wherever appropriate, each participating State shall encourage the private sector to offer internships or other opportunities consistent with the purposes of this section to students receiving scholarships under this section.

(h) FUNDING.—Any funds used in carrying out this section shall be derived from funds allocated for Latin American and Caribbean regional programs under chapter 4 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2346 and following; relating to the economic support fund).

(i) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

(1) The term "eligible country" means any country—

(A) which is receiving assistance under chapter 1 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151 and following; relating to development assistance) or chapter 4 of part II of that Act (22 U.S.C. 2346 and following; relating to the economic support fund); and

(B) which is designated by the President as a beneficiary country pursuant to the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act.

(2) The term "State" means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

SEC. 232. PROMOTION OF TOURISM.

(a) CONGRESSIONAL FINDING.—The Congress finds that the tourism industry must be recognized as a central element in the economic development and political stability of the Caribbean Basin region because of the potential that the industry has for increasing employment and foreign exchange earnings, establishing important linkages with other related sectors, and having a positive complementary effect on trade with the United States.

(b) FEDERAL AGENCY PRIORITY.—It is the sense of the Congress that increased tourism and related activities should be developed in the Caribbean Basin region as a central part of the Caribbean Basin Initiative program and, to that end, the appropriate agencies of the United States Government should assign a high priority to projects that promote the tourism industry in the Caribbean Basin.

(c) STUDY.—The Secretary of Commerce shall complete the study begun in 1986 regarding tourism development strategies for the Caribbean Basin region. The study shall include—

(1) information on the mutual benefits received by the United States and the Caribbean Basin economies as a result of tourist activity in the area; and

(2) proposals for developing increased linkages between the tourism industry and local industries in the region such as the agro-business.

SEC. 233. PILOT PRECLEARANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—Subject to subsection (b), the Commissioner of Customs shall carry out, during fiscal years 1990 and 1991, preclearance operations at a facility of the United States Customs Service in a country within the Caribbean Basin which the Commissioner of Customs considers appropriate for testing the extent to which the availability of preclearance operations can assist in the development of tourism.

(b) RESTRICTIONS REGARDING PROGRAM.—

(1) The Commissioner of Customs may not consider a country within the Caribbean Basin to be appropriate for the testing referred to in subsection (a)—

(A) if preclearance operations are currently carried out by the United States Customs Service in that country; or

(B) unless immigration preinspection operations are currently carried out in that country with respect to individuals traveling to the United States.

(2) Preclearance operations may not be commenced in the country selected for testing under subsection (a) unless the Commissioner of Customs and the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization jointly certify that—

(A) there exists a bilateral agreement between the United States Government and the government of such country which protects the interests of the United States and affords diplomatic protection to United States employees working at the preclearance location;

(B) the facilities at the preclearance location conform to Federal Inspection Services standards and are suitable for the duties to be performed therein;

(C) there is adequate security around the structure used for the reception of international arrivals;

(D) the government of such country grants the United States Customs Service and the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service appropriate search, seizure, and arrest authority; and

(E) United States employees and their families will not be subject to fear of reprisal, acts of terrorism, and threats of intimidation.

(c) REPORT.—As soon as practicable after September 30, 1991, the Commissioner of Customs shall submit to the Congress a report regarding the preclearance operations program carried out under subsection (a). The report shall include—

(1) a summary of the preclearance operations, including the number of individuals processed, any administrative problems encountered, and cost of the operations;

(2) an evaluation of the extent to which the preclearance operations contributed to—

(A) the stimulation of the tourism industry of the country concerned, and

(B) expedited customs processing at United States ports of entry;

(3) the opinion of the Commissioner of Customs regarding the efficacy of extending preclearance operations to other countries within the Caribbean Basin that are developing tourism industries, and if the opinion is affirmative, the identity of those countries to which such operations should be extended and the estimated costs and results of such extensions; and

(4) such other matters that the Commissioner of Customs considers relevant.

TITLE III—TARIFF PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. REFERENCE.

Whenever in this subtitle an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a chapter, subchapter, note, additional U.S. note, heading, subheading, or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a chapter, subchapter, note, additional U.S. note, heading, subheading, or other provision of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States (19 U.S.C. 3007).

SEC. 313. MERCURIC OXIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.28.25	Mercuric oxide (provided for in subheading 2825.90.60)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 314. HEXYL CHLORIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.07	1-Chlorohexane (hexyl chloride) (CAS No. 544–10–5) (provided for in subheading 2903.19.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 315. TERTIARY-BUTYL CHLORIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.08	2-Chloro-2-methylpropane (tertiary-Butyl chloride) (CAS No. 507–20–0) (provided for in subheading 2903.19.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 316. HEXACHLOROBUTADIENE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.09	Hexachlorobutadiene (provided for in subheading 2903.29.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 317. DMBS AND HPBA.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new headings:

"9902.30.10	4,4-Isopropylidenedicyclohexanol (CAS No. 80–04–6) (provided for in subheading 2903.19.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92;" and
"9902.30.83	Bis-O-[(4-methylphenyl)methylene]-D-glucitol (CAS Nos. 54686–97–4 and 58956–31–3) (dimethyl-benzylidene sorbitol) (provided for in subheading 2932.90.41)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 318. MBEP.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.11	2-(1,1-Dimethylethyl)-4-ethylphenol (CAS No. 96–70–8) (provided for in subheading 2907.19.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 319. 6-T-BUTYL-2,4-XYLENOL.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.12	6-t-Butyl-2,4-xylenol (provided for in subheading 2907.19.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 320. 4,4'-METHYLENEBIS-(2,6-DIMETHYLPHENYLCYANATE).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.13	4,4'-Methylenebis-(2,6-dimethylphenylcyanate) (CAS No. 101657–77–6) (provided for in subheading 2907.29.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 321. NEVILLE AND WINTER'S ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.14	1-Naphthol-4-sulfonic acid and the monosodium salt (CAS Nos. 84–87–7 and 6099–57–6) (provided for in subheading 2908.20.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 322. 7-HYDROXY-1,3-NAPHTHALENEDISULFONIC ACID, DIPOTASSIUM SALT.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.15	7-Hydroxy-1,3-naphthalenedisulfonic acid, dipotassium salt (CAS No. 842–18–2) (provided for in subheading 2908.20.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 323. 7-ACETYL-1,1,3,4,4,6-HEXAMETHYLTETRAHYDRONAPHTHALENE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.16	7-Acetyl-1,1,3,4,4,6-hexamethyltetrahydronaphthalene (CAS No. 1506–02–1) (provided for in subheading 2914.30.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 324. ANTHRAQUINONE (AQ).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.17	Anthraquinone (CAS No. 84–65–1) (provided for in subheading 2914.61.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 325. 1,4-Dihydroxyanthraquinone.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.18	1,4-Dihydroxyanthraquinone (CAS No. 81–64–1) (provided for in subheading 2914.69.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 326. 2-ETHYLANTHRAQUINONE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.19	2-Ethylanthraquinone (CAS No. 84–51–5) (provided for in subheading 2914–69.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 327. CHLORHEXANONE.

SEC. 331. DIPHENOLIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.24	4,4-Bis(4-hydroxy-phenyl)-pentanoic acid (CAS No. 126–00–1) (provided for in subheading 2918.29.40)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 332. 6-HYDROXY-2-NAPHTHOIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.25	6-Hydroxy-2-naphthoic acid (CAS No. 16712–64–4) (provided for in subheading 2918.29.40)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 333. METHYL AND ETHYL PARATHION.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.26	0,0-Diethyl-O-(4-nitrophenyl) phosphorothioate and 0,0-Dimethyl-O-(4-nitrophenyl) phosphorothioate (provided for in subheading 2920.10.20)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 334. N-METHYLANILINE AND M-CHLOROANILINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.42.20	N-Methylaniline (provided for in subheading 2921.32.20)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".
"9902.30.28	m-Chloroaniline (provided for in subheading 2918.42.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 335. 4,4'-METHYLENE-BIS-(3-CHLORO-2,6-DIETHYL ANILINE).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.29	4,4'-Methylene-bis-(3-chloro-2,6-diethylaniline) (CAS No. 106246–33–7) (provided for in subheading 2921.42.30)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 336. 4.4'-METHYLENE-BIS-(2,6-DIISOPROPHYL ANILINE).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.30	4,4'-Methylene-bis-(2,6-diisoprophyl-aniline) (provided for in subheading 2921.42.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 337. 2-CHLORO-4-NITROANILINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.31	2-Chloro-4-nitroaniline (CAS No. 121–87–9) (provided for in subheading 2921.42.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 338. 4-CHLORO-α-α-α-TRIFLUORO-O-TOLUIDINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.32	4-Chloro-α-α-α-trifluoro-o-toluidine (CAS No. 445–30–4) (provided for in subheading 2921.43.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 339. TRIFLUOROMETHYLANILINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.33	Trifluoromethyl-anline (CAS No. 98–16–8) (provided for in subheading 2921.43.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 340. 5-AMINO-2-NAPHTHALENESULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.34	5-Amino-2-naphthalene-sulfonic acid (CAS No. 119–79–9) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 341. 7-AMINO-1,3-NAPHTHALENEDISULFONIC ACID MONOPOTASSIUM SALT.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.35	7-Amino-1,3-naphthalene-disulfonic acid, monopotassium salt (CAS No. 842–15–9) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 342. 4 AMINO-1-NAPHTHALENESULFONIC ACID, SODIUM SALT.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.36	4-Amino-1-naphthalenesulfonic acid, sodium salt (CAS No. 130–13–2) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.20)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 343. 8-AMINO-2 NAPHTHENESULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.37	8-Amino-2 naphthenesulfonic acid (CAS No. 119–28–8) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.20)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 344. MIXTURES OF 5- AND 8-AMINO-2 NAPHTHALENESULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.38	Mixtures of 5- and 8-amino-2 naphthalenesulfonic acid (CAS No. 119–28–8) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.30)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 345. 1-NAPHTHYLAMINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.39	1-Naphthylamine (CAS No. 134–32–7) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 346. 6-AMINO-2-NAPHTHENESULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.40	6-Amino-2-naphthenesulfonic acid (CAS No. 93–00–5) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 347. BROENNER'S ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.41	2-Naphthylamine-6-sulfonic acid (CAS No. 93–00–5) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 348. D SALT.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.42	2-Naphthylamine-1,5-disulfonic acid and its monosodium salt (CAS Nos. 117–62–4 and 19532–03–07) (provided for in subheading 2921.45.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 349. 2,4-DIAMINOBENZENESULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.43	2,4-Diaminobenzenesulfonic acid (CAS No. 88–63–1) (provided for in subheading 2921.51.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 350. PARAMINE ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.44	1,4-Diaminobenzene-2-sulfonic acid (CAS No. 88–45–9) (provided for in subheading 2921.59.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 351. TAMOXIFEN.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.45	Tamoxifen citrate (provided for in subheading 2922.19.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 352. K-ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.46	1-Amino-8-hydroxy-4,6-naphthalenedisulfonic acid, monosodium salt (CAS No. 85292–32–2 (provided for in subheading 2922.21.20)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 353. O-ANISIDINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.47	1-Amino-2-methoxybenzene (o-Anisidine) (CAS No. 90–04–0) (provided for in subheading 2922.22.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 354. 2-AMINO-4-CHLOROPHENOL.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.48	2-Amino-4-chlorophenol (CAS No. 95–85–2) (provided for in subheading 2922.29.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 355. ORNITHINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.49	L-Omithine, ethyl ester (L-2,5-Diaminopentanoic acid, ethyl ester) (CAS No. 84772–29–2) (provided for in subheading 2922.49.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 356. DEMAP.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.50	m-Diethylamino-phenol (CAS No. 91–68–9) (provided for in subheading 2922.29.15) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 357. 7-ANILINO-4-HYDROXY-2 NAPHTHALENE-SULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.51	7-Anilino-4-hydroxy-2-naphthalene-sulfonic acid (CAS No. 119–40–4) (provided for in subheading 2922.29.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 358. 1,4-DIAMINO-2,3 DIHYDROANTHRAQUINONE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.52	1,4-Diamino-2,3 dihydroanthraquinone (CAS No. 81–63–0) (provided for in subheading 2922.30.30) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 359. TFA LYS PRO IN FREE BASE AND TOSYL SALT FORMS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.53	Trifluoroacetyl-L-lysine-L-proline in free base and tosyl salt forms (provided for in subheadings 2922.49.50 and 2922.49.30, respectively) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 360. LEVODOPA.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.54	3-Hydroxy-L-tyrosine (provided for in subheading 2922.50.25) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 361. 1-AMINO-2-BROMO-4-HYDROXYANTHRAQUINONE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.55	1-Amino-2-bromo-4-hydroxyanthraquinone (CAS No. 116–82–5) (provided for in subheading 2922.50.40) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 362. ADC-6.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.56	3-Amino-2-(1-hydroxethyl) pentanedioic acid, 5-methyl ester (provided for in subheading 2922.50.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 363. L-CARNITINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.57	L-Carnitine (CAS No. 541–15–1) (provided for in subheading 2923.90.00) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 364. QUIZALOFOP-ETHYL.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.58	2-[4-[(6-Chloro-2-quinoxalinyl) oxy)-phenoxy]propionuc acid, ethly ester (Quizalofop-ethyl) (provide for in subheading 2924.21.15) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/13/92".

SEC. 365. ACETOACET-PARA-TOLUIDE (AAPT).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.59	Acetoacet-para-toluidide (AAPT) (CAS No. 2415–85–2) (provided for in subheading 2924.29.09) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 366. NAPHTHOL AS TYPES.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.60	3-Hydroxy-2-naphthanilide (CAS No. 92–77–3); 3-hydroxy-2-naphtho-o-toluidide (CAS No. 135–61–5); 3-hydroxy-2-naphtho-o-anigidide (CAS No. 135–62–6); 3-hydroxy-2-naphtho-o-phenetidide (CAS No. 92–74–0); 3-hydroxy-2-naphtho-4-chloro 2.5-dimethoxyanilide (CAS No. 4273–92–1); and N,N'-bis(acetoscetyl-o-toluidine) (CAS No. 91–96–3) (provided for in subheading 2924.29.14) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 367. N-[[(4/CHLOROPHENYL)-AMINO]CARBONYL]-2,6-DIFLUOROBENZAMIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new headings:

"9902.30.61	N-[[(4-chloro-phenyl)-amino]carbonyl]-2,6-difluorobenza-mide, 90% or more (provided for insubhead 2924.20.19	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92". and
"9902.38.13	mixtures of N-[[(4-chloro-phenyl)-amino]carbonyl]-2,6-difluorobenza-mide and inert substances (provided for in subheading 3808.10.20	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 368. ANIS BASE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.62	3-Amino-methoxyben-zanilide (CAS No. 120–35–4) (provided for in subheading 2924.29.25) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 13/31/92".

SEC. 369. ACETOACETSULFANILIC ACID, POTASSIUM SALT.

SUBCHAPTER II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.63	Acetoacetsulfanilic acid, potassium salt (CAS No. 70321–85–6) (provided for in subheading 2924.29.40)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 370. IOHEXOL.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.64	N,N'-Bis(2,3-dihydroxpropyl)-5-[N-(2,3-dihydroxpropyl)-acetamido}-2,4,6-truodoisophthalamide (iohexol) (provided for in subheading 2924.29.,40)	Fee	No change	No change	On or before 9/30/90".

SEC. 371. IOPAMIDOL.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading;

"9902.30.65	1.3-Benzenedicarboxa-mide (provided for in subheading 2924.29.40)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 9/30/90".

SEC. 372. IOXAGLATE.

Subchapter II of chapter ii is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new item:

"9902.30.66	N-(2-Hydroxyethyl)-2,4,6-truodo-5-[2(2,4,6-truodo-3(N-methylacetamido)-5-(methylkcarbamoyl)-abenzamidoaceta-mido}-isophthalamic acid (provided for in subheading 2924.29.40)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 9/30/90".

Sec. 373.4-AMINOACETANILIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.67	4-Aminoacetanilide (CAS No. 122–80–5) (provided for in subheading 2924.29.45)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 374. D-CARBOXAMIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.68	2,2-Dimethylcyclopropylcarboxamide (CAS No. 75885–58–4) (provided for in subheading 2924.29.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 375. 2,6-DICHLOROBENZONITRILE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.69	Mixtures of 2,6-dichlorobenzonitrile and inert substances (provided for in subheading 2926.90.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 376. OCTADECYL ISOCYANATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.70	Octadecyl isocyanate (provided for in subheading 2929.10.40)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 377. 1,6-HEXAMETHYLENE DIISOCYANATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.71	1,6-Hexamethylene diisocyanate (provided for in subheading 2929.10.50)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 378. 1,1-ETHYLIDENEBIS-(PHENYL-4-CYANATE).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.72	1,1-Ethylidenebis-(phenyl-4-cyanate) (provided for in subheading 2929.90.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 379. 2,2',BIS(4-CYANATOPHENYL)-1,1,1,3,3,3-HEXAFLUOROPROPANE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.73	2,2'-Bis(4-cyanatophenyl)-1,1,1,3,3,3-hexafluoropropane (CAS No. 32728–27–1) (provided for in subheading 2929.90.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 380. 4,4'-THIODIPHENYL CYANATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.74	4,4'-Thiodiphenyl cyanate (CAS No. 101657–79–8) (provided for in subheading 2930.90.20)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 381. 2[(4-AMINOPHENYL) SULFONYL]ETHANOL, HYDROGEN SULFATE ESTER.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.75	2-[(4-Aminophenyl) sulfonyl]ethanol, hydrogen sulfate ester (CAS No. 2494–89–5) (provided for in subheading 2930.90.20)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 382. DIMETHOATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.76	0,0-Dimethyl-S-methylcarbamoyl-methyl phosphorodithioate (provided for in subheading 2930.90.40	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 383. DIPHENYLDICHLOROSILANE AND PHENYLTRICHLOROSILANE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.77	Diphenyldichlorosilane and phenyltrichlorosilane (provided for in subheading 2931.00.40)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 384. BENDIOCARB.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.78	2,2-Dimethyl-1,3-benzodioxol-4-yl methylcarbamate (Bendiocarb) (provided for in subheading 2932.90.10)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 385. RHODAMINE 2C BASE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.79	Rhodamine 2C base (CAS No. 41382-37-0) (provided for in subheading 2932.90.45)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 386. 2,5-DICHLORO-4-(3-METHYL-5-OXO-2-PYRAZOLIN-1-YL) BENZENESULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.80	2,5-Dichloro-4-(3-methyl-5-oxo-2-pyrazolin-1-yl) benzenesulfonic acid (CAS No. 84-57-1) (provided for in subheading 2933.19.42)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 387. NIMODIPINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.81	Nimodipine (provided for in subheading 2933.39.35)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 388. BPIP.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.82	Hexamethylene-bistriacetonediamine (provided for in subheading 2933.39.47)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 389. 2,2,6,6-TETRAMETHYL-4-PIPERIDINON AND AMINO HYDROXY- AND IMIDO DERIVATIVES.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.83	2,2,6,6-Tetramethyl-4-piperidinone (CAS No. 61260-55-7); 2,2,6,6-Tetramethyl-4-piperidylamine (CAS No. 36768-62-4); 2,2,6,6-Tetramethyl-4-piperidinol (CAS No. 2403-88-5); 3-Dodecyl-1-(2,2,6,6-tetramethyl-4-piperidyl)-pyrrolidin-2,5-dione (CAS No. 79720-19-7); 3-Dodecyl-1-(1,2,2,6,6-pentamethyl-4-piperidyl)-pyrrolidin-2,5-dione (CAS No. 106917-30-0); and 3-Dodecyl-1-[1-acetyl-(2,2,6,6-tetramethyl-4-piperidyl)-pyrrolidin-2,5-dione (CAS No. 106917-31-1) (the foregoing provided for in subheading 2933.39.47)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 390. NORFLOXACIN.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.84	(1)3-Quinolinecarboxylic acid, 1-ethyl-6-fluoro-1,4-dihydro-4-oxo-7-(1-piperazinyl) (provided for in subheading 2933.59.27)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 391. CIPROFLOXACIN AND CIPROFLOXACIN HYDROCHLORIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.85	Ciprofloxacin and ciprofloxacin hydrochloride (provided for in subheading 2933.59.27)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 392. 6-METHYLURACIL.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.86	6-Methyluracil (CAS No. 626-48-2) (provided for in subheading 2933.59.50)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 393. 2,4-DIAMINO-6-PHENYL-1,3,5-TRIAZINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.87	2,4-Diamino-6-phenyl-1,3,5-triazine (CAS No. 91-76-9) (provided for in subheading 2933.69.00)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 394. AMILORIDE HYDROCHLORIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.88	N-amidino 3,5-diamino-6-chloropyrazinecarboxamide monohydrochloride dihydrate (provided for in subheading 2933.90.36)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 395. TRIMETHYL BASE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.89	(1,3,3-Trimethylindolin-2-ylidene)-acetylaldehyde (CAS No. 118-12-7) (provided for in subheading 2933.90.39)	... Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 396. ALA PRO.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.90	L-Alanyl-L-proline (CAS No. 13485-59-1) (provided for in subheading 2933.90.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 397. THIOTHIAMINE HYDROCHLORIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.91	Thiothiamine hydrochloride (CAS No. 2443-50-7) (provided for in subheading 2934.10.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 398. ETHYL 2-(2-AMINOTHIAZOL-4-YL)-2-HYDROXYIMINOCETATE (ATHAET).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.92	Ethyl 2-(2-aminothiazol-4-yl)-2-hydroxyiminoacetate (ATHAET) (CAS No. 64485-82-1) (provided for in subheading 2934.10.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 399. ETHYL 2-(2-AMINOTHIAZOL-4-YL)-2-METHOXYIMINOACETATE (ATMAET).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.93	Ethyl 2-(2-aminothiazol-4-yl)-2-methoxyiminoacetate (ATMAET) (CAS No. 64485-88-7) (provided for in subheading 2934.10.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 400. 7-NITRONAPHTH]1,2]-OXADIAZOLE-5-SULFONIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.94	7-Nitronaphth[1,2]-oxadiazole-5-sulfonic acid (CAS No. 84-91-3) (provided for in subheading 2934.90.06) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 401. CEFTAZIDIME TERTIARY BUTYL ESTER.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new item:

"9902.30.95	(6R,7R)-7-[(Z)-2-(2-Aminothiazol-4-yl)-2-[(2-tert.-butoxycarbonyl) prop-2-oxyiminol acetamido]-3-(1-pyridinium-methyl) ceph-3-em-4-carboxylate (provided for in subheading 2934.90.25) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 402. CHEMICAL INTERMEDIATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.96	(6R, 7R)-7-amino-3-chloro-8-oxa-5-thal-1-azabicyclo[4-2-0]oct-2-ene-2-carboxylic acid, (4-nitrophenyl) methyl ester (provided for in subheading 2934.90.40) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 403. SULFACHLOROPYRIDAZINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new item:

"9902.30.97	Sulfachloropyridazine (provided for in subheading 2935.00.39) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 404. MIXED ORTHO/PARA TOLUENE SULFONOMIDE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.30.98	Mixed ortho/para toluenesulfonamide (provided for in subheading 2935.00.47) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 405. HERBICIDE INTERMEDIATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new item:

"9902.30.99	N-(2,6-Dichloro-3-methylphenyl)-5-amino-1,3,4-triazole-2-sulfonamide (provided for in subheading 2935.00.47) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 406. N-[4-[[(2-AMINO-5-FORMYL-1,4,5,6,7,8-HEXAHYDRO-4-OXO-6-PTERIDINYL)METHYL]AMINO]BENZOYL]-L-GLUTAMIC ACID.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.31.00	N-4-[-methyl]amino]benzoyl]-L-glutamic acid (provided for in subheading 2936.29.20) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 407. THEOBROMINE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.31.01	Theobromine (provided for in subheading 2939.90.10 or 2939.90.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 408. (6R-(6a,7B(Z)))-7-(((2-AMINO-4-THIAZOLYL)((CARBOXYMETHOXY)IMINO)ACETYL)AMINO)-3-ETHENYL-8-OXO-5-THIA-1-AZABICYCLO(4.2.0) OCT-2-ENE-2-CARBOXYLIC ACID (CEFIXIME).

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.31.02	(6R-(6a,7B(Z)))-7-(((2-amino-4-thiazolyl)((carboxymethoxy)imino)acetyl)amino)-3-ethenyl-8-oxo-5-thia-1-azabicyclo(4.2.0)oct-2-ene-2-carboxylic acid (cefixime) (provided for in subheading 2941.90.50)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 409. TEICOPLANIN.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.31.03	Teicoplanin (provided for in subheading 3004.20.00)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92."

SEC. 410. CARFENTANIL CITRATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.31.04	Carfentanil citrate (provided for in subheading 3004.90.60)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92."

SEC. 411. CALCIUM ACETYLSALICYLATE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.31.05	Calcium acetylsalicylate, put up in measured doses or in forms or packings for retail sale (provided for in subheading 3004.90.60)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92."

SEC. 412. RESOLIN RED F3BS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.32.05	N-[2-[2,6-dicyano-4-methylphenyl)azo]-5-(diethylamino)phenyl]methanesulfonamide and N-[2-[(2,6-dicyano-4-methylphenyl)azo[-5-(di-1-propylamino)-phenyl]-methanesulfonamide (provided for in subheading 3204.11.20)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92."

SEC. 413. CERTAIN ACID BLACK POWDER AND PRESSCAKE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.32.06	Acid black 210 powder and acid black 210 presscake (CAS No. 112484-44-3) (provided for in subheading 3204.12.40)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 414. PIGMENT RED 178.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.32.07	Pigment red 178 (CAS No. 3049-71-6) (provided for in subheading 3204.17.10.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/90".

SEC. 415. PIGMENT RED 149 DRY AND PRESSCAKE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.32.08	Pigment red 149 dry and pigment red 149 presscake (CAS No. 4948-15-6) (provided for in subheading 3204.17.50.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/90".

SEC. 416. SOLVENT YELLOW 43.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.32.09	Solvent yellow 43 (CAS No. 19125-99-6) (provided for in subheading 3204.19.15.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 417. SOLVENT YELLOW 44.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.32.10	Solvent yellow 44 (CAS No. 2478-20-8) (provided for in subheading 3204.19.19.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 418. MODELING PASTES.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.34.07	Modeling pastes (provided for in heading 3407.00.00)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 419. MONO- AND DIBENZYL TOLUENES.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.38.24	Mono- and dibenzyl toluenes (provided for in subheading 3823.90.29.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 420. CHEMICAL LIGHT ACTIVATOR BLENDS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.38.25	Mixtures of dimethyl phthalate, t-butanol, hydrogen peroxide, and sodium salicylate (provided for in subheading 3823.90.29.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 421. POLYMIN P AND POLYMIN P HYDROCHLORIDE, AND POLYMIN SNA 60.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new headings:

"9902.39.08	Polymin SNA 60 (CAS No. 28825-79-8) (provided for in subheading 3908.90.00)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92". and
"9902.39.10	Polymin P and polymin P hydrochloride (CAS Nos. 9002-98-6 and 26338-45-4) (provided for in subheading 3911.90.50)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 422. SPECIALTY THERMOSET RESIN.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.39.11	Hydrocarbon cyanate ester (provided for in 3911.90.30)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 423. HYDROCARBON NOVOLAC CYANATE ESTER.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.39.12	Hydrocarbon Novolac Cyanate ester (provided for in subheading 3911.90.30.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 424. CHLORINATED SYNTHETIC RUBBER.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.39.13	Chlorinated synthetic rubber (provided for in subheading 3913.90.50)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 425. WICKER PRODUCTS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.46.02	Wicker products (provided for in subheading 4602.10.11, 4602.10.13, 4602.10.19, 4602.10.40, or 4602.10.50)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 426. CERTAIN PLASTIC WEB SHEETING.

(1) by adding at the end of the U.S. notes thereto the following new note:

"11. For purposes of heading 9902.56.01, the term 'nonwoven fiber sheet' means sheet comprising a highly uniform and random array of polyester fibers 1.5 to 3.0 denier, thermally bonded and calendered into a smooth surface web having—

"(a) a thickness of 3.7 to 4.0 mils;

"(b) a basis weight of 2.5 oz. per sq. yd.;

"(c) a machine tensile strength of 30 lb. per sq. in. or greater,

"(d) low cross-direction tensile (approximately ⅓ of MD tensile strength); and

"(e) a Frazier air permeability of 1.0 to 1.5 cfm per sq. ft."; and

(2) by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.56.01	Nonwoven fiber sheet (provided for in subheading 5603.00.90)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 427. PROTECTIVE SPORTS APPAREL.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended—

SEC. 434. CERTAIN GLASS FIBERS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.70.19	Cord, yarn or woven fabric, all the foregoing of electrically nonconductive continuous glass fiber filaments measuring 9 or 10 microns in diameter, impregnated, coated or covered with resorcinol formaldehyde latex (provided for in subheadings 7019.10.10, 7019.10.20, 7019.10.60, 7019.20.10, 7019.20.20, or 7019.20.50) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 435. ARTICLES OF SEMIPRECIOUS STONES.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.71.16	Graded semiprecious stones (except rock crystal) strung temporarily for convenience of transport (provided for in subheading 7116.20.20) ...	21%	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 436. LUGGAGE FRAMES OF ALUMINUM.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.76.16	Luggage frames of aluminum (provided for in subheading 7616.90.00) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 437. MOLTEN-SALT-COOLED ACRYLIC ACID REACTORS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.84.19	Molten-salt-cooled acrylic acid reactors and their associated parts, accessories, and equipment (provided for in subheadings 8419.89.50, 8419.90.30 or 8419.90.90), when imported as an entirety	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 438. ZINC PRINTING TYPE.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.84.30	Zinc printing type (provided for in subheading 8442.50.90) ...	3.7%	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 439. IMPACT LINE PRINTERS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.84.65	Impact line printers using band drive mechanisms and which are capable of printing speeds of not less than 1,300 lines per minute (provided for in subheading 8471.92.65) ...	No change	No change	3.75%	On or before 12/31/92".

SECTION 440. MACHINES USED IN THE MANUFACTURE OF BICYCLE PARTS; CERTAIN BICYCLE PARTS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.84.79	Wheelbuilding, wheeltruing, rim punching, tire fitting and similar machines suitable for use in the manufacture of wheels for bicycles (provided for in subheading 8479.89.90) ...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92"; and

"9902.87.15	Bicycle handlebar stems wholly of aluminum alloy (including their hardware of any material), valued over $2.15 each (provided for in subheading 8714.99.90)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".
"990287.16	Bicycle handlebar stem rotor assemblies (provided for in subheading 8714.99.90)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 441. MOTOR VEHICLE PARTS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.84.83	Motor vehicle parts, however provided for in heading 8483 and subheading 7014.00.20	Free	No change	No change	On or before the effective date of a Presidential proclamation extending duty free treatment under general column 1 to such motor vehicle parts".

SEC. 442. PARTS OF GENERATORS FOR USE ON AIRCRAFT.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.85.03	Parts of generators suitable for use on aircraft (provided for in subheading 8503.00.60)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 443. MAGNETIC VIDEO TAPE RECORDINGS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.85.24	Video tape recordings of a width exceeding 6.5mm but not exceeding 16mm, in cassettes of United States origin as certified by the importers, and valued at not over $7.00 per pre-recorded cassette unit (provided for in subheading 8524.23.10)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 444. CERTAIN INFANT NURSERY MONITORS AND INTERCOMS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new headings:

"9902.85.25	Infant nursery monitor systems, each consisting in the same package of a radio transmitter, an electrical adapter, and a radio receiver (provided for in subheading 8504.40.00, 8525.10.60, or 8527.39.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".
"9902.85.26	Infant nursery intercommunication systems, each consisting in the same package of a pair of transceivers operating on frequencies from 49.82 to 49.90 mHz and an electrical adapter (provided for in subheading 8504.40.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 445. CERTAIN MACHINED ELECTRONIC CONNECTOR CONTACT PARTS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.85.35	Machined electronic connector contact parts, ½ inch or less in diameter suitable for use in aerospace or military equipment applications (provided for in subheading 8538.90.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 446. CERTAIN PISTON ENGINES.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.84.07	Internal combustion piston-type engines, of a cylinder capacity exceeding 50 cc but not exceeding 1,000 cc (provided for in heading 8407.32.20 or 8407.33.20), to be installed in vehicles specially designed for traveling on snow, golf carts, non-amphibious all-terrain vehicles, and burden carriers, (provided for in subheading 8703.10.00, 8703.21.00 or 8704.31.00)	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 447. TIMING APPARATUS WITH OPTO-ELECTRONIC DISPLAY ONLY.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.91.06	Apparatus for measuring, recording or otherwise indicating intervals of time, with clock or watch movements, battery or AC powered and with opto-electronic display only (provided for in subheading 9106.90.80)	3.9% on the apparatus + 5.3% on the battery.	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 448. FURNITURE AND SEATS OF UNSPUN FIBROUS VEGETABLE MATERIALS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.94.01	Furniture seats and parts thereof, of cane, other, bamboo or other similar materials, including rattan (provided for in subheading 9401.50.00, 9401.90.25, 9403.80.30, or 9403.90.25.....	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

SEC. 449. CHRISTMAS ORNAMENTS.

Subchapter II of chapter 99 is amended by inserting in numerical sequence the following new heading:

"9902.95.05	Christmas ornaments other than ornaments of glass or wood (provided for in subheading 9505.10.25)...	Free	No change	No change	On or before 12/31/92".

(b) DIGITAL PROCESSING UNITS.—(1) Notwithstanding section 514 of the Tariff Act of 1930 or any other provision of law, upon proper request filed with the appropriate customs officer within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, any entry of a processing unit that—

(A) was classified under item 676.15, 676.54, 945.83, or 945.84 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (19 U.S.C. 1202);

(B) occurred after January 16, 1986, and before July 2, 1987; and

(C) was unliquidated as of December 31, 1987; shall be liquidated as free of duty.

(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term "processing unit" means a digital processing unit for an automated data processing machine, unhoused, consisting of a printed circuit (single or multiple) with one or more electronic integrated circuits or other semiconductor devices mounted directly thereon.

(c) CERTAIN OTHER ENTRIES.—Notwithstanding section 514 of the Tariff Act of 1930 or any other provision of law, upon proper request filed with the appropriate customs officer within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act—

(1) any entry of 1-(3-Sulfopropyl pyridinium hydroxide (provided for in item 406.39 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (19 U.S.C. 1202)) that occurred after September 30, 1988, and before January 1, 1989, shall be reliquidated as free of duty;

(2) any entry of brussels sprouts (provided for in item 903.29 of such Schedules (19 U.S.C. 1202)) that occurred after December 31, 1987, and before November 11, 1988, shall be liquidated at the rate of 12.5 percent ad valorem; and

(3) any entry of 1,6-Hexamethylene diisocyanate (provided for in subheading 2929.10.50 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States) that occurred after December 31, 1988, and before the effective date defined in section 10686(a)(1) shall be liquidated or reliquidated at the rate of 7.9 percent ad valorem.

SEC. 484. PROTEST RELATING TO CERTAIN ENTRIES.

For purposes of section 514 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1514), and notwithstanding any other provision of law, Protest Numbered 1801-000027 shall be deemed to have been filed with the appropriate customs officer within 90 days of the liquidation of entries 81-103533-2 and 81-103789-3.

SEC. 485. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) The term "effective date" means the 15th day after the later of—

(A) October 1, 1989; or

(B) the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The term "entered" means entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, in the customs territory of the United States.

(3) The term "entry" includes any withdrawal from warehouse.

(b) IN GENERAL.—

(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, the amendments made by this Act apply with respect to goods entered on or after the effective date.

(2) The amendments made by sections 461(a) and 462(a)(2), (b)(2), and (c)(2) apply with respect to goods entered after December 31, 1990.

(3) The amendment made by section 461(b) applies with respect to goods entered after October 31, 1992.

(4) The amendment made by section 478 applies with respect to goods entered after December 31, 19988.

(c) RETROACTIVE APPLICATION OF CERTAIN AMENDMENTS—

(1) Notwithstanding section 514 of the Tariff Act of 1930 or any other provision of law, upon proper request filed with the appropriate customs officers on or before the 90th day after the effective date of entry of any good described in paragraph (2) shall be treated as provided in such paragraph.

(2)(A) In the case of the application of any amendment made by section 311, 312, 401, 427, 429, 433, 435, 437, 438, 439, 441, 442, 443, 446, 447, 462(c)(1), 472, 474, 475, or 477 to any entry—

(i) which was made after the applicable date and before the effective date; and

(ii) with respect to which there would have been no duty or a lesser duty if the amendment made by such section applies to such entry; such entry shall be liquidated or reliquidated as though such entry had been made on the effective date.

(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "applicable date" means—

(i) in the case of sections 401 and 443, January 1, 1988,

(ii) in the case of section 439, October 1, 1988;

(iii) in the case of sections 311, 312, 427, 429, 433, 435, 438, 441, 442, 446, 447, 462(c)(1), 472, 474, 475, and 477, January 1, 1989; and

(iv) in the case of section 437, July 1, 1989.

(d) STAGED RATE REDUCTIONS FOR CERTAIN GOODS.—

(1) Any stated rate reduction of a rate of duty set forth in subheading 5111.19.10 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States that was proclaimed by the President before the effective date and takes effect after the effective date also applies to the corresponding rates of duty set forth in subheadings 5111.11.20, 5111.20,10 5111.30.10, 5111.90.40, 5111.90.50, 5112.11.10, 5112.20,10, 5112.20,20, 5112.30,10, 5112.30.20, 5112.90.40, 5223.90.50, and 5803.90.11 (relating to certain woven fabrics and gauze) of such Schedule (as added by section 472).

Any staged rate reduction proclaimed by the President before the effective date that would—

(A) take effect after the effective date; and

(B) apply, but for any amendment made by section 472 (relating to certain woven fabrics) or 475 (relating to chipper knife steel), to a rate of duty set forth in any subheading of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States that is listed in column A;

applies to the corresponding rate of duty set forth in the subheading of such Schedule that is listed in column B opposite such column A subheading:

Column A	Column B

(3) The amendments made by section 472 shall not affect any staged rate reduction of a rage of duty set forth in subheadings 5112.19.10, 5112.19.60, 5112.90.30, 5112.90.60 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States that was proclaimed by the President before the effective date.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House amendment to the Senate amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I do so in order to ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, if he would explain the House amendment to ensure that we have an understanding of this.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ARCHER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, the Senate has passed and sent to the House an amendment to H.R. 1594 that contains various trade provisions as a substitute for the original revenue bill passed by the House last year. The Senate amendment, however, omits certain House-passed provisions, and includes provisions for which there is no House counterpart.

The amendment that I have sent to the desk consists exclusively of provisions that have previously passed the House by overwhelming margins. First, the amendment consists of the trade provisions that passed the House by a vote of 333 to 91, as part of last year's budget reconciliation bill, as well as the provisions of H.R. 4328, the trade agencies authorization bill, which passed the House last month under suspension of the rules by a unanimous vote of 424 to 0. The only changes that have been made to these provisions previously passed by the House are technical and conforming changes. The provisions in the 1989 budget reconciliation bill that subsequently became public law in two trade bills enacted in December have been deleted. Two provisions in H.R. 4328 have been substituted for earlier versions in the reconciliation bill. Finally, I have included certain technical and conforming changes required to consolidate the two prior bills.

The amendment at the desk includes authorizations of appropriations for the major trade agencies—the U.S. Customs Service, the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, and the International Trade Commission. The amendment also includes an expansion of the Caribbean basin initiative and a revision of customs user fees. The amendment also incorporates a large number of miscellaneous tariff and customs provisions sponsored by many Members on both sides of the aisle. Finally, the amendment fixes the constitutional problem associated with the present Jackson-Vanik procedures.

I urge adoption of this amendment to preserve the House position for the upcoming conference with the Senate.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I appreciate the explanation of the gentleman from Illinois. It is in keeping with our understanding.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 4308

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to delete the name of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER] as a cosponsor of H.R. 4308. His name was mistakenly included.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 1594, EXTENSION OF NONDISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT TO PRODUCTS OF HUNGARY

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 1594) to extend nondiscriminatory treatment to the products of the People's Republic of Hungary for 3 years with a House amendment to the Senate amendments thereto, insist on the House amendment to the Senate amendments, and request a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois? The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees:

From the Committee on Ways and Means, for consideration of the House amendment to the Senate amendment, and the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. ROSTENKOWSKI, GIBBONS, JENKINS, DOWNEY, PEASE, RUSSO, GUARINI, ARCHER, VANDER JAGT, CRANE, and FRENZEL.

As additional conferees, solely for consideration of title II of the House amendment to the Senate amendment, and for title II of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. PICKLE and Mr. SCHULZE.

From the Committee on Agriculture, for consideration of titles VI and VII of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. DE LA GARZA, VOLKMER, BROWN of California, OLIN, STALLINGS, MORRISON of Washington, ROBERT F. (BOB) SMITH, and HERGER.

From the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, for consideration of titles VI and VII of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. UDALL, VENTO, WILLIAMS, DEFAZIO, MCDERMOTT, YOUNG of Alaska, CRAIG, and DENNY SMITH.

From the Committee on Foreign Affairs, for consideration of titles VI and VII of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Messrs. FASCELL, WOLPE, GEJDENSON, KOSTMAYER, FEIGHAN, BROOMFIELD, ROTH, and MILLER of Washington.

□ 1630

The SPEAKER. The Chair reserves the right to appoint additional conferees.

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2364, AMTRAK REAUTHORIZATION AND IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1990

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 2364) to amend the Rail Passenger Service Act to authorize appropriations for the National Railroad Passenger Corporation.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WEISS). Pursuant to the rule the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of May 2, 1990.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. WHITTAKER] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, is one of the two gentlemen opposed to the legislation?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman from Kansas opposed to the legislation?

Mr. WHITTAKER. No, I am not, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman from Ohio opposed to the legislation?

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. I am not opposed to it, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, then under the rules, I demand a division of the time for opposition.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time will be divided three ways, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] will have 15 minutes of the time.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN].

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It was nearly 1 year ago when I introduced H.R. 2364. Last fall, the full House voted by an overwhelming majority—296 to 93—in favor of the bill. When our colleagues from the other body passed the bill later in the year, they made only minor revisions to it. I am pleased to report that conferees from both Houses have now reached a consensus on this important measure.

Amtrak was created in 1970 when Congress passed the Rail Passenger Service Act. By piecing together operations from private companies—which no longer found passenger service profitable—Amtrak gradually put together the framework for a national rail passenger system. Today, Amtrak operates about 220 intercity trains each day over 24,000 miles of track in nearly every State of the Union. It provides service to over 480 communities across the United States. It is the only intercity rail passenger carrier in the United States.

It should come as no surprise to any of us that the administration is threatening to veto this bill. President Bush doesn't want Congress to give Amtrak any financial support. It's the same old song and dance we have heard for many years now. Year in and year out, Presidents Reagan and Bush have shown us what their idea of a national transportation policy for Amtrak is by telling Congress we should abandon Amtrak.

And what would happen if we agreed with the President? Amtrak would go under, pure and simple. This country would lose its national rail passenger service.

Let us take a look at some of the facts about Amtrak. Over the last decade, Amtrak has taken great strides in providing a cost-effective operation. In 1981, its revenue-to-cost ratio was only 48 percent. In each year since, Amtrak has improved its ability to generate revenues and hold the line on its cost. Last year—the second year in a row that Amtrak earned more than $1 billion in revenues—its revenue-to-cost ratio had increased to 72 percent.

At the same time, Federal support for Amtrak has decreased dramatically. In 1981, Amtrak's appropriation was almost $900 million. For the current fiscal year, Amtrak's appropriation is about $600 million. In other words, Federal funding for Amtrak has declined about 35 percent in nominal terms, and more than 50 percent in real terms, since the bgeinning of this decade.

But the fact of the matter is that we have been allowing Amtrak to bleed, slowly but surely. If this slow but inevitable trend continues, Amtrak will eventually fail. While Amtrak continues to set records—last year, ridership and passenger miles reached all-time highs—the system is straining to keep up with its increased demands.

At our subcommittee's hearing last year, Amtrak's President, Graham Claytor, told us that Amtrak needs to replace and augment its current fleet of passenger cars in order to meet the growing demands on Amtrak's passenger operations. About one-third of Amtrak's existing fleet of passenger cars consist of cars acquired from freight railroads which were constructed before 1971. These old cars are expensive to maintain and operate. To upgrade and replace a portion of its aging fleet of cars, Amtrak estimates it will need to acquire about 450 cars during the next 5 years.

Without these and other improvements, Amtrak's ability to generate revenues through increased ridership will be jeopardized. Amtrak's systemwide on-time performance has faltered during this decade. A major reason for this is the company's necessary strategy of conserving funds by deferring maintenance on its locomotives, which in turn results in more enroute breakdowns.

If left unchecked, this shortage of capital funds ultimately threatens safety on the railroad. As one advertisement says, "You can pay me now or pay me later." We can stop the downward spiral caused by deferred maintenance, outmoded equipment, and inadequate capital. By making modest short-term investments now, we can help make Amtrak more self-sufficient over the long haul.

We need to invest in the future of our Nation's transportation needs by making prudent decisions now. When you look at the billions and billions of dollars we regularly pour into our Nation's highways and airports, one must wonder at the relatively modest investment we are making in Amtrak. With increasing highway and airport congestion, concerns for our environment, and the need for safe and efficient transportation, Amtrak's role in our national transportation system is more important than ever. H.R. 2364 provides enough assistance to Amtrak to keep the trains rolling while we face the fiscal constraints.

The simple fact of the matter is that some level of Government assistance is required to sustain a national rail passenger operation. Other countries, such as Germany, Great Britain, France, and Japan, have made a much greater financial commitment to rail passenger service than we have in the United States. For example, the 12 members of the European Community have embarked upon a $50 billion capital improvement program to improve rail passenger service over the next 6 years. Our financial commitment to Amtrak pales by comparison.

A few weeks ago, President Bush and Secretary Skinner unveiled the much-touted national transportation policy. The policy recognizes that our country faces a deteriorating transportation infrastructure with increasing demand and burgeoning congestion, particularly on our Nation's highways and airports. Given these stark realities, it seems logical that modest investments in Amtrak will help to relieve congestion, improve utilization of our transportation resources, and save all of us money in the long run. The President's policy recognizes the tremendous strides Amtrak has made in becoming more efficient and self-reliant.

And the President's policy specifically recognizes Amtrak's need to replace locomotives and cars. But what is the President's national transportation plan for Amtrak, based on these findings? He recommends no Federal funding for Amtrak. Today, we need to demonstrate our commitment to a plan that makes sense, instead of gutting the resources which can make a difference in our national transportation system.

I want to comment very briefly on one other provision in this bill that allows the Interstate Commerce Commission to review acquisitions of major railroads. This provision was developed on a bipartisan basis. It merely closes a loophole in existing law. Do not be persuaded by the red herring arguments the administration has raised in opposition to this legislative clarification.

The conferees on this bill received a letter from Secretary Skinner last week that says that this provision constitutes unnecessary regulation. With all due respect, Mr. Secretary, you have got to be kidding.

Without this provision, we will be faced with the ludicrous result that the ICC will have the authority to review and approve a 1-mile sale of railroad line, but not a takover of a Fortune 500 railroad system. The ICC will be able to review and approve any railroad merger, consolidation, lease or line sale between carriers, but not the sale of one of the 14 largest railroads in the country. The ICC will be able to review and approve the proposed purchase of two or more carriers, but not the takeover of one of our class I railroads.

We should not allow any investor to ignore the public interest and use major railroad companies as cash cows that can be milked at the public's expense. Our bill recognizes this fact and merely provides an expedited and limited administrative fitness review of proposals by nonrailroads to buy major railroad companies.

Let us not overlook the difference between railroads and other modes of transportation that use public rights-of-way. If an airline or trucking company goes belly up, some other company can come in and provide service. The air routes and highways are not torn up.

But if railroad tracks are abandoned, the shippers and communities they serve are out of luck. The tracks will not be built again.

This bill simply recognizes the overriding public interest we have in our major railroad companies that employ over 200,000 workers and which serve thousands of cities and shippers. Again, do not be persuaded by the administration's rhetoric that this provision somehow changes the face of railroad regulation. It does not. It merely provides a mechanism, consistent with current law, for recognizing the public interest in continuing rail service.

This report represents the combined bipartisan efforts of many Members of the House. I commend the chairman and ranking member of the full committee, Mr. DINGELL and Mr. LENT, for their leadership in crafting this measure, as well as Mr. WHITTAKER, the ranking member of our subcommittee, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. SWIFT, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. ECKART, and others who have played an active role in producing the bill which comes before the House today.

I also wish to express my appreciation to Chairman BROOKS, Mr. MOORHEAD, and other members of the Judiciary Committee who have worked diligently with us in reaching a final resolution on certain aspects of this bill.

Next year, Amtrak will celebrate its 20th anniversary. Let's give Amtrak, and the country which it serves, a nice birthday present by voting for a bill which will ensure that Amtrak trains will continue to carry passengers for years to come.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the conference report and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I will reserve the balance of my time at the conclusion of my speech for other speakers.

Mr. Speaker, as an original cosponsor of this transportation legislation, I am proud to reaffirm the Nation's commitment to Amtrak as part of our national transportation system. As we begin to survey the condition of the Nation's transportation infrastructure, and to consider the economic and environmental costs of various forms of transportation, Amtrak's role as a passenger carrier of high energy efficiency and low environmental impact becomes even more important than before. I know that in my own part of the country, with the severe shrinkage of the intercity bus system, Amtrak has become even more important as a vital transportation link for our small- and medium-sized communities, many of which do not have air transport service. In fact, there are literally scores of such communities around the country, where Amtrak is one of the few remaining transportation links connecting these towns with the rest of the Nation. More than one out of every five communities served by Amtrak has no air service; another one in five has no bus service. For these towns, Amtrak is truly a vital connection to the economic and social fabric of the Nation.

I also want to stress that Amtrak is almost unique among Federal programs, in that it has managed to increase its level of service to the public, while cutting its Federal funding roughly in half in constant dollars over the last decade. How many other Federal efforts can we name that have achieved that kind of efficiency and productivity? These results are also a tribute to the outstanding management skills of Graham Claytor, Amtrak's president during most of that time period.

Sadly, I have to acknowledge that despite the bipartisan support for this Amtrak legislation, the administration is on record as opposing it—primarily, and to all appearances, exclusively, because of a provision giving the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to screen takeover bidders who are not already in the railroad business, before they are allowed to proceed with a bid for control of a major rail carrier.

I can only say that I have to conclude that much of this opposition is due to being misinformed. This provision, which closely tracks a bipartisan bill drafted in the Energy and Commerce Committee, only closes a nonsensical gap in the current law. A company or an individual who wants to go into the railroad business on a small scale by buying even a few miles of track from a major railroad must seek ICC approval. But if the same person or company wants to enter the railroad business by taking control of a major railroad in a single stroke, the ICC has no effective means of scrutinizing the bidder and protecting the transportation system from a possible railroad bankruptcy or similar disaster.

The takeover provision in the Amtrak bill addresses this situation in a moderate, carefully targeted way. First, the ICC is not put in charge of determining the outcome of control contests: It is merely authorized to screen multiple bidders for fitness; the takeover contest will be determined by the shareholders and the marketplace. Second, the ICC is given a limited 90-day window in which to conduct this screening—not the 2½ years that are available in mergers or acquisitions within the railroad industry. Finally, although the ICC should consider the effect of a given proposal on employees, there is no statutory requirement for so-called labor protection payments to displaced employees. In contrast to this moderate provision, current law gives employees displaced by a multicarrier merger or acquisition up to 6 years of full pay, as a matter of Federal law. I think these facts speak for themselves: This is a very moderate piece of legislation that leaves the critical aspects of takeover contests in the free market, while protecting the public from the possible loss of critical links in our national transportation system.

One final note, Mr. Speaker. We are likely to hear a good deal from certain quarters about this takeover provision rolling back the Staggers Act or reregulating the railroad industry. That is flatly untrue. As one of the staunchest defenders of the Staggers Act against efforts to roll back the genuine improvements in market-oriented ratemaking, I know reregulation when I see it. And in this case, the takeover matter, we are dealing with provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act whose coverage was not affected one iota by the Staggers Act. Instead, we are correcting an anomaly in the statute that was there long before 1980, but which became all too apparent within the last year or so as major railroads became the targets of noncarrier takeover bids. So I ask that our Members reaffirm their support for this measure, as they did last September by a vote of 296 to 93, and continue to evaluate this bill on its merits, not on the basis of slogans and rhetoric.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for the conference report.

□ 1640

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 7 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report we have before us is a bill that the committee has worked hard on, and I certainly do not in any way want to indicate that I am at all opposed to the hard work and the efforts that they put into this bill, but I do believe that we need to focus on what we are about to do here.

I think it needs to be understood why some opposition to this bill is very much in order. Let me state at the outset, as I have tried to say on many occasions on the floor, and I have found the debate deteriorated, I am not opposed to railroads. I do not think anybody should responsibly be opposed to railroads in this country. Railroads contribute a great deal to the economy of the country both in terms of freight service and in terms of passenger service, so I am not opposed to passenger rail service.

What I have begun to question very seriously is whether or not Government-subsidized passenger service serves the best interests of this country. There are some who have come to the floor today with a bill which they say Government subsidies are the only way that we can run passenger rail in the country. I do not believe that to be true.

I think it is important that we look at other options as a way of dealing with passenger rail for our future. I also think it needs to be pointed out that the administration is opposed to this bill. The President would like to veto this bill, and I think he has a number of reasons that the membership ought to be aware of before coming to the floor and voting on a bill that supposedly preserves the passenger rail for the country.

First of all, we are talking about absolutely massive subsidies. We are not talking about a little bit of money. We are talking about a figure of $605 million to cover Amtrak's continuing annual losses in fiscal 1990, which is a $28 subsidy to each of Amtrak's passengers. One may say that that is a good idea; we ought to subsidize all of those poor people who are riding the rails. The fact is that every study we look at indicates it is not the poor we are subsidizing. It is very well-to-do people for the most part are the people we are subsidizing for $28 every time they ride the rails. They are people who make $40,000 a year or more. This is one of the massive subsidies we are giving to the very well-to-do in this country. It is costing us $605 million in 1990.

Yet, despite the massive deficit that the country faces, despite the nature of the deficit in this bill, we are going to raise that figure in this particular bill to $684 million in 1991, and then to $712 million in 1992. That is an 18-percent increase in just 2 years under the provisions of the bill that we have before us.

I have heard a lot of discussion in the course of our deliberations today already about deficits and all the problems we have, and some people came to the floor suggesting that we are going to have to have a big tax increase. People will say: "Why?" Here is the reason: If anyone wants to know why it is we end up spending a lot more money than we have, it is because of these kinds of programs. This is a program that the administration, in its budget, said should be completely eliminated.

Congress proposes to spend $600 million this year, $684 million next year, $712 million the next year. That is where deficits come from. That is part of the problem.

Also, if Amtrak is going to become self-sufficient as everybody seems to say it should be, it is going to have to have some reforms, and the fact is that this bill before us gives us none of the reforms that are necessary. For example, the American taxpayer should not be asked to continue to subsidize Amtrak's continual losses without requiring Amtrak's management or employees to adopt cost-of-living reforms necessary for Amtrak to achieve true self-sufficiency.

Somewhere along the line we ought to ask the railroad to begin to operate like it was a real business rather than like it was operating only for Government subsidies, and yet this bill does not carry us in that direction. This bill simply states that we are going to pour ever more Government subsidies into a losing proposition.

Then the thing that disturbs me, I think, most about this bill is that it is a two-fer. The administration not only wants to eliminate Amtrak as a budget item for the American taxpayer, it wants to eliminate the ICC. It thinks that both are outmoded in terms of taxpayer expense.

One of the things that it is moving toward is the elimination of ICC. What does this bill do?

□ 1650

This bill says not only do you keep Amtrak, not only do you subsidize it for more than it has been subsidized in the past, but now we also want to tighten the ICC's regulatory grip at the same time that the administration is proposing to terminate that agency.

In other words, what this bill proposes to do is not only keep Amtrak, but keep another wasteful bureaucracy in the Government, the ICC. Well, in this bill you are getting a two-fer. You are not only going to preserve one bureaucracy, you are going to have two of them saved in one bill.

Finally, despite what the gentleman from Kansas said, I have to say that in examining what they have done here, one has to come to the conclusion that this is a step back into more burdensome Government regulation. This legislation is a step back to the days of oppressive Government regulation that drove substantial segments of the railroad industry into bankruptcy. Railroads like the Rock Island Line, the Penn Central, and others, were driven out of business by Government regulation. This bill is designed to take us right back to those bad old days when railroading could not survive because of Government regulations.

Now, if one thinks it is a good thing to come here and support a bill that is for more regulation, that preserves two massive bureaucracies and does so at increasing expense to the taxpayer at a time of deficits, you will love this bill. I would suggest to you that many of us should not love this bill. We ought to support what the President wants to do, oppose the bill, and save the taxpayer $600 to $700 million.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlemen from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of the full committee.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN] for yielding me this time. I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak reauthorization bill. A number of the members of this committee deserve particular thanks and commendation for what they have done: the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN]; the ranking Republican members of the committee and subcommittee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. WHITTAKER]; the gentlemen from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY] and [Mr. BOUCHER]; the authors of the amendment on ICC jurisdiction adopted in the committee and carried through in the conference report, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TAUKE]; the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADIGAN], who made important contributions to the legislation before us; and I want to commend also my good friend, the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], for the way he worked with us in regard to the commuter rail provision of this legislation.

I listened with some interest to the remarks of my good friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER]. It is indeed regrettable that the gentleman did not talk to the committee, because had he done so, it would sound more like he were discussing the legislation now before us.

The harsh fact of the matter is that the comments of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], who just immediately preceded me, and for whom I have the utmost respect, do not relate to the legislation before this body at all. The interesting thing is that the Amtrak subsidy over the last 8 years has declined on a continuous basis. Today the subsidy is $450 million less than it was in 1981. Today the revenues are double what they were in 1981, $1.2 billion as opposed to $600 million.

The hard fact of the matter is, Amtrack has come a long way. Today it has a better ratio of revenues to costs than any other passenger railroad in the whole of the world, not just the United States. It has improved steadily since 1981.

What is needed here is capital funds. Amtrak is today turning aside passengers who want the service, and they cannot carry those additional passengers unless they get the capital investment that is needed for them to bring their service into relationship with the demand which exists.

This bill is going to increase rail safety by providing for the purchase of new and better and safer equipment. It will enable improved efficiency, lead to modernization, attract more passengers, increase revenues. This is an investment bill, and it is a prudent bill.

Mr. Speaker, what we should do here is provide the means for Amtrak to continue the advancement to which I have been referring in my comments, rather than seek to cut back. The cost of additional service is substantial. This is going to cost money in the short run, but it is going to continue to reduce the deficit in the long run.

Graham Claytor, the President of Amtrak, has pointed out that by the year 2000, if he gets the cooperation of Congress, he will reduce the Federal operating subsidy to zero.

There is here a special provision which will enable Amtrak to provide additional service in the northern Virginia commuter corridor, sponsored by the distinguished members of the Virginia delegation, led by the gentlemen from Virginia who sit on the committee, Mr. BOUCHER and Mr. BLILEY.

I would observe that there is one provision which the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] refers to as a return to the dark ages of regulation. If the gentleman would take the trouble to read that particular provision, he would know what it does.

Under current law, selling off or closing down 1 mile of rail track is subject to ICC approval, selling off one railroad to another railroad is subject to ICC approval, but selling off an entire railroad company to a nonrailroad is not. This is most curious. The adverse impact upon communities, upon States, upon customers of rail service, and upon persons absolutely dependent, such as grain users, haulers or purchasers of heavy commodities like coal or iron ore or lumber or something of that kind, is absolutely appalling. In fact, the farmers of the Midwest are desperate to have an opportunity to have sell-offs of entire railroads reviewed because of the potential for the loss of service to them.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill. It is one which assures that Amtrak will continue to grow, to provide service, and to assure that the cost of that service is going to continually decline through the acquisition of newer and better equipment and providing service to people now being turned away.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a partisan bill. The bill came out of committee by an overwhelming vote. It is supported by the leadership on both sides of the committee and by Members on both sides of the aisle. And something else must be observed. The major provisions which were complained of by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] were sponsored by Members on both sides of the aisle. In summary, Mr. Speaker, this is an excellent conference report that is bipartisan and noncontroversial. It was signed by every House conferee. It deserves the support of every Member of this House, and I hope it will receive that support. Mr. Speaker, I ask that a table showing Amtrak's progress since 1981 be inserted in the RECORD at this point.

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY].

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act. This bipartisan legislation is an important part of our effort to strengthen a key component of our Nation's transportation system; namely, passenger rail service.

Today, Amtrak spans the country with a 24,000-mile system that operates through 43 States and serves over 500 stations and 22 million passengers annually. Importantly, Amtrak is providing this service in a more self-reliant matter. In fiscal year 1981, Amtrak relied on the Federal Government to provide more than half of its expenses. In fiscal year 1988 their share had dropped to 30 percent.

This positive trend will continue as environmental pressures cause our communities to rely more heavily on passenger rail transportation. This legislation correctly addresses the need to make rail transportation a more viable option by resolving an important liability question that has stalled the startup of commuter rail service in northern Virginia. I want to recognize the efforts of my colleague from Virginia, Mr. BOUCHER, for raising this issue at the subcommittee level, as well as the efforts of two of my other colleagues from Virginia, Mr. PARRIS and Mr. SLAUGHTER, who have labored long and hard to make Virginia commuter rail a reality. And of course, a special word of appreciation to the chairman of the full committee, Mr. DINGELL, and the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. LUKEN, and ranking members, Mr. LENT and Mr. WHITTAKER for their support. Finally, I would like to thank Mr. BROOKS, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee for his advice and assistance.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to address one of the issues that has been raised as an objection to this legislation—the ICC provision. Contrary to many statements, this is not an antitakeover provision. This gentleman believes that shareholders own publicly traded companies. I have not supported antitakeover legislation in the past and in voting for this legislation I am not doing anything to change that record. This provision is in my mind more closely related to a technical amendment—a loophole closer. This provision simply eliminates the anomaly in current law that requires ICC review if a nonrailroad wishes to acquire a few miles of track from a railroad, but requires no such review if the nonrailroad buys the entire company on the stock exchange. It is a good provision, it levels the field and ensures that the same rules apply regardless who is buying and how they are buying—what some of us call fairness.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this conference report. By a more than 3-to-1 margin this House approved almost identical legislation in September. Let's send this bill to the President and I for one believe that despite threats to the contrary, the President will sign this bill.

□ 1700

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ROHRABACHER].

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, the Nation's Capitol is awash today in talk of tax increase, so it is appropriate that we are talking railroads, today, because the American taxpayer seems to be destined to be railroaded one way or another.

This conference report is a prime example of why we are hearing the unfortunate talk of a tax increase. America is being nickeled and dimed to death, and unfortunately we are not talking about nickels and dimes, we are talking about hundreds of millions of dollars.

The administration has asked that Congress begin to phase out the subsidy for Amtrak. Congress is about to do the opposite.

This conference report authorizes $630 million for fiscal year 1989, $656 million for 1990, $684 million for 1991, and $712 million in 1992. The Congress is going in the wrong direction. The President has asked us to phase out this program, not to pad its budget with increases, and no one seems to care that we are on the verge of a financial crisis.

I care, and I am going to vote against this type of spending wherever and whenever it rears its ugly head. In fact, Members should join me in opposing such programs that are not absolutely necessary for the health and safety of our people.

That is how we can balance the budget. That is the formula that will bring down this high level of deficit spending.

There are ways out of this budget mess, and they all encompass doing more to bring down spending. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH] offered us a viable and sensible alternative to raising taxes and spending again and again. He called for an overall freeze in discretionary spending including domestic programs and defense spending without reducing COLA's or entitlements.

Without real constraints or spending reductions, Congress will continue to spend money like a drunken sailor and American will be pushed down that slippery slope of tax increases into the pit of recession. I want no part of it.

With the amount of spending contained in the budget the House passed last week, it is no wonder that the only talk that is going around today is the talk about balancing the budget by only increasing taxes, not bringing down spending. I do not know one reputable economist who advocates that we increase taxes at a time when recession threatens our country. Increasing taxes as a means of balancing the budget is like bleeding a patient to cure an illness. Higher taxes siphon the strength from the economy. Higher taxes give the Government more and more money to create more and more programs to hire more and more Government employees who are likely to use that money to bleed the patient again.

But those who continue to vote for measures to increase spending, even though our President wants them phased out, should not be shedding crocodile tears and talking about the problem and the threat of the high level of deficit spending.

My point is simple. The only cure for deficit spending is to cut that spending. I know it is a difficult task. I cannot even get the National Endowment for the Arts to stop spending money for sexually graphic art.

We must stop spending the taxpayers' dollars for projects that are not absolutely necessary, and this program, the subsidization for Amtrak, the subsidization for high-income passengers is not absolutely necessary for the health and safety of the United States of America, and we can no longer afford such spending.

There are proposals throughout the United States to spend money on rail transportation in the private sector, financed totally in the private sector. This continued subsidization of Amtrak deters this type of private sector spending.

I know in my own area there is a proposal for a magnetic levitation train between Anaheim and Las Vegas that is being financed totally with private sector money. This is the type of innovation, this is the type of spending for transportation we need, not more Government mandates and more Government spending and higher taxes for our people and a higher deficit for our country, and recession for the country.

Mr. Speaker, the American people are being taken for a ride. The destination is economic oblivion. They want to get off the train, and so do I.

Vote no on the conference report.

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER], a member of the subcommittee and the full committee.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding this time, and commend him and the chairman of the full committee, Mr. DINGELL, as well as the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, Mr. BROOKS, for their outstanding assistance in crafting that part of this measure that will remove the barriers to the commencement of commuter rail service in northern Virginia. For northern Virginia commuters, this has been a very long-awaited moment.

The conference report contains a provision that limits the liability of Conrail for accidents occurring on the tracks involving trains that will be operated by the Virginia Railway Express, which is the new northern Virginia commuter authority, to the amount of insurance coverage in force at the time that an accident occurs. It also requires that insurance in the amount of at least $200 million be in force at all times, and that will be a fund sufficient to cover any injuries that are likely to occur in accidents on that rail line.

The enactment of this provision will result in Conrail making available to the commuter services access on its tracks across the Potomac River, and then on to Union Station, removing the last significant barrier to the commencement of this long-awaited and much needed commuter service in northern Virginia.

We now anticipate that the service could begin as early as 1991 with 18 trains daily beginning at Manassas and at Fredericksburg, making stops along the way, and then terminating at Union Station. It will accommodate some 4,000 riders on a daily basis, fully 75 percent of whom will have destinations on Capitol Hill or in southwest Washington.

For all of those who today are enduring the daily rush hours on Interstates 95 or 66, this is particularly good news. Commuter rail service will have the effect of adding one full lane of travel on both of those interstates and dramatically reducing the traffic congestion that now exists.

Mr. Speaker, I want to extend my sincere thanks to the gentlemen from Virginia, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. PARRIS, Mr. SLAUGHTER, and Mr. WOLF for their outstanding help and support as we crafted this measure, and once again to the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], chairman of the full Judiciary Committee for their outstanding help in obtaining approval.

I also want to commend the local governments in northern Virginia and the officials of the Virginia Railway Express, of Conrail and of Amtrak for their outstanding help in this effort.

Again, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TAUKE].

Mr. TAUKE. Mr. Speaker, there has been some controversy about a provision of the legislation that is before us relating to railroad takeovers. I believe that those of the Office of Management and Budget who singled out this provision as a reason for Presidential veto of the legislation are frankly a little off the beam.

This is not a step toward reregulation of railroads. It is not anything at all onerous. It is an attempt to make a little sense out of existing law. When Japonica was talking about taking over the Chicago Northwestern, we discovered something very curious in the law, and it was essentially that if you had a railroad buying another railroad, it was subject to ICC review to ensure that the public interest would be served. If you had a railroad buying a line of another railroad, it was subject to ICC review.

□ 1710

If you had a nonrailroad buying a line of another railroad, it was subject to ICC review, all to insure that the public interest could be served. But if you had a nonrailroad buying an entire railroad, in other words if they had enough money so they could buy the whole thing, no ICC review, no need to insure that the public interest was being served.

Now, what possible justification can there be for saying that when you have 16 class I railroads and a railroad would want to buy 1 of the 16, that that should be subject to review, but if somebody has never run a railroad before, comes in and wants to buy it, then we do not have to worry about the public interest being served?

Everybody who is in this Congress undoubtedly has communities where there are industries that are dependent on the running of the railroads, and if somebody comes along and screws up the running of the railroads, that puts a lot of people out of business.

Now, the fact of life is that this is a very minimal requirement, but it does insure that some public interest will be served.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 4 minutes for the purpose of a colloquy with the gentleman from California [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, following up on the comments of our colleague from Iowa, I would like to ask whether it is the understanding of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that as a result of legislation that would be passed through the approval of this conference report, the ICC would be given the authority that it does not presently have to restrict purchases and sales of railroad securities?

Mr. WALKER. Well, it is certainly my understanding in the bill that we are granting to the ICC additional authority over and above that which it now has with regard to railroads. And it extends not only to Amtrak but to the broad base of railroads across the country.

So my reading of the committee's report certainly does suggest that the ICC is being given additional powers despite the fact that the administration wants to abolish the ICC completely.

This bill would increase the powers of an agency that the administration wants to abolish.

Mr. COX. So instead of moving toward deregulation, we are moving toward more regulation? Right now the ICC does not have this authority although it does already possess extensive regulatory authority to review line sales, abandonments, the issuance of securities by a carrier when acquired by a noncarrier. We are giving them even more, broader powers that can only be used for anticompetitive purposes.

Mr. WALKER. That would certainly be my interpretation. This is certainly, in my view, a move to try to further regulate any kind of free enterprise approach to railroads. The problem is that what we have done is that we have clamped down and totally eliminated the free enterprise in passenger rail with Amtrak and we have a wholly subsidized rail service there.

It appears to me that in order to protect that kind of philosophy we are now moving toward more regulation of the privately run railroads with this kind of opportunity.

It is surprising that as Eastern Europe moves away from command economies, we in this body seem to be taking the different route of trying to move the Government back into trying to run aspects of our economy, despite the fact that those parts of the economy may be perfectly healthy.

Mr. COX. In fact, there are a lot of failing railroads, and if we have healthy companies outside the railroad industry that might be in the transportation industry or elsewhere, this is now an additional regulatory burden that those purchases, potential purchases, must overcome if they are going to inject their capital into the railroad industry, is that not right?

Mr. WALKER. Precisely. It is my understanding if they wanted to purchase a failing railroad and keep it running, they would now have to get ICC approval in order to be able to do that.

So that you could have a situation where the whole railroad system goes under, where people are denied the ability to have rail service, where whole businesses have to shut down because there is no rail service, because the ICC is still reviewing to find out whether or not this is a proper buyer for a rail system.

Mr. COX. So the Federal Government might say "yes" in the end, but in the meantime you have got to go through all the Federal rigmarole in order to accomplish that.

Mr. WALKER. The gentleman is absolutely right. The problem then becomes that the Federal Government has a long history of doing exactly that.

When you look back at the history of the Rock Island Line, the Penn Central and others, it was precisely that kind of regulation which drove those companies out of business.

So what we are doing is returning to that kind of process in railroading, and we well may find that at some point in the future we will have driven out railroads rather than preserve railroads under the language we are adopting here today.

Mr. COX. I think we might say, in conclusion, that nothing in this provision preserves existing rail service or adds any new capital to existing rail service. But what this provision does do is create an additional regulatory barrier to anyone who wants to come in and buy an existing railroad.

Mr. WALKER. This is more regulation, pure and simple.

Mr. COX. I appreciate the clarification.

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS].

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the bill and of the distinguished chairman.

I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990. I particularly wish to address my comments to section 3 of the conference report. Members of the House Judiciary Committee were appointed as conferees on a provision of H.R. 2364 dealing with limitation on liability for commuter rail service from Virginia to the District of Columbia. The House provision, which was drafted in conjunction with the Judiciary Committee and was graciously accepted by the Energy and Commerce Committee, limited the liability of railroads for commuter operations on their tracks to the amount of insurance coverage carried by the Commuter Rail Authority. The bill also requires the authority to carry 200 million dollars' worth of coverage.

The Senate adopted our language and added a provision stating that it would go into effect only if an operating agreement was concluded between the Commuter Rail Authority and the railroads whose tracks the authority would use. It is my understanding that such an agreement has, indeed, been concluded.

Section 3 of the conference report embodies the House-passed language and incorporates the additional Senate provision. It is carefully and narrowly drawn to strike a reasonable balance between accommodating the concerns of railroads over the additional liability that might result from commuter rail service on their tracks, and protecting the rights of passengers and other parties. Enacting this provision will permit this worthwhile commuter rail operation from Virginia into the District of Columbia to go forward, and I urge approval of the conference report.

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT].

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWIFT. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SHARP].

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to quickly say that I strongly support this legislation. Rail service is extremely important to this country, and will be more important in the future for economic reasons, for environmental reasons, and for energy reasons. And the agency, Amtrak, has been put on a much stronger financial basis and is continuing in that direction. We would be very foolish to cast aside the progress that has been made, and it has been made at the expense of employees and others interested in this service going forward for the American people.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the Amtrak authorization conference report before us today is a sound bill which is necessary for maintaining a balanced, efficient national transportation system. It is the product of a great deal of bipartisan work and deserves our overwhelming approval.

Few agencies have experienced the intense public scrutiny over the last 10 years as Amtrak has faced. And few have achieved a better record of fiscal management. Amtrak's revenues now cover 75 percent of its operating costs—a remarkable improvement over the 48-percent level in 1981 when the level of the Federal contribution began to decrease. In real dollars, Federal operating support has declined more than 50 percent during that period. Its non-Federal revenue has doubled in 9 years and Amtrak management wants to eliminate the need for any Federal support by the end of this decade.

That goal is a worthy one. It has, however, had a price. Amtrak's employees have made major sacrifices to help management turn the corner. Wages and salaries have not kept up with rail industry levels.

I represent southern Indianapolis and the city of Beech Grove which has a maintenance facility employing 1,325 of the company's nearly 2,000 employees in Indiana. This facility performs maintenance work on Amtrak equipment as well as on privately owned cars and equipment. Amtrak has deferred a substantial amount of maintenance on its rolling stock that should not be postponed any longer. Capital investment is needed for Amtrak to keep reliable rail service and to meet the growing public demand. Any prudent business would make such an investment when it sees potential customers turned away due to lack of capacity. Additional revenues from capital improvements could also be invested in its work force which is a key factor in Amtrak's outstanding performance. I urge Amtrak management to seriously consider these points in its allocation of admittedly limited resources.

Mr. SWIFT. I thank the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. Speaker, this is the thesis of my remarks: I think there are some people who can understand business principles but cannot apply them when Government is involved.

For example, I think everybody knows that businesses have to make investments if they are going to survive. Those very same people sometimes think that if Government makes an investment, they see it only as an expenditure.

Now here is the point: Last year Amtrak turned away one customer for every customer it served. If you ran a shoe store and you were turning away as many customers as you were able to sell shoes to, you would say, "I had better invest in some expansion."

The fact is that Amtrak has unmet demand equal to the demand it can meet.

What it calls for, really, is investment in the rolling stock to be able to meet that demand. I have talked with the head of Amtrak who tells me that with a nationwide system able to meet the demand, the subsidy to Amtrak could disappear by the end of the decade.

Now that is thinking like a business.

This bill does not provide that, but the fact is, what astonishes me, is that there are those who would either kill this or would even reduce the investment which I suggest is not only not good business thinking, it is not good thinking at all.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PARRIS].

Mr. PARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I will not take the time of the House to elaborate, allude further to the arguments made on behalf of this measure by other previous speakers in regard to a parochial but fundamentally important and critical aspect of this legislation, which is the commencement of commuter rail in northern Virginia.

This was a complicated process. We had to negotiate access, rights-of-way agreements with five separate railroads, we drafted a regional compact agreed to by seven impacted independent political jurisdictions, negotiated the use of privately owned property for rail stations and commuter parking lots, secured a section 3 capital demonstration grant, and the balance.

But finally the passage of this legislation will allow the northern Virginia commuter rail service to become a reality.

I take this time, Mr. Speaker, simply to express, as have others, my appreciation to the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN], the ranking Republican member, the gentleman from New York, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DAVIS], the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and particularly my two Virginia colleagues [Mr. BOUCHER] and [Mr. BLILEY] for their stalwart assistance in the solution of a critically important measure that will be of benefit to all of those who attempt to commute into the Nation's Capital every day.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990. The principal reasons for my support are twofold.

There can be no question that Amtrak, America's railroad, represents a vital component of our Nation's transportation infrastructure. Nor can there by any question that Amtrak's management has vastly improved the efficiency of its operation in recent years; thereby significantly reducing the amount of funds required from the American taxpayers. As a matter of fact, it is the efficiency with which Amtrak has been operated that has led to the near miraculous resurgence of passenger rail travel as a viable alternative to the automobile.

There is serious doubt that that viability can be sustained without the critically important infusion of capital for the replacement of Amtrak's aging rolling stock which would be authorized by passage of this bill.

My other reason for supporting this conference report, while admittedly somewhat more parochial, is no less important. One provision, included during subcommittee consideration, would effectively deal with the punitive liability problem which has been the one remaining hurdle preventing the initiation of a commuter rail service in northern Virginia.

Mr. Speaker, I first advocated the establishment of such a service more than 20 years ago, as a member of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors. Then, in 1973, as a first-term Member of Congress, I ran a demonstration train up the RF&P tracks from Fredericksburg to Washington to show the viability of such a service. Then in May 1985, I organized another focused effort and we have been planning ever since.

In December 1985, I established the Congressional Task Force on Commuter Rail which was made up of State transportation officials and the locally elected officials from all seven political jurisdictions to be impacted by commuter rail. I asked the committees of my task force to concentrate on finding solutions to specific problems which we had to overcome before our goal could be realized.

Specifically, we had to negotiate access and right of way agreements with five different railroads; draft a regional compact to be agreed upon by the seven impacted independent political jurisdictions on funding of the service's operating deficit; negotiate for use of privately owned property for rail stations and commuter parking lots; and secure a section 3 capital demonstration grant from the Federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration. All of these tasks were accomplished within a relatively short period of time.

The one problem whose solution has eluded us for nearly 4 years, however, is that of insurance. The problem has been the procurement of an insurance portfolio which satisfies the indemnification requirements of the various railroads granting the service access to its track, but which is also affordable. The local quasi-governmental authority coordinating the planning for this service has put together a $200-million per occurrence insurance portfolio.

The legislation before us would place a $200 million cap on punitive damages against Amtrak and other commuter authorities—effectively solving our insurance crisis. Passage of this legislation will finally allow the northern Virginia commuter rail service to become a reality. The reality of a successful commuter rail is that it would carry as many commuters into the Nation's Capital as would the construction of an additional lane on I-95/I-395 between Fredericksburg and Washington.

In closing, I would thank the chairman of the committee, Mr. DINGELL, for all of his critical support and assistance in this matter. I would also thank and commend the efforts of my two colleagues from Virginia, Mr. BOUCHER, a member of the subcommittee, and particularly Mr. BLILEY, who brought this matter to the attention of the chairman.

□ 1720

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLAUGHTER].

Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act, and commend the conferees for completing work on this legislation in a timely manner. The conference report on H.R. 2364 includes a provision critical to the operation of the Virginia Railway Express commuter rail system by limiting liability for punitive damages should an accident occur on certain tracks and bridge spans between northern Virginia and Washington, DC.

The promise of a viable commuter rail operation in Virginia will bring a measure of relief to many of our citizens who travel daily in bumper-to-bumper traffic from Manassas and Fredericksburg into northern Virginia or the District of Columbia. It is expected that 4,000 round trip commuters will ride the Virginia Railway Express daily. I commend the leadership of the House Energy and Commerce Committee and the efforts of the Virginia congressional delegation to ensure the full operation of the Virginia Railway Express, and urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the conference report on H.R. 2364.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, with trepidation with regard to the position I am advocating, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. CAMPBELL]

Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, rail service is a vital link to urban areas for my constituents and I am appreciative of the service Amtrak provides to western Colorado. I do not believe, however, that this service should come at the expense of public health.

Over the past few years I have become increasingly concerned about Amtrak's refusal to adequately deal with the issue of the dumping of untreated human waste in our communities. I have contacted Amtrak numerous times asking them to end this primitive practice or, at the very least, to provide adequate alternatives to their actions. I have yet to receive a satisfactory answer.

Amtrak's practice of dumping untreated human waste, often in highly populated areas and while stopped at stations, is protected by an exemption Amtrak has been granted from the Rail Passenger Service Act. The act requires all other U.S. rail carriers to have self-contained waste disposal systems.

Amtrak's arrogance and foot dragging on this issue have reached the level of the absurd. Their tactic of threatening termination of service when State health agencies voice opposition to raw sewage being dumped in their communities only serves to discourage cooperation.

Although Amtrak assures me they are conducting research on this issue, I am concerned at the length of time this research is taking. When I have discussed this issue with Amtrak, first in 1987, and most recently at the beginning of this year, I have received the same response: "We're conducting research; you and your constituents will just have to wait." The communities of my district are eager to work with Amtrak to come to a workable and mutually agreeable solution. When we agree to this legislation today, we need to also send a message to Amtrak that our constituents are disgusted at Amtrak's refusal to listen to their voices and to put a stop to this primitive practice of taking taxpayers' money and then dumping on our towns, is not my idea of a good neighbor policy.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. PEASE].

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, I have a prepared statement which I will insert at the end of my remarks, but I would like to say in the 2 minutes that my friend from the minority side has so graciously given me, just that I have personal experience with Amtrak. I recently, with my wife, had occasion to take a 2,800-mile trip from Cleveland to San Antonio, TX, to New Orleans, and back to Cleveland again. I must say we enjoyed that trip very much. I came away impressed, very impressed with the courteous service provided by the Amtrak personnel, by their friendliness, which is evident among not only the staff but also the passengers of Amtrak trains, by the great scenery we were able to see along the way, and yes, by the efficiency of the management of Amtrak.

I believe that Graham Claytor and his entire management team are doing a magnificient job of running Amtrak, given the financial constraints under which they are working. But as my colleague from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN] has pointed out before, there comes a point when we need to get new equipment to maintain service and to extend service. Amtrak is at that point. It is long past that point. It desperately needs to be able to invest some money in new equipment so it can provide more service, get more customers, and reduce even further the subsidy which is now provided by the Federal Government.

This conference report addresses that need. I very much urge all my colleagues to give their support to this conference report, and take the occasion, when they can, to ride Amtrak themselves. I think they will find it an exemplary means of transportation.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to say a few words about an energy efficient, environmentally safe form of transportation: Amtrak. Two weeks ago on Earth Day 300,000 people showed up here at the Capitol to demonstrate their support for practices and policies that nurture, not harm, the environment. Hundreds of thousands more demonstrated at other locations across the country. My colleagues JOE KENNEDY, JIM MCDERMOTT, BART GORDON, and I road bicycles from here to Freedom Plaza on Bike to Work Day.

Environmentalism has reached all corners of our great Nation. Everywhere, people are learning how changing their individual behavior can make a real difference in the quality of the environment. As elected officials, we need to support policies that provide citizens with environmentally friendly options.

One way that we can do that is to provide adequate funding for Amtrak. The conference report on Amtrak reauthorization, which we will vote on today, would authorize around $700 million per year for Amtrak operations. These amounts are miniscule when compared to what we spend on highways. Last year, we spent over $13 billion on our highway system, and even that amount was not adequate to keep up with the growing demand for these roads.

The Washington to New York corridor is a prime example of how convenient train travel can be. Because of heavy usage, trains run frequently and a number of express lines are available. For anyone who has made the same trip by car, where traffic is often bumper to bumper, it is no wonder why people would prefer to go by train. I would speculate that, if the rail system were improved between Boston and New York, many travelers would choose rail over cars and also over air travel, given the heavy congestion at Logan Airport.

Mr. Speaker, by supporting Amtrak we're investing in our Nation's future. I urge support for the conference report before us today. Thank you.

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MCCLOSKEY].

Mr. MCCLOSKEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in enthusiastic support for reauthorization of Amtrak. In 8 years, Amtrak has increased ridership by 40 percent and has doubled revenues with current revenues covering 72 percent of its operating costs, Amtrak has set a goal of self-sufficiency by the end of the decade. This goal is feasible with growing public support for a viable national train network.

This support is nowhere better evidenced than Evansville and southwestern Indiana. People there are placing high hopes on an Amtrak feasibility study for a Chicago to Florida rail line. One route would include Evansville as a connector city.

Evansville area residents must drive 2 hours to travel by train. Despite this AAA of southern Indiana booked $150,000 in Amtrak tickets in 1989. More than 800 residents recently attended "Amtrak Night" sponsored by AAA. A newspaper poll found 82 percent of respondents would use the rail service if brought to Evansville.

The future of a successful nationwide transportation system lies with advantages train travel can provide.

Reauthorization of Amtrak will help ensure their future in Indiana and throughout the Nation.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WEISS). The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 3¾ minutes remaining.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, when the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] got up a while ago, he said that my speech before did not reference the report.

Well, I think this is the report. When I go through that report, I find a number of things in it that are exactly what I talked about previously. I talked about the fact that this is not a report and a piece of legislation that reduces the subsidies further, this is a report that takes what we are spending in 1990, $605 million, raises it to $684 million in 1991, and raises it to $712 million in 1992. I am not creating those figures. I am reading them out of the report. This is their report.

It tells Members we are not reducing the subsidies, we are increasing the subsidies. That is the problem. Now, I also appreciate the words of the gentleman from Colorado. The fact is, that this rail system is an environmental disaster. As those trains rush across the country with the passengers aboard them, every time someone goes into the head and flushes, it is coming right out onto the tracks. Is there anything in this report about that environmental disaster? Not a word.

We also had a lot of talk here recently about safety in Amtrak. Amtrak has been involved in a number of accidents within the last few weeks. Is there anything in this report with regard to safer operating of Amtrak? I cannot find a word. I have read the report, and I have to say that we are spending $712 million by 1992, and I cannot find that we are going to do anything about flushing onto the tracks, and I cannot find we are going to do anything about improving the safety.

□ 1730

Mr. Speaker, I have got to say to the Members that if in fact what we are talking about is capital investment—and this is what I hear so much about here on the floor—we ought to be thinking a little bit about how the rest of businesses would go about capital investment. Would they come to the taxpayers and suggest that the taxpayers have to ante up? No, they would go to the banks. They would say, "Look, we have the potential for a lot more in the way of passengers in the future." The banks lend money on that kind of a basis, and then they would figure that into their rates.

What does Amtrak do? It does the same kind of thing that would be done in a state-run rail system in Europe or the Soviet Union or other places. It comes to the taxpayers. The taxpayers are supposed to ante up for this purpose.

I would suggest that this is the wrong bill at the wrong time. When we are faced with massive deficits, the taxpayers do not need additional subsidies imposed upon them.

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to mention that on the train trip I recently took, I was told that on the Amtrak system, once toilets are used, it is set up for it to be held in tanks and for it to be aerated and not discharged unless the train is going at least 30 miles an hour.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for that understanding. The fact is that that may be the case on that train, but the policy across the country is that we have a lot of trains that are not doing that and they are flushing onto the tracks, including in urban areas, as the gentleman from Colorado pointed out a minute ago.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, as we all know, today there has been lot of talk about intellectual consistency in this Chamber, and I would just like to top this off by saying that I believe it is intellectually inconsistent for politicians in this town to tell the American people that there is no alternative to raising their taxes in order to bring down this high level of deficit spending when we continue to spend money on a multitude of projects like that, which could be better done by the private sector.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply sum up by saying that this particular bill is a very extensive subsidy that ought to be voted down.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WEISS). The Chair will state that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN) has 1¾ minutes remaining.

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, this bill represents the overriding public interest we have in our major railroads. We are talking about major railroads of over $88 million in size which could be gobbled by by nonrailroad interests. We are talking about the ICC protecting that, not the colloquy that we heard before, which was an adventure in fantasy. We are talking about buying new equipment. Mr. Riley, the former FRA administrator, warned that if we cannot acquire enough capital over time to maintain this fleet with a normal schedule, we will be turning away from safety. We want to follow the FRA injunction here and invest sufficiently.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. WHITTAKER] for his efforts in making this a bipartisan bill. That is what we have here, despite some of the conversation. It is a bipartisan bill. In this year of the environment, it is a bipartisan bill. In this year, when we recognize now that the airlanes are limited and that the highways are limited, it is not symbolic, and people are becoming aware that Amtrak is there. It is serving an environmental purpose. People are becoming aware of it, and it is becoming more popular. It is being used in its proper function, and passenger rail traffic is coming back.

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pledge my full support for the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990. As a House conferee, I believe that this is a true consensus and bipartisan bill and one that has the full support from both the House and the Senate. I urge my colleagues to join me in passing this report.

When Congress created the National Rail Passenger Corporation in 1970, most commonly referred to as Amtrak, it provided a way of preserving the bare bones, the core rail passenger system for the nation. Since that time, Amtrak has grown in leaps and bounds, covering over 24,000 miles of track in almost every State in the Union, and providing an essential means of transportation for millions of commuters and travelers. In addition, Amtrak is currently relying less on Government subsidies and paying more of its own way. It is believed that if Amtrak continues on this track, it soon will carry its own weight monetarily.

This bill contains may important provisions in addition to the authorized funding levels. One of the elements included in this piece of legislation would expand the acquisition review authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission [ICC] to include oversight responsibility over the acquisitions of class I carriers by noncarriers. This provision was inserted into the bill to close the loophole found in the current statute. The health of a railroad affects many sectors of our country including businesses, passenger, employees and communities—therefore, any dramatic changes in our Nation's railroad structure should be examined with an eye toward public interest. We need an expert agency to review the impact of a railroad restructuring upon these recipients to ferret out what potential risks might exist in the future if railroad service is abandoned or adversely affected.

In conclusion, I would also like to encourage Amtrak to investigate the possibility of extending and improving its service into three important regional corridors: (1) Chicago-St. Louis, (2) Chicago-Detroit-Cleveland-Pittsburgh, and (3) Chicago-Indianapolis. These vital links could open up the avenue between Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, and Illinois with very little expense or effort. The Northeast corridor has been an enormous success for Amtrak over the years, and this success could be duplicated in the Midwest by opening up abandoned lines.

Again, I urge my colleagues to support this necessary piece of legislation.

Ms. LONG. Mr. Speaker, while I rise in support of the conference report on the Amtrak authorization bill (H.R. 2364), I must also express my deep concern about the way in which Amtrak has made a recent decision regarding the rerouting of its trains.

I believe that America as a whole benefits from a strong passenger rail system. In an era of growing concern about pollution and highway congestion, as we realize the importance of protecting the air we breathe and of reducing the effects of pollution on our Earth, trains provide a sensible answer. I believe that we need to encourage the use of trains and other forms of mass transportation. The authorization provided in H.R. 2364 will help to maintain our passenger rail system and I support this.

However, I am deeply concerned about Amtrak's recent decision to reroute the Capitol Limited and Broadway Limited lines, which run from Chicago to the east coast. This rerouting will end service through Fort Wayne, the second largest city in Indiana, as well as service to other parts of Indiana and Ohio. The Chairman of Amtrak made this decision without proper notification of the Members of Congress whose districts or States will be affected by the move. Given the level of assistance that Amtrak has received and continues to receive from the Federal Government, I believe that proper consultation with Congress should be expected before Amtrak makes a major rerouting decision of this nature.

In fact, representatives of various railroads, State, local, and Federal officials are still discussing the possibility of continuing service through Fort Wayne, IN. However, the time allotted to formulate a solution to keep the trains running through Fort Wayne was limited. Amtrak could have done more in this regard.

While I will continue to work with all parties involved to keep Amtrak in Fort Wayne, I have also generated several proposals which I believe would go a long way toward helping to avoid future situations like the one which currently frustrates many of us in Indiana.

I have taken the liberty of putting these ideas into a legislative proposal, and while I do not intend to introduce this measure at this time, I would ask that the members of the Public Works and Transportation Committee and other interested Members of the Congress examine the provisions contained in this proposal at a later date.

The proposal which I have termed the TRAIN Act [the Termination and Rerouting of Amtrak, Information and Notice Act] would require Amtrak, as long as they continue to receive Federal Government funds, to give 6 months notice of any discontinuance of service. My proposal would require that the notice consist of a detailed report, including a cost-benefit analysis, and formal written communication to the Congress, the Members of Congress through whose congressional districts the passenger service runs, and the U.S. Senators and Governors through whose States the current passenger rail service runs.

What this advance notice requirement would provide is time for State and local units of government to devise proposals which could keep the trains running through their communities. Such proposals take time and should not be hastily put together. However, these very same proposals could be ones which would provide the needed assistance to Amtrak to make continuation of the service economically profitable.

The requirement that Amtrak provide a cost-benefit analysis would further assist States and local governments in crafting proposals appealing to Amtrak. Without this information, any first proposal would be essentially a shot-in-the-dark at coming up with a viable alternative for Amtrak. Likewise, if the cost-benefit analysis clearly indicated that nothing could be done to make the line attractive to Amtrak, much time and effort could be avoided in coming up with proposals which would be dismissed out of hand. This requirement seems to be only reasonable.

In addition, the TRAIN Act proposal would require that Amtrak make rerouting and termination decisions based upon their ability to become self-sufficient. While I believe that Amtrak is already making such business decisions to become self-sufficient, I would feel much more comfortable seeing the raw data when Amtrak makes a decision to pull out of a major city in my congressional district.

Mr. Speaker, while I will not introduce the TRAIN Act proposal today, I do ask unanimous consent that the text of that proposal be inserted in the RECORD following my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, as long as Amtrak continues to receive Federal funds, we should ensure that all of the Corporation's business decisions are based upon sound policy. This is an oversight responsibility which we should take seriously, and one which I believe would be improved with the adoption of some of the ideas I have put forth in the TRAIN Act proposal.

The text of the proposal follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. AMENDMENTS.

Section 404(c)(4)(F) of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 564(c)(4)(F)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking "14" and inserting in lieu thereof "45";

(2) in clause (ii), by striking "90 days" and inserting in lieu thereof "6 months";

(3) by redesignating clause (iii) as clause (iv);

(4) by inserting after clause (ii) the following new clause:

"(iii) Notice of any discontinuance of service pursuant to this paragraph or section 403(b) of this Act shall be given, in the form of a written, detailed report including a cost-benefit analysis, to the Congress, including each Member of the House of Representatives through whose district the service to be discontinued runs and each Senator through whose State the service runs, and to the Governor of each State through which the service runs. Such notice shall be given at least 6 months before such discontinuance.";

(5) in clause (iv), as so redesignated by paragraph (3) of this section, by inserting "the persons described in clause (iii) and to" after "by the Corporation to"; and

(6) by inserting after clause (iv), as so redesignated by paragraph (3) of this section, the following new clause:

"(iv) As used in this paragraph, the term 'discontinuance' includes a discontinuance of service through termination, rerouting, or otherwise.".

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to join with fellow colleagues in supporting the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act.

Amtrak provides an essential and cost-effective means of transportation for millions of travelers. For communities across the country, including ones in my district, Amtrak boosts our economy and keeps progress on track.

Over the years, ridership has increased by leaps and bounds. Last year, it reached an all-time high. Looking at ways to expand service can increase the financial health of the system and extend the benefits to more communities and citizens.

Therefore, I would like to encourage Amtrak to investigate the possibility of extending service in Illinois to Peoria and the Quad Cities. Local groups promoting the extension of service to both cities believe the ridership is there. Amtrak has been a success story for western Illinois and the region has benefited Amtrak. By opening up service to these cities, we duplicate this success and deliver economic health and progress.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990. As a member of the conference committee which developed the final version of the measure before us today, I am pleased that we were able to reach consensus on this proposal and bring it before this body quickly. I want to take this opportunity to commend Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman JOHN DINGELL and Transportation and Hazardous Materials Subcommittee Chairman TOM LUKEN for their consistent and thoughtful leadership throughout this process.

This conference agreement is very similar to the version of this bill passed by the House and includes virtually all of the provisions contained in the House passed bill. H.R. 2364 will authorize $630 million for Amtrak in fiscal year 1989, $656 million in 1990, $684 million in 1991, and $712 million in 1992.

Federal law will be amended to provide that no rail employee shall be subject to income tax laws of any State other than that of the Employee's residence, ending multi-State taxation of railroad employees who work in more than one State commuter rail service in Virginia will be encouraged by a requirement that the public authority operating the commuter rail maintain at least $200 million in liability coverage. Other railroads involved in the proposes commuter rail may not be indemnified until they enter into an agreement with the Commuter Rail Authority to participate in the operation or permit the operation to use the tracks.

Amtrak will be treated as a publicly funded rail carrier under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act in 1989 and 1990, which will save Amtrak approximately $16 million by matching the contributions with the actual amount of unemployment and short-term sickness benefits paid by the fund to Amtrak employees. Finally, this measure will give the Interstate Commerce Commission the authority to approve or prevent acquisition of major [class I] railroads by companies not involved in the rail business. The ICC already has the authority to oversee mergers between railroads, as well as to review the acquisition of any individual segment of a rail line by a noncarrier.

Mr. Speaker, Amtrak is now recovering 75 percent of its costs with its own revenues—better than any passenger railroad system in the world and a substantial improvement over 1981's 48 percent. Revenues in fiscal year 1989 were $1.27 billion, double that of 9 years ago. Amtrak's Federal operating support has been reduced by 40 percent in constant dollars since 1981. Amtrak's management is committed to eliminating all Federal operating support by the year 2000.

This legislation authorizes badly needed funding for plant modernization and purchase of new equipment. Amtrak's assets are depreciating at a rate of more than $165 million per year, while the annual appropriation for capital over the last 5 years has averaged only $37 million.

Mr. Speaker, I understand that Transportation Secretary Skinner will recommend to the President that he veto this legislation because of the new ICC authority granted by this measure and because of what he described as "unjustified new authorization levels." Failing to reauthorize Amtrak at this time would simply discard the investment that this country has made in Amtrak over the past two decades and ignore the contributions Amtrak has made to abating the clean air problems with which we currently are wrestling in this body. In addition, terminating Amtrak would result in labor protection costs estimated at $2.5 billion.

Amtrak has 220 trains operating daily over a 24,000 mile route system. In fiscal year 1988, Amtrak transported more than 21.5 million passengers; more than 10 million of these passengers rode trains in Amtrak's Northeast corridor between Washington, DC, and Boston. Amtrak carries more than twice as many passengers between and among the Northeast corridor stations of New York City, Newark, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore, and Washington, than all airlines combined. In Kansas, Amtrak serves 7 cities, and nearly 40,000 passengers annually. Amtrak also spent more than $4 million for goods and services in Kansas last year.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this conference report, and to vote to override the President's veto of this measure, if that unwarranted event later takes place.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my appreciation for the constructive, bipartisan effort that went into this legislation throughout the committee process in the Energy and Commerce Committee and in the conference as well. Specifically, I want to commend Chairman DINGELL and our Transportation Subcommittee chairman, Mr. LUKEN, and the ranking member of the subcommittee, BOB WHITTAKER, for their efforts to fashion a very sensible, carefully targeted piece of legislation. The efforts of the two gentlemen from Virginia, Mr. BLILEY and Mr. BOUCHER, and our colleagues on the Judiciary Committee were also instrumental in reaching final agreement on the provision that will make possible the long-waited northern Virginia rail commuter service.

Reauthorizing Amtrak with adequate resources to do its job is one of the most basic parts of a balanced national transportation policy. Amtrak carries literally millions of Americans each year, some as cross-country passengers, and many on the heavily traveled Northeast corridor. That is where my constituents most frequently encounter Amtrak.

How many of us are aware that Amtrak carries more long-haul passengers along that corridor than all the airlines combined? Or that just considering New York-to-Washington travel—without all the cities in between—Amtrak recently passed up both the Trump Shuttle and Pan Am as the carrier with the largest market share? This is definitely food for thought in an era of congested airports and air travel delays. Supporting Amtrak is truly vital to the transportation network of this most densely populated part of the country. This legislation carries Amtrak funding forward for the two coming fiscal years to give Amtrak the resources needed to maintain safe, high-quality service.

It is often claimed that Amtrak is essentially a Federal benefit only to the Northeast. Far from it. As Amtrak reported only last year, half of Amtrak's ridership, three-quarters of its passenger-miles, and two-thirds of its revenues come from noncorridor operations. Amtrak is also a vital transportation service for elderly Americans and those with lower incomes. Almost half of all Amtrak passengers outside the corridor are over 55, and more than a quarter are over 65. At the same time, their median income is about one-sixth below the national figure.

Against this background, it simply makes no sense to ignore Amtrak as part of a balanced transportation system. Amtrak represents a major investment in irreplaceable transportation infrastructure, especially in the Northeast. And as for return on the taxpayer's dollar, how many of us can name another item in the Federal budget where the service has actually expanded and improved while the appropriations were cut roughly in half? And yet, that is exactly what Amtrak has achieved in the 1980's under GRAHAM CLAYTOR'S leadership.

Most of this legislation concerns needed financial support for Amtrak. But there are also important technical changes. For example, because Amtrak is able to maintain a stable work force level and has not had massive layoffs as the freight railroads have in recent years, Amtrak has ended up overcontributing to the railroad unemployment accounts. The same thing used to happen to the commuter railroads, such as the Long Island Railroad and New Jersey Transit, until Congress corrected the situation in 1987 by putting commuter railroads on an experience-rated premium system. The bill approved by the conference extends this corrective measure to Amtrak as well, avoiding an unjustified subsidy to freight railroads, and helping to get even more value for the taxpayer's dollar by reducing Amtrak's overhead.

Finally, this legislation contains a provision that was approved as part of the original House bill last fall, to close a gaping loophole in the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The current law, which Members of both parties have found to be utterly indefensible, requires that someone who wants to enter the railroad business by buying a few miles of track must obtain ICC approval. This is how the very successful Short-Line and regional railroads are typically created. But if the company or individual enters the railroad business by taking control of an entire major railroad in a single stock acquisition, the ICC has no clear authority to scrutinize that party before the takeover has been finalized.

To address this problem, while still preserving the maximum possible scope for market forces, our committee members drafted the basic provision endorsed by the conference, to give the ICC a limited, 90-day power to evaluate the fitness of noncarrier companies or individuals seeking control of a major railroad. But the agency will not have the power to determine who actually gains control; that will still be in the hands of the shareholders of the target railroad. The ICC is merely given an opportunity to avoid incipient bankruptcy of the railroad or prejudice to the Government's position as an existing creditor. And transactions such as restructuring of holding company networks related to existing railroads, as well as acquisitions of smaller railroads by noncarriers, will continue to be free of ICC regulation. This is as it should be, for the stakes there for the national transportation system are far lower.

Mr. Speaker, this very tightly circumscribed ICC provision is carefully crafted, thoroughly considered, bipartisan legislation at its best. Unfortunately, there are those who would tar this provision with the epithet of "re-regulation" or "Rolling Back the Staggers Act." I think many of my colleagues know that the Republicans on the Energy and Commerce Committee were in the forefront of the battle to preserve the market-oriented successes of the Staggers Act against efforts to impose new regulatory restrictions on rates and prices in the railroad industry. And as one of those Republicans, I can assure you that the ICC provision in this Amtrak bill does not repeal any part of the Staggers Act. In fact, the loophole closed by this bill existed long before the Staggers Act, and was not even addressed by that 1980 legislation. On the contrary, only the successful revival of railroads under the Staggers Act led to new interest in takeover efforts targeted at major railroads. This in turn focused public attention on the lack of any effective ICC power to scrutinize those who would take control of one of the Nation's few major railroads in one fell swoop.

I strongly urge my colleagues to approve the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. POSHARD. Mr. Speaker, I express in the strongest way possible my support for the Amtrak rail system which serves this country so well.

Amtrak service is absolutely vital to my district. It serves as a connection between my rural constituents and the larger metropolitan areas which they use to do business in these cities, or simply visit.

It is also an important way for students and others associated with Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, which is in my district, to travel to and from the community and campus.

Rail service in this country serves us well in a number of competitive ways. Small businesses in rural areas depend on it for access and flexibility of transportation for both products and personnel. It also keeps the avenues of transportation open, and an area without passenger rail service is perceived as less viable for business location or expansion. It is an essential part of any economic development equation.

It also serves as an important alternative for lower income residents who need to travel and cannot afford other means. That reality cannot be ignored.

Amtrak employs nearly 3,000 Illinois residents who make an important contribution to their communities and the State. The operation of the line is widely praised in my district and State.

I encourage my colleagues to stand beside Amtrak and support consistent funding for operation and investment in new equipment. Doing that helps link our centers of commerce and trade at a crucial time of international competition.

Amtrak helps us achieve our Nation's goals in a cost-efficient way that benefits a great number of Americans. I'm pleased to support its funding requests here in Congress.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak reauthorization. It is a strong reaffirmation of or commitment to passenger rail in this country, and I commend the conferees in both bodies for their excellent work.

Amtrak has gone through a remarkable transformation in the past decade. Absolutely remarkable. Despite severe cutbacks in the Federal subsidy level, Amtrak has not only improved, Amtrak has thrived. We had to cut their Federal subsidy by 50 percent in the past decade—and you know what? In the face that adversity, in the face of big, fat goose-eggs for budget requests from the administration, year after year, Amtrak has improved service, improved revenues, and impressed virtually everyone who's had the opportunity to climb aboard. And more and more people are climbing aboard—passenger miles are approaching 6 billion, whereas 8 years ago they were less than 4.5 billion.

Furthermore, Amtrak is recovering 72 percent of its operating costs in this fiscal year, and expects to recover 75 percent of operating costs in fiscal 1991. They just get better and better, and I have full faith that by the year 2000, Amtrak will be able to recover 100 percent of operating costs. That's their goal, and that is my goal.

I think there are two reasons for Amtrak's remarkable success. First, we in Congress have always given Amtrak our support. The members of the Energy and Commerce Committee, the members of the Appropriations Committee, and the vast majority of Members of the House have repeatedly voted to support Amtrak. The other body has done the same. Amtrak is America's railroad, and we prove it time and time again.

And then there is Graham Claytor, Amtrak's President. His guiding hand has steered Amtrak to its current success. If there were an award for Railroader of the Decade, Graham Claytor would win it hands down. He's done a great job.

I approve of the job the conferees have done on the reauthorization. The authorization levels for fiscal 1991 and 1992 give us more than enough room to adequately take care of Amtrak's capital needs. I am especially pleased that the conferees support the effort to establish high speed rail along the Northeast corridor between New York and Boston. With that support, I think we can establish high speed Amtrak service within the next few years.

I also approve of granting the ICC jurisdiction to review acquisitions of class I rail carriers by nonrail carriers. I believe such review and approval is in the public interest, and is for the benefit of the Nation's rail system.

Mr. Speaker, the Amtrak reauthorization conference report deserves our support, and I urge Members to once again give Amtrak the solid endorsement has earned. I hope the President will give it his support as well.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN] has expired.

The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. WHITTAKER] has 1¼ minute remaining.

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 322, nays 93, not voting 18, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Nelson of Florida for, with Mr. Lewis of California against.

Mr. Frank for, with Mr. Dickinson against.

Mrs. Collins of Illinois for, with Mr. Craig against.

Mr. WATKINS changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT and Mr. RAY changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks, and include therein extraneous material, on the conference report on H.R. 2364, just agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 770, FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1989

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 388 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 388

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 770) to entitle employees to family leave in certain cases involving a birth, an adoption, or a serious health condition and to temporary medical leave in certain cases involving a serious health condition, with adequate protection of the employees' employment and benefit rights, and to establish a commission to study ways of providing salary replacement for employees who take any such leave, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and the amendment made in order by this resolution and which shall not exceed two and one half hours, with two hours to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and Labor, and with thirty minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. In lieu of the amendments now printed in the bill, it shall be in order to consider an amendment in the nature of a substitute consisting of the text printed in part one of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule, said substitute shall be considered as having been read, and all points of order against the amendments printed in the report are hereby waived. No amendment to said substitute shall be in order except those printed in part two of the report of the Committee on Rules. Said amendments shall be considered in the form and manner specified in the report, shall be considered as having been read, shall be debatable for the period specified in the report, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and a Member opposed thereto. Said amendments shall not be subject to amendment except as specified in the report. The amendments offered by Representative Clay of Missouri to the amendments offered by Representative Stenholm of Texas shall be considered as pending simultaneously to both of the amendments offered by Representative Stenholm, and the Clay amendments shall be considered en bloc and shall not be subject to a demand for a division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole shall put the question on the Clay amendments en bloc as one question. Where the report of the Committee on Rules indicates that amendments shall be pending simultaneously to the amendment offered by Representative Gordon of Tennessee and to the amendment made in order as original text by this resolution, said amendments shall be considered en bloc and shall not be subject to a demand for a division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole shall put the question on the amendments en bloc as one question. If more than one amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in part two is adopted, only the latter amendment shall be considered as having been finally adopted and reported to the House. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text by this resolution. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with instructions, if offered by Representative Michel of Illinois, or his designee, or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER] is recognized for 1 hour.

□ 1800

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield for purposes of debate only, the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN], and pending that I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 388 is the rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1989.

The rule provides for 2½ hours of general debate, with 2 hours to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and Labor and 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. At Mr. GOODLING's request, the committee increased the Education and Labor Committee's allocation of time for general debate. Following the usual convention, the committee has imposed no limitations on Mr. GOODLING's ability to fairly accommodate requests from his party for time from both those supporting and those opposing the bill.

The rule makes in order the amendment in the nature of a substitute consisting of the text printed in part 1 of the report of the Committee on Rules as an original bill for the purposes of amendment. Each section of the substitute shall be considered as read and all points of order against the amendments printed in the report are waived.

No amendments to the substitute are to be in order except those printed in part 2 of the report of the Committee on Rules. The amendments are to be considered only in the order and the manner specified in the report and are considered as read when offered.

The debate time specified for each amendment is to be equally divided and controlled by the proponent of the amendment and a Member opposed thereto. The amendments are not subject to amendment except as specified in the report. If more than one amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in part 2 of the report is adopted, only the last substitute shall be considered as having been finally adopted and reported to the House.

The rule makes in order a substitute to be offered by Mr. PENNY or his designee, followed by consideration of a substitute to be offered by Mr. GORDON or his designee. While the Gordon substitute is pending, the rule makes in order five sets of amendments en bloc to be offered in the following order:

First, by Mr. STENHOLM or his designee; second, by Mr. CLAY to the amendments en bloc by Mr. STENHOLM; third, by Mr. GRANDY or his designee; and fourth, two sets of amendments by Mr. BARTLETT or his designee.

The vote on each amendment en bloc is deemed to apply to both the substitute made in order as original text and the Gordon substitute. The vote on the Clay amendments en bloc is deemed to apply to both the Stenholm amendments en bloc. The Stenholm, Grandy, and Bartlett amendments are not subject to a demand for a division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole.

Finally, the rule provides for one motion to recommit with instructions, if offered by Mr. MICHEL or his designee, or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, over the past 20 years, we've seen a revolution in the American work force and the American family. The work force is dominated by employees with significant family responsibilities. Women make up nearly half of our labor force and are expected to comprise two-thirds of all new workers in the year 2000. Currently, only 3.7 percent of our Nation's families reflect the traditional notion of the nuclear family in which the father works outside of the home to support the mother and two children. Today, in most cases, two incomes are essential to make ends meet. And, nearly one out of five families is supported by single women.

These families depend on their working members, both to care for them and to provide for them. Workers need to be with their families during critical events. And they need to be able to return to their jobs so that they can make ends meet.

H.R. 770, the bill for which the committee has recommended this rule, addresses the critical need for a national job protected leave policy. The Family and Medical Leave Act and the bipartisan compromise that will be offered by Mr. GORDON and Mr. WELDON would protect employees from possible job loss as a result of the birth or adoption of a child, the illness of a family member, or the employee's own serious illness. Family-responsive legislation of this kind provides a minimum standard of protection for all American workers so that they would never be forced to decide between their jobs and their families.

In addition, parental leave policies benefit worker and employee alike by ensuring that experienced and dedicated workers will return to their jobs, secure in the knowledge that their families are cared for. West German and Japanese workers receive 14 weeks of paid leave for newborn or adopted children; our competitors understand that these policies increase productivity and competitiveness. As the only industrialized country besides South Africa that fails to provide its workers with any type of job-guaranteed leave, it is time for the United States Congress to provide leadership and support for American families.

Mr. Speaker, this rule will allow substantial debate and a diversity of amendments embodying a variety of approaches to family and medical leave. I ask my colleagues to support the rule so that we may proceed with consideration of the merits of this legislation.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this rule and the bill it makes in order.

First, this rule is wrong because it restricts amendments unfairly and unnecessarily. Last Friday afternoon, after most Members had already left town to go back to their districts, the chairman of the Rules Committee put out a "Dear Colleague" letter stating that any amendments Members wanted to offer to this bill had to be submitted to the Rules Committee no later than 6 p.m. Monday. Since no votes were scheduled on the House floor until Tuesday of this week, it meant that the deadline expired before most Members even got back into town.

This is not a fair procedure. A deadline was imposed here and the deadline expired here all during the few days Members were in their districts over the weekend. I am certain that a number of my colleagues were supprised to find, upon their return Tuesday, that they had already been shut out of an opportunity to participate in amending this bill.

Moreover, there is no reason this bill requires a restrictive rule. In the Rules Committee I offered an open rule as a substitute for this rule and it was turned down by the majority. The majority shut out two Democratic Members, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. PARKER]. They even shut out an amendment by one of the most experienced businessmen in the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON], who was an executive officer with Corning Glass Works for 35 years before becoming a Member of Congress. And if the deadline for amendments had not expired before Members got back into town there would probably have been a few others. The Rules Committee should have reported an open rule, so that the House could have considered a full range of alternative approaches.

But believe it or not, the problems with this bill are even worse than the problems with the rule. I have been a businessman for many years, Mr. Speaker, and I understand the need to treat employees fairly in cases where a new baby is born or sickness is visited upon a family. I have found that by being fair with employees, they will respond with appreciation and loyalty which in the long run builds a better business.

But this bill is structured in such a way that it will weaken many businesses, without providing offsetting benefits. Employees will suffer from this lack of flexibility as well as the businesses. For example, in recent years there has been a trend away from providing a single benefit program to which all employees must subscribe. There has been a move toward cafeteria-style benefits. Since a business can allocate only a certain dollar amount per employee for benefits, a cafeteria plan offers a range of choices from which each employee can select those benefits which best meet his or her needs.

But this bill will legislate against flexible benefits. Why should a childless employee be forced to accept a benefit that will never be needed while at the same time giving up another benefit which may be needed?

The bottom line is that mandated benefits help, if anyone, only the few employees who fall within the designated criteria while benefits available to other employees diminish.

This bill will create numerous problems for businesses. First it will add to the cost of doing business. Even though the leave is unpaid, the employer will have to continue to provide health benefits, for example. During the time the worker is gone, the employer may have to recruit and train a temporary replacement, all the while suffering a loss in productivity because it will take time for the new worker to learn the job as well as the worker who is off. If existing workers have to pick up the load, extra work may have to be paid for at overtime rates. The bill provides not just maternity leave for a new mother, but paternity leave for a father. The employer not only has no way to know when a worker will be gone, the worker is not required to notify the employer in advance when or if the worker plans to return. When the regular worker returns, the temporary worker then may be eligible for unemployment benefits. According to the minority views accompanying the report of the Committee on Education and Labor, a replacement worker earning the U.S. average hourly wage could qualify for unemployment benefits in 37 States and the District of Columbia.

In addition, there is no requirement that family leave actually be needed, before it is taken. For example, the serious health condition of a parent alone triggers eligibility for the leave. The worker could take weeks off in order to care for a parent even if the aid of the worker was not actually necessary, such as when another relative or a professional attendant was actually caring for the ill person. The employer would be left to pay the price.

Ultimately the potential abuses we are opening up here can serve to weaken the business, which hurts all the employees, including those who do not abuse the system.

This bill also provides that in case an employer is found to be in violation, he shall be liable for damages for lost wages and benefits plus consequential damages—including pain and suffering—capped at three times lost wages and benefits. This means that an employer is potentially liable for a total amount which is four times lost wages and benefits. This is a bad precedent.

It is clear to me that this bill will do serious damage to many small- and medium-size businesses in this Nation. Business provides the jobs and pays the taxes that make this Nation function. Just because a bill has a popular sounding title, we should not blindly accept legislation which can do serious damage in the long run.

I oppose this rule and the bill it makes in order, and I urge Members to vote down the rule, vote down the rule, vote down the rule.

□ 1810

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR].

Mr. CARR. Mr. Speaker, I want to state emphatically at the outset that I support family and medical leave. I do not, however, support this rule, and would ask my colleagues to oppose the rule.

I do so, Mr. Speaker, because the leadership of the Congress told us that we would have an opportunity to vote on a variety of approaches. Perhaps I was a little foolish in believing that that would actually be done, but I find in this particular rule we are precluded from looking at and debating some alternative approaches.

Mr. Speaker, we are straitjacketed in this rule to supporting either some form of mandated benefits, where the Congress of the United States is going to substitute its judgment in literally hundreds and millions of workplaces across this country, or we are told we can leave it and not do anything at all.

Well, there are some Members, Mr. Speaker, who do not want to have a choice of just some form of a mandate or nothing at all.

We believe in parental leave. In my own congressional office we practice parental leave. We give people the leave time they need to take care of loved ones who are ill, or in the case just recently, a lady in my office became pregnant and gave birth, thankfully a healthy baby, and we are giving her that time off. We believe in that.

We do not believe that the Congress of the United States has the requisite wisdom to impose its judgment in substitution for the wisdom of the workplace.

Mr. Speaker, I had an amendment, a substitute, which I asked the Committee on Rules to make in order, and they declined, shutting me out and not allowing Members of Congress to consider my alternative. It may well not have been accepted, but the Committee on Rules in its infinite wisdom decided that we were not even to be allowed to debate the issue or raise a new idea.

Simply stated, Mr. Speaker, I believe that Congress should lead the way. Congress should tell businesses across the country they ought to have a parental leave policy, but they should decide what that parental leave policy ought to be.

To make sure that they are doing what we are asking them to do, we would ask them to file a disclosure statement simply stating what their policy is. Filing that disclosure statement would also give us, Mr. Speaker, a data base from which to move forward future years if we find that businesses and workplaces are not taking care of this essential need.

Mr. Speaker, I understand that the current bill before us stems from studies done in two American cities, one in South Carolina and one in my own home State of Michigan. That is hardly a representative sample of what is really going on in America on parental leave.

The fundamental fact is that the Committee on Rules and the leadership apparently felt somewhat threatened by the idea of having other alternatives before the House as they had promised us, and they recanted on that promise, and now we are left with a take it or leave it approach.

So many of us, Mr. Speaker, are going to vote against this rule in protest to the unfair and heavy-handed way that the Committee on Rules came to its conclusion, and will probably vote against the bill as well. I urge a vote against the bill.

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, for purpose of debate only, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GREEN].

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, in 1988, the Republican Party adopted the following plank in its national platform:

> The family's most important function is to raise the next generation of Americans, handing on to them the Judeo-Christian values of Western civilization and our ideals of liberty. More than anything else, the ability of America's families to accomplish those goals will determine the course our country takes in the century ahead.

In reflecting that belief and the importance of the family in the future of our Nation, George Bush, in Illinois, speaking to a group of Republican women in September 1988, said,

> We need to assure that women don't have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child or caring for a child during a serious illness. That is what I mean when I talk about a gentler nation.

Let me note that he used the word assure. Unlike some of his advisers, he did not say we should urge employers to do it, he did not say we should hope employers do it. Obviously urging employers will not assure that women or male care providers in the family will get their jobs back. The only way we can do that is by legislation, and the only way we can do that by legislation is to adopt this rule and the bill that is before us today. The President's advisers should read his lips and understand that we need this bill to assure that care providers are protected.

□ 1820

There are some here who suggest that we are creating some extraordinary new precedent by this legislation. I submit that that is not the case at all, that in fact we have provided reemployment mandates in past situations.

For example, the Jury Systems Improvement Act of 1978 provides job protection for employees who report for Federal jury service. Many States have adopted similar legislation to protect those who are called for jury service in the State courts. Under the Federal veterans' reemployment rights statute, draftees, reservists, and members of the National Guard are provided certain employment protections while they are away on duty. Persons inducted into or enlisting in the Armed Forces must be considered as having been on furlough or leave of absence during their military training and service. The law also prohibits termination because of any obligation as a member of the Reserves.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the idea of the right to return to one's job after leave has ample precedent in our Federal statutes. Let us build on that precedent and extend that right to our Nation's families, who are entrusted with no less an important responsibility that nurturing the future generations of this country.

If we are going to do that, then we must pass this rule today and we must pass this bill tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], a member of the Rules Committee.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, regardless of which side of the aisle one is on, regardless of which side of the bill one is on, this rule ought to be defeated on two counts, first as a protest against the process that produced it, and then second, as a rejection on substantive grounds of the rule itself.

Mr. Speaker, let us look at the process first, and let me say right up front I am convinced my good friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], chairman of the Rules Committee, was not party to this abomination. I am convinced further that none of the majority members of the Rules Committee were a part of this abomination.

Mr. Speaker, this was your call, this was a leadership call, inspired no doubt by the desire of members of the Democratic caucus to play hard ball with this issue and gag Members on both sides of the aisle.

I am holding a "Dear Colleague" letter in my hand that was faxed to my office at 3:37 p.m., and I am a member of the Rules Committee, 3:37 p.m. Friday afternoon, after I had gone home, and so had 95 percent of the other Members of this body.

Mr. Speaker, I was advised by Members that they had until 6 p.m. Monday to file amendments to this bill. Mr. MOAKLEY did not have anything to do with this, Mr. Speaker, it was you and the Democrat caucus.

The Republican whip organization I think did a yeoman's job late Friday afternoon to try to alert these matters to Members.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). Will the gentleman suspend?

The gentleman is implying that it is this individual sitting in the Chair who was involved in the process, and I wonder if the gentleman would mind, as a courtesy, to make clear that he is referring to the Speaker and not the individual.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I did not realize you were not the Speaker, you are the acting Speaker, and naturally I am referring to the Speaker, and I hope you do not take this out of my time, and I thank the acting Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York is recognized.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the letter was not actually seen in most offices until the weekend mail was opened sometime I presume, like in my office, sometime after noontime Monday.

Mr. Speaker, I know Chairman MOAKLEY well enough to know that a "Dear Colleague" letter mailed on the weekend is not his idea of a timely, adequate, routine notification procedure concerning a restrictive rule. JOE would not do that. Therefore, I am compelled to believe that his hands were being tied and that his letter represents a sincere attempt by JOE MOAKLEY to at least warn Members at the 11th hour the rule would be irregular. Thank you, JOE.

I can assure Members that this rule was not written in the Rules Committee. I can assure Members that it was delivered to us yesterday afternoon from an undisclosed location. Probably it originated in the inner sanctum of the Democrat caucus. No doubt that is where it came from.

Mr. Speaker, now let us turn to the substance of this bill. I would note right at the outset that not a single suggestion has been heard as to why a restrictive rule is necessary. Why is it, gentlemen on that side of the aisle?

There certainly cannot be a problem with lack of time. We hung around here last Thursday for the sole purpose of designating conferees on the supplemental appropriation bill. Remember that? Otherwise we would have spent only 2 days in session last week, only 2 days would we have worked.

Take a look at this week's schedule, Mr. Speaker. It is hardly what one would call backbreaking, and it has been this way all year. We have averaged one substantial bill a month, so lack of work certainly was no reason.

So the question is simply this, Mr. Speaker, why, why is this restrictive rule necessary? Given the last-minute deadline for filing amendments, only nine Members were able to do so on this important issue, nine Members.

Why could they not have been accommodated, Mr. Speaker? I can think of a couple of Democrats who testified yesterday, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. PARKER]. They both proposed amendments that were similar in focus; namely, to step back and evaluate what we are doing first before we rush headlong into imposing requirements on the private sector of this Nation. Considering recent fiascos, my colleagues, in which Congress leaped before it looked on such things as section 89, remember, we had to rush back here and repeal it, and the catastrophic illness program, the Carr and Parker amendments made good sense, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, to wind up, the Carr and Parker amendments made very good sense on both sides of the aisle, but they were dismissed out of hand.

I would like to say to the gentleman from Michigan and the gentleman from Mississippi that we Republicans tried to get your amendments made in order. I offered the motion myself, but we were shot down on a party line vote. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON] had an amendment that I tried to get in order, shot down by a party line vote. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN] offered a motion on behalf of every Member of this body to have an open rule. He was shot down on a party line vote.

Mr. Speaker, I do not understand why with such an important issue, with so little to do around here, why, seriously, we could not debate this issue so that Members on both sides of the aisle could do what they were duly elected to do, and that is to shape legislation that affects every one of our constituencies back home.

It is a shame, Mr. Speaker, and Mr. BILL GRAY, the whip, and Mr. GEPHARDT, the majority leader. I do not know where these people are. They ought to be here defending this lousy rule, because they are the ones who wrote it, and it is a shame because you are being gagged, fellows, and it is a shame.

Vote "no" on this rule.

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, let me respond to some of the comments said about this rule, because I think this is an excellent rule.

As the author of the original bill that came out 5 years ago, I want Members to know this bill has been around for 5 years. I know that in the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service on the Federal employee part we have had days and days and days of hearings in each session of Congress and reported this bill out, and it has been ready to come to the floor over and over again in different sessions and never quite made it because there was not a window of opportunity.

I know that the Committee on Education and Labor has had hearings and hearings and hearings on this bill because I have sat through them, and I have testified. In fact, they modified my bill, and that is the bill that is coming up, and now there is another modification.

But Members who are professing surprise, I think really this bill has been around for 5 years and we have debated it. The committees where most of this work is supposed to have been done have held hearings, they have been open hearings, anyone could go and anyone could talk, and I think that Members felt that we did not need a study because we had had this activity going on for 5 years, and therefore that is why one amendment was turned down. I think they decided we either act on it or we do not act on it because we had not been able to find a time to even bring it to the floor in 5 years.

I am very pleased that it is now coming to the floor, and I think that when we hear things about the substance, it is very important to point out what a delicate balance this bill is. I have trouble supporting this compromise because it has been watered down so much. I do support it, but I want to tell Members, for anyone who says this is a terrific benefit, tell me someone in America who at the end of the month has a lot of money left over.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield? I respect her very much.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman is making my point. The gentlewoman says the bill is watered down so much she has trouble supporting it.

Why do we not have a rule that would allow us to debate this issue, and let the gentlewoman, for whom I have great respect in this House, offer the amendments to strengthen this bill?

□ 1830

Mrs. SCHROEDER. If I may reclaim my time and say if I thought that the gentleman from New York was going to join me in strengthening this bill, hallelujah, I would be with him, I would vote against this rule. The gentleman cannot even say it with a straight face.

I have listened to the minority leader say he feels so bad because it is not paid leave. Now if your side really wants to offer paid leave, we would be more than happy to fix the rule up. But let us be perfectly honest about this, this is a compromise because we know nothing else will pass. And I really do not think you should stand up over there and say that you really would like to have an opportunity to make this a better, stronger family medical leave bill.

No, he says he wouldn't. He is taking his seat.

But let me get back to my point.

My point is when you call this a benefit, I do not think the average American sees this as a benefit at all. This is unpaid leave.

Not only that, part of this is for a happy time, when someone has a baby or adopts a baby.

But all the rest of the unpaid leave comes for a situation in which no thoughtful American would ever want to exchange positions with a person. It comes from someone in the family having acute cancer or having a heart attack or having a stroke.

I do not think anybody wants to walk in those moccasins.

Now what this does is it allows an American employee the right to penalize himself by going off the payroll but to try and take care of a family member, which is what their conscience tells them they should be doing.

So it is a very difficult balance.

I must say as one who would have liked it a whole lot more, I am very troubled when people call this a benefit. All I see is this is a safety net for America's families. But it is a safety net that is going to relieve an incredible amount of stress.

I have a stack of letters this high in my office, they are from every State in the Union. If you want them from your State, I would be happy to share them with you. They are incredible stories.

Unfortunately, when you are the author of a bill, people only write to you; they should send them to their Members, too. The things that have happened to people, how they have lost their jobs when their child had leukemia or lost their jobs when they had a baby and were ordered to come back to work in 1 week, and so forth and so on.

I do not think that is the kind of country we are. We cannot take the floor every day and talk family values and then vote out special interests. And I think that is what we are talking about today.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING].

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I object to the rule primarily because of the timing. This bill has been around a long time. It is important to understand this bill passed out of our committee April 1989, not April 1990.

So I do not understand why a Friday, Saturday, and Sunday proposal was brought forth at the last minute which is called a compromise. I did not see the compromise until 7 p.m. Monday evening.

As I understood it, we had to have any amendments in to the compromise by 6 p.m. Monday evening. That was 1 hour after.

The letter did not go out until all of us, most of us, had left the district and were back in our home districts.

So we have a problem in that there was no reason, no reason for a compromise coming over the weekend prior to our debate. It passed in April 1989 out of our committee.

So if there was any compromise that was going to be brought forth, it surely should have been brought forth a long time ago so that we had an opportunity to look at it, study it, evaluate it, and to offer amendments.

So I think the timing certainly was not in the best interests for a piece of legislation of this magnitude.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDWARDS].

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, this rule that we are being asked to vote on today is one more example of the way in which the leadership in the House uses restrictive procedures to choke off full and fair debate on the House floor.

Now it is one thing for the Rules Committee to limit floor amendments to those that are submitted to the committee by a certain date, a certain time. But it is quite another thing to announce such a decision in a letter late on a Friday after many Members have already left to return to their districts, imposing a deadline of 6 p.m. the next Monday before many Members were scheduled to return to Washington.

And to do so when Members do not even have available to them a copy of one of the principal amendments to the bill.

In addition to the process leading to this rule, the rule itself contains a number of procedures that work against free and open debate.
